The record contains ample proof of this conclusion. The very number of students arrested in the buildings-524 Columbia students in the first action-is convincing. Many more had been in the buildings earlier. Some of the latter were doubtless curiosity seekers. For others in both groups the affair probably had many of the elements of the once-traditional spring riots and subsequent "panty raids."

The events after the police "bust" point to the same conclusion. The emotions excited by the brutality must have polarized opinion. There would be a tendency to put unjust blame upon those who called for police intervention rather than those – chiefly from S.D.S. – whose deliberate efforts to provoke disruptive turbulence made it events almost inevitable that police action would be required.

Despite these complex cross-currents, the extent and persistence of the ultimate reaction against the university adminstration is adequately explained only by the presence of strong but latent dissatisfaction quickened by the violence of

A collection of nine articles analyzing managerial decision making from an interdisciplinary point of view has been compiled by Dr. Stanley Young, UMass professor of management.

His book, "Management: A Decision–Making Approach," published by the Dickenson Series on Contemporary Thought and Management, offers views of management problem–solving from such diverse fields as psychology, physiology, mathematics and statistics.

Each of the nine articles has been contributed by a representative of disciplines concerned with management problem–solving. The creative person and creative organization are considered in one article dealing with the psychological aspect of the question. In a second article, a physiological approach is presented in the form of an analogy of the brain to the management system. The decision making process and the problem of uncertainty are dealt with in an article considering the statistical approach to the subject.

Dr. Young has contributed one article entitled "Organization as a Total System," in which he presents the engineering aspect of management and the decision making process. He points out that the major contribution of engineering in the field of management is to develop and improve its technology.

Julian Bream Opens '68-'69 Concert Season

Julian Bream, noted English lutenist and guitarist, will appear in concert Wednesday, October 9 at 8:00 p.m. at Bowker Auditorium, for the opening concert of the 1968/69 Concert Association season.

Julian Bream, one of the most prominent names in music before the public today, is acknowledged as one of the masters of the classical guitar and the unrivalled interpreter of the lute. He is responsible for reviving a world of beautiful and unfamiliar music. Making his debut in 1947 in his native England, Bream has since become a world personality in music. He is currently on his thirteenth North American tour. His concerts are normally sold out well in advance of his arrival.

For his October 9 program Mr. Bream will play first a group of works for lute written in the sixteenth century. After intermission, he will turn to works for the guitar including Mauro Giuliani's Overture in A, Opus 61; Sonata in A by Carl Kohaut; Introduction and Allegro, Opus 14 by Fernando Sor; Four Short Pieces by the Swiss composer Frank Martin and works by Joaquin Rodrigo and Claude Debussy.

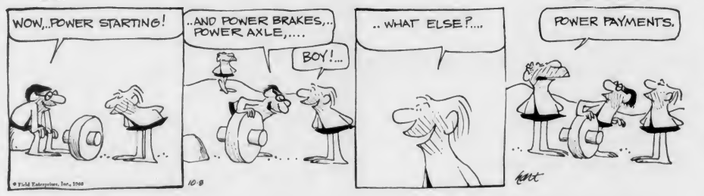
New Campus Group Studies Film World

Thursday evening, October 10, at 8:30 p.m. in the Commonwealth Room of the Student Union there will be an organizational meeting of a new R.S.O. group called the University Film Co–Operative. It will be an open meeting to discuss the formation of a working body of members interested in making films and introducing the University to the new and important experimental film culture.



Originators of the group Stephen Soitos, Terrell Crouch and Robert Morrissey have stated that they hope the University Film Co–Op will be able to accomplish a number of much needed objectives.

"First of all, the three of us are mainly interested in making films. We have been involved in producing films for the last year and we are currently finishing a film we made this summer in Holyoke. A large concern of ours, however, is the University's apathetic attitude towards film, ignoring the distinct advantages cinema possesses as an educational medium. We feel that other students on campus should have the opportunity to study and create films at the university for credit. As you know, the University does not have a department of cinema. We feel that a curriculum containing cinema study of film production is a necessity for a progressive, growing University.

"Through the University Film Co–Op we hope to create for the University a functional movie producing organization through which students can engage in all facets of film creations. Ultimately we hope that the results of the University Film Co–Op will be able to convince the University that films are a major medium of expression through which students can further their own creative and educational process."

Heartbreak In Deleware

Fusia, "We Lost Game Because of Our Attitude."

Offense was Sufficient Defense Not Hustling

Peter Pascarelli
Assistant Sports Editor

A disgusted, disapponted but not discouraged Vic Fusia will try to pick up the pieces this week following a 28-23 loss to Delaware that he termed, "truly hurt down deep."

UMass had leads Saturday of 13 points, and nine points but could not hold back a fired up Blue Hen team. This fact is what disturbs Fusia so much. UMass is not accustomed to ever losing a football game, but this one they blew.

Fusia said, "This is the first time in my memory that we failed to win a cliff-hanger. We gave them this game," and no amount of rationalization can change that."

The coach had a hard time pinpointing any one thing that attributed to the defeat. Instead it was a combination of many things.

"First of all I was terribly displeased with our kickoff coverage which allowed 47 yards per kick. This left them always in good territory to operate.

"Secondly, I was disgusted with the breakdown of total defense in critical situations. There were several missed tackles and a general lack of hustle when the chips were down hurt us."

Fusia did not want to give the impression that nothing good happened in the game. He praised his offense, despite their fumbling, saying, "We got enough points to win". The coach also had kind words to say about certain individuals, including Randy Robinson, Steve Rogers, Tim Driscoll and Dick Donlin.

The coach reserved special praise however, for Andy Guarino. Guarino who has played at both tackles and middle guard on defense already this season, got a lot of action this way this week, due to the hard running Delaware offense.

But Fusia said of him, "There is no one as valuable to our squad, no individual as important, as Guarino. He has had to make sacrifices in learning how to play three positions and it has affected his overall proficiency. But he has taken it like a man."

It was the breakdown of general team hustle and the lack of an 11 man effort at all times, however, that lost the Redmen the momentum in the fourth quarter and eventually the game.

As Coach Fusia put, "In the tight spots there were only two or three guts out there playing ball. We needed a little more effort and didn't get it."

"You know," Fusia reflected, "football is a team game and everybody has to hold up his own end. We lost this game because of our attitude."

UMass, thankfully got through the game without any serious injuries. Tackles Bill Sroka and Mark Toner were both banged up but are not expected to lose any action. Those tackles spots have been racked all season by injuries, and the Redmen can't afford any more casualties.

As Fusia said, "The only depth we have are guys like Al Becker and Guarino who are playing more than one position."

The coach does not anticipate the loss will affect preparation for Boston University this week. "You have to forget about it. A loss can't hold you back," said the coach, "and should make you better, because good athletes don't like to lose."

The injuries, though hampering and disastrous, have helped to give the Redmen some backup strength they might not have been aware of. Fusia said, "It just might help us in the long run because we have had to move so many people around. But we can't afford too many other injuries."

So the UMass football team prepares for another game this week with its first losing record in a long time hanging over it. They are pretty well off physically. But Fusia concluded, "Their pride has been injured, and we have been working since early Sunday to repair it."

Saturday will tell if all has been fixed up.

Denny McLain Can Pitch

DETROIT (AP)- Denny McLain saw his doctor Monday and decided he could pitch the sixth game of the World Series if necessary.

McLain, Detroit's 31-game winner who has lost two games to the St. Louis Cardinals, had said Sunday he might not be abie to pitch again if the Series got past Monday's fifth game.

The Tigers won that game 5-3 so now a sixth game is necessary.

"My shoulder feels real good," McLain said after the game. "I can pitch if there's a seventh game. In fact, if he'd like me to pitch Wednesday, I'll go out Wednesday. God knows I'm rested."

Duane Brown, UMass soccer forward set a new school record when he booted home five goals in the Redmen's 8-0 drubbing of Boston College. The sensational performance marked the first time a Massachusetts player had booted in more than three goals.

Brown scored in each of the four quarters, and booted home two in the third stanza. The soph inside received help from other frontliners in scoring as well as booting some scores on great individual efforts. Co-captain made one particularly nice play to aid in setting up one of Brown's markers.

Other records also fell during the afternoon. Eight goals tied a team high for one game by the Redmen, and the eight goal margin was the largest cushion enjoyed by a UMass soccer team.

The team is 2-0 and has not been scored upon.

The Olympics Near Start

MEXICO CITY (AP) --The "Star Spangled Banner" rang out over Olympic Village for the first time Monday and the head of America's potent sports army warned Mexicans they had better get used to it.

"This is the finest Olympic team ever fielded by the United States," said Douglas F. Roby of Detroit, president of the U.S. Olympic Committee, at the official flag-raising ceremonies. The U.S. ambassador to Mexico, Fulton Freeman, who also participated in the early morning ritual atop one of the Aztec pyramids, called upon all American athletes to exercise team spirit and cooperate with one another.

While he declined to use the words, "black" and "white," this was an apparent reference to the early threat of black athletes at first to boycott and then perhaps stage a demonstration at the Games to dramatize the civil rights movement.

These threats now have been eased if not eliminated, according to both top U.S. officials and militants of the black movement.

Roby declared that no team in the games has been better trained for the rigorous two week competition following official opening ceremonies next Saturday.

Kaline and Lolich Prolong Series

Jack Hand
Associated Press Sports Writer

DETROIT (AP) –Al Kaline, who sweated out 16 lean years to get into a Detroit World Series, kept the Tigers alive Monday with a two-run single in the seventh inning for a 5-3 victory that sent the Series back to St. Louis for a sixth game Wednesday.

Mickey Lolich, the only Tiger winner in the first four games, came through again despite a heavy bombing in the first inning when Orlando Cepeda's two-run homer capped a three-run spurt.

It was Mickey who opened the winning rally in the seventh with a single when Detroit bounced back as they had done all season. Then Lolich closed out a nineth inning threat by fanning Roger Maris and throwing out Lou Brock, who had collected three hits earlier.

The sellout crowd of 53,634 gave Kaline a standing ovation when he went to his right field position at the start of the eighth after his big single off relief pitcher Joe Hoener with the bases loaded and the Tigers trailing 3-2. Norm Cash then knocked in the third run of the inning with a single.

The clubs will take Tuesday off for travel before picking it up with the sixth game, with St. Louis leading 3-2, in Busch Stadium Wednesday afternoon.

The Tigers, fighting desperately to avoid elimination, clawed back with two runs in the fourth inning and finally burst through for three in the seventh when they knocked out Nelson Briles and racked up loser Hoerner.

Lolich came through dramatically in the ninth inning when the always-dangerous Cardinals stirred up a fuss. Tim McCarver opened the ninth with a single to center but pinch hitter Phil Cagliano flied out. Ed Spiezo, another pinch hitter, fouled off eight, including two foul tips that catcher Bill Freehan failed to hold, and then singled to left.

With the tying run on base, Manager Ed Schoendienst sent Maris up to the plate to bat for pitcher Ron Willis. Maris, a bench warmer today who will retire after the Series, struck out.

The Cards still were alive with Brock, who had 11 hits in 21 previous at bats, the batter Brock fouled one to left, took a ball and then tapped back weakly to pitcher Lolich on a checked swing, ending the exciting game.

Wallace Draws Large Hub Crowd Calls Dissenters Anarchists

By Ron LaBrecque
Senior Reporter

BOSTON -- Third party Presidential candidate George C. Wallace spoke of "law and order" at Parkman Bandstand in the Common here Tuesday as a security force of 700, said to be the largest in history in this city, watched a noisy crowd estimated at 20,000.

Wallace arrived at Logan Airport at 2:30 p.m. where he told a press conference "We're not talking about dropping A-bombs, but if we have a failure in Paris (scene of Peace talks) what are we to do?"

Wallace told reporters, "We must remain superior militarily so there will be no threat of World War III."

"We can't police the world by ourselves. We should have had Western European friends help, either militarily or financially through NATO" Wallace said.

There were no hecklers in the crowd of 2000 that met Wallace at the airport.

While Wallace visited the Charlestown Navy Yard, followed by speeches at City Square and Government Center, the rally on the Common began to take shape.

By Wallace's 5:30 p.m. arrival the crowd, noticably dotted with numerous anti-Wallace Posters, had grown to 20,000 persons according to Boston Deputy Chief of Police William Blair.

Wallace was drowned out by the roaring crowd several times when he mentioned what he would do "When I'm President".

The former Alabama Governor told the hecklers "you anarchists better have your day now because on November 5 it will be all over for you."

"When I'm finished with my speech, I want you fellows to come up here and I'll autograph your sandals" he said.

Wallace's address was filled with phrases now associated with his campaign. "If any of you anarchists lay down in front of my car it will be the last car you lay down in front of for a long time".

Stressing law and order as a major point of his campaign Wallace said "Decent people can't walk the streets. Your wife can't go to the supermarket without being raped or robbed. Local officials have kow-towed to thugs. They have not paid attention to the good and decent people of our country."

"You have to be thankful for the Police in Boston, that's why you're here today" he told the crowd.

Apart from boistrous heckling the speech was without incident with one arrest being made.

Following Wallace's departure some 5,000 persons, the majority apparently college and high school students remained and seated themselves on a hill directly across from the bandstand.

Riot-helmeted police formed in ranks and pushed the crowd across the Common, a large number of whom went across the street to the Boston Public Gardens.

Several arrests were made, one stemming from the beating of a man carrying a pro-Wallace sign by three youths.

Approximately one hour after Wallace's speech the remaining crowd had been moved to the Public Gardens. Police sealed entrances to all persons, including all members of the news media, and dispersed the remaining crowd.

No injuries were reported although several persons resisting orders of Police were hit with police riot clubs. Newsmen and aides who had long observed the Wallace campaign thought the Boston crowd "might have topped them all."

Republicans Try to Prevent Debates on TV

WASHINGTON(AP)-Republicans locked the House in a parliamentary vice Tuesday in an attempt to prevent action on a bill that would permit televised debates between the major presidential candidates.

The Republicans made repeated demands that a quorum be present, forcing an endless round of roll calls that kept the House from taking up any bills.

The vice president also issued a strong call to Republican candidate Richard M. Nixon, urging him to clear the roadblock by supporting the bill. Nixon has shown little interest in debating Humphrey and has said he will not debate George C. Wallace, the third-party candidate.

Humphrey said the bill should be passed quickly so he and Nixon could hold at least three debates before the Nov. 5 election.

UMass has sent a special van to Bondsville in an attempt to recruit 75 employees from among those made jobless by a $10 million fire the past weekend that destroyed six mills and eliminated 500 jobs.

Licensed plumbers, electricians and power plant engineers as well as housekeeping and custodial personnel, painters, carpenters, masons, night watchmen and resident hall assistants are all needed at the University campus in Amherst.

Personnel officials stressed that these vacancies are critical and that the recruiting van is designed to be mutually beneficial–filling jobs at the University and providing jobs for unemployed workers.

Current plans are for the 16 foot green and white trailer to be located near the site of the fire for two or three days, beginning Tuesday morning. The van will be manned by four men from the University personnel office. Applicants for positions will be hired on the spot, and will not have to report to the University to complete applications.

Bondsville Named "Disaster Area" Eligible for Loan

The Small Business Administration Tuesday declared the fire-torn community of Bondsville a "disaster area". According to SBA regional director Lawrence Laughlin, "All industries destroyed and homes damaged in the fire would be eligible for a federal loan" . The interest rate would be at a low three percent, with up to thirty years to pay back the loan.

This is one of a number of moves by city, state, and federal agencies to rebuild the area. The town selectmen plan to establish an Industrial Finance Building Commission to issue bonds for the rebuilding of the wrecked industrial plants. Both the Veteren's Administration and the Federal Housing Administration havesentrepresentatives to speak with people holding VA or FHA mortgages, while banks in the area are holding back on calling up mortgage payments for up to eighteen months if necessary.

The big issue left by the fire is the 337 personnel thrown out of work. This problem is being met by mob offers from private industries in Western Massachusetts; mostly through the Division of Employment Security in Springfield. Howard Meehan, supervising manager for the DES in Springfield says. "It seems most hopeful, at present, that we can provide employment opportunities for any of those displaced"

Israel Will Negotiate, States Nine Point Plan

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)-Israel advanced Tuesday a nine-point plan for peace with the Arabs that stressed readiness to negotiate immediately the issue of permanent boundaries, but made clear its intention to retain the Old City of Jerusalem.

In a policy speech to the 125 nation General Assembly Foreign Minister of Israel, Abba Eben proposed also an international conference of Middle East countries to set up a five-year plan for solution of the Palestine refugee problem. He said the conference could be called in advance of peace negotiations.

The Arab nations, with support of the Sovict Union, have been demanding that Israel give up Arab territory won in the war of June 5-10, 1967, as the first priority in arranging a permanent peace settlement.

The United States has been putting its hopes for a settlement on the private negotiations by Gunnar Jarring of Sweden, the peace envoy of Secretary-General U Thant.

Eban expressed Israel's willingness "to seek agreement with each Arab state on secure and recognized boundaries within a framework of peace."

Eban also proposed a non-aggression pact between Israel and the Arab states, the setting up of open frontiers and free navigation in the Suez Canal and the Gulf of Aqaba.

He proposed that Israel and the Arab states endorse the principle of recognition of sovereignty for all states for all states in the area, and repeated Israel's offer to negotiate the safeguarding of Holy Places in the Old City, won from Jordan in the brief 1967 war.

Massachusetts Senator Edward W. Brooke will deliver a major address on an undisclosed topic at UMass this Sunday, October 13.

The Republican Senator will speak at Bowker Auditorium on the University campus at 7:15 p.m. as a part of the Distinguished Visitors Program.

Elected United States Senator from Massachusetts in 1966, Senator Brooke is serving on the Senate committees of Aeronautical and Space Agencies and Banking and Currency. He is also currently campaigning for Republican Presidential Nominee Richard M. Nixon.

Senate, House Compromise on Bill Prohibiting Mail Order Gun Sales

WASHINGTON (AP)—Senate-House conferees agreed Tuesday on a bill to prohibit interstate mail order sale of all firearms and ammunition.

The compromise measure also includes a general ban on over-the-counter sale of firearms to nonresidents of a state and prohibits sales of rifles and shotguns to persons under 18 years of age. Persons under 21 already are banned from buying handguns.

Sen. Thomas J. Dodd, D-Conn., chief Senate sponsor of the legislation, hailed the compromise as "a milestone."

And Rep. Emanuel Celler, D-N.Y., Chairman of the House conferees, called it a thorough-going and comprehensive gun control measure.

For the most part, the conferees took the strongest provisions of the separate bills previously passed by the Senate and the House.

The measure supplements a section of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act passed earlier in the year banning interstate mail order sales of handguns.

It extends this ban to rifles and shotguns and also covers sales of all kinds of ammunition.

Besides the prohibition on interstate mail order sales, the bill regulates sales of firearms by mail within a state by providing for a seven-day waiting period and the filing of an affidavit of eligibility by the purchaser.

Over-the-counter sales to nonresident would be prohibited except that a person could buy a long gun in an adjoining state if he qualified under the laws of both states.

The measure would become effective on Dec. 16, the same date as the section of the crime control bill curbing handgun sales.

One exception is that a ban on imports of all surplus military weapons would be effective immediately upon enactment.

The Senate-passed bill provided for outlawing interstate mail order sales of all types of ammunition, but the House had exempted ammunition for rifles and shotguns.

Another difference involved additional penalties provided for carrying a firearm in the commission of a federal felony

The conference committee agreed on an additional penalty of one to 10 years for a first offense, but with the provision that this could run concurrently with the penalty for the crime itself and sentence could be suspended.

For a second offense the additional penalty for carrying a firearm while committing a federal felony would be five years to 25 years but this too could run concurrently.

McCarthy Again Declines to Support HHH Campaign

NEW YORK (AP)—Sen. Eugene McCarthy, in his first major political speech since losing the Democratic presidential nomination to Hubert H. Humphrey in August, declined again Tuesday night to support the vice president's campaign.

"The call goes out for party unity, just as it did a year ago," McCarthy said. "it was not acceptable then, and it's not any more acceptable today."

The Minnesota senator spoke at a $100-a-plate fund-raising dinner for New York Democratic senatorial nominee Paul O'Dwyer, a peace candidate who also has consistently refused support to Humphrey.

McCarthy said his efforts to change the direction of the Democratic party were not aimed at getting anybody elected.

But he said he saw "no reason why the direction of the party could not be changed with a presidential candidate this year."

He listed three conditions he thought should be met to change the direction: Shifts in Vietnam war policy, a restructuring of the draft system and restructuring of the party machinery.

Czechoslovakia to Negotiate Treaty Legalizing Occupation

PRAGUE (AP)-A Czechoslovak government delegation arrived in Moscow Tuesday night to negotiate a treaty legalizing the occupation of their country by a Soviet-led force of Warsaw Pact nations, Warsaw Pact nations, Czechoslovak sources reported.

Their arrival was confirmed as the Presidium of the Czechoslovak Communist party approved commitments made in Moscow last week by party chief Alexander Dubcek, the news agency CTK reported. They included promises of further limitations on Dubcek's liberal reform program and agreement on the continued stay of some of the occupation troops.

A communique on the Presidium meeting, which brought together Dubcek and his chief assistants, said the Presidium "approved the procedure of the Czechoslovak delegation" at the Moscow talks.

Amherst Weekly Vigil For Peace Marks Anniversary

The Amherst Weekly Vigil for Peace, initiated on December 4, 1966, is approaching its second anniversary with continuous support from many concerned individuals from the Amherst area.

Each Sunday from 12 noon to 1 p.m. those interested meet on the Amherst Town Common to express their sorrow and protest for the killings in Vietnam.

The vigil is sponsored by The Mount Toby Monthly Meeting of Friends. Its purpose is a quiet but insistent reminder–to policy makers, officials in other countries, citizens at large, and to the participants themselves–that numbers of people are opposed to the war in Vietnam.

The Weekly Vigil functions without speeches, marching, or placards other than a sign identifying the group. Participants stand quietly, or sit, in meditation, and may come and go during the hour.

The first such peace vigil was held in Santa Barbara, California, by a Quaker whose idea was that the vigil be non-denominational; consequently, other churches and synagogues joined in the protest.

Marshall Smith, monitor of the Amherst Vigil, explained that this is a way of expressing protest against a particular war, not all wars, and that the participants are not uniquely pacifists. He said that the number of "vigilists" has decreased since last year, when the streets bordering the Town Common were lined with participants numbering almost 200.

In the initial vigils, there was a large percentage of students in attendance; now that number has decreased to a small but strong group, he said.

When asked if he considered the Vigil to be successful, an unidentified participant said: "How can you judge whether something like this is successful or not–? The thing that matters is that those who are protesting know they are right. It's a very personal thing. This is just our way of showing people what we think.

Smith said there has been very little hostility towards the group from passers-by; however, one persisting soul continues, every Sunday, to park his car directly across the street from the vigil area in order that they might see the sign in his car window: "Support our boys in Vietnam". "This is rare," said Smith, "we usually receive signs of recognition from those passing us. An army truck filled with soldiers passed us one Sunday, the men in uniform holding up their hands with the universal sign for peace."

Agnew

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)— Sen. Edmund S. Muskie said Tuesday third party presidential candidate George Wallace would "make the policeman a member of an occupation force among a hostile people."

The Democratic vice presidential candidate told an estimated 800 persons at a Tiger Bay Political Club luncheon Wallace represented "the philosophy of violence and overkill that led Mr. Wallace to the selection of his running mate they complement one another."

Muskie said the Omnibus Crime Control Act passed this year "offers more significant federal assistance than anything that I have heard Mr. Richard M. Nixon or Mr. Wallace propose.

The Republican vice presidential condidate, continuing his swing through the South, labeled Muskie's recent statement on the subject at the University of Southern California "reprehensible." He said Muskie "should reverse himself immediately."

Agnew said Muskie reportedly watched three students burn their draft cards and that Muskie later said, according to Agnew, "he did not object to a person's breaking the law in protest if that person were willing to pay the penalty."

"It is reprehensible and he should reverse it immediately and tell the draft card burners that what they're doing is morally wrong," he told some 1,600 persons in Massey Auditorium at Belmont College.

Muskie

Pre-Law Association Established to Promote Campus Interest in Law

By Dick Boucher
Thursday Issue Editor

A meeting was held last night in the Commonwealth Room of the Student Union for the purpose of establishing a Pre-Law Association on the UMass campus.

Richard Conklin, the pre-law advisor, called the meeting to order and announced the goals of the nascent association. Long range goals included establishing programs to promote interest in law among UMass students and to construct an association that will progress to a well-established campus organization group.

A more immediate goal was the selection of a temporary administrative committee pending February elections for an executive committee. Since no provision has been made for election procedure, the administrative committee members were selected at random by Conklin. Selected were Douglas Parker, Peter V. Murphy, Leo C. Dolan, Mark E. Antine and David F. Boyle. The committee members will meet in the near future to select a committee chairman.

The administrative committee will act as a coordinating committee for the PLA activities. New members attending the meeting discussed various kinds of activities that the PLA could promote to spark campus interest in the Association as well as the law profession itself and law schools.

Three sub-committees were decided upon to discuss, plan and organize PLA activities. One committee will be organized for the purpose of bringing speakers and films to campus as a means of disseminating information about the law profession.

An alumni committee will set up a system for keeping in touch with former PLA members and to invite them back to talk with new members about their experiences in law school and in the practice of law. Finally, an "events committee" will be established to set up trips to area law schools, stage moot courts, etc.

Lowell H. Fitch, Chairman of the Senate Judiciary Subcommittee and former member of last year's pre-law association , proposed a plan for establishing a student "lawyers pool". The pool would be available to all UMass students facing judicial action whether it be in a house judiciary or the General Court. Students facing such action would be able to call the PLA and request counsel in any judicial body on campus.

Fitch said "there is a need for people who know how to handle a court case on this campus as the law system becomes more refined." He added that some professors with law training have expressed interest in helping to train PLA students in litigation procedure.

Not only would the pool be helpful for students involved in judicial action, but it would be excellent training for prospective lawyers. The pool is not restricted to pre-law students; any interested student may join.

The rest of the meeting was devoted to discussing the work of the various sub-committees and the task of getting members on them.

The pre-law advisory office is located in 362 Whitmore Hall. Information concerning the PLA and questions concerning the law profession and law schools can be discussed there with Mr. Conklin.

Photographs on Exhibition Thursday

Senior Steve Thorp and Professor of geography Dr. Richard Wilkie will open an exhibit of their photographs on Thursday, October 10, at 8:00 p.m. The display will be held in the main corridor and the reading room of the Student Union. Color, black and white, and original Polacolor prints will be shown. Coffee and doughnuts will be served.

Thorp uses a Nikon F and several lenses. Last year he worked with former Collegian Photo Editor Paul Bolivar to photograph the Campus Queens for Index '68.

He is also the director of Photography and Public Information for the Army ROTC at the University and is currently making a film on the Bay State Special Forces.

Last year, Wilkie was a winner in the "Saturday Review" travel photo contest.

Report Labels Columbia Administors as "Authoritanian"

The avowed objectives of the April demonstrations, stripped of their context and symbolism, were inadequate causes for an uprising.

The disruptive potential of the I.D.A. affiliation at Columbia, as at other Universities, was that it enabled the large part of the intellectual community, especially students, to transfer to the campus their intense moral indignation against the Vietnam war.

The gymansium issue was more complex, but it too was a symbolic issue. At least some black students freely acknowledge not only that the issue was oversimplified but that the public gymnasium to be built by Columbia would be more beneficial to the community than the 2.1 acres of rocky parkland, if the project could be judged upon that aspect alone.

But the project could not be judged out of the context of Columbia's relations with its poorer neighbors and society's treatment of racial ghettos.

The third issue, the discipline of the six I.D.A. demonstrators, had somewhat greater substance. Although most students would probably have agreed that the disruptive manner of conducting S.D.S. demonstrations was becoming intolerable, many students were antagonized by the manner in which the "no indoor demonstration" rule was promulgated and the discipline was administered.

Since the rule came close to the area of free expression stanchly guarded by Columbia's liberal tradition, it was of intense concern to the entire university community.

Nevertheless, the prohibition was promulgated by President (Grayson L.) Kirk without consultation with students, and apparently without prior discussion with faculty members. In fact, the rule ran contrary to the unanimous recommendation of a tripartite committee whose report the president withheld.

The rule, which was an obvious target for militants, was formulated in terms that hampered consistent administration and invited provocation.

Out of the 100 students who engaged in the March I.D.A. demonstration, six S.D.S. leaders were selected for punishment. It was difficult to persuade students that this was not a discriminatory selection even though the dean's office explained that these six and no others were recognized.

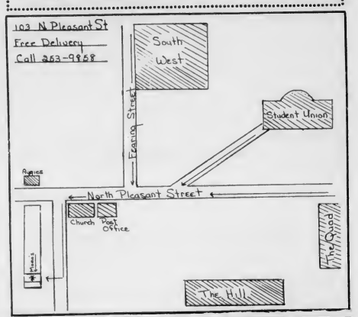
The six I.D.A. demonstrators were refused a public hearing a peremptorily punished. Although the older paternalistic procedures probably gave much greater protection to most student offenders, there is wide and justified campus support for the principles (1) that a student is no less entitled to due process of law than one charged with a public offense and (2) that students would share in disciplinary procedures as part of the right of participation in decisions affecting their interest.

Three among the purely internal causes of unrest especially impressed us.

1. At a time when the spirit of self-determination is running strongly, the adminstration of Columbia's affairs too often conveyed an attitude of authoritarianism and invited distrust.

In part, the appearance resulted from style: for example, it gave affront to read that an influential university official was no more interested in student opinion on matters of intense concern to students than he was in their taste for strawberries.

In part, the appearance reflected the true state of affairs. The machinery of student government had been allowed to deteriorate to a point where Columbia College had no student government. The Report on Student Life was not released for seven months until C.U.S.C. (Columbia University Student Council) members threatened publication.



The quality of student life was inferior in living conditions and personal association.

Columbia, like other universities, has scarcely faced the extraordinary difficulties that faced black students in the transition from a society permeated by racial injustice to one of true equality of opportunity.

We recognize, of course, the difficulty of immediately remedying such deficiencies as the paucity of black teaching and administrative personnel and of appropriate courses and counseling for all students, but the indisputable fact of alienation of our black students, with all that that fact entails makes a more active and creative search for solutions particularly urgent.

THE UNIVERSITY AND INVOLVEMENT

With the fire that took place recently at the Bondsville Mills, $10 million worth of property was destroyed, and some 500 people were left jobless. It goes without saying that this was a major disaster effecting both the area and the entire state of Massachusetts. It is quite obvious that it will take some time to rebuild the Bondsville Mills if, in fact, they are to be rebuilt at all. And in the meantime, the big question is: What is to be done with these 500 people presently without jobs?

Well, amid all the talk about low interest loans and the establishment of the area as a disaster area, the University has set about to actively do something positive in regards to the situation. The University will set up a job recruiting van which will be located near the site of the fire beginning Tuesday morning. The van will be manned by four men from the University personnel office. Applicants for positions will be hired on the spot, and will not have to report to the University to complete their applications.

In a way it is good that the University is getting involved in the community, but it's too bad; it took a disaster for the University to become involved. And if it weren't for the fact that the University just happened to need employees at the time, it is doubtful that the University would be in there at all. Universities today are far too removed from the outside world for their own good as well as for the good of society in general. Our universities should definitely become more active in society, and it shouldn't take anything like a disaster to affect this.

Times Are Hard

The times are hard; the issues complicated and confusing, and the decision makers rebuffed and ridiculed no matter what the decision, be it right or wrong, who is to say, for today, right and wrong are all too vague and the line between them all too thin. But isn't this, in fact, life or the facts of same, and what more can one do but try his best to cope with conditions as they stand; for very few have ever succeeded in changing the conditions in which one lives drastically or in making decisions with regard to the existing conditions which have been favorable to all. For a man to obtain a position of responsibility in a thankless job such as public office, involves trust on the part of many people, but it is the very unique and exceptional man who manages to retain this trust throughout his term in office

The situation in which we find our world in today is a very complicated and enveloping one involving everyone in its complex intanglements. It is a world where even the very essence of right and wrong have been made unclear for the vast majority of people. And it is a world where we find many people giving up and droping out in an effort to reestablish their trust and idenity in a seperate state or world.

It is no secret that our world is fast detereorating. It is also no secret that unless something is done soon, our end will be well in hand. But we must always keep in mind that as long as people are involved, there is hope. Envolvement is what lead our nation out of slavery and into freedom; and it is what will bring us out of disaster now. Politics is what has always been the life and breath of nations since the beginning of time. People must learn again to get involved in their country, politically. For only by political involvement can the direction of whole nations be changed, and it seems likely that only a directional reversal can save us now.

People + Politics = Power, that is, the power to change. And it stands to reason that one without the other equals nill. For both the equation and for what the equation represents.

"So Much For Domestic And Foreign Problems — "

INSIDE REPORT:

Reuther VS Wallace

By Rowland Evans and Robert Novak

DETROIT – Michigan's Democratic-labor coalition last week quietly but drastically curtailed its efforts to register votes in white working-class neighborhoods, the newest evidence of profound pessimism over curbing the Wallace revolution by Election Day.

Indeed, both labor leaders and Democratic politicians concede privately that their belated campaign to wean the white unionized worker away from George Wallace is a long-shot. And this glum prognosis directly affects Democratic registration strategy.

Just a month ago, party chieftains were convinced that the key to victory in Michigan was registration of voters in normally Democratic areas who were purged from the rolls for failure to vote in 1966. This failure to vote was especially high in industrialized Macomb County adjoining Detroit, a Democratic stronghold. While it was recognized that some of those purged were potential votes for Wallace or Nixon, party leaders determined on a calculated risk to register them anyway.

That decision was reversed last week by the United Auto Workers (UAW), which supplies most of the money and manpower for the registration drive. Alarmed by the Wallace tide in Macomb County, the union quietly pulled in its registration horns.

Instead, the registration drive which closes Friday (Oct. 4) is now concentrating on Detroit's black inner city, where four out of five Negro voters can be expected to vote for Humphrey if they get to the polls. In sum, the unregistered black is apt to be for Humphrey; the unregistered white is apt to be for Wallace.

Despite the pessimism, an anti-Wallace campagin aimed at white workers is under way. Doug Fraser, head of UAW's Chrysler division and one of President Walter Reuther's ablest lieutenants, runs the campaign in the union's Solidarity House. In downtown Detroit at state Democratic headquarters, a "Wallace desk" was established (under the direction of Sid Woolner, aide to Sen. Philip A. Hart) to coordinate with Solidarity House.

But like so much of the Humphrey campaign, the effort comes pathetically late. Although a private poll conducted for Reuther 18 months ago revealed rising Wallace strength in UAW locals, the union's leaders shrugged it off. On our last previous visit here in July, labor and party officials confidently predicted that Wallace was hurting Nixon more than Humphrey and had peaked, anyway. Such talk now has disappeared.

Apart from the lateness of the hour, however, nobody knows how best to sour the union members on Wallace. Party leaders doubt that labor's emphasis on bread-and-butter issues has much impact on today's affluent workers.

On the other hand, labor strategists scoff at proposed leaflets linking Wallace with Louisiana racist Leander Perez and the Ku Klux Klan, fearing they might help rather than hurt Wallace with racially motivated white workers.

Potentially most effective is the theme that Wallace is a force for disorder, not order. Facing Wallace hecklers in suburban Taylor Township last week for the first time in his vice presidential campaign, Sen Edmund Muskie eloquently silenced them by declaring that a Wallaceite separatist society was not "what my father came to this country to find."

In truth, however, Muskie's eloquence, UAW-Democratic leaflets or paid political broadcasts almost certainly will not affect, much less change, the hearts of the white workers. The most effective instruments for that is union shop stewards and committeemen. But so intense is Wallace sentiment in the shops that these elected union officials will not risk all-out anti-Wallace missionary work for fear of jeopardizing their union jobs.

Moreover, white workers are kept in a constant state of agitation not so much by Wallace agents as by black extremists on the assembly line. For instance, the black extremist Dodge Revolutionary Union Movement (DRUM) at the Dodge plant here issues obscene racist broadsides, the most recent one denouncing "Polish pigs."

Finally, the gap between the urbane, progressive leaders at Solidarity House and their rank-and-file is massive. That is why Walter Reuther has suffered deep reverses in his battle with George Wallace for the soul of the auto workers. The fact that Reuther can no longer with confidence register his own men to vote must be the cause of some chortling down in Montogomery, Ala.

Speak Out

The Bible

Translated by Wallace

In the beginning was all the darkness.

And Big George said, "Let there be light." And there was light. And Big George saw that the light was good. And Big George called the light White; and He called the dark Nigger. and Big George separated the light from the dark.

And Big George beheld the anarchy in the Universe, and He said: "Let there be Paradise". And there was Alabama. And Big George said, "Let there be a heavenly host to rule this Paradise." And there was the K.K.K.

But the colors of evil, the Reds and the Blacks, rebelled against His rule; and he banished them from Paradise and out unto the earth.

And so time passed, until Big George beheld that many of the faithful had been lost from Paradise and the Battle. And Big George saw that the faithful knew in their hearts that he was right, and unto these pure He gave mercy. But yet there was no Truth upon the earth; so He sent prophets unto the earth, calling them cab drivers. And He said: "Believe these cab drivers, as I was once one myself."

And still the enemies of White light abounded upon the earth. And Big George understood that more was needed to spread his word. And so it came to pass that Big George sent his true prophet unto Alabama, calling Him Little George. And Little George spread his word unto the land; but the forces of Washington sent federal troops unto Alabama to integrate the schools.

And this Plague was called Richard Daley. And Richard Daley was sent unto the presence of the sinners of Sodom and Chicago.

And so it came to pass that the sinners were punished, and Law and Order restored upon the earth.

But still Little George beheld sinners in the land, and he bade his bodyguards follow Him in His travels.

And Little George spread his Little Knowledge among the people. And so that it might be preserved, he had it engraved on the head of a pin, with a jackhammer.

And Little George said, in

His infinite wisdon:

"Henceforth shall everyone fear and honor the name of Him from Alabama, and bow down before his Laws and Order.

"And let everyone remember and fear the temptation of the red apple, for Red is sin.

"And let the Red be replaced by my symbol.

"And let my symbol be a cross which burns, and yet does not consume itself.

"And let ceremonies be made in my name.

"And let the Black and Red be banished from the earth, and let White reign supreme.

And let the liberals, intellectuals, and other anarchists be transported unto limbo (after I run them over with my car).

"And let the earth lean far toward the Right, for Right is might, and might is right.

The Odd Couple

The decision by the Student Senate to remove credit for R.O.T.C. is a grave injustice on fellow students taking R.O.T.C. The big push for Student Power has evidently gone to their heads; they have abandoned wisdom and foresight and have passed a resolution which is unjust and immature to say the least.

The no-credit proposal is, in essence, a punitive measure on those students who wish to take R.O.T.C. This tactic was also used by Lewis B. Hersey, head of the Selective Service, when he reclassified war protestors, also as a punitive measure.

Although one may dislike R.O.T.C and those students who are in it, it is nevertheless unfair to abolish credit for these students merely because they wish to pursue a career in the military. Freedom of choice seems to have been thrown out the window by this decision.

Despite all the talk about R.O.T.C. at UMass no one has discussed the real issue. Whether, in fact, R.O.T.C., or any other military appendage belongs in an institution of higher learning. By definition the military establishment and the University are repugnant to each other.

The tenets of the military are discipline, taking of orders, training to kill and disdain of creativeness, all in the guise of national defense. The University, on the other hand, is a place for the pursuit of knowledge, questioning, probing, searching, creativeness and individuality. The University and the military have truly produced an Odd Couple.

It seems clear then that the Student Senate should stop punishing the students it represents and start getting rid of R.O.T.C. altogether.

Humphrey Defended

To The Editor:

In your editorial "The Veep is Weak" (Oct. 3) you state that Humphrey's recent pronouncements on the Vietnam War were an attempt to separate himself from the Johnson Administration and silence the hecklers.

I do not choose to take issue with these remarks. However, the conclusions you've drawn concerning Mr. Humphrey's character warrant a more careful scrutiny.

Many of us complained that the Democratic Convention failed to respond to the wishes of the majority in its decision on the Vietnam plank as well as its choice for nominee.

And now, if Humphrey strays a little from the straight and narrow, he is, in your words, "showing his true colors as a man of little faith in himself and in his positions."

Although the "law and order" issue seems to have captured the hearts of Americans, the Vietnam War must be considered at least as important an issue. We have one candidate who would go all out militarily to win the war; we have another who refuses to talk about it, but we can try to make some educated guesses based on past performances. This leaves Humphrey as the only candidate who can, conceivably, suggest other methods. Never mind your own peculiar convictions; don't we deserve at least one such candidate?

I suppose I should end here, but I feel I must comment on one other statement. You say, "And it has been my experience that a man who backs down once will back down again." Since, undoubtedly, your experience is limited, (how old can you be?), exactly what "experience" are you talking about? Dorm arguments? Street brawls? Please clarify.

And there is, dear editors, one man who has not backed down to my knowledge. He's the one who stood blocking the entrance of the University of Alabama. If inflexibility is what you want, Wallace is your man.

ROTC Dilemma

To The Editor:

This Wednesday evening the Student Senate might vote to reconsider the ROTC credit issue. If by some minor miracle, our Senators decide that academic credit should be maintained, they would partially mitigate the comical (though facinating) Ballroom session of September 25th.

As a Junior in AROTC, interested in the vitality of education at this University, I have found that one meets with no slight difficulty, when he attempts to question the firmly entrenched illusion that ROTC courses violate liberal education by presenting "dogmatic subject matter" in a "not open and free" manner (24 Sept. Academic Affairs Committee Minority Report). Apparently, some students have confused the supplimental military training (drill, discipline, proper uniform), with the classroom situation, which seeks the opposite of the traditional "military mind as reflex action."

ROTC has become the scapegoat of frustrated youth; banning ROTC credit rates as a stylish extracurricular activity (number one on the SDS schedule). Many students are being reinforced for their anti-ROTC activities by the false, though pleasant, sense of moral/intellectual gratification and ego uplifting derived through striking at this local symbol of military authority and power.

Granted, like many departments of this University, ROTC has need of evolutionary revision. Wide scale revisions of an interdisciplinary nature have already been experimented with at twelve universities; pressure upon the administration concerning institution of similiar changes at UMass would be in order – demanding abolition of credit is asinine.

I am firmly convinced that more could be accomplished in terms of improving this University, if interested students participated in curriculum changes at their respective departmental levels through student-faculty dialogue; there, at least, they would know a little more of what was actually going on in the classroom situation.

Robert S. Wesolowski

Democratic or Not

To The Editor:

If the SDS' list of goals for the coming year is more than the idle talk it appears to be, then the amount of labor that will be necessary for its accomplishment is indeed formidable. For I am sure that if that organization exists for the support of democratic government, according to its titular claim, it cannot in all conscience take action on any of its projected goals without first ascertaining the direction of majority opinion among the student body.

It is thus a moral obligation on their part that any action initiated by them be in accord with the wishes of the majority of students. Or perhaps they would like to organize under a different name.

Campus Comment

Inside Line:

Curriculum VS ROTC DEADLOCK

By Chris McGahan

I recently spoke with Senator Larry Marcus ('69 at large) regarding the possibility of his guest-writing this column at some time in the future regarding the status of ROTC on campus. Senator Marcus was one of the leaders in the September 25 Senate fight which led to the passage of Senate bills S147 and S148, recommending the abolishment of credit for all ROTC courses. The following column, by Larry Marcus, is a result of our conversation.

Senate action last Wednesday night has resulted in the possible reconsideration of the ROTC question. Again the student body will have the chance to discuss the issue through its representative arm. This will be the first meeting for many Senators newly-elected in last Thursday's elections; it is customary for new Senators to follow the lead of older, more experienced faces in the Senate for the first month or so. It would be my hope that the new Senators would be selective in whose advice they choose to follow.

Emotional arguments will be offered by both sides; some will appeal to natural patriotic instincts, while others will decry the inhumanity of our military establishment. Somewhere in between these two extremes the real issues lie.

Last year a Subcommittee on Military Studies was established by the Faculty Senate Committee on Academic Matters. In their report they looked at the ROTC program from four aspects: 1. Does the country need ROTC? 2. Is the study of military subjects a field of knowledge worthy of co-existence on a university campus? 3. Is the military a profession? 4. Is there a demand for the subject in question?

In answer to the first question, as long as the need for the military exists, there is a need for liberally-oriented officers. However, I question whether our ROTC programs stimulate any type of liberal thinking in our military. It still appears that we have a military elite which is not responsive to the views of the public. The subcommittee believes that the ROTC graduate will "modify the professional". I don't think that the ROTC graduate will be able to influence any other professionals until he himself is one. By then he will certainly be militarily oriented and the aims of our ROTC program will have failed.

The "co-existence" question is next. The subcommittee feels that a field of knowledge must be a "learned subject," requiring "intellectual ability for understanding." I wonder how much intellectual ability is necessary to accomplish the desired skills of military drill.

The subcommittee points out that "the Army allows the professor of Military Science and Training to replace up to 25% of the subject matter of a course with material of his own choice." (Italics my own.) In other courses in the University the professor is given 100% freedom in his choice of materials. Neither is the classroom environment overshadowed by the regimentation of the military ethos – something demanded in ROTC courses.

On the third point, the subcommittee believes that the well-educated military officer meets the requirements of a profession according to standards outlined by William E. Wickenden, late President of Case Institute of Technology. I agree. However, does professional training of any sort deserve a place in a supposedly intellectual environment?

Do students want ROTC? The subcommittee acknowledges the fact that there has been a sharp decline in the number of students in the program. Even the ROTC representative at the Senate debate stated that only about 160 freshman – out of 3,000 – were enrolled. This question seems to answer itself.

In addition to the academic aspects, this is a moral question as well. Is it the University's function to provide people to lead our nation in war when there is so much that can be done to lead our nation in peace? I think not. The Senate will have a chance to decide – again – tonight.

On October 15th, at 7:00, the 1968 SWAP Pre-conference will be held in the Student Union Ballroom. At this meeting the problems and dilemmas facing the University and the student body will be presented. A list of objectives will be constructed to be employed during the Annual Conference to be held November 1–3, 1968. All those interested are invited to attend.

The SWAP Conference this year will be held at the Oak and Spruce Lodge in South Lee, Mass. The intention of the Committee is to arrange an informal gathering of students, faculty, and administrators to discuss the changing University. Although it is planned as a free discussion, the issues must be aired in advance if workable solutions are to be found.

What is your gripe with the University? What bugs you about students? Do you like the curriculum changes? Here is an inlet to the establishment. Here is an acceptable and viable means for change. All that you have to do is care enough to come on October 15th. It's your education, your university, your world. Do something about it.

Students Need Self Control, Not Coercion

PORTLAND, Maine (AP) – The dean of students at Oakland University said Monday that student unrest will continue as long as colleges and universities remain basically conservative and slow to change.

"Institutions have the capacity for identifying and debating issues but they lack the capacity for quick and decisive action on complex problems," Dr. Thomas B. Dutton said.

Speaking to a session on student power at the 22nd annual New England Personnel and Guidance Conference here, Dr. Dutton said campus activists are willing to go beyond the level of verbal confrontation to direct action on issues related to personal and academic freedom, institutional quality and social injustice.

Dr. Dutton said the best response to campus disorder was "the re-creation of a true community of learning..." He said this could be achieved at least partially through more emphasis on student self-control and self-direction rather than on coercion.

Opportunity to Learn

Thelma Bossing is an attractive young lady who is a freshman and a member of the . . . . .(the Committee for Collegiate Education for Negro Students) Program.

Thelma likes UMass even though, as a freshman, she has found large classes and lectures to be very impersonal. She believes that it doesn't have to be that way, because it's up to each student to see his professor if he feels lost. In fact, she says, students who complain about being no more than a number probably make no attempt to develop more personal relationships.

As a speech major, Thelma plans on a career in speech therapy. From the time she was in grade school in Roxbury, she knew that she wanted to go to college. There are 12 children in her family and her mother has instilled the desire for a college education in each. Marriage for Thelma will come only after she has achieved her career goal. If she were a UMass just to pass time or to shop around for an eligible husband, she says, it would be a waste of money and valuable time.

Thelma's education means a lot to her, because she wants to work with children. It fulfills her goal of wanting to do something special to help people who have problems.

All of her life she has lived with black people. For this reason, she chose a white roommate. She doesn't know white people as well and she "wants to find out how they tick".

That there are many more black students on campus this semester may tend to magnify any small incident out of proportion she believes. Thelma wishes more people would understand that the students in the program live together on Orchard Hill for the convenience of evening tutoring and meetings and not to be an isolated group.

Discrimination, she says, has not entered her life at UMass. But then, Thelma admits she would prefer to avoid such issues as Black Power rather than aggravate anyone. In this respect she's very easy-going, but if a pressing issue did arise she believes she would support her opinions.

But Thelma is not anticipating any problems. She wants to meet many different people. "You don't learn just from books, you learn from other people," she says.

Squaw Talk

Sweethearts '68

NEW YORK (AP) – Judging from college clothes now on the market, the campus minority won't have a thing to wear, at least not for its kind of activities.

Obviously, designers did not know what FBI chief J. Edgar Hoover claims to know—that disruption will be a major subject at many universities this year. Otherwise they might have digressed somewhat from the traditional sweater 'n skirt, turtleneck 'n trousers uniforms modeled by sweet-faced girls and short-haired boys in glossy fashion magazines.

Nevertheless, plenty of the current styles are adaptable to the activists' way of campus life. Culottes and jumpsuits, a rage among the fashion-conscious, are ideally suited for taking over administration buildings. Maxi-length skirts made of horse blanket wool or quilted materials do well for sleeping in parks.

Recently Esquire magazine realistically envisioned the Sweetheart of '68 with super goggles, a must for every collegiate anyway, and a scarf worn over the mouth as protection against mace. Thigh-high boots, dandy for being dragged limp to a paddy wagon, and an army surplus helmet, which may also be used for summers in Chicago, completed the ensemble.

Despite what apprehensions they may have about modern chemistry, the student protestors would have to admit that test-tube textiles are on their side. Most materials are treated to resist flammability, a safety factor for the draft card burner. Many more are drip-dry and wrinkle free, satisfactorily surviving dousings by fire hoses and weekends in the clink.

Unisex fashions – identically designed wardrobes for male and female-is another current style phase which the new morality student might find useful. These eliminate confusion for boy and girl sharing the same room.

Considering how little time the student activists must have for his studies, paper apparel ought to be a boon. Paper collars and vests as well as cuffs would widen the scope of his crib notes enough to see him through any examination.

Still, since so many styles are applicable, the fashion industry is right in designing not for the left but center. The majority rules in fashion and the minority must shift-or shirt-for itself.

"Squaw Talk", published every Wednesday, aims to give a broad viewpoint to campus and world events. Comments and opinions, addressed to "So Squawk...", will be welcomed by the staff.

Personal Perspective

"First" Date

As a freshman, I have yet to find a male to fulfill my image of a "first date on campus." Instead, I have been exposed to both extremes –the polite date who mutters, "Either slide into your seat from my side of the car or open the door yourself," to a concerned date who puts his arm around my waist to make sure that I don't fall down from the movement of the elevator.

Aggressiveness and self-confidence are ripened with age it seems. While a freshman boy asks you if you mind holding his hand even though it might get sweaty, the upperclassman prefers to frighten his dates with his worldliness.

While the inexperienced call me respectfully by my first name, the experienced refer to me as "baby" or "doll," careful to show that I am no different from any other of my sex.

Is a date just a one night pursuit of happiness, or an expression of mutual feeling between two people? As an idealist, I believe the latter to be true. This may provoke a snicker from the upperclassmen who keep telling me how my ideas will change radically by the time I am a senior.

They expect I will emerge from the clouds and land on the ground of realism. If this will make me a better person, I welcome the change. After all, college is a place of social learning as well as intellectual learning, isn't it?

As far as my social learning goes, I am aware of my total ignorance of the grown-up world of upperclassmen. With increased tutoring, I hope to catch up with the rest of my class in the big race towards grow-up-as-fast-as-you-can-without-stopping-to-think-for-a-minute-what-the-hell-you-are-doing. Just think, maybe I can be a grown-up by the time I'm a sophomore! But then where do I run? S.L.

And This Old Girl Goes Rolling Home

Gaining weight is one of the major problems facing the University coed. Why do so many girls return to campus in the Fall, slim and trim, and then fatten-up to "roll home" for the Christmas vacation? Is there a way to keep the bikini figure year round?

The meal situation at college is not conducive to dieting. First of all, the pressures of school work affect eating habits in one of two ways: either the demands cause a period of starvation or they encourage a constant eating drive resulting in body expansion.

Secondly, the dining commons food is certainly nutritious but it doesn't cater to the calorie-conscious student. In this "battle of the bulge" the weight watcher must fight against breaded, fried, stewed and creamed foods; plus the starchy regulars such as, corn, rice and a variety of potatoes; not to mention the elaborate array of cream pies, brownies, cookies and cakes that are often considered the "quality" course of the meal. The typical college meal makes few special dietary allowances.

The solutions to this weight gain problem involve self-control in adjusting to both the pressures of school and the institutional-type food that is served. The two basic alternatives are to skip a meal or to be selective.

Nutritionally speaking, it is not wise to eat only two meals a day. Not only will the diet lack in certain essential nutritents, but there are increasing chances of greater caloric intake at the next meal.

The best method is to be selective. Choose to eat half portions or omit eating starchy or fatty foods. Since it's more difficult to stop eating once started, it might be simplier to skip the dessert, bread and potato entirely.

Glamour magazine's college issue (August, 1968) suggested several secondary rules for college weight watchers.

1) Use artifical sweeteners instead of sugar.

2) Never have second helpings of anything.

3) Eat slowly. (This is quite applicable to UMass students. Since meals are often considered social hours, there is an increased tendency to linger at the table and thereby consume more than is necessary.)

4) Don't eat between meals unless you have a supply of low-calorie snacks, such as, carrots, canned diet-pack fruits, melba toast or boullion.

5) At breakfast, eat the cereal. This eliminates the temptation of having butter or jelly with a muffin or toast.

6) At lunch, turn a sandwich into an open-face sandwich and eat only one slice of bread.

These are only a few methods and reasonable suggestions for maintaining or losing weight while at school. The rewards of following such a diet plan depend upon the individual, her metabolism, and her normal (at home) food intake.

In competing with the new pressures of school and the hearty offerings at the dining commons, the college woman must possess will-power, if she wants to shape-up instead of round-out. Ellen Breslaw

U Mass Professor Appointed to Assist Water Research

A UMass professor has been named to a top water resources research planning post in the federal government. Prof. Bernard B. Berger, director of the UMass Water Resources Research Center, has accepted a one-year appointment to assist the federal government in developing a long-range plan for water resources research.

He will be special assistant on water resources research in Washington to Dr. Donald Hornig, science advisor to the president and director of the U.S. Office of Science and Technology, and will also be chairman of the Federal Council on Water Resources Research, which is composed of 18 major agencies concerned with the nation's water resources.

Prof. Berger's appointment is effective this month. During his one-year absence, the Water Resources Research Center will be directed by Dr. Warren Litsky, Commonwealth research professor in the department of environmental sciences and director of the Institute of Agricultural and Industrial Microbiology.

Since its inception at UMass in 1966, the Water Resources Research Center has supported a total of 30 research projects that involve studies by physical, life and social scientists at UMass and other institutions. The projects have been supported by approximately $550,000 in federal funds.

Prof. Berger was a member of the Task Force appointed by the Federal Council for Science and Technology in 1962 to develop the basis for long-range planning in water resources.

He was deputy chief of the Office of Resource Development of the U.S. Public Health Service when he was appointed to his present post at UMass in 1966. He also holds UMass appointments as professor of public health and civil engineering.

He is a member of the National Research Council of the National Academy of Science and of several leading water research and engineering organizations. He is the author of more than 25 publications in the field of water resources and pollution control research.

Prof. Berger is a native of New York City who received a B.S. in public health engineering from Massachusetts Institute of Technology and an M.S. in sanitary engineering from Harvard University.

Prof. Berger served as assistant chief for research for the U.S. Public Health Service Division of Water Supply and Pollution Control from 1962 to 1965, when he was named deputy chief of the Public Health Service Office of Resource Development.

He served as general secretary for two world conferences on pollution and the Second International Conference on Water Pollution Research at Tokyo in 1964.

Danworth Fellowships Available

Competition for the Danforth Graduate Fellowships, to be awarded in March 1969, is now open. According to H. Duncan Rollason, Assistant Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences and the local campus representative, those students interested in Danforth Fellowships should inquire immediately at his office in South College. It is particularly urgent that potential candidates apply to take the Graduate Record Examination before the filing deadline of October 11, 1968.

Danforth Fellowships are unusual in that they offer four years of financial assistance. They provide a maximum annual living stipend of $2400 for single Fellows and $2950 for married Fellows, plus tuition and fees. Dependency allowances are also available.

The Fellowships, offered by the Danforth Foundation of St. Louis, Missouri, are open to men and women who are seniors planning to study for a Ph.D. and who have a serious interest in college teaching as a career. Applicants may be single or married, but they must be less than thirty years of age at the time of application and may not have undertaken any graduate of professional study beyond the baccalaureate.

Approximately 120 Fellowships will be awarded. Candidates must be nominated by the local campus Liason Committee (headed by Dean Rollason) as the Foundation does not accept direct applications from students.

Danforth Fellows may hold other fellowships such as Ford, Fulbright, National Science, Rhodes, Woodrow Wilson, etc., concurrently, and will be Danforth Fellows without stipend until the other awards lapse.

Smith Reports Rise in Paperback Price

The cost of understanding has gone up $19.35.

In 1963, Smith College Librarian Richard Harwell made a list of 117 paperback books in print that could be used college students as a personal library they could afford to buy. Through $99.80 worth of paperbacks, net price, and the knowledge they offered, "understanding" might well be achieved.

But that was five years ago. To buy the books on that list that are now in print would today cost $110.10, says Harwell. To buy the whole list, assuming you could find the out-of-print titles at their 1963 prices, the students would have to pay $119.15.

Time has had its toll on the titles as well as the cost of the paperbacks. The list has been revised. Gone are "The Catcher in the Rye" and "Lord of the Flies," replaced by a book titled "The Clockwork Orange," by Anthony Burgess. The popular "The Hobbitt" didn't make the list. John Dewey's "The Philosophy of Education" is gone, but Freud's "General Introduction to Psychoanalysis" remains. Benjamin Franklin's "Autobiography" was eliminated as a "book more honored as 'should be read' than read." But new to the list are John Hershey's "Hiroshima," "The Other America," by Michael Harrington, and Dylan Thomas' "A Child's Christmas in Wales."

Harwell's revised list, thought it is not wholly fiction, is heavily literary in its emphasis. He drew up both the original and revised list while serving as Bowdoin College's librarian. After serving in that post since 1961, he became the Smith librarian this year.

While many of the popular and "classic" titles were able to weather the fast-changing needs and interest of college students, the cost of gaining "understanding" through them couldn't.

Inkeepers Club to Host Buffet Meals Workshop

The Innkeepers Club of UMass will host alumni and friends at a Buffet Workshop on October 12 at the Food Science building.

The workshop is being held to discuss the fundamentals and feasibility of a buffet.

"Eye Appeal; Value Added?" will be discussed by Mr. Raoul T. Gendre, asst. general manager of the Hotel America in Hartford; Mr. W. Grinnan, director of the Student Union and the new Student Center; and Mr. George Tunner, executive chef at U. Mass.

A demonstration of the culinary techniques of decorating will follow this discussion. All the work will be done by members of the Innkeepers Club. They will feature an ice carving and chaudfraid decortion.

After the talk is over and the football game is viewed, a buffet dinner will be served. All the principles discussed earlier, will be put into practice.

Fusia-Deleware's Staying Power Did It

Donlin, Rogers, Robinson, Take Varsity M

by Mike Curran
Sports Editor

Dick Donlin, Steve Rogers and Randy Robinson were the recepients of the Varsity 'M' Club awards yesterday at the Newman Center. It was the second straight week that Rogers and Robinson were honored for their outstanding work on defense.

Donlin, the huge 6'6, 275 pound offensive tackle, had an outstanding blocking game against Delaware. Rogers, meanwhile, picked off four interceptions and Robinson turned in his usual excellent game at defensive end.

Dick Donlin, Varsity M Winner

If Tom York is able to play against Boston University, Robinson may be switched to linebacker, a position he has some familiarity with from his first varsity campaign two years ago.

Coach Vic Fusia cited the Delaware Blue Hens' greater staying power as a big factor in the 28-23 Redman loss last Saturday. "They were the better team in the last five minutes, and that's when most big games are won," he went on to say.

"We literally gave the ball away in the second half", stated Fusia. The UMass defense got fouled up on attempted adjustments to offset the Blue Hens' counter and trap plays. "The entire Delaware offensive line's execution was close to perfection," concluded the Redman coach.

Freshman Coach Dave Kelley presented a scouting report on Boston University. He noted that this game, BU v. UMass is annually, "the hittingest clash of the season."

According to Kelley, the Terriers are as strong a physical team as the Redmen will face all season. Last week they beat Temple, which had been rated one of the East's best units, 7-0 at Boston.

BU's defensive team is drawing rave notices. Their defensive pass rushing and secondary allowed Temple to complete only four passes out of more than 20 attempts. The Terriers have professional size in their defensive unit.

A strong secondary led by Fred Barry and Jay Donabedian is the Bostonians biggest asset. They're big, fast and change direction exceptionally well.

Robinson

"Offensively Boston University has the best speed of any team we'll face", stressed Kelley. Redman fans better not leave their seats for too many hot dogs Saturday, the Terriers may throw the bomb at any given moment.

This play is usually worked to either speedsters Reggie Rucker, Fred Barry or Bruce Taylor on a post cut pattern. The throw could come from quarterbacks Danny Lucca and Peter Yetten, or halfback Bob Calascibetta on the halfback option.

Fusia added that the team is now at a very critical point. It's been a few seasons since a UMass football club has dropped two contests in a row. Now they must face a BU squad which is more than eager to apply a third black mark to the Redman record.

Shutdown in St. Louis

ST. LOUIS (AP)—The World Series returns to spacious Busch Stadium for a sixth game today with Ray Washburn trying to close it out for the St. Louis Cardinals against Denny McLain, Joe Sparma or Earl Wilson of the Detroit Tigers.

Mayo Smith, Manager of the Tigers, said he would not reveal the name of his starter until after he reached the ball park Wednesday morning. The Tigers had remained in Detroit for a final drill at Tiger Stadium Tuesday morning before flying back to St. Louis where the Series will be concluded.

McLain, the 31-game winner in regular season who has lost twice in duels with Bob Gibson in the first and fourth games, 4-0 and 10-1, said he was ready to try again after taking a shot of cortisone in his aching right shoulder Monday.

Leading by three games to two, the Cardinals need only to win one of two at home to become the first National Leaguers to win two straight Series since the 1921-22 New York Giants.

The Cards worked out in Busch Stadium on Tuesday, confident they could wrap it up.

Washburn is the 30-year-old right-hander who had a 14-3 season and then won the third game Saturday 7-3, although knocked out in the sixth inning. He has made a fine comeback from shoulder trouble that kept him on the disabled list during most of the 1964 season.

The big offensive star of the Series, of course, is Lou Brock, the Cards' speedy bullet. Brock is hitting .524 for the Series with 11 hits in 21 at bats and already has tied his own record with seven stolen bases and equalled the all-time Series record of 14 stolen bases.

His all-Series batting average of .400 tops the record set by Home Run Baker in six Series from 1910 to 1922.

Kaline, whose two-run single with the bases loaded won Monday's game and kept the Tigers alive, is the top Detroit batter at .381.

Conf. Picks

Maine's quarterback, Dave Wing, Massachusetts safetyman, Steve Rogers, and New Hampshire's halfback, Carl DeFillippi have been chosen as the top offensive, defensive and sophomore players in the Yankee Conference for their performances last Saturday.

Wing led the Black Bears to their first win in 10 games as he completed 10 of 22 passes for 166 yards and 2 touchdowns. The 5'8, 165 lb. junior was the key performer in Maine's 28-0 win over Vermont.

Rogers played a tremendous game in the Massachusetts secondary in the 28-23 loss to Delaware. The 6'2, 195 lb. junior intercepted four Blue Hen passes in the Massachusetts end zone, four yard, five yard, and eight yard lines to thwart Delaware drives.

DeFillippi scored both touchdowns in New Hampshire's 17-10 conference triumph over Connecticut. The 5'8, 170 lb. sophomore tallied on a 69 yard pass play as well as a 26 yard run from scrimmage.

IT'S THE GOSPEL TRUTH– Detroit catcher Bill Freehan slams the tag on the Card's speedy Lou Brock in the controversial fifth inning play of Monday's World Series game at Detroit.

Tigers Undecided About Mound Choice

DETROIT (AP) - Manager Maye Smith said yesterday Denny McLain, Earl Wilson or Joe Sparma will pitch the sixth game of the World Series for Detroit, but he won't announce his choice until he gets to the ball park today.

At the same time, McLain, the 31-game winner who has lost both his Series starts, disclosed he had a cortisone shot Monday to relieve the inflamation in his right shoulder.

"I haven't made up my mind, and I'm really not leaning any way right now," Smith said after the Tigers held a brief workout before flying to St. Louis for the sixth game. The Cardinals lead three games to two.

Wilson started Saturday's third game but pulled a hamstring muscle in the back of his right leg. McLain, who pitched in last Wednesday's opener and again Sunday, had complained of a sore shoulder.

But after throwing for 13 minutes yesterday McLain told coach Hal Naragon, "I haven't been able to do this for two months."

The 24-year-old right-hander referred to the way he popped the ball into Naragon's glove while warming up.

"It feels real good," McLain said afterward. "I'm ready to go tomorrow if he wants me too."

Wilson threw for 10 minutes and said his leg felt much better than it had Monday. He didn't, however, seem as optimistic as McLain.

Sparma is the only one of the three who hasn't had any ailments, but he also probably would pitch only if the other two couldn't.

SPE Goes for Three in Cross-Country Meet

One of the largest turnovers in history is expected this afternoon as the annual intramural cross-country meet takes place on the grounds surrounding Alumni Stadium. The meet is scheduled to start at 5 p.m. with all contestants requested to arrive by 4:30.

Today's meet will be the eighth such event. It will be the fifth year team tabulations have been kept. This will also be the second time the meet has been run around the 1.7 mile course surrounding the stadium.

Of special interest today will be the performance of SPE. Sig Ep has won the team and campus championship the last two years.

All performers will be aiming at Gerald Johnson's record of eight minutes, eight seconds, set in 1966.

BOSTON – Vice-President Hubert H. Humphrey gave a major "law and order" speech here Wendesday and spoke briefly with 200 college students who had greeted his arrival at the Boston-Sheraton Hotel.

Humphrey told a convention of the National Association of Retail Druggists he would initiate as President federally aided college programs to train local police officers in "crime prevention, crime control and the protection of human rights." He also said he would seek higher pay with federal funds for police budgets.

"Law and order are not cheap. If you want it, you have to pay for it" he said.

Humphrey's plane was met at Logan airport by Boston Mayor Kevin H. White and several city and labor union officials.

His motorcade was slowed almost to a halt on Beacon street when several hundred college students poured into the street cheering for the Presidential candidate.

Humphrey also met cheering college student supporters when he arrived at the hotel, both demonstrations in sharp contrast to the jeering he received when he spoke here several weeks ago.

The students were organized by the student coalition for Humphrey-Muskie, led by former leaders of student groups which supported Sen. Eugene McCarthy, the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy and Republican Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller.

Humphrey aides reported that the Vice-President was "pleased" with the student demonstration. Following his address to the convention Humphrey spoke with the students.

"I need your help" he told them, "and frankly, I think you need mine" he said as the crowd cheered him.

"We had expected to raise 7 or 8 million dollars for the campaign but we'll be lucky if we raise 2 or 3. Our television time will be one third of what we had planned. I need you to go back to your schools and work for me" he told the students.

Humphrey's speech to the Druggist's Association stems from a long standing committment. Humphrey was a pharmacist in his father's store before entering politics and used his past experience in the business as picturing himself as a "friend in government of small business" to the convention crowd.

The vice-President attacked his campaign opponents for the crime prevention proposals. "Campaign oratory never caught a thief or stopped a riot" he said.

He said that the nation's police forces have been "neglected and over looked and shortchanged for decades."

He said that the training of police men has been neglected although it requires "professional people whose training includes the highest standards in crime prevention, crime control and the protection of human rights."

Humphrey said he would speak at greater length on certain points of his speech in a nationally broadcast television speech Saturday.

Edward W. Brooke to Deliver Major Address in Bowker

Massachusetts Senator Edward W. Brooke will deliver a major address on an undisclosed topic at the University of Massachusetts Sunday, Oct. 13, at 7:15 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium.

His visit is sponsored by the Distinguished Visitors Program and is open to the public without charge.

Elected U.S. Senator from Massachusetts in 1966, Mr. Brooke is serving on the Senate committees of Aeronautical and Space Sciences and Banking and Currency. He is currently campaigning for Republican presidential nominee Richard M. Nixon.

Senator Brooke gained national prominence in 1962 when he was elected Massachusetts attorney general. He was the only Republican to win statewide office that year. He was re-elected in 1964 with the largest plurality achieved by any Republican in the U.S. that year and the largest of any Republican in the history of the state.

His work as attorney general and in the U.S. Senate led to his appointment as a member of the National Advisory Commission on Civil Disorders by President Johnson in 1967 following a summer of racial disturbances in several major American cities. That same year he was named recipient of the Charles Evans Hughes Award by the National Conference of Christians and Jews.

A graduate of Howard University with a B.S. in 1941, Sen. Brooke later went on to earn his bachelor of laws and master of laws degree from Boston University Law School. Since 1963, he has been awarded eight honorary degrees.

He is a trustee at Boston University, chairman of the Board of Directors of the Opera Company of Boston, a member of the National Advisory Council at Tuskegee Institute, a director of the Freedom House in New York City and serves a number of other public and educational groups.

MAJOR ADDRESS-The Distinguished Visitors Program will present Massachusetts Senator Edward W. Brooke on Sunday, October 13 in Bowker Auditorium.

Julian Bond to Speak at Mount Holyoke College

Julian Bond, civil rights leader, and the first Negro to be nominated for the vice-presidency of the United States was denied permission to speak at the University of Tennessee on Oct. 2, because according to Chancellor Charles H. Weaver he had "nothing to say to the University community." Apparently, the administration at Mt. Holyoke College feels that Julian Bond does have something worthwhile to say, for he will be a guest speaker of the Mt. Holyoke College Lecture Series, Saturday, Oct. 12 at 3 p.m. Hosted by members of the Afro-American Society, Mr. Bond will appear at Mt. Holyoke's Amphitheater.

College appearances are not the only area where Mr. Bond has been given the stop sign. He was first elected to a seat created by reapportionment in the Georgia House of Representatives in 1965, but was prevented from taking office in January, 1966, by members of the legislature who objected to his statements about the war in Vietnam. A victorious election for Bond in February, 1966 to seat him in the Georgia House was again voted against by a special House Committee. Finally, after a third election in November, 1966 the United States Supreme Court unanimously ruled in December,

New Senate Sworn In, Two Vancancies Still Exist

In the first business of the evening, Student Government affairs Chairman Deverton Cochrane moved to go into special business to accept the election results of October 3. In the case of the election in Lewis House, there was a protest filed, and on the basis of the fact that the election was started a half hour late, denying some people the opportunity to vote, a motion was made and passed to accept the appeal. Another election will be held in Lewis today from 6 to 9 p.m. The remainder of the election results were accepted.

The new senate was sworn in, the committee chairmen introduced themselves to the senate, and the new session of the senate began.

S.G.A. Chairman Cochrane had some interesting figures to present concerning the turnout for the Senate Elections. Of those students eligible to vote, 43 percent of the campus took part, with the following breakdown: residence halls (49%); commuters (25%); fraternities (29%) and sororities (7).

There still remains one vacant seat in the sorority constituency. In order to fill this seat, an election will be held October 24 in the Student Union. Nomination Papers will be available starting today. These will be due next Thursday by 5:30 p.m.

The following appointments were made: Greek Judiciary Selections Committee - Paul Anderson, Deverton Cochrane, John Dubois, Frederick Hartwell; The Committee on the Undergraduate - Joe Tabacco and Carol Andrews; Finance - Bob Twiss. All present members of S.G.A. were removed and the following people were appointed: Dawn Dudash, Steve Inkellis, Phil Rosen, Clifden Banner, Bob Twiss and Stephani Bourbonnais. Linda Johnson and Jane McCauley were removed from Finance Committee.

In the first legislative action of the night, the Budget Act for the fiscal year 1969-70 was postponed until the first meeting in November in order to give the Budgets Committee the time to hold hearings on proposed budgets. The next two motions were financial motions involving category changes in existing budgets.

The first allowed a change which permits two members of Spectrum to attend a conference in New York; the second involved a change in the budget of the Student Afro-American Organization which transferred $400 from a category "Dances" to the category "Talents and Services". Both motions passed without any debate. Following this, a motion to underwrite the Innkeeper's Buffet Workshop up to $65 was passed.

Finance Committee Chairman, Pat Beharry, stated that her committee felt that this offered an excellent opportunity for all students on campus to learn culinary skills.

As with the other financial motions, this, also was passed.

A motion made by Senate Treasurer, Alan Gauthier to put a binding clause on the budget of the Martin Luther King, Jr. Social Action Committee, was the next item considered. As Budgets Committee Chairman, Bradford Johnson stated, "the binding clause just makes it clear that the $30,000 is used for the purpose originally intended." The motion was passed.

At this point during the meeting, a motion was made and passed to go into Special Business to consider a bill co-authored by Senators Kilmartin, Fox and Looney. The intent of the bill is to put the senate philosophically behind the United Farm Workers in its efforts to unionize the agricultural workers of California and in its efforts to boycott the products of those growers who are refusing to recognize this union" and also to recommend to Food Services that they discontinue "purchase of California grapes or Guimarra potatoes."

The debate on the issue seemed to center on the question of whether or not ehe senate should consider matters which do not directly effect the University Community. In debating for the motion, one of its sponsors, Senator Kilmartin expressed the point of view that "we should show that we don't consider ourselves living in an ivory tower. We're part of this country whether we like it or not." In refuting this point of view Senator Blanchett said that it was "ridiculous for the Senate to vote on this". Vice-President Hartwell moved to postpone the motion for one week, but this was defeated. The bill was then debated further and passed. Vice-President Hartwell moved that reconsideration be entered in the minutes. The question will again be open for debate at the next meeting.

In its final action of the evening, the senate ammended the Activities Act of 1967. With business completed, the senate adjourned at 8:20.

Professor Fenton Predicts Nixon

Speaking on "Presidential Election 1968" Prof. John Fenton of the Government Department last night predicted the victory of Richard Nixon in November.

Fenton, lecturer and author of several political books on American politics, addressed the University's International Club and told his audience that he considers a Nixon-Agnew win "almost as certain as anything can be."

The University professor pointed to recent survey polls which indicate Nixon's popularity as holding even while Democratic hopeful Hubert Humphrey's keeps dwindling.

Third party candidate George Wallace's campaign will also help Mr. Nixon, added Fenton, because many of Wallace's supporters will change their minds and go to Nixon on election day. After November he added, many Wallace supporters (including Democrats) will move to the Republican party and "keep in the majority party for a long time to come."

Discussing the Wallace candidacy first, Prof. Fenton told the group that it is not "something emerged from nothing." He feels Wallace's support comes primarily from those same Democrats who voted for Lyndon Johnson in 1964, John Kennedy in 1960 and Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1932, but who now feel "betrayed" and "lied to" by the "establishment".

Wallace originally attempted to "affect" the two parties with his candidacy, stated Fenton, and he has succeeded somewhat.

"They are people who feel the Democratic party is no longer the party of the common man," said Fenton of what he believes to be Wallace followers. He believes these people to be lower middle class, male, and young Calling George Wallace "a racist, and there's no denying it," Prof. Fenton summed up the Wallace campaign chances by stating that the Southerner would not and cannot win.

Fenton did add, however, that Mr. Wallace may (though not likely) throw the election into the House of Representatives.

The Nixon-Agnew ticket became the professor's next topic of discussion.

Nixon's support comes from an "almost all basic Republican vote" stated Mr. Fenton, and his strategy is based on convincing the American people that he will end the Vietnam conflict with honor and the domestic dissent. Fenton added that he personally believes that after Nixon wins in November he will "legitimize the social revolution of the last four years," and will indeed end the Vietnam war with honor and the rioting. The professor added that he also believes it would "be good for our country to have a conservative administrator."

Regarding the election year itself and the personalities of the candidates Fenton concluded that 1969 seems to be an "issue-oriented" election and that both Nixon and Humphrey are "lack luster" individuals who represent the "living embodiements of their parties." He pointed to George Wallace as the only candidate with "charisma."

McCarthy Wont Support Humphrey

NEW YORK (AP) – Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy has again rejected overtures that he support Democratic nominee Hubert H. Humphrey's presidential campaign and close ranks in the party.

The Minnesota senator, in his first major political speech since he lost the nomination to Humphrey in August, said Tuesday night the call for party unity was no more acceptable to him now than when he entered the presidential race a year ago.

But he left the door open for Humphrey to possibly obtain his support before the November election. McCarthy listed three positions he said were crucial to him and his supporters, and indicated he hoped the vice president would adopt them.

McCarthy spoke at a $100-a-plate fund-raising dinner for New York Democratic senatorial nominee Paul O'Dwyer, a Vietnam war critic who has refused to endorse Humphrey.

McCarthy then listed the three conditions he thought should be met to change the direction of the Democartic party: a shift in vietnam war policy, a restructu Vietnam the draft system and of the party machinery.

On Vietnam, McCarthy said, promises to stop the bombing of the north, as Humphrey has conditionally pledged, were not enough. What is needed, he said, is a willingness to accept a coalition government - Communist and non-Communist - in South Vietnam.

Second, McCarthy said, something must be done to put fairness into the military draft system-not just promises of a lottery selection method. Rather, the burden of the draft should be spread over "the entire population" and a provision made for exemption "on the basis of conscience," McCarthy said.

Also, he continued, Democrats must be assured that party reforms will be put into effect along democratic lines-with a small "d".

"We must continue to put these things before the public," McCarthy added. "If we can do it through the presidential candidate, we should doit.. There may be time. I hope there is."

Irish Police Break Up Fights Between Catholics, Protestants

BELFAST (AP)- Northern Ireland's government acted today to cool tempers and to ward off street clashes in Belfast between Roman Catholic and Protestant demonstrators.

Hundreds of police were on alert in the capital as 1,500 Queen's University students gathered for a mass march today. The students, many of them Catholics, were parading to protest the way police broke up a civil rights demonstration in Londonderry last weekend.

Authorities gave permission for the Belfast march-but banned a counterdemonstration planned by the Rev. Ian Paisley, a Protestant extremist.

Paisley had warned that members of his "Ulster Volunteer Force" would barricade part of the parade route to keep the marchers away from Protestant neighborhoods.

"Now I have been served with a police order forbidding our demonstration," the clergyman said. "But I will be there just the same and I have asked thousands of other Protestants to be there too."

A homemade gasoline bomb was thrown at a side door of Broadway Presbyterian Church Tuesday night and police dispersed crowds of youths gathering on street corners.

The church, located in a largely Catholic district, was not badly damaged. Police blamed "hooligans" for the attack.

Londonderry, Northern Ireland's second city where 96 people were injured in the weekend rioting, was reported quiet.

Next Saturday's march had been billed as "a peaceful demonstration" for fair employment and housing policies. The Catholics maintain they are victims of discrimination by Protestant authorities over the right to vote and work.

Julian Bond to Speak

1966 that the Georgia House had erred in refusing him his seat. He presently serves as a member of the Education, Insurance and State Institutions and Properties Committees in the House.

Besides being a harbinger for the Student Nonviolent Co-ordinating Committee (SNCC) in 1960, Julian Bond is a member of the Board of Directors of the Southern Conference Education Fund, the Southern Correspondents Reporting Racial Equality Wars, and of the Advisory Board of the proposed Martin Luther King, Jr. Memorial Library.

He holds membership on the Executive Committee of the Atlanta NAACP and the Board of the Highlander Research and Education Center. He has been a Research Associate of the Voter Education Project of the Southern Regional Council.

A staff position on the Daily Collegian requires enthusiasm and a desire to learn. It will take only as much time as you wish to devote to it.

Homeless House Seeks Greener Pastures

Yesterday the house that had been sitting in the center of Amherst, the former Valley Peace Center, decided to go for a ride.

Needing a slight assist to pick itself up, brush itself off, and finally get moving, the house enlisted the aid of various humans. Telephone and wire crews, an electric service truck, and a cablevision truck all set out on the immense journey with the house.

The goal: Leverett. Phone wires went up and down, necks were craned for a look-see as the portly mass rambled down the route. Spirits of all were high until at the intersection of Ellis Drive and North Pleasant Street a hang-up occurred — or almost occurred. At this point wires crossed the road, blocking the progress of all. The telephone linemen raised most of the wires with a crane, but somehow forgot one. After four attempts to life the remaining wire with a flexible extension rod, the wire was caught and stayed hooked on the roof.

The crew's spirits fell a little at this, but the men worked quickly and soon had the wire disconnected. Huffing and puffing and snorting and belching smoke like a locomotive, the moving truck started, and once again the party was on its way.

All went well until the group reached Hasbrouck when, lo and behold, there was a trench across the road. This came as a great surprise. After much discussion the movers decided to bridge the gap with stacks of two-by-fours. This sounded like an excellent plan to everyone but the electric company employees, who were just filling the trench with cement. An altercation developed, during which it was discovered that both parties had been given permits by the town to do their thing. Much of the problem was solved when the electric company decided that the best way to avoid responsibility in case the house fell in the hole was to park a truck in the path of the building.

During all this a large crowd had gathered and pointed jibes flew like arrows, most finding their targets. Many suggestions as to how to resolve the conflict between the movers and the electric company were offered by bystanders, but as most were dangerous and the rest humiliating, they were largely ignored. Trucks from the student union construction site were halted by the obstacles in the center of the intersection, and traffic piled up behind the homeless house.

The building movers located some heavier "planks" to put over the trench. The "planks", however, were little more than trees slightly squared off and nobody wanted to move them off the pick-up trucks. It was finally decided by the crew to back the house into parking lot 4 for the evening until the concrete dried and the trench could be filled with gravel.

Originally, the house had just set out for a little ride. Instead, it became involved in an adventure. The members of the crew and all who observed the events of the day agreed that it had been a moving experience.

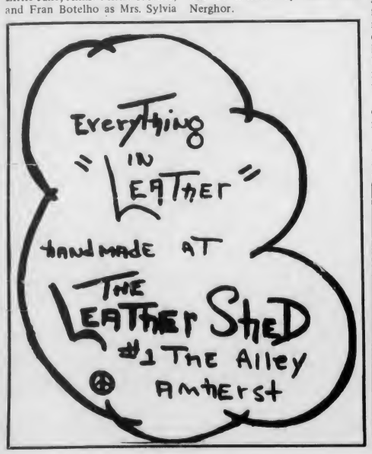
Operetta Guild to Present Comedy "Annie Get Your Gun"



The Operetta Guild has announced its cast for their fall production of ANNIE GET YOUR GUN.

This year's leading lady is botany major Debbie Nadeau. Playing opposite her is senior Tom Babson as Frank Butler, star of Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show. Babson, a theater major, has just finished a summer of musical comedy stock in New Jersey.

Jay McAuliffe who starred in ONCE UPON A MATTRESS and LIL ABNER is cast as Charlie Davenport, manager of the Wild West Show. Karen Connolly, veteran of four Guild shows and a variety of summer stock leads will portray Dolly Tate, performing artist in the Wild West Show. Chemistry grad student Glen Moser will portray Buffalo Bill.

Also featured will be choreographer Sue Bacon as Little Jake, Annie's little brother, and Fran Botelho as Mrs. Sylvia Potter-Porter. The chorus includes cowboys and cowgirls, carnival people and various high-society ladies being portrayed by Margie Lewin, Dave Natheson, John Tompson, Paul Steinberg, Leo Ablicki, Pat Hannigan, Cherie Trenholm, Laurie Elgart, Ellen MacIntosh, Julie Bailey, Nancy McAvoy, Donna Foehr, Leslie Olsen, Marty Kitrosser, Jerry Bellows, Clif Banner, Barry Macomber, Cheryl Cardran, Mary Kemer, Paula Greenman, Donna Pasco, and Pat Cristoun.

The dancing ensenble under the direction of Sue Bacon will include Carol Wigg, Joan Pyterat, Linda Wilkinson, Sandy Rispler, Anne Umana, Janet Kiterlee, Rob Peters, Bob Ward, Rick Goodwin, Joe Hartzler, Joe Burnes. The production will be staged by Miss Bednerik of the theater department, and music will be handled by senior Bill Nerghor.

Amherst Man Files Suit in Boston to Test Legality of Viet War Liability

The case of Medeiros vs. The Unites States was filed at Boston Federal Court, March 15, 1968. John M. Medeiros of Amherst has said, "I want to prove, regardless of the legality of the war, that I cannot be held liable for service in the Vietnam war."

Medeiros has now recruited help from the UMass. organization "Concern". "Concern" is a new movement for a fourth political party for those disenchanted with the presidental candidates.

"Concern" members will take part in the noon to one o'clock peace vigil in Springfield on Saturday, October 12, 1968. They will pass out hand bills in an attempt to get support for their cause.

Medeiros says, "The case has nothing to do with civil disobedience or resistance to any law. I want to enforce the law, Constitutional Law."

Medeiros is asking all males, 18 to 26 years old, who are residents of Massachusetts, not classified 4f, and who have not resisted or disobeyed any law to help. He wants them to enter the case as plaintiffs.

He said, "If I alone back the complaint the court could easily dismiss it or otherwise dispense with it carelessly. If many back it, it will get publicity and will have to be heard and the court will be less inclined to hand down a frivolous decision".

Spectrum to be Published Next Month for Second Year

Co-editors Barbard Ditkoff and Betsy Goldman announced today that the first edition of Spectrum for the 1968-69 school year will appear in November.

During its second year of publication, the magazine will exibit fornat changes designed to focue attention on feature articles, opinion and creative material which is "pertinent, purposeful and provocative", according to Miss Ditkoff.

Miss Goldman reported that selecting articles for publication from the "wealth of outstanding material submitted" is the staff's chief headache at the moment. Most of the material comes from UMass students. Some of the final selections which will appear this year are;

.An analysis and evaluation of Project 10 by the students and faculty members involved.

.A study of the former campus humor magazine Yahoo and a preview and prognosis for the humor mag.

.An evaluation and commentary on the CCENS program

.An article on "what's happening" in the School of Education.

"These feature articles will be suplemented by liberal doses of creative art and photography, music and book reviews, short stories and poetry designed to entertain and stimulate almost every UMass reader," Miss Ditkoff said.

Priest Defends Draft Card Burning on Basis of Bible

BALTIMORE, Md. (AP)- "Civil disobedience for the most part comes from the gospel," the Rev. Phillip Berrigan, Roman Catholic priest, testified today at his trial for helping burn draft board records.

United States action in Vietnam "comes close to genocide," the deliberate destruction of a racial, political or cultural group, the priest told a U.S. District Court judge and jury.

He was the second of nine Catholic defendants to testify at the third day of the trial.

Father Berrigan was asked in a series of questions by his lawyer, Harold Buchman, to explain why he participated in removing and destroying with homemade napalm records at a Baltimore suburban draft board and pouring blood on others in a separate episode.

"My views are based largely on what I consider an appreciation of human rights," Father Berrigan said.

"The issue was not my life. The issue was the deepening involvement of America-not only in Vietnam-what this had done to us as a people. I was interested in doing all I could to protest what my country had become."

He cited what he termed America's tradition of civil disobedience, such as the Boston tea party.

The defense had contended in its opening statement Tuesday that the moral and legal aspects of the fighting in Vietnam ought to be considered the main points in the trail.

The first assistant U.S. attorney, Arthur G. Murphy, argued it was not an issue.

ACLU Recommends Academic Freedom for High

--The American Civil Liberties Union has extended guidelines recommended for academic freedom on the college campus to high schools.

A policy statement just released puts into writing the philosophy that ACLU has been practicing at the secondary level for some time. It spells out what the organization sees as the rights of students and teachers on subjects that have resulted in controversy and legal hassles across the nation.

"If each new generation is to acquire a feeling for civil liberties,"the statement says, "it can do so only by having a chance to live in the midst of a community where the principles are continually exemplified. For young people, the high school should be such a community."

The guidelines oppose loyalty oaths and call for the freedom to teach controversial issues. Union participation, including the right to strike, is also endorsed. Teachers should be appointed solely on the basis of teaching ability and professional competence and not dismissed for holding and expressing opinions, the statement says. Teacher's rights outside the classroom "are no less than those of other citizens," it adds.

Rights set out for students include dress, access to books, assembly, publications, outside activities, and due process in disciplinary actions. "As long as a student's appearance does not, in fact,disrupt the educational process, or constitute a threat to safety, it should be of no concern of the school,"ACLU believes. A student is entitled to a formal hearing and right of appeal when serious infractions of rules are involved, it argues. "No student should suffer any hurt or penalty for any idea he expresses...," the statement continues. There should be no interference with the wearing of buttons, badges, armbands, or insignia on the grounds that the message may be unpopular. "The onus of decision as to the content of a publication should be placed clearly on the student editorial board. "The right to an education. . . should not be abrogated because of marriage or pregnancy unless there is compelling evidence that the student's presence. . . does, in fact, disrupt or impair the educational process for other students."

The ACLU considers the academic freedoms set forth in the statement more than a line of defense. They are, it says "positive elements in the educational process of a democracy."

Where ? Nixon Stands

Presidential candidate Hubert H. Humphrey has time and time again prodded Richard Nixon, the Republican presidential candidate, to agree to a nationally televised debate, but to no avail. Usually, Nixon either bluntly refuses for some quickly-fabricated reason, or he avoids the issue altogether. Recently, Nixon has indicated a willingness to debate Humphrey, if third party candidate George Wallace is excluded. The problem here is that present law requires television stations to grant equal time to all presidential candidates including those of fringe parties.

It would appear that Nixon is curiously asking a bit too much with regards to this proposed bebate. And maybe he has at last found a "dignified" way out with his stated prerequsite that Wallace be excluded. It seems that Nixon is a little apprehensive about squaring off with both Wallace and Humphrey at once. Or maybe, as Humphrey has said, Nixon has stradled the issues so long that a confrontation in the guise of a national debate would expose him to the nation as a fence-stradling, middle of the road non-committant.

If Nixon actually has as much to offer the American people as he says he says, why should he be afraid to give us just a little sneak preview? Or maybe, Nixon feels that he has enough going for him to make it on looks alone. I believe that Nixon's continual failure to stand firm and speak out on the issues gives the real answer for his apparent lack of confidence. He is not committed enough on the issues to face a debate. In a debate this would surely come out, and Nixon knows it. I'm certainly no fan of George Wallace, in fact I absolutely opposed to all he stands for, but there is one thing I can say of Wallace that I, of yet, have not been able to say of Richard Nixon— he is committed.

Committment is the key issue of this campaign, and it is certainly a prerequisite for a presidential candidate. We have heard the views of both Wallace and Humphrey, and we pretty much know where they stand. But of Nixon, we are still pretty much in the dark. It is common knowledge that people fear the unknown more than anything else. Nixon had better say where he stands soon, or he will find the people on election day greatly fearing his unknown.

The Pope, The Bank, And Birth

In his recent encyclical on birth control Pope Paul VI called on all nations to repudiate all forms of artificial contraception. Given the power of the Roman Catholic Church in some nations this is tatamount to sentencing millions of living beings to poverty and stunted lives. The Pope asks nations to cement themselves into low standards of living, disease, and starvation in the name of God and morality. Such conditions, if allowed to fester, will eventually lead to savage revolutions and international violence. In South America the situation is already critical, while the population is growing rapidly.

Men of reason have answered the Pope's call, negatively. Robert McNamara has announced that the World Bank will loan developing nations funds for population control programs, research in birth control techniques, and for administration of national birth control programs. He has also promised an educational drive to convince developing nations that population growth is a serious handicap in their drive for economic stability.

Although world food production is rising, this will be worthless if the world's population doubles by 2000 AD as appears likely. In developing countries the added populace will swallow developement funds, keeping these nations perpetually poor and in turmoil. Therefore, McNamara has said loans will be forthcoming only if attention is given to the problem. Conditions such as these exist and which will grow worse if the Pope is heeded, are real immoralities.

A politico-religious conflict may shape up. Questions of man's rights to control their own lives arise. It is not mere existence but the quality of life which is important, though the Pope feels differently. Yet even existence will be threatened if his teachings are followed. As the populace grows the world will be faced with lack of space, starvation, and war.

The lines are drawn between the celibates who try to control people through "morality" and the men who see the world as it is and seek to better it. It is sad when religion tries to impose doctrines which have no relation to the real world of men in the name of "morality," for then it loses its influence for good when real questions of morality arise. In view of the birth control encyclical, and its possible consequences one must agree in part with H.L.Mencken's observation that "organized religion has been responsible for more suffering and hatred in the world than any other institution on earth."

Inside Report:

Dirksen's Democratic Buddies

WASHINGTON– Defying a direct request from Vice President Hubert Humphrey, the AFL-CIO's Committee on Political Education (COPE) has ruled out all but token help for Democrat William G. Clark's campaign against Sen. Everett McKinley Dirksen in Illinois.

What's more, this refusal is on direct orders of George Meany, president of the AFL-CIO whose political positions in recent years invariably have reflected the wishes of Lyndon B. Johnson.

So bizarre a situation, unworthy of belief at any time except this eerie autumn of 1968, has kindled suspicions in Illinois Democratic circles about a conspiracy directed against Clark by those three exemplars of the old politics: President Johnson, Mayor Richard J. Daley of Chicago, and George Meany. Underpinning their suspicion is the pronounced lack of enthusiasm by the LBJ-Daley-Meany triumvirate in seeking to unseat Dirksen, who has been Mr. Johnson's great and good friend as Senate Republican leader.

Clark, 44, the Attorney General of Illinois, is by no means the only liberal Democratic candidate to be shortchanged by COPE because of dovish views on Vietnam. But unlike some other doves, Clark fell in line after the Chicago convention with a strong endorsement of Humphrey. In the past six weeks, he has made no fewer than 50 speeches asking Illinois voters to back Humphrey.

Consequently, it was with astonishment that the Clark camp about two weeks ago concluded that COPE and its director, Al Barkan, were treating him like a pariah. Since Clark's labor record is unblemished and Dirksen long has been on the AFL-CIO's "most wanted list," Clark appealed to higher authority to get desperately needed funds from labor.

The day before Humphrey was due to campaign in Springfield, Ill., late in September, Clark telephoned Sen. Walter (Fritz) Mondale of Minnesota, Humphrey's pre-convention co-manager. Clark's request: could Mondale get Humphrey to intercede with Barkan?

The next day, when Humphrey met Clark on the speaking platform in front of Lincoln's tomb, the Vice President expressed his own sense of outrage at COPE's own earlier request for help. Barkan wrote the Vice President a cool letter stating that the most COPE could do for Clark was a piddling $5,000 now, with the possibility of another $5,000 later in the campaign (which now has less than four weeks to run).

But COPE's arrogance to Clark is no worse than the non-support he has been getting from Mayor Daley and his Cook County political machine. Clark's shabby treatment at Daley's hands is even more ironic than his abandonment by labor. Like Daley, Clark is a product of the regular organization and was picked by Daley for the difficult Senate race over the supposedly less reliable outsider, State Treasurer Adlai Stevenson III. Even though Clark sought the favor of the anti-war bloc by backing the minority peace plank and Sen. George McGovern's bid for President at Chicago, he fully expected Daley's unqualified support in the Senate race.

Indeed, Daley gave Clark a personal pledge of help from the Chicago machine's ample treasury. But for weeks not a penny was sent to Clark. Only within the last few days has Daley permitted $5,000 to be deposited in the Clark campaign. All this lends support to the conviction within Clark headquarters that Mr. Johnson has a quiet arrangement with Dirksen to do as little as possible to block his reelection to a fourth term, in return for the many political favors Dirksen has done for President Johnson (as President Kennedy did for Dirksen in 1962). And Meany is going along with Mr. Johnson's desires.

The LBJ-Dirksen conradeship in Clark's case is but an exotic twist to the nationwide pattern of COPE denying full or partial support to anti-Vietnam liberal Democrats. John J. Gilligan running for the Senate from Ohio, Allard K. Lowenstein running for Congress from New York, and Speaker Jesse Unruh running for reelection to the California Assembly are in the same boat as Clark.

But the AFL-CIO would do well to review its hardheaded policy. There will be a day of reckoning after November 5 when efforts will be made to rebuild the Democratic party, and the Bill Clarks and their allies will not forget the way labor treated them in their time of need.

Student Organizations Plan "Fall Election Offensive"

NEW YORK(CPS)–With the presidential elections one month away, leftist student and peace organizations across a broad spectrum have begun planning a "fall election offensive" opening a new phase in the national protest of the electoral system which began in Chicago last month and which will continue through the inauguration in January.

The National Mobilization to End the War in Vietnam (Mobe),, a loosely formed organization which in the past has coordinated many of the mass anti-war demonstrations and which earlier this year called for the protest in Chicago, is the one group so far to become specific about its plans.

At an initial planning session this week in New York, Paul Potter, a former SDS president who is now on the Mobe steering committee, said his organization is aiming at a series of national, "decentralized" protest activities "leading up to, but not including, disruption of polling places."

The thrust of the activities, he said, will be to link the continuing war in Vietnam with the concept that our present political system, rather than dealing with the situation, tends to perpetuate it. The program's main features are to include:

–On the weekend prior to the elections, possible presentation of anti-war generals at public hearings at which the issues surrounding the war would be presented, combined with –Delegations of anti-war demonstrators visiting the nation's "35 key military bases," located mostly in the East and South, staging marches and"love-ins," concluding with –The declaration of November 2 as Vietnam Sunday and urging clergymen opposed to the war to speak out against it to their congregations;

–The organization of mass rallies on the eve of Election Day supporting a boycott of the elections as irrelevant and illegitimate, combined with activities the following day including –Mass demonstrations at polling places of the major candidates plus various other activities, including leafleting and guerilla theatre performances, at other polling places all across the country.

"The important point about Mobe's planning," Potter said,"is that it provides a chance to re-introduce the war if Vietnam as an issue nationally."

Jeff Shero, editor of the New York underground newspaper, Rat, objected to so strong a connection between the elections and the war."We should try to tie the protest more to the on-going demands of the movement." he said without becoming more specific. "The war is kind of an old issue."

Objections were also raised to the idea of counter-election polls at which persons opposed to the three major candidates could cast their vote at an alternative polling place set up for the day by the protestors. "That tends to give the idea that we just don't have a choice this time," Shero said, "when in fact we've never had a choice."

Jeff Jones, a member of SDS, told the group that the New York regional assembly will be discussing the possibility of calling for a student strike prior to election day in which students stop attending classes in order to participate in activities opposed to the elections. Students, Mobe says, are "drawing the connections between war and society as they see the relationship of their universities to both the war and the federal government." On election day, it urges them to center activities on "pointing out the ties that exist between the war machinery and the university, through all-day teach-ins, confrontations with draft boards or other actions aimed at forcing universities to end military research." Students are also urged not to attend classes November 5.

Michael Mithias Directs Seminar

"Forms of Communication," a three day seminar presented and directed by Michael Mithias, Project 10 English instructor, was initiated last weekend at the Berkshire Club Room.

Three dimensional assemblages cover the tables, the walls are adorned with murals of pastel characters on brown paper bags, a movie flicks haphazardly and actors participate in total conflict. A short man, who resembles Peter Ustnuv's brother, calls out stage directions. The exhibits and wall murals are the work of R. Patrick Sullivan, the actors are the Project 10 Theater Ensemble, and the movie presents "The Other World of R. Patrick Sullivan." Mr Sullivan is a self-taught artist who has exhibited his works at the Museum of Modern Art, Teffany and Co., and the Judson Gallery. His main works deal with collections of objects contained in boxes, arranged to convey a fresh perspective to commonplace things. The movie presents other works with special effects to convey certain of the artist ideas. The Project 10 Theater Ensemble presented their interpretations of the film.

Participating in the same program was Arthur F. Kinney, Assistant Professor of English, who read excerpts from William Faulkner which depicted strong characterization and imagination. Mr. Sullivan read his "Diary of Imaginary Ancestors," composed especially for the wall murals of early twentieth century people.

The Fraternity Presidents Association, Fraternity Advisors Association, and Fraternity Rush Chairmen at a recent planning session at Q.T.V. Fraternity. The main topic for discussion was the Freshman Convocation and Round Robins to be held this Sunday, October 13, at 2:00 p.m.

Palmer Fire Damage Estimates Range From $19 to $20 Million

PALMER, Mass. (AP)– The fire that destroyed a six-building factory complex in the Bondsville section of Palmer last Friday might rank among the 10 greatest losses in American industrial history.

The Industrial Insurance Institute lists only 11 industrial fires since 1907 that have caused more than $10 million damage. Damage estimates in the Palmer fire range from $10 to $20 million. The Bondsville section was declared a disaster area Tuesday by the Small Business Association.

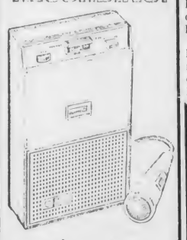
Milton M. Gordon, U Mass Sociology Professor, Edits New Series of Books on Ethnic Groups

The publication of a major new series of books on ethnic groups in America, edited by Milton M. Gordon, professor of sociology at the University of Massachusetts, has been launched with the appearance of the first volume in the series, "Jewish Americans: Three Generations in a Jewish Community," written by Sidney Goldstein of Brown University and Calvin Goldscheider of the University of California at Berkeley.

The publisher is Prentice-Hall, Inc. Two other volumes in the series, "Black Americans" by Alphonso Pinkney of Hunter College, and "Japanese Americans" by Harry Kitano of the University of California at Loss Angeles, are scheduled to appear by next January. Ten volumes in all are scheduled to be published.

All of the books in the series will include in their theoretical perspective the analysis of the assimilation process provided by Professor Gordon in his prizewinning book, "Assimilation in American Life," published in 1964 by Oxford University Press and considered by many to be the definitive book in its field.

"The explosion in the 1960's of the Negro's or black American's anger and growing revolt against centuries of white prejudice and discrimination has shocked the nation out of an attitude of mass complacency with regard to ethnic group relations. Now, not only social scientists, academic liberals, and well-meaning humanitarians, many of who had waged valiant battles against racism before, but at last millions of other Americans in all walks of life are becoming aware that to devalue another human being simply on the grounds of his race, religion, or national origins, and to act accordingly, is to strike at the very core of his personality and to create a living legacy of personal hatred and social disorganization. All the great religious and ethical traditions had sometime spoken prophetically against ethnic prejudice (however weak their followers have been in implementation). Now it has become increasingly clear that sheer self-interest and the desire to preserve a viable nation sternly countenance the conclusion that prejudice and discrimination are dubious luxuries which Americans can no longer afford."



After pointing to a number of theoretical advances in the study of intergroup relations that further make the series a timely one, he concludes, "For all these reasons, I am proud to function in the capacity of General Editor of a series of books which will attempt to provide the American public with a descriptive and analytic overview of its ethnic heritage in the third quarter of the twentieth century from the viewpoint of relevant social scienct social science. Each book on a particular ethnic group (and we include the white Protestants as such a sociologically definable entity) is written by an expert in the field of intergroup relations and the social life of the group about which he writes, and in many cases the author derives ethnically himself from that group. It is my hope that the publication of this series will aid substantially in the process of enabling Americans to understand more fully what it means to live in a multi-ethnic society, and concomitantly, what we must do in the future to eliminate the corrosive and devastating phenomena of prejudice and discrimination, and to ensure that a pluralistic society can at the same time fulfill its promised destiny of being truly "'one nation indivisible.'"

Phi Beta Kappa Elects F. Patterson to the Board of the National Humanities Faculty

Phi Beta Kappa recently announced the election of Franklin Patterson, President of Hampshire College, to the Board of the National Humanities Faculty.

Dr. Patterson will serve with 14 other members on this policy making body, established to encourage the development of humanities studies in school systems throughout the country. The group met for the first time on June 20, under the chairmanship of Dr. Dorothy Bethurum Loomis, Emeritus Professor of English at Connecticut College.

Procedures for selecting the members of the National Humanities Faculty have been set up. The Board also studied a wide range of proposals submitted by over thirty school systems. Five have been chosen to participate in the first-year pilot program. These are: Utica, New York-Minneapolis, Minnesota; Grosse Point, Michigan; Gainesville, Georgia; and San Francisco, California.

Dr. Arleigh Richardson, director of the program, in commenting on the school systems selected, noted that they included a diversity of geographic locations, school size and types of humanities studies. He indicated that the Board is already interested in receiving innovative proposals from school systems for the 1969-1970 school year.

Columbia Turmoil Influenced By Outside Force

(Ed. note: The following is part three of a four part series summarizing the Cox Report, the official report concerning last spring's disturbances at Columbia University.)

The fabric of Columbia was twisted and torn by the forces of political and social revolution outside the university. Columbia's geographic situation symbolizes the relation between white and black, affluence and poverty, youthful reform and established order.

The university's need for physical expansion in an urban center creates inescapable tensions, but its relations with the community had further deteriorated because of its apparent indifference to the needs and aspirations of its poorer neighbors.

The handling of the gymnasium controversy thus came, even somewhat unfairly, to epitomize the conflict between the spirit of the civil rights movement and the attack on poverty, on the one hand, and, on the other, the ways of an ancient regime.

Energetic and idealistic students, alienated from the older generation by an extraordinarily wide gulf in manners and interests and offended by the plethora of human suffering, were drawn to the side of change.

Where they were frustrated by the massive anonymity of the government and the unmanageability of the social system, they could strike out at the more vulnerable university.

In like fashion, the university became the surrogate for all the tensions and frustrations of United States policy in Vietnam.

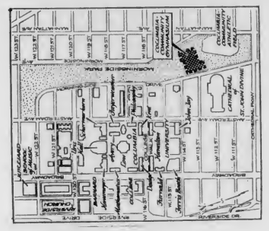
The desire for student power, while scarcely articulated as a cause for seizing the campus buildings, was a powerful element of the explosion. Discussion since the uprising has focused upon the methods by which students may exert more influence upon the government of an institution of which they are vital and integral parts.

Participation in self-government is a natural human desire that today's students feel with greater urgency, particularly at institutions with highly selective admissions policies, because they are much better educated than their predecessors, more sophisticated, in many respects more mature, and more interested in social problems than seeking out conventional careers. (Unfortunately, they are also much less disciplined.)

The hurricane of social unrest struck Columbia at a time when the university was deficient in the cement that binds an institution into a cohesive unit.

Again, geography is a factor. The competing attractions of the exciting metropolitan area, coupled with the housing problems that induce a majority of the faculty to live outside Manhattan, operate as centrifugal forces. Yet the dispirited quality of student life outside the classroom is not beyond the university's power of influence.

The formal organization of both the administrative offices and the faculties apparently tends to discourage the cohesiveness that comes from shared responsibility in matters of university concern. We were struck by the constant recital of an apposition between the administration and the faculty as rival bodies with separate interests, for it would seem to us that on education questions the two should be essentially one.



The lack of a university senate and the division of the professors and other teachers into three or four faculties–quite apart from the professional schools– where other universities have a single faculty of arts and sciences, apparently discourages faculty participation in the formulation of university policy and the improvement of student life.

The central administration to which the full burden of the quality of student life is left is not equipped for the duty. Far too few members of the university family are closely involved, outside the classroom, in the constant informal enterprises and discussions by which the values of an academic community are constantly re-examined and those which stand the test are passed on to the next generation.

Institutional coherence is also affected by the presence or lack of a spirit of institutional self-confidence. Unhappily, despite her inherent strengths, the spring crisis struck Columbia when her self-confidence was shaken by the decline in relative position in A.A.U.P. (American Association of University Professors), rankings of graduate studies, the resignations of a number of senior professors, and the Strickman filter incident.

The scale of the disturbances was greatly enlarged in numbers, intensity and violence by the delay in calling the police–from Thursday night until Monday night–which the Ad Hoc Faculty Group forced upon the university officials. Although perhaps the effort had to be made, there was never a significant chance that the (faculty) group could negotiate a peaceful withdrawal from the buildings.

Forcing the delay, by threats of physical interposition, increased the likelihood of violence and magnified the reaction by lending an air of legitimacy to use of the tactics of physical disruption as means of forcing one view of policy upon those who held another.

New Addition to be Built on Infirmary; Health Services to Increase in Future

Since most of us will be visiting the infirmary before the year is over, I went to talk with Dr. Robert Gage, winner of the 1968 Metampe award and director of the University Health service, to find out new services are available. He was very enthusiastic about the new addition to the infirmary, which will be built in front of the present structure. The state has granted the University $200,000 to build the three story addition. The basement, which will be one leval lower than the present one because of the land drop, will be equipped with a physical therapy department, X-ray machines and labs. The first floor will house the new out-patient section. There will be twenty pairs of physicians offices set up so that each doctor will have his own consultation room and examination room. This means that the present staff of ten will be doubled. The second floor will contain a mental health center which is now located in Brooks House, and a dental suite. There will also be various business offices on that floor.

The plans for the new wing are projections based on past records. The flow of traffic will be diverted into three main areas: 1) Pharmacy– for those who just want to pick up prescriptions. 2) an area for students who have made previous appointments with doctors and 3) Out-patient for those who have no appointments or just want to see a nurse. Each of these areas will have its own waiting room. In this way the congestion which sometimes exists in the waiting room will be avoided. At this time no new beds are needed. If they become necessary in the future, however the new wing is designed so that an in-patient ward can be built on the third floor level with the existing area.

The infirmary is exploring the possibility of a cold self treatment center in the Southwest Area. It will be similar to the one in the infirmary. The student will be able to judge the severity of his cold by means of a booklet which will be made available. Then he will decide if he needs some unprescribed medicine or if he requires a doctor's care. We do not know now exactly where this center will be located, but Dr. Gage said it will probably be in one of the residence halls. The staff which will aid the students and distribute medicine has not been established.

I asked Dr. Gage why a "branch infirmary" could not be set up in Southwest. He said "We keep all our records strictly confidential and this would not be possible with the difficulties involved in transferring records from one area to another." It is easy to imagine the confusion if a student's medical records were lost. The staff realizes the problems some students encounter trying to get up to the infirmary. They are trying to improve this situation. As of now, only emergency cases can be brought to the infirmary by the campus police. The health service is trying to get some of the service fraternities and sororities to act as drivers for the students who are not able to walk that distance, but are not classified as "emergencies."

Not everyone realizes that the health service is available for a limited number of talks about health problems. A member of the staff will come and lecture at the request of the residence halls. Next semester the infirmary will start a program to outline the health education needs of the students. In 1969 UMass will have a more comprehensive program in this field.

The students of the UMass Music Department presented the first of a series of recitals on Tues. Oct.8.

Miss Cynthia Rhodes, a sophmore, gave an excellent performance of a Motetto by Vivaldi. This composition which consists of four movements exploits both limits of the soprano range and is difficult in its wide leaps. Miss Rhodes demonstrated great sense of style and interpretation. Her high notes were clear, full and rich.

She was accompanied by Mr. Alan Karpel, a Graduate student. Mr. Karpel's style was in keeping with the mood of the piece and he gave excellent support to the performance of Miss Rhodes.

Marsha Richey, a Senior, played a fantasie by Telemann transcribed for solo saxaphone. Miss Richey is a good saxaphonist and has excellent tone.

The third piece on the program was a sonata for clarinet and piano by Poulenc. Mr. Gerald Chenoweth, clarinet, and Mr. Roberto Mendoza, piano, were the performers.

The sonata is one of the last works of Poulenc. Both performers were very musical and their lines and the interplay of motives were very clear. Mr. Chenoweth displayed great technical agility and his interpretation of the piece was gust, intergesting. He and Mr. Mendoza formed an excellent ensemble, each showing great sensitivity to what the other was doing.

The final pieces on the program were for piano. Mr. Mendoza, a graduate student, performed the Bach toccata and Fugue in E minor and the Chopin nocturne in D flat major.

His Bach was well presented although the third movement did seem a little uneven tempo-wise. The Chopin was positively exquisite. It could not have been played better.

Mr. Mendoza showed excellent control and technique as well as intense musicality.

Woodall Appointed Hampshire College Business Manager

Dudley H. Woodall has been appointed Business Manager for Hampshire College, President Franklin Patterson announced today. Mr. Woodall began his duties on October 1st.

He will be primarily responsible for forecasting the financial requirements of the College, budgeting Hampshire's resources and prospective sources to accomplish these requirements and establishing control and accounting procedures over the College expenditures. In addition, he will assume purchasing, personnel and other responsibilities.

Mr. Woodall comes to Hampshire College from Columbus, Ohio, where he has been Manager of Financial Control for Westinghouse Electric Corporation.

After graduating from Amherst College in 1956, Mr. Woodall earned a Masters Degree in Business Administration from the University of Pennsylvania.

Born in New Jersey 34 years ago, Mr. Woodall is married and the father of two boys aged 6 and 9. He is a member of the National Association of Accountants and the American Management Association.

The Student Union Program Council will hold a dance in the ballroom Friday evening. Featured will be the Stone Soul.

Highlights include songs by soul performers such as Sam and Dave, James Brown, and Wilson Pickett. The dance will be held from 8 to 12 October 11 Tickets cost 75 cents.

FBI Drags Army Deserter From BU Chapel Students Register Non-Resisting Protest

At 5:30 a.m. Sunday, Oct. 6, 50 plainclothes FBI agents and local police officers entered Boston University School of Theology's Marsh Chapel and dragged away Raymond Kroll, 19, who had deserted the U.S. Army and taken sanctuary in the chapel.

In order to reach Kroll, the agents had to push through the bodies of several hundred students who formed a non-resisting but substantial blockade to their progress.

The students, their number sometimes as great as 700, had been keeping watch, for five days and nights, to register their own protest against the military.

Kroll and Thomas Pratt, a deserter from the Marine Corps who had served 13 months in Vietnam, came to Marsh Chapel the morning of Oct. 1. At the close of a Methodist Service held there, they asked the assembled students and faculty members of the School of Theology for asylum. In a press conference later that morning, they told students and reporters why they were deserters.

Kroll said he had joined the army about a year ago; he had been arrested for underage drinking, and the judge told him the charges against him would be dropped if he joined the army.

"It was at Benning," he said, "that I began to see the army. This was the real thing– it was more machines, and that was what I was supposed to be. I realized I could not take part in an organization that bends you, shapes you and molds you to be what it wants you to be."

Pratt, 22 years old, had joined the Marines in 1966 and had recently returned from a 13-month tour of duty in Vietnam. "I choose sanctuary," he said, "so I could make a stand, tell people how servicemen feel about the war...they are fed up with the war.

Both men emphasized that they were willing to take the consequences for their action. Both wanted to be discharged through military channels.

The BU administration was unusually silent during the whole week's activity. An official spokesman said the university "trusted its students," and would neither support nor condemn the use of the chapel as an asylun According to student observers, that silence meant fear of causing "another Columbia" by some action last week.

Redmen, Down Two , Take on BU Astro-Turfers

Terriers Unleash After Losing Season

by Mike Curran
Sports Editor

A strong Boston University team, coming off their best performance of the season, will be in town Saturday to face the Redmen at Alumni Stadium at 1:30. And they're plenty psyched up to beat UMass.

For the past four years they've come out second best in the annual UMass-BU slugfest. Now with the Redmen on the ropes from two straight losses, the Terriers would love to finish their arch rivals off.

Coach Warren Schmakel has rallied his troops from last year's disastrous season when BU won their first two then lost six in a row before beating UConn in the last game of the season. He knows that another losing year puts his job in serious jeopardy.

After opening the 1968 season with a 28-0 loss to Colgate, the Terriers nipped Maine 6-3,and last week stunned powerful Temple 7-0, on the astro-turf at Nickerson Field. Schmakel will probably go with most of the players who helped him pick up that juicy victory.

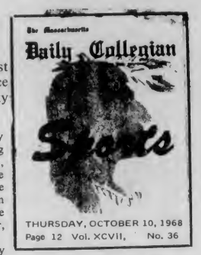
A veteran offensive line features Jim Aquiar and John Cambest at ends, Mark Tortora and John Doriss at tackles, and Bob Marcus and Rick Lepore at guards, and Jerry Huston at center.



The Terriers are particularly strong defensively. The line is big with Dick Debore, Bob Bossert, Jay Viles and Sam Gravatt the front four. Middle guard Arnie Scheller and linebackers Jim Wittorff and Pat Hughes, the most highly rated Terrier, combine size and speed.

In the defensive secondary the Terriers have perhaps their strongest suit. A four-deep formation features cornerbacks Fred Barry and Fred McNeilly, and safeties Captain Jay Donabedian and Bruce Taylor.

Injury-riddled UMass will have its hands full Saturday considering the Terriers size and speed.

APO Paces Victory in Intramural Cross-Country Meet. Meyer Top Man

Peter Pascarelli-
Assistant Sports Editor

Dick Meyer, representing Theta Sigma Phi fraternity, withstood a last-second challenge to win the annual intramural cross-country meet held yesterday afternoon around the grounds of Alumni Stadium

Meyer, a member also of the varsity soccer team, won with a time of eight minutes, 11 seconds as he edged Segersten by one second. Segersten represented Alpha Phi Omega.

Finishing behind the two leaders in the field of 181, were Defeni from SAM; Dale Toohey, the independent leader, from the Least Squares; Tim Bosworth was fifth, and was the dormitory division's first finisher. Bosworth ran for the Webster Rams.

Placing after him in the top ten were Brauner from KS, Hasselbaum, from APO, Adams from the Chadbourne Maroons, Smith, representing TC and Nylund from the Kennedy Cougars.

APO, with 63 points easily outdistanced all teams to win the campus and fraternity title, breaking the two year domination of the title by SPE, Sig Ep placed 15th this year.

Placing behind APO in team competition were two independent contingents, the Least Squares with 87 points and the Kelly A.C. with 120 points. Placing fourth overall and first in the dormitory division were the Cance Coll Cans.

The dorm champs were led by Mike Jenike who placed 11th.

Rounding out the first ten teams were TC with 165 points, KS with 210 total, TSP with 226, Smashers with 244, SAM with 260 and PSD with 284.

Soccer Coach Returns for October 13 Testimonial

by Mike Curran
Sports Editor

A Testimonial Dinner honoring Larry Briggs who retired recently after serving in the School of Physical Education for forty years will be held on Sunday, October 13, at 6 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom.

Briggs active in soccer coaching and officials groups, driver training programs, skiing activities, first aid work, the Western Massachusetts Small High School Basketball Tournament and various camping organizations will be best remembered as the coach of UMass varsity soccer.

From 1932-1967, Briggs led Redmen soccer teams all over New England: in 1933, the Briggsmen went undefeated. Though Briggs was never able to duplicate that feat, he annually instilled the values of sportsmanship and fair play in his players.

After all his years of effort and accomplishment, neither age nor fatigue could retire him. Little more than a year ago, an infected foot put him on crutches. In his last season, he coached his men to second place in Yankee Conference standings.

The infected foot has lead to serious complications. Briggs is now in a Boston Hospital recuperating from serious foot surgery. He'll be back at his beloved UMass for the banquet, but will return to the hospital on Monday.

Banquet chairman Dick Bergquist has indicated that the dinner will be a mixed affair, dress will be informal, and tickets are available through Al Rufe, Financial Manager of the Athletic Department.

Apollo Flight Given "Go", Weather Poses Only Problem

Cape Kennedy, Fla (AP) –Weather was "a bit of a question mark," but three confident Apollo 7 astronauts Thursday were given a "go" to blast off Friday on an 11-day space flight that could steer America back on course to the moon.

Even as the countdown clock began for an 11 a.m. liftoff, however, project officials admitted there was "a distinct possibility" the flight by veteran astronaut Walter M. Schirra Jr. and his two space rookie copilots, Donn F. Eisele and Walter Cunningham, may not go on schedule.

"Weather is a little bit of a question mark at the moment," as far as the launch is concerned, said Dr. Wernher von Braun, director of NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala., which developed Saturn-Apollo rockets. Otherwise, "everything is right on the money and all tests of subsystems clicked off like a charm"

"I found the crew in a highly confident frame of mind," said Von Braun. "They are eager to go and are happy to hear that all our systems are go both in the launch vehicle and spacecraft."

The $145 million, 163-orbit mission will answer two questions:

Has the nation recovered from the Apollo 1 tragedy, which killed three astronauts and grounded all manned space flights for 20 months?

If the mission goes the full 4½-million miles, Navy Capt. Schirra, Air Force Maj. Eisele and civilian astronaut Cunningham will have logged a combined total of 780 man hours in space, compared to only 534 man hours accumulated by all Soviet cosmonauts to date.

Success also could clear the way for the next astronaut team, Apollo 8, to fly 10 orbits around the moon at Christmas-time. The 363-foot-tall Saturn 5 super rocket for that mission, scheduled to blast off about December 20, rolled to its launch pad Wednesday.

"No one can say today whether Apollo 8 will go around the moon," Von Braun said. "We'd all be eager, including the astronauts, to go all out next time. But whether it is prudent remains to be seen.

"Apollo 7 could be a flawless flight," he added, "but maybe something like the environmental control system would leave something to be desired for a long flight to the moon. We might want to try another earth orbit flight, where we can bring the men home quickly, to assure ourselves of all the systems. Once you commit yourself toward the moon there is no instant recall."

UMass President John W. Lederle said at a national meeting of the American Council on Education Thursday (October 10) that campus disorders may affect future financial support of public higher education.

Speaking at the Denver meeting as a panel member on the financing of higher education, the UMass president said: "Future financial support, the willingness of private philanthropy and the taxpaying public, will depend on our conducting internal affairs in a business-like deliberative fashion, comporting with the dignity of a community of scholars interested in hearing all points of view."

Dr. Lederle explained that projections of America's future economic growth indicate that there will be ample per capita income to meet the projected needs of higher education and of competing public services as well. There can be no question of the public's ability to meet the needs of public higher education; what educators in that area must do is insure that there is a climate of willingness to meet those needs, he said.

According to Dr. Lederle: "We face at least two tasks in creating this climate of willingness to pay. First, we must devote more effort to enchancing educational productivity. Second, we must conduct our campuses as scholarly communities and deal vigorously with those who would go beyond the limits of academic freedom and prevent orderly deliveration."

Detailing educational productivity, the UMass president called for more research on learning theory and motivation, improvements in the teaching process and year-around campus use. "It is hard to justify in economic terms an educational plant remaining idle during the summer," he noted.

Commenting on campus demonstrations, Dr. Lederle defended the university's traditional role in providing an environment "in which teachers and students may pursue the truth whereever it may lead and no matter how palatable to society."

Amherst Students Picket Campus Navy Recruiter

Over a hundred Amherst College Students picketed the Alumni office of that school while two Navy recruiters talked with prospects inside.

The picketing was orderly, but music blairing from a neighboring Frat house could be heard all over downtown Amherst.

Students said the picketing was organized by the Amherst College SDS chapter. A second campus recruiting session is scheduled for October 22, and an SDS spokesman said that it will also be picketed.

Horace W. Hewlett, news director for the College, said Amherst officials would insist on observance of rules passed by the Student Senate last year which allow peaceful pickets but no rowdy demonstrations.

Lolich Hurls Third Series WIN as Tigers Win

St. Louis (A.P.)– Mickey Lolich joined a select group of three game World Series winners, as he led the Detroit Tigers to a 4-1 seventh game victory over last year's World Champions, the St Louis Cardinals.

The Tigers, who rallied from a 3–1 game deficit to win the series, were, to put it mildly, jubilant.

"I thought winning the pennant was something, but this is even greater," said catcher Bill Freehan, who knocked in a run with a double in the Tigers big three-run seventh inning off Cardinal ace Bob Gibson.

Detroit trailed in the Series three games to one at one point and after the Tigers won the next two Manager Mayo Smith decided to pitch Mickey Lolich with only two days rest.

"I guess our guy proved to be the best today," said a champagne drenched Norm Cash. "Maybe Gibson was a little tired."

Mayo climbed on a platform for a television interview. But no one could hear him because of all the yelling and horseplay. "McLain's getting the writers. Ataboy Denny," yelled Al Kaline as pitcher Denny McLain sprayed champagne all over the room and especially at nearby newsmen.

Television sportscaster Joe Garagiola was up on the platform with McLain and some other players. Denny turned to the nearly dressed announcer and let him have it with champagne. Then Freehan poured a bottle of it over Garagiola's partially bald head. Everyone laughed including Joe.

Newsmen still jammed the dressing room. A few players showered, but it was useless. They only got drenched again in champagne.

Everyone was congratulating everyone else.

Then Smith was asked the inevitable question? Is this the greatest day of your life? His answer: "This is the happiest day of my life. Oh, I take that back, my wedding was."

"I'm happiest for the players because they did a helluva job."

Mickey Lolich, the Tigers' series pitching star, hurls the opening pitch of the seventh game to Lou Brock.

Bream Plays Before SRO Crowd in Concert Premier

The 1968-69 Concert Association series opened Wednesday in Bowker Auditorium with English guitarist and lutenist Julian Bream. The recital, if judged by the number in the audience, was a huge success.

The first half of the premier concert included only music from the 16th century. During the entire concert, Mr. Bream explained or commented on what he was about to play. As a result, the concert was educational as well as entertaining.

Bream's lute repertoire included works from well-known composers John Dowland and Thomas Morley (though not known primarily for his musical talents), and more obscure writers as John Johnson, his son Robert Johnson, Francis Cutting, and Gregory Huwet. The audience seemed to enjoy the Cutting pieces, Brockington Pound and The Woods So Wild, more than the other lute pieces. These two works have a distinct English folk quality to them, while the rest (with the exception of Kemp's Jig – Anonymous) were typical of the sound of music during the time of Queen Elizabeth I.

Mr. Bream proved his true virtuousity on the lute. His touch was light, his technique amazingly fast, his musicality and expression were adequately suited to the 16th century music. Although Mr. Bream's recital was not free from error, he seemed more adept on the lute than on the guitar. The three 16th century Fantasia by Huwet, Dowland, and Robert Johnson were written especially to demonstrate the facility one needs to play the lute, according to Bream.

The second half of the recital included guitar music ranging from around 1760 to 1968. Most of the pieces were those which could be played by a full orchestra, but which were expecially written for guitar. For those in the audience who did not realize that the guitar is so adaptable to all kinds of music, Mr. Bream demonstrated this with his transcriptions of Two Preludes (for piano) by Claude Debussy (1862-1918). He said later, "You can't leave out a single note, because each one is so important. Debussy's music is probably more suitable for guitar (than even for piano) because of the mystique quality of both the guitar and his music."

Much of the guitar portion of the concert involved use of overtones produced on the strings. Mr. Bream pointed out that these are used when a certain pitch cannot otherwise be reached or when a certain timbre (tone quality) is needed. He pointed out that only a light touch rather than a hammer-hard pressing on the string is needed to produce these very high pitches on lower pitched strings.

Julian Bream changed the concert order during the second half, and inserted four Impromptus (exercises) by Richard Rodney Bennett (1968) in place of Four Short Pieces by Frank Martin (1890-). The Impromptus were what many call dissonant, but they definitely have a beauty which is rarely found in most music of modern composers. Bennett is a former student of Bream. "His music is not popular in the States yet--over in England he is quite well known," said Bream.

The last numbers of the recital were by the emminent blind Spanish guitarist/composer, Jaoquin Rodrigo. These were the Sarabande Lointaine and Fandango.

The audience brought Mr. Bream back for an encore: a Bach Prelude. He said later that he would have liked to have played an additional concert, had he known that the first concert was sold out so early in the week. Asked what he thinks of the newer uses of guitars (popular music--rock and roll), he said he prefers the unamplified sounds of the simple classical guitar.

Nixon

AKRON, Ohio APJU. Richard M. Nixon charged Thursday that "some union treasuries are being emptied to support the sagging campaign" of Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey, the Democratic presidential nominee.

The GOP White House campaigner staged a rally in Moline, Ill., and another in Akron urging Republicans to work for the ticket.

Nixon made his assertion about union funds in a statement issued in industrial Akron.

"Today, the rank and file of American labor is rightly resentful of the way some union treasuries are being emptied to support the sagging campaign of an administration that has not proven to be a close friend of labor."

Nixon said the "automatic voting habits" of previously Democratic union men were ending. "...the rank and file of labor is on the march today away from the old ways that have failed," he said.

"By failing to halt inflation," Nixon said, "this administration has broken its contract with organized labor."

In Moline, Nixon forecast he would "win big" in the Nov. 5 election. He said, "the stakes are too high not to have a change in America this year."

Humphrey

H. Humphrey quoted his political stock on Wall Street-in a mixed market-and then huddled with his runningmate and campaign manager Thrusday to plan strategy for the final three and a half weeks of their uphill campaign.

The vice president met with Sen. Edmund G. Muskie, the No. 2 man on the Democratic ticket, and Lawrence O'Brien, national Democratic chairman and campaign chief, at Humphrey's hotel suite.

Main subject of discussion: how to catch up with Republican Richard M. Nixon who is leading in the public opinion polls.

The Humphrey-Muskie campaign strategy received a jolt today. Humphrey said he regretted Senate Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen's barring of action on legislation that would have changed the equal time rules to permit a television debate involving Humphrey, Nixon and the third party candidate, George C. Wallace.

Humphrey had been hoping to use such debates-as the late John F. Kennedy used them against Nixon in 1960-to catch and pass his Republican opponent.

Humphrey earlier took his search for campaign cash and votes to Wall Street and standing under a pink confetti shower drummed a theme of Democratic prosperity.

"Chicago Plot" Dispelled by FBI

Dispute Daley's Drastic Claimes

CHICAGO- Who plotted to kill Mayor Richard J. Daley and the Democratic presidential candidates?

Yippie leader Jerry Rubin insists he wasn't the one.

And, as far as federal investigators have been able to determine, neither did anyone else.

The story of the convention week assassination plot, already surrounded by clouds of doubt, grew even more hazy recently when a Chicago police undercover agent said Rubin, a leader of the Youth International Party (Yippie), ordered the killings.

This must have surprised the Federal Bureau of Investigation, whose agents had already checked out and discounted the assassination rumors.

Until this report from Patrolman Robert L. Pierson, 33, federal officials had hoped the plot story was dead. They know that if there was an assassination plot, they should have made arrests. And, so far, they have found nothing on which to base an arrest.

Rumor Recurs

Yet the rumor keeps recurring. Reports of the plot are knocked down and bounce back again.

The people who knock it, discreetly, of course, are federal investigative officials.

The people who keep bringing it back are city police and city officials, primarily Mayor Daley and his aides who wrote the city's convention "White Paper" and helped produce its post-convention television report.

Basis for Security

These reports pointed to the plot as a key reason for massing 28,000 security forces here--police, National Guard and regular Army troops--during the convention.

They also indicated that the seriousness of the plot was an understandable reason why police, in their anxiety, may have "overacted."

WASHINGTON (AP)--Efforts to remove the legal hurdles to free television-radio debates between the major presidential candidates collapsed Thursday in the face of a Republican sit-out that blocked Senate action.

Majority Leader Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., was unable to muster a quorum to take up the House-passed legislation and said under the circumstances he had no choice except to bow to the GOP opposition.

And even after that, with the Republican sit-out lifted, it took nearly two hours to muster a bare quorum of 51-17 Republicans and 34 Democrats. Most of the 49 other senators were out of town.

Mansfield then moved that action on the equal time bill be postponed indefinitely, thus killing it. The Senate turned to other legislation in a drive toward adjournment of this session of Congress.

The quick GOP victory in the Senate was in sharp contrast to action in the House, where passage came Wednesday after a historic lock-in that killed off a succession of delaying quorum calls by Republicans.

The surprise tactic in the Senate was sprung by Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois as soon as Mansfield called up the equal time legislation. Dirksen first raised the point of no quorum.

When such a point is raised, the Senate cannot do business unless a majority of the 100 senators answer the roll call.

Dirksen made sure ther would be no quorum by posting a page boy outside the chamber to tell GOP senators not to respond to the quorum call. Bells are rung in the Capitol and its surrounding office buildings to summon senators when there is such a call.

Johnson Loses Friend as Frustration Mounts

It has been more than three months since they had a difference of opinion over a matter Russell doesn't even discuss with friends. The usual weekly invitations for the Georgia senator to drop in for a chat with the President have not been forth-coming.

Except to confirm that there was a disagreement resolved in a way not to his liking, Russell would not comment on the matter.

If the White House follows its customary course it can be expected to deny there is any rift between the President and the senator and then move to bridge the breach it contends doesn't exist.

For years around the Senate, Johnson's admonition to colleagues and employees before embarking on any important legislative matter was always: "Check it with Dick first."

As chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, Russell has been among the staunchest supporters of Johnson's Vietnam policies. He advised against getting involved at the beginning, but when American troops were committed, he supported the President's decisions.

Russell can claim almost sole credit for operation of the battleship New Jersey in the Vietnam theater. He argued that a battleship could unload more firepower than a fleet of bombers, without risking being shot down, and Johnson bought his arguments.

While he has been one of those regularly consulted before Vietnam policy decisions finally were made, Russell now gets his information on security matters from Secretary of Defense Clark M. Clifford instead of the White House.

Gen. LeMay Discloses Views On Use of Nuclear Weapons

(AP) – Gen. Curtis E. LeMay says that neither in Vietnam "nor any place else" does a situation exist right now which calls for the use of nuclear weapons.

But George C. Wallace's running mate declared in an interview, "There is some place where you're going to use nuclear weapons," although "where it is I don't know.

"There will be a point where you have to defend yourself," said the 61-year-old retired Air Force chief of staff.

LeMay said an all-out U.S. effort to win a military victory in Vietnam would run "some risk -that Red China might come in, maybe the Russians even might come in."

He expressed the view, however, that the Red Chinese "haven't got any weapons capabilities to do us any damage anyway, at least not now. Later on maybe yes. But now they haven't."

The interview developed these questions and answers:

Q. General, you've seen in the cities where you've appeared with Gov. Wallace that you can expect some heckling.

A. Oh, yes, I expected that. I knew it was going on but I was surprised at the amount of it that was going on and the fact that it's organized by groups that I know to be Communist oriented.

Q. How do you know that, General?

A. I have more information than a lot of people. True, I haven't received any top secret briefings for 3½ years now, since I retired, but I remember a lot from back then and I remember the names of some of these organizations. One of the things that surprised me is, here we're conducting a democratic process and these people are trying to interrupt it, using methods that would put them in jail for disturbing the peace just a short time ago.

Q. General, you've said you consider a nuclear weapon as just another weapon...

A. It's a weapon. A more powerful one, yes, than the other weapons.

Q. Am I correct in saying that there are some situations in which you would conceivably use nuclear weapons but no such situation exists in Vietnam now?

A. Yes, nor any place else. There is some place where you're going to use nuclear weapons. Where it is I don't know. If you're walking down the street and somebody starts molesting you, at what point are you going to use your fist? I can't tell you, you probably can't tell me either. But there will be a point where you have to defend yourself. I don't know what it is.

Q. General, what would be the risks of a full blown military effort in Vietnam?

A. Well, my crystal ball is probably not too much better than yours. I think there's a risk. There's a risk in everything. We live in a risky world. Neither one of us knew whether we were going to get back from the rally tonight or not. We were liable to get run over by an automobile or hit by a brick down here, or any one of a dozen things. There is some risk to living. Presumably we looked at the risks when we went in there. So there is some risk-that Red China might come in, maybe the Russians even might come in. Well, we'd just take a look at it. How much risk is there?

China? They've got plenty of problems of their own over there right now. They haven't got any weapons capabilities to do us any damage anyway, at least not now. Later on maybe yes. But not now they haven't. So unless we put a big army on the mainland so they could get at it, they can't hurt us. I think we're foolish to put a big army there.

NORTHAMPTON(Mass.)-Area College students and residents will march in this city Sunday (October 13) to show their support for Jews in Soviet Russia.

They have appealed to "all people of conscience, regardless of religious affiliation," to join them.

Rabbi Yechiael E. Lander, associate chaplain at Smith, will describe problems of Soviet Jews in Soviet Russia. According to the Rabbi, although there are nearly three million Jews in the Soviet Union, there are now only 60 to 70 synagogues. In 1956 there were 450.

For the first three decades of the Soviet regime, the state supported numerous cultural and educational institutions for Jews in Yiddish. There were ten Yiddish theatres and 100,000 students were in Yiddish schools. About 850 Yiddish language books were published. Today there is no Yiddish theatre with a permanent base, and there are no Yiddish schools, classes or courses in any language in Jewish History, culture or literature and there is no Yiddish publishing house, Rabbi Lander said.

Unlike Judaism, other recognized religious bodies, have not been discriminated against in this manner, according to Rabbi Lander.

"Soviet Jewry is now engaged in a struggle for religious and cultural freedom. We wish to support their desire to remain Jews in spite of the Soviet policy of discrimination and intimidation," he said.

The Demonstrators will be urged to write all presidential and congressional candidates, the U.S. ambassador to the Soviet Union, the Russian ambassador to the U.S. and students at the University of Moscow.

Campaign Politics Hold Up Opportunity Bank

WASHINGTON (CPS) -- THE idea that the federal government establish a novel loan program called the Educational Opportunity Bank is not dead--just dormant until after the November elections.

The plan was recommended last September by the President's Panel on Educational Innovation. It calls for establishment of a fund from which any student could borrow money for his education with repayment contingent on future income.

The idea met strong opposition from two powerful college associations and got only lukewarm support from federal officials.

Proponents of the Ed Op Bank have been bidding their time, not wanting to spark partisan debate over the controversial idea, and knowing that working with the lame-duck Johnson Administration would be futile.

An avid supporter of the plan is Dr. Jerrold R. Zacharias, a Massachusetts Institute of Technology physicist who headed the now-defunct presidential panel.

He expects "a lot of support to come out of the woodwork" after the election is settled, including some from a Carnegie Commission on Higher Education headed by Clark Kerr.

Dr. Zacharias and other supporters recognize that the plan could drastically alter the present system of financing higher education. "It's a big change, with unpredictable repercussions," says Andrew M. Gleason, another panel member who teaches math at Harvard.

Because of the significant implications, Gleason and Dr. Zacharias would like to see implemented a pilot program involving only medical students. Medicine was chosen because of high cost for students, and the high income after practice is started.

The major roadblock to setting up the experimental program has been lack of federal money because of Vietnam spending, Gleason said.

The total Ed Op Bank program is designed to make it easier for schools to raise tuition and to provide money for students to attend any college for which they qualify. With students able to borrow all the money they need, colleges and universities would no longer feel obligated to keep charges low, according to the plan.

The bank also would help increase the number of students from low-income families, the proponents say.

The most vocal opposition to the plan has come from the National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges and the Association of State Colleges and Universities. Their joint statement called the panel recommendation "a Pandora's Box of ill-considered, obsolete, and contradictory ideas..."

Dr. Edgar F. Shannon Jr., chairman of NASULGC's executive committee and University of Virginia president, said, "Our fundamental concern is that this proposal would shift the responsibility of financing higher education to the student. Education is essential for society's own self-interest and should be the responsibility of society."

Dr. Zacharias of the panel discounts such criticism, saying the real concern of public educators is that students with the ability to pay might choose private institutions over public ones. Gleason said there is fear of transferring such buying power to students.

The two associations charged that the Ed Op Bank would "on the one hand destroy the whole concept of public higher education, and on the other, if successful, destroy the whole basis of voluntary support for private higher education."

Their statement called the program a "life indenture" that would discriminate against the less-affluent and create elitism.

It also expressed the fear that all of higher education might eventually become dependent on the bank's solvency for its continued existence.

Dr. Fred H. Harrington, president of the University of Wisconsin, feels the plan would not be fair to students who do not want to borrow money for their education. "This proposal," he says, "is a threat to a system of higher education which has been very successful."

The Ed Op Bank is not designed to replace other forms of federal financial assistance. It does offer three principal advantages over current fixed-repayment programs, according to its supporters.

First, no student would have to worry about a large debt he might not be able to repay. If his work after graduation did not pay well, his repayment obligation would decrease proportionate to his income.

Second, individuals could borrow more money than at present because repayment would be spread over 30 or 40 years instead of the current 10.

How to tap a keg

(and tie into the best reason in the world to drink beer)

1 Pick up a half-barrel of Bud® (good for about 245 12-ounce cups . . . with foam) and the tapping equipment on the day of the party. Just set the beer in a tub of ice to keep it cold.

2 Just before the party begins, tap your beer. First, make sure the beer faucet is closed (you wouldn't want to waste a drop of Beechwood Aged Bud!). Then, insert the faucet-and-pump unit into the upper valve of the keg, give it a quarter turn clockwise, and lock it in place by tightening the lower wing nut.

3 Next, insert the lager tap in the lower valve of the keg and give it a quarter turn. Now, set the keg upright in a tub and pack ice around it.

4 You're now ready to draw beer. Pump pressure to the proper point for good draw, usually about 15 lbs. That's all there is to it, but there's no rule against sampling just to make sure everything is perfect. Ahhhhh! It's no wonder you'll find more taverns with the famous "Bud on Draught" sign than any other!

Support Your Team!

Have you ever noticed how effectively twenty or thirty demonstrators can made a speech inaudible to the rest of the audience? Or how just one proficient heckler can rattle the most experienced politician? Just imagine what the results would be if the hecklers and demonstrators were in the majority! Do more than that; find out for yourself, become a part of it.

Tomorrow the Redmen, with a one and two record, take on the Terriers from B.U. It is the duty of every member of the Redmen squad to go out there and put out one hundred percent; to try and regain some of the glory that UMass has lost in its last two games. And you as spectators have the duty to come to the game with the intention of doing everything that is legally possible to rattle the Terriers. A passive, unemotional cheering section, no matter how great its numbers, provides its team with very little support. Let the Terriers know that the stands aren't merely filled with people; that they're filled with Redmen ready for a massacre. Let your team know that you expect nothing less than victory from them.

The Police and Mr. Smith

The stage had been set for a riot in Newark. In the black community there existed poor housing, "bottled-up" frustration from white discriminaiion, and a feeling of hopeless existence. Many blacks came to the realization that to riot was better than to live under present conditions.

With the arrest of taxi driver Smith on the evening of July 12, 1967, began a five day insurrection unique in Newark history. It was the beginning of a riot so intense that twenty-six people died and millions of dollars were lost in damage.

There is much dispute as to the arrest of Mr. Smith. In the governor's select commission report on civil disorders Patrolman Pantrelli contends that he and another officer were tailgated on Fifteenth Avenue for almost a block by Mr. Smith's cab. Then he continues to state that the cab, after passing the police car, proceeded on the wrong side of the street for another block. In contrast Tom Hayden's Rebellion In Newark says that on "early Wednesday night, Smith's cab drove around a police car double-parked on Fifteenth Avenue." Two patrolmen then stopped the cab. Here we observe conflicting reports to the cause of arrest.

In the newspaper "Star Ledger" there was a sentence which stated "they only used necessary force to subdue Smith, the policemen asserted." In the commission report the two policemen say that Mr. Smith became quite violent when arrested, and that they had all they could handle in putting him into the police car. "According to the Police Department arrest sheet, Mr. Smith was booked at 9:30 p.m. and charged with assault and battery, resisting arrest, and the use of loud and offensive language. Later that night he was taken from his cell to Beth Israel Hospital."

In contrast we look at the quote in Hayden's book. Smith says, "There was no resistance on my part. That was cover story by the police. They caved in my ribs, busted a hernia, and put a hole in my head." The commission report backs up testimony to the affect that Mr. Smith's "ribs were caved in and that he has suffered other internal injuries."

Since there are contradicting testimonies as to the Smith arrest, we can assume that one party was lying in order to protect itself. It is a foregone conclusion that the Newark Police held the black community in contempt. It is only reasonable to believe that the two policemen took out their anger against the blacks in the case of Mr. Smith; and in a violent way. It is unlikely that Smith would put up resistance when he was confronted by two policemen. The odds were against him; and since he did believe himself innocent, why would he want to fight back?

The Smith apprehension is shrouded in controversy. We might argue, and rightly, the arrest was irrelevant to the underlying causes of the riot. What is clear, however, is that mistrust and hate are not only vocal citizens's feelings, but police also. I realize the policeman is only a human being, but his job demands the responsibility of above-average self control. Otherwise the policeman can only become the agitator for unrest within the ghetto.

Inside Report:

Max Rafferty's Dark Shadow

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

LOS ANGELES–Dr. Max Rafferty's textbook version of a right-wing campaign based on fear and powered by the most hypnotic voice in politics today is in deep trouble, only partly caused by a massive defection of moderate Republican voters who don't want him in the U.S. Senate.

But Rafferty, who is California's Superintendent of Public Instruction, has been in deep trouble before. He overcame a huge deficit in the polls to beat Sen. Thomas Kuchel in the primary.

Polls consistently fail to show the hidden strength of Rafferty, and Democratic nominee Alan Cranston knows it. A rather pedestrian, unexciting former State Controller (who helped found and has now left the ultra-liberal California Democratic Council) Cranston is importing Sen. Eugene McCarthy next weekend for at least two major speeches. He went to Washington three days ago for the endorsement of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy and returned with a Kennedy film-clip which will now get heavy use.

Moreover, Cranston is well-financed and staffed. His campaign director, Sanford Weiner, managed Sen. George Murphy's successful campaign against Pierre Salinger in 1964. Weiner's basic theme is to break down credibility in the silver-tongued Rafferty, and he is getting valuable help from California's newspapers.

For example, a well-researched series by the Long Beach Independent claimed that Rafferty had dodged the draft in World War II (bitterly denied by Rafferty). It has been reprinted by Cranston in the thousands.

"we've been suckered by the smoothest snake oil con job in history," he told an audience of businessmen here last week. He slashed at "hate-contorted figures of lunatic blacks" and "bigoted whites" in attacking riots and disorder. He hit the "predatory packs of punks" making American streets unsafe for walking and lashed out at "hairy disheveled activists" of the campus.

"Let's not kid ourselves," he said, "that we can deal with anarchy by playing footsie with the anarchists."

Some of Rafferty's own advisers say privately that he is "too hot" for television and frightens viewers with his dark image of America and his strong-arm panaceas. But when we watched him tape a half-hour TV show, the rough edges of his rhetoric had been smoothed and he talked effectively, more in sorrow than anger.

But Rafferty's political problems are large. After his primary win against the liberal Sen. Kuchel (who has flatly refused to endorse him), Cranston operatives estimated a minimum 20 percent of the Republican vote would swing to Democrat Cranston and against Rafferty. They have now raised that estimate to at least 30 percent.

Furthermore, Nixon's whole effort out here, one of the most expensive in the state's history, takes minimum notice of the Rafferty campaign. At a recent Nixon rally in Fresno, a Rafferty financial angel tore up a $5,000 check made out to Nixon when Nixon failed to mention Rafferty in his speech.

Rafferty money was very scarce until after the Republican convention. Right-wing dollars were heid in abeyance for Gov. Ronald Reagan to win the presidential nomination. Now, however, money is coming in and Reagan himself is campaigning hard for Rafferty.

Finally, a nasty dispute between Rafferty and his primary campaign chief, the shrewd Robert McGee, forced McGee out (he's managing Nixon's campaign in Washington and Oregon). which meant a long shakedown cruise for a new campaign apparatus.

What Cranston now fears is that some external events, perhaps a major campus blow-up at Berkeley, will shift thousands of last-minute votes to Rafferty.

Failing that, it seems unlikely that the dark shadow Rafferty is now casting over California will reach as far as the Capitol building.

Halt in Bombing Proposed by South Vietnam, First Serious Peace Plan Offered in Assembly

A 28-year-old representative of South Vietnam's lower house has made the Assembly's first serious peace proposal departing from the uniform hawkishness which the Assembly has displayed on the war issue.

In an interview with College Press Service, Deputy Ly Qui Chung, leader of the "People's Bloc" in the Assembly, called for a halt in the bombing of North Vietnam and a token U.S. withdrawal to set the stage for negotiations. He advocated a political amnesty and guarantee of participation in elections as a party for the Southern Viet Cong.

Chung, a former journalist nd prominent campaign aide to Tran Van Huong when he ran unsuccessfully for the Presidency last year, has established himself as the leader of the liberal left forces in an assembly where reaction has held sway. In April, he organized a group of deputies who drafted a "message for peace" to leaders in both North and South Vietnam, appealing to them to negotiate "under the sign of mutual concession."

Last month, Chung, outlined publicly a proposal for postwar Vietnam which he called a "Malaysia-type regime". He advocated a withdrawal of all foreign forces and bases and the participation of the National Liberation Front as a lawful, but non-Communist, political party.

Later, in an interview with CPS, he elaborated further his suggestion for negotiating a peace settlement. The first phase of the settlement would involve moves toward deescalation by the U.S. and North Vietnam, beginning with a complete halt in the bombing of North Vietnam. If this were followed by a reciprocal act by Hanoi, he suggested that the U.S. pull back five or ten thousand troops from Vietnam. This could be done, he pointed out, without affecting the war effort, but its psychological and symbolic importance would be very great, for it would show North Vietnam that the U.S. is bargaining in good faith and would make it easier for the U.S. public to support the war.

The second phase envisioned by Deputy Chung would then consist of "true negotiations on precise points." The primary object would be the mutual withdrawal of North Vietnamese and American troops so that the problem would once again become an internal South Vietnamese matter. At this point, Saigon would make a solemn promise that there would be no vengeance against those who worked with the Viet Cong and that they could participate as a group in the next elections for hamlet, assembly and presidency. They could form any political party they wished–as long as it was not a Communist party.

South Vietnam would then be demilitarized and would have relations with all countries. But the government would be free to call for help in case of aggression against her. Thus her status would be different from either Laos or Cambodia, both of whom have renounced their desire to be assisted by nations of the Southeast Asis Treaty Organization. Nor would South Vietnam be neutral with regard to Communism, which would continue to be outlawed by the Constitution.

In making this proposal Chung and the sixteen deputies in the People's Bloc are bucking a tide of reaction on both the peace issue and questions of social reform. The Assembly is the product of an electoral process monopolized by a narrow segment of the population. The political Buddhists, peasants and working classes are virtially unrepresented.

The assembly has not avoided the subject of peace and peace negotiations in 1968, but its discussion has comprised little more than charges of "softness on Communism" or worse against everyone from Premier Huong to other deputies. In July, the Independent Bloc denounced the Huong government's tolerance of those "making propaganda for the N.L.F." and threatened to raise a question of confidence if it did not show its toughness toward the communists and the peace movement.

When a deputy from the Unification Bloc, Tran Ngoc Chau, proposed in August that the Assembly appoint a committee to contact responsible authorities in North Vietnam to open direct negotiations between the South and North, the Independents and People's Progress Bloc leaders charged that there was a "foreign hand" behind the plan, to test the reaction of the Assembly. The charge was completely without substance.

In a later interview with CPS, Tran Ngoc Chau said he opposed the current Paris talks as psychologically harmful to the allied cause. He wanted talks between North Vietnam and South Vietnam only to show his dislike of the contacts between the U.S. and North Vietnam. He admitted that he had no idea about how to bring peace and felt that it was too far away to begin thinking about the shape of a settlement. As for allowing the Viet Cong to participate in an election, he expressed the fear thet the Viet Cong would get the peasant vote, simply because the peasants had been terrorized so long.

Typical of opinion in the Assembly is Dr. Tran Duy Tu, leader of the People's Progress Bloc, which has 28 deputies. He explained in an interview that the primary principle of the bloc was support for the constitutional provision that "every citizen must be against Communism." He left no doubt that the bloc's position on peace was that it would have to come by the complete capitulation of North Vietnam and the Viet Cong.

Asked whether he thought this view was representative of the peasants,he declared that at least one million peasants had moved from the countryside to the cities to avoid the terrorism of the Viet Cong.

Day School

The administration of th Community Day School, recentl opened private school ir Springfield, has announced that it is seeking the ideas and assistance of local graduate student volunteers.

The accredited, elementary school is especially concerned with the current trend in progressive education of having facts and skills learned in the process of interesting projects and themes.

Graduate students interested in helping in the program and those with ideas and suggestions are urged by the school's administration to contact the Community Day School at 245 Porter Lake Drive in Forest Park, Springfield, or to call 736-2678 any weekday.

SELECT Aids Students

University students wishing to transfer next fall will find their task easier this time than when they were high school seniors attempting to choose four or five prospective colleges.

Harcourt, Brace and World, Inc., has introduced a computer system to aid students in the selection of colleges and universities. The program, SELECT, was created by two seniors at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

The program, which is aimed at high school seniors and college students wishing to transfer, determines the 10 to 15 schools in the country which best match a student's interests, aptitudes, and financial requirements. The student's specifications are compared with over two million data entries on approximately 3,000 colleges and universities in the United States.

William Jovanovich, president of Harcourt, Brace and World, noted that students will generally consider only a few colleges when contemplating matriculation or transfer, usually those familiar to him through familyandfriends. The purpose of SELECT is to aid quidance counselors and the student himself in determining all possibilities compatible with the student's needs and potential.

The SELECT questionnaire seeks such academic information as college entrance test scores, school rank, and course interests. Such areas as social activity, sports, reasons for attending college, and career intentions are also considered in selecting the best possibilities for the student.

Innovation is the spirit of WMUA this season.

New programs this semester are designed to stimulate, interest and excite the student listener who has been, up to this time, pretty disinterested in what WMUA offers, Miss Jewett said in a Collegian interview. It is her belief that the station will become what's happening in the air all over campus.

Already innovation of the WMUA program style is taking over. The programs this fall include:

Action '68, a campus-oriented show featuring Ron LeBreque.

Dean of Students William F. Field pulls no punches with his new program, "On the Line, an Open Forum," where students talk about what's on their minds and ask questions on the air.

Miss Jewett said a program in the spring will give time for newly organized student groups to make themselves better known to the campus community.

Formerly, ignorance of student taste led to programing that attracted few students to the WMUA wave length, Miss Jewett said. The station staff of 35 has busied itself this year with surveys to learn what students want to hear and designed the programs accordingly. One small cross-sectional survey of about 200 students has already been taken. A university-wide survey form is to be distributed in the dorms to all students in January. A table will be set up in Student Union lobby for the participation of commuting students. Results will be tallied with the help of a computer, and programs will be fully geared to current trends as revealed by the survey.

The American Committee to Keep Biafra Alive urgently needs students to join in a Lifeline for Biafra on Friday, Oct. 25, in Washington, D.C.

Parking Problem Plagues U Mass

Most of the UMass students have undoubtedly had trouble with the campus parking situation. For example, students unable to find parking spaces on the Hill or near the Quad have probably had to use F lot in the Southwest. People visiting the Student Union have found that they had to leave their cars some distance from the Union or risk a ticket. Some students have left their cars outside dorms at night to find them in a garage about two miles away the next morning.

Even though these difficulties cause great inconveniences for drivers, they cause just as many problems for the campus police. Col. John Marchant, director of security for the campus, told the MDC there are four groups of drivers using the parking facilities: students, staff, conferees and construction workers. The parking lots can accomodate students and faculty but not the other two groups. Complicating the plans this fall is a marked increase in the number of students with permission to keep cars on campus. The exact figure is not available yet.

In order to obtain permission to park, a student must register at the campus police station, across from the Southwest dormitory area. The eligibility requirements for permission are listed in a University booklet concerning student motor vehicle registrations.

Col. Marchant said that students have tried to pass themselves off as faculty, cases of theft have been reported in the Orchard Hill area, cases of damaged and stolen property have been reported in F lot and stickers have been removed from the bumpers of registered cars. A sticker put on a wet, dirty, or greasy bumper can be peeled off and used by someone else. One person has already been caught, according to the security chief.

Col. Marchant also mentioned another problem: "We are plagued each year with students who are not eligible, and who have not registered, using staff lots and, in some cases, student lots, under the pretense these are visitors' cars."

A Rally to demonstrate support for Soviet Jews will be held on October 13, at 2:00 p.m., on the Boston Commons.

The Rally is in accordance with celebrations held in the streets of Russia every year by Jews - mostly college students - on Simchat Torah, the holiday of the Giving of the Torah.

A short prayer service on the steps of the Massachusetts State House will begin the Rally. There will then be a Torah procession to the Parkman Bandstand, where Professor Marshall I. Goldman of Wellesley College will give the main address. Israeli singing and dancing will follow.

4 H Pilot Program Expands in Roxbury, Dorchester

Amherst, Mass.-A pilot 4-H Club program in Boston's Negro ghetto is firmly established and reaching into some new areas this year, according to state 4-H Club headquarters at the University of Massachusetts.

4-H got involved initially in 1966 in a strictly horticultural role, helping the Roxbury-Dorchester Community Beautification Program. Since then, 4-H programs in clothing, woodworking and craftwork have been added.

This year, program director Herbert Fordham of the UMass Waltham Field Station hopes to add a photography project which will work out of the Roxbury YMCA and a home improvement program which will becenteredin an apartment made available to 4-H in the city's Orchard Park housing area.

The program now involves about 350 young people but could reach many more, Fordham said. "If we had the leaders to organize the clubs, we could probably involve 1000 kids in the Roxbury area alone," he estimated.

Next to volunteer adult leaders, the greatest needs of the program are donations of equipment or money to buy equipment, Fordham said. Such donations are needed to supplement the support given by the Massachusetts 4-H Foundation, the University and the Cooperative Extension Service.

Mrs. George R. Baily, Jr., and her co-workers in the Roxbury-Dorchester Community Beautification Program called on 4-H Club officials for help early in 1966 when they began converting vacant lots into "pocket gardens." The immediate result was the training of 32 adults from the beautification group as volunteer 4-H leaders.

With the vacant lot beautification as a start, the 4-H program expanded to other areas. These now include 4-H clothing clubs, a woodworking club, and a crafts program that teaches work in ceramics, enamel, leather and other material. The program now has three part-time paid leaders and uses the facilities of community centers such as the Robert Gould Shaw House in Dorchester, the Norfolk House and the Roxbury YMCA.

At the same time, the 4-H horticulture program expanded as the Roxbury-Dorchester Beautification group took on new projects. New garden sites were added, the Franklin Park Rose Garden was restored with 1000 rose plants, vegetable and flower gardens were planted at private sites and horticultural workshops were held.

In the works now is a photography project that has access to a darkroom at the Roxbury YMCA but needs cameras and supplies, according to Fordham. Well under way is a series of home economics programs at Orchard Park. Using a three-room apartment there, 4-H leaders will start programs in food and nutrition, food preservation, and home improvement.

Johnson Delays Replacing Warren, Awaits Ordinary Times

WASHINGTON AP-Johnson pulled back Thursday from any new effort now to replace Earl Warren as chief justice of the United States.

It was left unclear, however, whether Johnson might make another attempt before his term expires Jan. 20. Warren submitted a notice of retirement last June to take effect at the President's pleasure. Johnson nominated Associate Justice Abe Fortas to head the court. At the same time he submitted the name of Homer Thornberry, an old friend who is now a U. S. Court of Appeals judge in Texas, to fill the vacancy that would be created by Fortas's elvations. The Fortas nomination was blocked in the Senate by a filibuster and Johnson withdrew it, at Fortas's request. Later, with no opening to fill, he also pulled back the Thornberry nomination.

In a statement Thursday Johnson recalled that he has said "I do not believe that I can find a person who is better qualified to succeed Chief Justice Warren in the nation's highest judicial post than Mr. Justice Fortas.

I deeply regret that the Senate filibuster prevented the Senate from voting on the nomination of Justice Fortas. Had the Senate been permitted to vote, I am confident that both Justice Fortas and Judge Thornberry would have been confirmed. Their qualifications are indisputable. "In ordinary times I would feel it my duty now to send another name to the Senate for this high office.

"These are not ordinary times. We are threatened by an emotionalism, partisanship, and prejudice that compel us to use great care if we are to avoid injury to our constitutional system.

"Under these circumstances the foundations of government would be better served by the present chief justice remaining until emotionalism subsides, reason and fairness prevail," Johnson said.

Food Services Aim To Please

Although the students may not consider themselves as customers and consumers, they are just that-customers and consumers of the product of the University of Massachusetts Food Services Department.

One of the fundamental considerations in serving the consumer is to try to please him, and according to Director Joel M. Stoneham, the Food Services Department does try to fulfill this function. In an effort to make this task more feasible, the Student Senate installed suggestion boxes for student comments in all dining commons. Along with this, the department has established a Food Service representative system with a student from each dormitory on campus. As representatives, these students have the option of reporting any complaints directly to the manager of the dining commons in question or to the Food Services office in North Commons. So far this fall, only three dorms have elected representatives.

Concerning the selection of food items for the menu, Mr. Stoneham relies on many years of practical experience for this task. Mr. Stoneham's comment on this problem: "We cook for 9,500 kids with personal preferences. We are realistic enough to know that we will never satisfy all of them. This is the reason we use a selective menu." However, he went on to say, "This doesn't mean that we shouldn't strive to take care of 100 percent, but realistically we know that we can't."

What about the "profits" of the Food Services? Mr. Stoneham indicated that there are essentially no profits. He stated: "Any surpluses that may be realized, which have not been, do not go into our pockets, but into any facilities that we have or into the buildings. There is no such thing as profit. There are surpluses that go into the operation. Look at North Commons and see where the surpluses should go."

As for the future of the Food Services Department here, Mr. Stoneham had several comments concerning goals of higher standards and boarding hall fee increases. Compared with other institutions, he said, "I think that we are very good, but I think that we have a long way to go." Because this is a period of changes for the department as far as personnel, administration and the industry as a whole is concerned, he stated: "It will take a couple of years to get us where I want us to be. I do not believe in staying as you are, but I will not change for the sake of changing.

Today the UMass cross country team travels to Storrs, Conn., to take on the UConn Huskies. The 4:30 p.m. meet features the top two teams in the Yankee Conference.

UMass will enter the meet with many doubtful starters. Paul Hoss is still recovering from his injury. Tom Derderian, who has been running well of late, was just released from the infirmary and probably won't start in the race. Another name just added to the long list of Redman injuries is Marc Gelinas, who is coming down with the flu.. Whether any of these men will be able to go in the meet will be in doubt up to race time. Coach Ken O'Brien hopes that he can finally have his team at full strength as quickly as possible as they meet their toughest opponents in the next two weeks. At the head of the list is UConn, followed by Springfield and Holy Cross.

UConn's cross country squad has amassed a 2-0 record to date. They have shut out Boston College 15-48, and downed Holy Cross, 19-46. The top Huskie, John Vitale, has won both records, both times setting records on the new UConn course.

Vitale is also the only collegian to defaet IC4A champ Art Dulong of Holy Cross despite the fact that Dulong had a cold. Dulong is the only runner to break into UConn's top five men.

Running second behind Vitale has been Bill Young who as a sophomore, two years ago, won the Yankee Conference championship meet. Following Young are Craig McColl, Steve Flanagan and Gene Spurling.

The Redmen will have a rough go with UConn especially if a couple of UMass' top men can't perform. However, the Redmen still have an even chance to defeat the Huskies. Ron Wayne, Leo Duart and Charlie Lang have all been running well this week and are looking good according to Coach O'Brien.

The coach added that the slack of missing one or two runners can be picked up by any one of the depth men that UMass possesses. These runners are Dave Evans, Larry Paulson, Bill Donaldson and Dave Eiben.

This contingent of runners and the memory of last year's one point defeat could drive UMass past UConn.

The Little Redmen, who captured their first win last week against Northeastern, will be battling the Huskie Pups. The UConn frosh have a 1-1 record with a win over BC and a one point loss to Holy Cross. Their strong team is led by Scott Carter, the New England High School two mile champion last year.

Both Don Dunsky and Wayne Lucas will hope to take Carter in the frosh encounter. UMass hopes for victory will be for the three through seven men from the frosh to stay close together and hope to break up the UConn point scores.

Flood's Error Breaks Up Scoreless Pitching Duel

ST. LOUIS (AP) – "I fouled it up. That's all."

That was Curt Flood's capsule description of what happened on a liner to center by Detroit's Jim Northrup that broke open a scoreless pitching duel between St. Louis' Bob Gibson and Detroit's Mickey Lolich in the seventh inning of the seventh game of the World Series yesterday.

The ball fell safely while Flood was scrambling around trying to find it, and Detroit scored the game's first two runs in the seventh. That was all Lolich needed to notch his third victory of the Series and give the Tigers the world championship.

There were two away and men on first and second when Northrup slashed one toward Flood.

The Cards' centerfielder started charging in, then tried to change directions, and slipped.

"I couldn't see it against the shirts of spectators behind the plate," Flood explained. The reason I started in, I just didn't know where the ball was. A ball hit right at me gives me trouble in day games.

"If I hadn't slipped I might have got it. It was a little slippery, a little wet out there."

St. Louis Manager Red Schoendienst commented: "I haven't talked to Curt, but I'm sure he could have caught it if he hadn't charged in on it."

Schoendienst praised both loser Gibson and winner Lolich.

"Win or lose, I still think Gibson is the best pitcher in baseball. But you've got to give Lolich credit.

"He pitched great in the whole series. We had lots of shots at it today. We hit some off Lolich, but we couldn't do any good'"

Told Flood was taking the blame for losing the game, Gibson said:"Curt would say it was his fault. That's the kind of guy he is. But it was just one of those things that happen. It wasn't anybody's fault.

"Nobody feels ashamed. We got beat, and beat very squarely. In a short Series like this the best team does not always win."

Booters Seek Third Win Against Winless Uconn

by Walt Stachura
Staff Reporter

Looking for its third straight victory, the UMass soccer team faces UConn tomorrow at 10:30 in a key Yankee Conference battle at varsity field.

Unbeaten and unscored upon in their first two regular season games, the Redman booters are ready and anxious to do battle with the Huskies one of the pre-season favorites for Yankee Conference honors.

The Saturday morning contest is a must game for both squads. UConn is facing elimination in the conference race because of a 1–0 loss to defending champion Vermont and a scoreless tie with improving New Hampshire. UMass would like to remain undefeated in the race and keep pace with Vermont.

Despite having only two ties and a loss in three games, UConn has to be expected to give the Redmen a tough battle. Last year, the two teams fought through a double overtime before the Redmen pulled out a 2–1 decision.

The Huskies will field a young team and use many substitutions during the game. In one of their games, UConn played seven different men in the three halfback slots.

Led by a strong defense which has given up only three goals in three games, UConn is still looking for some scoring punch. John Sahnas, a junior forward, is their best man in the front wall. He was a member of the second team All-Yankee Conference as a sophomore.

The backbone of the strong UConn defense is their line of fullbacks led by captain Ray Strong, an All-Yankee Conference selection last year. Another fullback who will see a lot of action is Al Lyon.

The Redmen will be strengthened by the addition of Marty Mughogho to the starting lineup. He is coming back after a week layoff with a knee injury and is in almost perfect playing shape.

Boston University has Strong Defense

by Peter Pascarelli Assistant Sports Editor

An injury plagued UMass football team will be in its best shape of the season tomorrow as the Redmen hope to snap a two game losing streak when they meet Boston University at Alumni Stadium. Kickoff time will be 1:30, with broadcast time on WMUA (91.1 F.M.) 1 p.m.

Big Marty Scheralis, will be back at his defensive tackle post after a week's absence due to an arm injury. Linebacker Dennis Gray, who has been hampered by a sore knee is in good shape and will start. Also, although he may not see any action, Tom York was running for the first time in weeks, and Noel Schablik was also taking part in drills for the first time in many days.

The Redmen have also had a much better attitude this week in paractice. Coach Vic Fusia said, "This is the first week this squad has reacted like the squads of old. They have looked good in drills and have had a lot of enthusiasm. It has given a lift to all."

UMass will need it all going for them this week, however, as Boston University whom the Redmen are facing has won two straight. The Terriers, after an opening game defeat to Colgate, 28-0, have defeated Maine, 6-3, and Temple, 7-0.

The Terriers' main strength lies in their defense. Fusia says of the B.U. defenders, "The defense is especially strong. The linemen are big and strong and overall they are much sounder than they have ever been."

Although the Terrier offense has scored only 13 points in three games, it can not be taken lightly. B.U. is a running team essentially and will not pass too much. Coach Fusia regards the Terrier backs highly.

"Their strategy is to drive the ball down the field," said Fusia. They are an excellent running team and have much more speed than Delaware. They can hurt you in more places also."

All the B.U. backs, Reggie Rucker, Bruce Taylor, Bob Calascibetta and Gerry Smith have blazing speed and offer threats on punt and kickoff returns, UMass has been notably weak on kicking coverage this year.

Dennis Gray - Redman Linebacker

The Redmen meanwhile will go with the same offensive lineup they went with last week. Injured Jim Nangle is ready although he will not start.

Defensively, the Redmen will have a few changes. Besides Scheralis' starting, Bill Sroka or Andy Guarino will start at the other tackle. Also Dick Deyer may start at one linebacker berth. Guarino besides playing at tackle, will also see action at middle guard.

UMass will be looking for improvement in the area of field position and kick coverage. Both things have hampered the Redmen all year. Fusia sees the two things as being related to each other.

"Our kicking coverage has been sorely lacking, thereby putting us in a bad position. But our poor field position has been the fault of both the offense and the defense."

Fusia revealed that UMass opponents have scored only one touchdown by means of a long drive. All other scores have come about because the opponent took over the ball in good field position.

The Redmen go into tomorrow's game in fairly good physical shape, although still thin in spots and with the incentive of ending a rare losing streak.

Unbeaten B.C. to Hust Villanovia, Two Yankee Conference Games

by Glen Brieri
Senior Reporter

Boston College is favored to remain unbeaten tomorrow as the Eagles host Villanova, topping the schedule of UMass opponents.

B.C., under Joe Yukica, has coasted to wins over Navy and Buffalo, and the Wildcats are not expected to give the Eagles trouble. B.C. halfback Dave Bennett has gotten off to a blazing start, scoring seven touchdowns in the two games.

In the Yankee Conference, there are two games matching Conference teams, with Connecticut playing an outsider. Rhode Island, given the best chance of upsetting UMass for the Beanpot, plays its first Conference game against hapless Vermont. The Rams have gotten off to a slow start, losing to Brown and Temple and beating Southern Connecticut. The Catamounts will be lucky if they win one game this season.

New Hampshire, another team given a shot at the Conference title, entertains Maine. The Wildcats are 1-0 in the league while Maine won its first game in two years for Walt Abbot last week, beating Vermont.

Connecticut will be an underdog in its game with Davidson in North Carolina. UConn is 1-2 on the season while Davidson has yet to win. But the Wildcats of the Southern Conference are expected to beat the Huskies as they did last year.

Holy Cross is a touchdown favorite over Colgate in a game to be played at Hamilton, N.Y. The Crusaders have split their first two games, both against Ivy League opponents. They dropped their opener to Harvard and upset Dartmouth last week.

Two UMass independent opponents, Buffalo and Delaware, meet at Buffalo tomorrow. Each team has defeated the Redmen, although the Bulls beat UMass more easily. Overall, Buffalo is 2-2 while the Blue Hens, fresh off last week's come-from-behind win over UMass, are 2-1. The Bulls size and speed makes them the favorite in this one.

Tapes

Highlights of all Redman football games will be televised from 1—1:30 p.m. every Sunday over Campbell, Aldrich, and Nulty may also be considered and could go with the same offensive lineup they went with last week. Injured Jim Nangle is ready although he will not start.

Defensively, the Redmen will have a few changes. Besides Scheralis' starting, Bill Sroka or Andy Guarino will start at the other tackle. Also Dick Deyer may start at one linebacker berth. Guarino besides playing at tackle, will also see action at middle guard.

UMass will be looking for improvement in the area of field position and kick coverage. Both things have hampered the Redmen all year. Fusia sees the two things as being related to each other.

"Our kicking coverage has been sorely lacking, thereby putting us in a bad position. But our poor field position has been the fault of both the offense and the defense."

Fusia revealed that UMass opponents have scored only one touchdown by means of a long drive. All other scores have come about because the opponent took over the ball in good field position.

The Redmen go into tomorrow's game in fairly good physical shape, although still thin in spots and with the incentive of ending a rare losing streak.

Nation Is Embarking On Age of Social Action, Says Brooke

BY PATT FRANCIS
STAFF REPORTER

"The right to protest is the right to persuade, not to paralyze" asserted Senator Edward W. Brooke, as he spoke last night as part of the Distinguished Visitor's Program.

He declared that the nation is entering an age of social action that "can propel this country forward at an unprecedented rate." However, he cautioned, "I say can, not will... It will take an effort and imagination over a long period for the United States to resolve the social and political dilemmas now troubling us."

Brooke asserted that those who would change our society "must be able to sustain their ideals by conscientous labor for many years..."

He praised the student generation as having raised many of the most important questions before us today. These questions include the best form of economic organization for our nation, the proper role in the world for our country, and the extent and limits of individual freedom in a "society which offers the most opportunities for personal achievement, and the most opportunities for personal abuse."

These questions can't be "solved in a final way" by either living generation. "It is up to each generation to find its own answers."

Brooke departed from his text long enough to state that "we find ourselves frequently in sympathy with protesters," in agreeing with their right to dissent. He then stated that believed many of our current protests to come from "misreading" of previous protests.

However, "Waen protest becomes the rule, rather than the exception, its political force becomes dull." He thon asserted the likelihood that further protests would fail, as well as the probability that future protests would fail.

Brooke asserted, "We need a new age of reason, and an age of faith."

Brooke told the audience that there is an "abiding belief in the right of each individual to participate in the political processes... An individual can make a difference." (He later stated, during the question period following the speech, that a vote for George Wallace although he did not actually mention him by name, would be a "waste of a vote".)

To bring about any kind of change, according to Brooke, patience and perseverence are the main requirements, as well as a willingness to start at basic levels and work upwards. He reaffirmed his belief that this system would succeed in bringing about a coalition of public and private resources to "meet the urban crisis in a substantial and effective way"

Brooke predicted that whoever was elected, "and I speak of only two candidates", would find a way to end the Vietnam conflict with a "just and honorable peace."

Brooke also said that, if offered, he would not accept a Cabinet Post, but would remain in the Senate, so that he could remain "independent" in his actions.

Said that he, himself, would continue to work for creation of an entirely volunteer army, which he also believed the administration would try to change also.

In a question period after the speech, Brooke analyzed the three candidates for president. He dismissed Wallace by saying that there is a great fear in the country, and a need to allay the fear, and Wallace was playing to that need. However, Brooke did admit to fearing a revolution if Wallace were to be elected.

Brooke tied Humphrey to the present administration, dumping liability for the war into his lap, as a member of the Democratic party. He said Humphrey had no dialogue with the country, and wouldn't be able to get his programs, through Congress.

Nixon, according to Brooke, is in "the center spectrum"; he would be able to get programs through Congress, and would be able to reach the conservatives as well as the liberals.

Columbia Point or North Station?

Board of Trustees To Decide Site for UMass Boston Campus Today

BY JOHN HICKEY, STAFF REPORTER

In the wake of protests by UMass Boston students and faculty over the almost certain choice of Columbia Point as the new campus site, a private developer has unveiled a plan which would merge the university campus into a new and larger community of housing units and recreational areas.

A meeting of the University Board of Trustees is scheduled for today to consider the Columbia Point site recommended by the buildings and grounds committee. An alternative plan proposed by the Boston architectural firm of Campbell, Aldrich, and Nulty may also be considered and could greatly increase the attractiveness of the Point as a campus site.

The plan of the buildings and grounds committee would situate the campus on the site favored from the beginning by the Boston Redevelopment Authority. The 100-acre parcel is on the northeastern tip of Columbia Point. Fifty-six acres of the proposed site is now privately owned and slated for development as an unusual housing community to be called Summerson. The university could seize the land, at an estimated price of $1 million, under its power of eminent domain.

The alternative plan has been suggested by the developers who now hold the option on the land. It would provide the campus with ample land on Columbia Point, permit the developers to proceed with their new housing concept, upgrade the present Columbia Point area while tying it in with the heart of the city.

The plan of the developers would locate the campus on the southeastern tip of the point, bordering the Savin Hill section of Dorchester. A portion of the campus would be on filled land reclaimed from Dorchester Bay. The plan makes 81 acres available immediately to the University. Even-

Editorial Reflections

IT's Monday Again

BY JAN CURLEY Assistant Managing Editor

Last Monday night the Monday morning blahs set in, slowly, but surely at about 8 p.m. when the evening edition of the "Daily Collegian" arrived on campus carried by breathless runners from Boston. Even all the Excedrin in the world wouldn't have cured the headaches we had then or by the end of the week as they became progressively worse.

Just one week ago today, which seems a million years ago, we embarked on an "experiment". We attempted to have our paper printed in Boston by Student Times, Inc. We didn't sally into this venture with our eyes blinded by the prospect of having our paper delivered at 8 a.m. We had the wholehearted support of both the administration and the Student Senate.

The Boston experiment flopped and we admit it. The fault is not all ours. We had taken Boston for financial reasons: they were the lowest of four bidders. They had promised that they would be able to put our paper out in the morning. All sorts of electronic equipment would be installed to speed the process up, and in the meantime, runners would be stationed to carry the copy from Amherst to Boston. But things did not work out.

Starting this morning we our having our paper printed in Ware at the "Ware River News", and hopefully, this will be the start of a very happy and profitable union. Again we stick our necks out and predict 8 a.m. delivery by midweek. Editor-in-chief Jack Dean has vowed, "I will go to every printer in Massachusetts if it is necessary to provide the campus with a morning paper."

and Friday. But the "Collegian" had appeared, and the small news item in the "Gazette" was enough to get us in hot water with some of our advertisers, bona fide paying customers.

It seems that the story came about when the "Gazette" correspondent, whose name we shall keep anonymous, arrived at UMass seeking the "Collegians", which we understand he read avidly for news. Not finding them in their usual place in the lobby, he inquired and was told they had not come out.

Failing to check with any reliable sources other than the Dean's Office, i.e., the "Collegian" editors, he sent the story in. He reports that it was changed to its present form in the newsroom of the "Gazette", but it has not been determined that this was indeed what happened.

This is our ultimate goal, one for which we are all striving. We want to serve the campus better, and we feel that a morning delivery is one of the ways we can do it. We owe in part, an apology to our readers, but our intentions were the best. After Friday's paper came out, we were in tears. Boston had realized they could not put out a daily paper and had called us Thursday morning to throw in the towel.

We were in another crisis, printerless for the next week. Arrangements have been made with Ware and our hopes are up again. Signs in the "Collegian" office proclaim, "We shall overcome" and "A change is coming."

Collegian Not Out Again Today

AMHERST - The Collegian, the University of Massachusetts daily newspaper, failed to appear on University newstands today and yesterday in a publishing crisis which may not be resolved until Monday.

Formerly printed by Hamilton I. Newell Inc. of Amherst, the Collegian for the past week has been printed by a Cambridge firm which specializes in scholastic publications.

University officials said that the Cambridge company has now informed Collegian editors that it cannot produce the newspaper at the agreed upon price and efforts are being made to have the paper printed by the Ware River News, second low bidder on the printing contract.

The staff suffered and the University suffered from our printing problems. In case you didn't see one of last week's paper, we carried a review of a movie which had previewed in New York the same day the "New York Times" carried it. We also had on the spot coverage of George Wallace's visit in Boston and Vice President Hubert Humphrey's the next day by Ron LaBrecque.

Well, as I said, today is Monday. And as Jackie Gleason says, "Away we go." Let's hope it's away we go with a morning paper, and not away with ourselves, which could very well happen if we fail again this week. But some hard learned facts have made us a wiser editorial board.

Michigan Educator To Read Paper

Dr. John S. Brubacher, an authority on the history and philosophy of American higher education, will be reading a paper on student power in American universities tomorrow in the Colonial Lounge of the Student Union at 3 p.m.

Dr. Brubacher will also field responses from a group of students and other UMass persons invited for the occasion. Dr. Brubacher will be on campus as the guest of the United Christian Foundation.

BY DONNA WALDRON
Staff Reporter

At the Press Day conference held Saturday for members of the professional press and news media, President John W. Lederle stressed the great changes taking place at UMass. In 1960 there were 6,000 students at the Amherst campus. Today there are 16,000 students here and an additional 3,500 in Boston. He cited the breakthrough in faculty salary and the improved library facilites as reasons for UMass being a "first rate" state university.

To answer State Senator Kevin Harrington (D-Salem) that UMass was becoming an "Amherst Empire", President Lederle stated that two thirds of the students are from the eastern part of the state, so we are in no danger of becoming "Western Mass State College". Dr. William D. Tunis, Dean of Admissions, supplemented this by saying that UMass has an "open door" admissions policy. There is no quota from a particular area or school, and the best students are accepted from the applications without regard to the area from which they come.

Dr. William C. Venman, assistant to the Provost spoke to the group on the academic progress of UMass. With the addition of an M.A. program in comparative literature, M.S. programs in environmental engineering and regional planning, there are now master's degree programs in a total of 55 fields. A new course, granting a Ph. D. in anthropology, brings the number of doctoral programs to 62.

Dr. Verman spoke of Project 10 as a further extension of the residential colleges started at Orchard Hill five years ago. He said that the university is trying to establish "as many types of learning environs as possible". The CCENS program for disadvantaged students should be a "prototype for the country", he said. Under this program which is financed by the State, the Ford Foundation and the Student Senate, 123 students are given extensive tutoring to help them be successful college students.

Fifty percent of this country's under-graduate students have expressed an interest in graduate work. This year the National Science Foundation spent 64 per cent of its research money to rain grads. Dr. Arthur C. Gentile, Acting Dean of the Graduate School, said, "Research training at the graduate level." Because of the low quotas until December, the impact of the draft has not yet been felt in graduate schools across the country.

Paul Silverman, President of the Student Senate, told the press that the role of student government is "relevant participation, not domination". He read an editorial put out by radio station WHYN which criticized the Student Senate decision to abolish credit for R.O.T.C. In reply, he said, "The question was about course material, not the war." He emphasized the importance of de-centralizing student government to avoid what has happened at Columbia and elsewhere.

H.J. Littlefield, the University Planning Officer, described the library, offices, fine arts center, graduate research center, and campus center which will soon be a reality.

Joyce Speaks Tonight On Racism in America

The Martin Luther King Jr. Social Action Council will sponsor a lecture by Frank Joyce, National Executive Director of People Against Recism. It will be held tonight in the Student Union Ballroom. The topic of Mr. Joyce's lecture will be "Racism in America."

Mr. Joyce is interested in the problem of white racism in white America. He had been active in SNCC until the white members of that organization were told to go back to their own communities and work for changes there.

This summer, Mr. Joyce appeared on national television discussing racism in the middle to upper-middle class suburban community. He also spoke here at the University, under the joint sponsorship of the King Council, the Amherst Human Relations Council, and the University Summer Arts Program.

The lecture will be open to the public without charge. A question period will follow.

The northeastern tip of Columbia Point would be utilized for 1500 units of badly needed low and middle-income housing. Bertram Druker, who is to develop the proposed package, has already achieved notable success with several unique housing concepts, notably in the Castle Square-New York Streets areas.

The plan also calls for thinning out and improvement of the project now located on the northern tip of the Point. Mount Vernon Street would be eliminated, setting the project on a Park. Traffic would be routed around the point on a new circular roadway.

Harry Dixon-Boston Pops Conductor

Pops Concert Will Conclude Week's Homecoming Festivities

There are Pop Concerts to be found around the musical world, but the Boston Pops remain distinctly in a class by themselves

It is this very group that the Homecoming Committee has announced will conclude the week long festivities of Homecoming 1968.

Although Europe boasts of many cultural institutions far older than any of those in the United States, Boston has one claim to superior venerability. This is the Boston Pops. In 1965 these concerts, which had done much to spread the understanding of fine music, reached their eightieth year--twice the span of the London Pops, which began in 1858 and expired in 1898. On the other hand, the Boston Pops have run steadily, with the exception of one year, since 1885.

Comparison of the histories of the two series shows both interesting similarities and differences. In both cases, the programs were planned with the aim of "elevating the musical taste of the general public." In London, the chosen means was chamber music by great masters, performed by leading quartet players and guest soloists. In Boston, the music has always been performed by a large symphonic ensemble and the programs have combined works by masters of "serious music" with those by masters of "light music". Incidentally, the London Pops started out as "Popular Concerts," a designation which was shortened to "Pops". Boston's Pops started out as "Promenade Concerts," then became "Proms". After that, they were "Popular Concerts," then finally, "Pops".

The old, the new, the serious or semi-serious and the frankly carefree, were blended at the Boston Pops to the delight of the public. One of the particular charms was that the players were skilled and spirited members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra; one of the violinists was Emanuel Fiedler, starting with the second Pops season. His son played violin in the Symphony and the Pops seasons nearly three decades later, and continued, switching to viola for fifteen years of the Pops. That was Arthur Fiedler who became their conductor in 1930.

Conducting the Pops for this special performance will be world renowned maestro Harry Ellis Dixon.

As conductor of the Boston Pops Orchestra, Mr. Dixon heads a symphony orchestra, with which popular hits are presented in full symphonic arrangement only. But along with music in lighter vein by such favorites of the day as Richard Rodgers and Leroy Anderson, he adroitly introduces compositions of the masters--Bach, Mozart, Haydn, Beethoven, Brahms, Tchaikovsky--from the regular symphony concert repertory.

By shrewd programming, the Pops has exerted a far-reaching influence in spreading the enjoyment of the classics among great numbers of people formerly afraid of them. Equally, they have won over thousands of devotees of "serious" music to the charms of "light-weight" music, played with symphonic brilliance--and with respect for its quality as entertainment.

The Boston Pops will be performing in the Cage on Sunday afternoon, Oct. 27, at 3:30 p.m. Tickets will go on sale this Thursday at 3:00 apiece for the concert.

Applications Accepted For Summer Work Abroad

Last summer five UMass students traveled to Europe as exchange students through IAESTE (International Association for the Exchange of Students for Technical Experience.) This organization, which has a charter membership on campus, is now accepting applications for the summer of 1969.

Last summer a position was arranged for Roy Tessier in the research department of a large power transformer company located in Legnano, Italy. He was paid average starting salary for an engineer in this position and was provided with a small apartment for his stay.

Janice Randolph, a chemistry major, traveled to Bremen, Germany. She worked for the Institut fur Harteritechnik (Institute for Metal Research). The job was in the field of physical and analytical chemistry. She lived with a family there for 9 weeks, and the pay was more than enough to cover all living expenses.

Ankara, Turkey was the summer residence of William Bruckert. He worked for the telephone company on their international radio-telephone links. The salary was enough to live on a relatively high standard.

Edward Bruckert worked for Philips in their electronic components division, which is located in Eindohoven, Nederlands. He was assigned to develop a color TV oscillator for a new component they were manufacturing. His pay was adequate to cover all living expenses.

Finally, Harry Richard, a civil engineer, travelled to Sweden. He worked there for most of the summer and then had a chance to tour Europe.

A meeting of the IAESTE organization is being held Tuesday, Oct. 15. If you are interested in going to Europe next summer, come to the Piymough Room in the Student Union at 4:30. You will be able to find out more about the program and talk to the five members that went to Europe last summer. If you are interested and unable to attend, please contact William Bruckert - tel. 584-9486.

Graduate Student Senate To Hold Meeting Tonight

The second meeting of the Graduate Student Senate will be held tonight at 8:30 p.m. in the Student Union, the GSS Executive Committee has announced. The meeting will be open to the public.

Graduate Student Senate President Thomas Minogue has announced he expects the introduction of resolutions in sympathy with proposals to regulate the carrying of firearms by University security officers while on duty. He said he expects the proposals to be referred to committee for reports and recommendations at later Senate meetings.

Other items on the agenda include committee reports and requests for appropriations, reports on negotiations with the Diners' Club, and on the recent action of the SUG board which assigned office space in the Student Union to the Graduate Student Senate.

Also on the agenda, further information on elections to the current Senate will be announced.

Placement and Financial Aid

There are presently many jobs available on campus for students under the College Work Study Program. Eligibility for the program is based on established financial need criteria. Any student interested in working on a part time basis should contact Mr. Seigrist in the Placement and Financial Aid office, Room 237, Whitmore.

Wallace Reveals Campaign Platform for American Independent Party

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)-George C. Wallace issued the campaign platform of his American Independent party yesterday and said he would review it plank by plank for the nation in speeches between now and election day.

The 13,000-word statement of the third-party candidate's principles contained few suprises among its programs to end "the fearful and inept leadership of our national parties."

Wallace said he was the document's chief author and guiding spirit, and the text does reflect the one-man flavor of his party by its sometimes use of the first person "I."

The former Alabama governor has voiced most of the platform's provisions, though usually in less specific terms, in numerous campaign speeches and interviews.

The platform advocates:

-Increased social security payments, plus removal of earnings limitations on persons of 65 and over.

-Periodic reconfirmation of federal judges by the electorate and of Supreme Court justices by the Senate.

-A military victory in Viet Nam if peace negotiations fail.

-Heavy reliance on the police to restore law and order to the cities.

-Full employment with the government hiring persons for public works projects if necessary.

-A program to ease problems in the cities by luring industry away from urban population centers.

Perhaps the least anticipated features of the platform were its health and welfare provisions.

That plank advocates an immediate increase in social security payments, an income tax deduction of the total amount spent for drugs and medical expenses and unlimited outside earnings for retired persons drawing social security.

It also recommends relief for persons who can't afford the unpaid portion of government-insured medical expenses, plus uninterrupted nursing home care for the chronically ill.

Another plank would end lifetime appointments for the federal judiciary.

It would seek a constitutional amendment to give the public a voice in retaining federal judges appointed by the President, and to give the Senate a chance to reconsider periodically its confirmations of Supreme Court justices.

The platform did not specify how often the Senate would be asked to reconfirm justices, but in his speeches Wallace has mentioned "every six or eight years."

"The federal government," it says, "has in the past three decades seized and usurped many powers not delegated to it."

The American Independent party would therefore restore "power and authority" to the states in such matters as public school policies, voter qualifications, open occupancy laws and legislative apportionment.

The platform also condemns "the so-called civil rights acts" declaring that they "have set race against race and class against class."

Wallace's plank on Vietnam promises to "be patient to an extreme" in seeking an end to the war through negotiations, but if diplomatic efforts fail it "through the use of conventional weapons."

Three UMass Students Injured In Accident

A two-car accident at 1:57 on North Pleasant Street, Saturday morning, resulted in three persons being hospitalized and three taken to the Infirmary by Amherst and Gold Cross ambulances and police.

Taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northampton were three passengers in a car operated by John Reid of Malden, and three passengers in a car operated by Michael E. Smith of Townsend.

According to police the Reid vehicle was going south on North Pleasant St. and was attempting to make a left turn when in collision with a northbound car operated by Smith. Hospitalized were Smith, Steve M. Schiller, Garry Mulane and John Palladino, all UMass students.

Hospitalized from the Reid car were James Hamlin and Jack Fenner, both of Malden, and an unidentified passenger.

NEW YORK (AP)—Nearly 100 students at New York University occupied two campus buildings from dawn to noon Friday, protesting the firing of a Negro educator who called Hubert H Humphrey and Richard M. Nixon "racist bastards."

University officials meeting with protesting students agreed students could rent space on university property for a black student center. The educator, John F. Hatchett, would be hired the students, but "will no longer be speaking as a representative of NYU," the school said.

After the agreement, the students marched from the buildings, holding their hands high in V-for-victory signs, chanting that they had won their fight with the university.

Dr. Lewis Hyde, provost of the 42,000-student university, said the agreement was reached between the university president, James M. Hester, Chancellor Allan Carter and Winston Duckett, a Negro student, and another student.

NYU said the black student center would be "financially and administratively completely separate from New York University."

The provost said Hatchett is "free to choose any title which he prefers." He said Hatchett had adopted the title "dean of black students."

"We neither object to this nor condone it," Hyde said. "It is none of our business."

Hyde said Hatchett will be paid for the remainder of his one-year contract, but that eventually the Negro students would have to find the funds for his salary.

Hyde said it is not unusual for the university to rent space, and it has done so for fraternal organizations.

Earlier, Hyde called city police to the edge of the Bronx campus, saying he would take "whatever steps necessary" to clear the buildings.

Entrances to two NYU buildings were barricaded. A group in Gould Memorial Library was described by students as mostly white, while a group in Gould Student Center was described as predominantly Negro.

Conference to be Held for Building Officials

An in-service training conference for municipal building officials in New England will be held at UMass today through Friday, conducted by the Cooperative Extension Service of the College of Agriculture.

Panels and other sessions will cover building regulations, building technology, municipal law and management programs. Speakers will be from the University faculty, state, federal and local government, and private industry.

The conference is presented as part of the Extension Service planning and resource development program in cooperation with the Building Officials Conference of America, Inc., and building officials associations in Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Hampshire and Rhode Island.

'69 Camaro SS Sport Coupe, plus RS equipment

Ask the kid who owns one.

Some people have a hard time communicating with youth.

We just bring on the 1969 Camaro, then tell it like it is.

It is: Restyled inside and out with a new grille, new bumpers, new parking lights, new instrument panel, new steering wheel, striping, and new colors including Hugger Orange, which is wild.

It is: Full of new features including bigger outlets for the Astro Ventilation, a 210-hp standard V8, and a lock for the steering column, ignition and transmission lever.

It is: Available with a little device that automatically washes your headlights when you hold the windshield washer button in.

Even if you're 42.

Image Making at UMass

BY PAULA CURRY

UMass has one of the most unique problems facing any state university today - it is better known on a nationwide basis than on the state level. Many Massachusetts residents still seem unaware of the fact the one-time agricultural school in Amherst is now a fully accredited university.

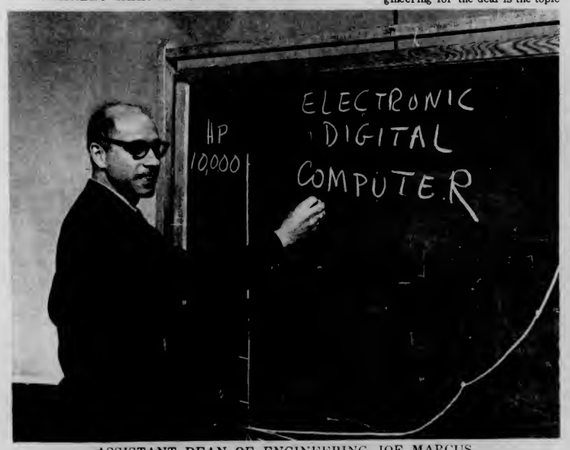
Two men striving to change the university's image are Dan Melley and Charles Keenan. Both work under Secretary Robert McCartney, Director of UMass Relations. Melley is connected with the news department; Keenan is in charge of the radio, television, and movies aspect of public relations.

UMass faces an unusual public relations problem, says Melley, because it is in the western part of the state, away from Boston, the population center. When it comes time for Massachusetts residents to enter college, they tend to choose from any of the hundreds of schools in and around Boston. UMass is to many the "aggie school way out west".

CHARLES KEENAN AND JOE MARCUS

Melley is attempting to change this image by making sure that university news reaches all parts of the state. One particularly successful project was started this year. Melley sent articles about UMass to weeklies all over the state, making sure that each article was accompanied by a list of each town's UMass students. Eighty newspapers ran the story, which covered briefly many aspects of university life. One editor decided to run a series of articles about UMass and has had a "tremendous" response.

Charles Keenan, another staff assistant in the Relations Department, has recently headed a venture into new territory. He is involved with a new UMass television program, "Technology Today", which is being produced by Boston television station WHDH, a CBS affiliate. Aimed at the level of the general public, the program draws its subjects from engineering problems and discoveries. Joe Marcus, Assistant Dean of Engineering, is the host of the program.



Each week, "Technology Today" has a different guest and each week presents a new and interesting subject. The first few programs dealt with such topics as pollution and the ocean. The fourth show, to be presented October 8, featured Prof. Heronemus of UMass. His subject was submersible crafts. Engineering for the deaf is the topic planned for the following program.

Mr. Keenan says that "Technology Today" is televised at a time when classrooms are able to tune in, so he is expecting the greatest response to the program from high schools in the Boston area. The program will perhaps make more high school students aware of the University of Massachusetts.

Dan Melley and Charles Keenan have many other plans for their campaign to promote the university and to create a good image of UMass throughout the state. But, says Melley, public relations can only be "a reflection of what the University does". And since it takes a good while for academic news to make any impression on the public, Melley says that "we are about five years better than people think we are".

Student Coalition

Monday a student coalition for the "Democratic Ticket" was formed in Boston. Its leaders include former organizers of student movements for Kennedy, McCarthy, McGovern and Rockefeller. Student political power was perhaps most effectively demonstrated in the McCarthy campaign. Person-to-person contact is still an ideal means of education and students provide the manpower to inform and educate the general electorate.

Now since the Democratic convention students have seemed to become apathetic about this year's presidential campaign. This does not serve any purpose and will not help solve the tremendous problems facing America today. The Humphrey-Muskie ticket needs students to ring doorbells and inform the public of the facts. Hubert Humphrey has one of the best liberal records in congress. He has not only conceived of bold new ideas, but he has fought for their acceptance. Edmond Muskie is the most exciting political figure in the current campaign.

Some students feel that four years of Nixon and Agnew is a just punishment for our country and will make the election of a more popular liberal possible in 1972. The force of the next four years will be felt far into the future. There is a strong possibility that four or five Supreme Court justices will be retiring in the next four years. Do we want the liberal tradition of the Warren court to revert to a personal censor and suppressor for Strom Thurmond?

As students we have a very personal stake in this election. Nixon is representing our generation in the image of his daughter and her beau. Does David Eisenhower represent you? If he does perhaps we have our own generation to fear more than Mr. Nixon.

If we want a say in the next four years, if we want the next four years to be years of forward progress, we must actively campaign for the Humphrey-Muskie ticket.

Howard F. Swinimer, Jr.

Why Black

Until recently if a dark skinned American were called Black by either a white or nonwhite, he would probably consider the label an insult. Even now color classifications are a problem which no labeled system can eliminate. Some Blacks used a color code differentiating between light and dark skin tones among themselves. No longer is there status consciousness when labeling according to darkness.

After learning about the light and dark antithesis, a non white might ask, "Why are they now so proud to be called Black?" Before answering that question, it should be clear that many uneducated adults still don't like the word "Black" as a label. It is the young Black generation that now is proud of the word and who now use it so freely.

Today, when a speaker refers to a "Black" person, in no way can his racial identity be mistaken. On the other hand, when this speaker refers to a "colored" person, he could be speaking of any non-white. The same ambiguity exists about the white label "Negro", which was given to Blacks during the period of slavery.

Young Afro-Americans do not want to be labelled with a white man's classificatory name which carries with it rather unpleasant connotations, so "colored people and Negroes" adopted the name "Black."

Apollo Aloft

SPACE CENTER, HOUSTON (AP) - The Apollo 7 astronauts, feeling chipper but overfed, spent a quiet Sunday in space running tests on their craft, but were puzzled by mystery music coming from earth.

Navy Capt. Walter M. Schirra Jr., Air Force Msj. Donn F. Eisele and Walter Cunningham reported hearing music drifting up to them as they passed over the Gulf of Mexico.

They said they heard a Houston radio station playing "Fools Rush in Where Angels Fear to Tread." It was the third time since the start of their 11-day flight that the astronauts, America's first three-man space crew, were serenaded from the ground.

Schirra reported his cold was clearing up and he was feeling better. Cunningham said he felt "in good shape" Sunday after taking a decongestant pill the night before.

Dr. Charles Berry, director of medical research and operations, told newsmen Cunningham didn't actually have a cold, but took the pill "as preventative medicine" after he started "getting a little stuffy." He said both Cunningham and Eisele had been treated for colds just prior to launch, and Schirra may have caught his cold then and carried it into space.

"And Now One Of The Year's Really Big Races — "

INSIDE REPORT:

Gilligan and the Paper Tiger

BY ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

CANTON, Ohio--Stalwarts of Stark County's regular Democratic organization, drowsy from large quantities of highballs, Swiss steak and political oratory at their fund-raising dinner last week, were unprepared for the evening's principal address delivered by John J. Gilligan.

They had expected from Gilligan, fighting an uphill race for the U.S. Senate, banal praise of the party and exhortations to greater efforts. Instead, he rocked the regulars out of their chairs with blunt language. His clear implication: the Democratic party and its labor auxiliaries constitute a paper tiger in 1968.

Without a real party, said Gilligan, George Wallace is kidnapping Democratic voters by carloads. Wallace is "the real apostle of alienation," he continued, and instead of damning the Wallace voters, "we had better look at this pretty carefully and decide what these people are trying to tell us." Finally, Gilligan warned against trying "to con them" (the Wallace voters) into thinking their problems are going to be solved if they vote Democratic in November.

Such heresy represents Gilligan's clearheaded assessment of his critical situation today. He faces not only State Atty. Gen. William Saxbe, a moderate and a competent, if unexciting, candidate but also a superb Republican organization forged by Ray C. Bliss and kept in tune by his successor as State Chairman, John Andrews.

Against this, red-headed Jack Gilligan, 47, longtime Cincinnati city councilman and shorttime (1965-66) Congressman, has only his own sardonic wit, style, and charisma. In Ohio, as in other key states, a candidate can expect no help from party and labor regulars. Realizing this, Gilligan is appealing to alienated Wallace voters over the head of the paper tiger.

Adding poignancy to this is the fact that Gilligan was nominated in the May primary as the instrument of a purge directed by labor and the regular party against Sen. Frank Lausche, an anachronistic conservative Democrat.

As we reported in August, the regulars quickly cooled on Gilligan once they nominated him because of his dovish stand on Vietnam and refusal to quickly endorse Hubert Humphrey. To please them, Gilligan swallowed a scruple or two and voted for Humphrey at Chicago.

It didn't work. At Chicago, one prominent Ohio labor leader bitterly told Gilligan: "You came over to Humphrey just two months too late." Since Chicago, Ohio labor (except for the breakaway United Auto Workers) has helped him little. While labor financed 85 percent of his primary campaign, union funds will barely cover 20 percent of general election costs.

With characteristic irrationality, labor is concentrating on the near hopeless Humphrey campaign in Ohio while ignoring Gilligan's more realistic prospects. But even its pro-Humphrey efforts are grossly inadequate. In effect, Ohio labor exhausted itself purging Lausche.

The tipoff is voter registration. In Republican areas such as Cincinnati and Columbus, voter registration is up. But in the traditional Democratic centers such as Cleveland and Toledo, registration is dramatically down. Indeed, labor did nothing this year to register in either black or white neighborhoods.

The registration decline also testifies to the continued debility of the regular party, particularly in Cleveland. Visiting Cleveland recently, Gilligan had no contact with party regulars but spent hours talking to a few hundred young Catholic ladies at Ursuline College. His real purpose: to recruit some girls as house-to-house canvassers to do what the moribund Cleveland regular organization ought to be doing but isn't.

Catholic college girls alone, of course, can't win an election. Gilligan must convince the alienated white worker who has only contempt for his union bosses that liberal Jack Gilligan, like conservative George Wallace, is a tough independent who deserves their vote. It is a difficult chore that can be done only by Gilligan himself, without party or union help.

Just as Gilligan understands this, Vice President Humphrey does not. On his trip to Cleveland last month, a visit to a suburban synagogue for the Rosh Hashanah holiday was arranged for Humphrey. But Bert Porter, autocratic boss of Cleveland's crumbling organization, vetoed the visit because he had not arranged it. Humphrey aides meekly complied, and, because there was nothing else to do in Cleveland, the Vice President went to Toledo for the night--still riding his paper tiger.

Be Fair to ROTC

The article by Senator Marcus on the ROTC dilemma is somewhat interesting. He had a chance to present his value judgments, and I would like the opportunity to state a few of my own.

Mr. Marcus feels that the ideas of liberally-oriented officers will be lost once out of the ROTC program and actually in the military establishment. If the ROTC can produce liberally-oriented officers, should not our goal be to develop as many of these people as possible with the hope that they will be able to do something.

My senator then talks of the intellectual ability needed for the drill field. One may not need too much intelligence to do this. However, it is only part of the program. Junior and senior AFROTC cadets spend three hours in the classroom for each hour on the drill field. When was the last time Senator Marcus fairly evaluated one of these classes to see what goes on.

In his third point he asks, "does professional training of any sort deserve a place in a supposedly intellectual environment." Yet does not the university train teachers, lawyers and doctors, and are these people not professionals?

Robert M. Soffer

A Mistaken Idea

I have been following the discussion of R.O.T.C. credit very closely and it seems to me that most people on campus have an entirely mistaken idea of the military as a career -- and those taking upper-division R.O.T.C. intend to make it a career.

I come from an Air Force family, so I know the military fairly well. In the article "The Odd Couple," Douglas Packer claimed that the military concentrates on training to kill and destroying creativeness and intellectualism. This is completely false. Of course, all military personnel take combat training, but comparatively few actually ever use this training.

As for the claim that the military stifles intellectualism, this is totally wrong. On the contrary, the armed services do everything they can to encourage their members to broaden their education.

Obviously, many of those opposed to R.O.T.C. credit are allowing their feelings about the Vietnam War to influence their feelings about the military in general. Certainly, were there no war, or were it a case of attack (such as WW II), these people would not voice such loud objections.

Those who object to the war should express their opinions in other ways. They should not use the R.O.T.C. system as a scapegoat for all their objections. Those who object to "germ wafare" don't attack biochemistry. Those who object to the atom bomb don't attack physics. Why then should those objecting to the war attack R.O.T.C.?

COMMENT:

Peace- When? How?

It is indeed strange that this election campaign has seen the campaign's most pressing issue too often ignored and too often confused. Needless to say, that issue is peace in Vietnam.

It would be foolish to suggest that any of the three major candidates want to wage war in Southeast Asia just for the sake of waging war. For this and other obvious reasons, it is only in the interest of the American people that they know exactly what each candidate would do about Vietnam if he were President.

Richard Nixon made an excellent statement in his acceptance speech saying that never has this country wasted such manpower, money, and time as it has in this conflict. This is true, however, he has not gone any deeper in his speeches about how this country would gain peace in Vietnam under the Nixon administration if peace talks fail in Paris. It is very possible that Mr. Nixon is more afraid of endangering his comfortable margin in the national polls than the Paris peace talks as he has led many people to believe.

General Curtis LeMay is now Governor Wallace's running mate. It is now apparent that the war policy of this ticket will be that of this extremely hawkish general. Perhaps, Governor Wallace will speak only of domestic issues and General LeMay of foreign affairs during the rest of the campaign.

Vice-President Humphrey recently went on nation-wide television to explain to the nation his position on the war. Although it differed little from that of the Johnson administration, it has so far proven politically helpful. The Vice-President has shown he is willing to stand on his own feet even if they are next to President Johnson's.

On the other hand, his explanation of position has brought the angry accusation of Republican Vice-Presidential nominee Sprio Agnew of being "of aid and comfort to the enemy." What has been so comforting? He has only reaffirmed what has been this country's policy for negotiation. Although his statement was too conditional for many, it did at least make somewhat certain his position and did gain some sorely needed support.

Perhaps the Republicans could also gain some support by clarifying their position rather than continue to play upon both sides of the issue. Because Nixon and Agnew have only stated that Vietnam has been a mess created by the Democrats, they have been able to play upon both hawkish and dovish sentiments against the Democrats without explaining their solution for this great problem. Would they negotiate for an honorable settlement as their first act in office? Would they press for a military victory? The American people should have a crystal clear view of the Republican position on not only Vietnam but all important issues rather than vote for the Republican ticket only on the hope thay can improve present circumstances. It is the responsibility of Nixon and Agnew to make these issues considerably clearer than they are now.

VIETNAM COMMENTARY

Education Down-Graded by Saigon Government

(Editors Note: This is a special release containing a series of articles on Vietnam. They were written for CPS by D. Garth Porter, a political science teacher at Manchester College in North Manchester, Ind., currently studying at Cornell University on leave, and was a correspondent in Saigon for CPS during last summer.)

The Saigon government is still far from offering equality of opportunity to poor Vietnamese in the field of education.

Secondary education is the means of moving into positions of responsibility, prestige and power in the government, the military and other spheres, and it has traditionally been monopolized by a privileged economic class. One of the attractions of the Viet Cong movement has been that it has given poorer youths an opportunity for advancement which the legitimate social system denied them.

The numbers of primary and secondary school students in South Vietnam have risen steadily over the years. There are now almost five times more primary school students and more than six times more secondary school students than there were ten years ago. But whereas primary school education is now nearing the "saturation" point of about 85 percent of the primary school-age population, only about 15 to 20 percent of the secondary school age population is being educated.

Furthermore, the growth in secondary education has been mostly in private schools, which now account for two-thirds of all secondary school students. Public secondary schools have not grown proportionally faster than private schools. Only one village in five has any public secondary school, and most provinces have only one public "high school." Nine provinces have no high school at all. A peasant family can seldom afford to send its children to a private school, or even a "semi-public" school (which charges tuitions half those of private schools).

Moreover, very few of those who enter the first cycle of secondary school receive their baccalaureate, which is necessary for prestige employment. Of the students enrolled in secondary school in region IV last year, only two percent were in the final grade. Baccalaureates are in theory awarded only upon passing an examination, but according to one educational adviser with long experience in Vietnam, they are available to anyone with the money to buy them.

Saigon is not meeting the rising demand for secondary education. Last year, in the delta region, which contains half the population of South Vietnam, 41,413 students sat for entrance into "second cycle" of secondary school, which corresponds to high school in the U. S. educational system. Of these, only 9,285, or 22 percent of the total, were accepted.

There has been little change in this percentage over the past few years. In 1965 and 1966, 21 percent of those who sat for the examination were accepted. The actual number of students accepted into the secondary cycle last year was less than it was in 1965.

In some provinces, the ratio of those desiring secondary education to those accepted is even higher. In Tay Ninh province, according to an American teaching in the provincial high school, there were 4000 applying for the school, but less than 400 were accepted.

Most Americans in the field agree that the Ministry of Education has not really tried to provide as much secondary education as possible. An official source says there have been pressures on the Ministry of Education from the U. S. mission to make more of an effort in the area, but that Minister Nguyen Van Tho has not felt education is the best use of the government's resources.

Until now each province has had to submit plans for secondary school classroom construction to the central government, and the pace of construction has lagged. Last year in the Delta region 43 classrooms were programmed by the Ministry of Education, but none of them were even started.

This year, 77 classrooms have been planned, and so far 19 are either built or under construction. According to a U. S. official, the Ministry was reluctant to build that many classrooms, but was overruled by the "Superministry" for REvolutionary Development.

U. S. advisers in the field point out that any great growth in high school baccalaureates would mean tougher competition for middle- and upper-class young people for government and military positions. "They don't want the peasants in on the action," says one province education adviser.

Another U. S. official believes that the Saigon government has feared the growing number of well-educated youths without jobs. This fear the U. S. mission appears to have shared. In the "Area Handbook for South Vietnam" issued to U. S. personnel last year, it is noted that university graduates who cannot find jobs with the government are swelling the numbers of an "intellectual proletariat" which has been "causing increased concern to the government." This is contrasted to the situation in 1955, when the goverment "had no particular difficulty in placing the few hundred graduates of the University of Saigon."

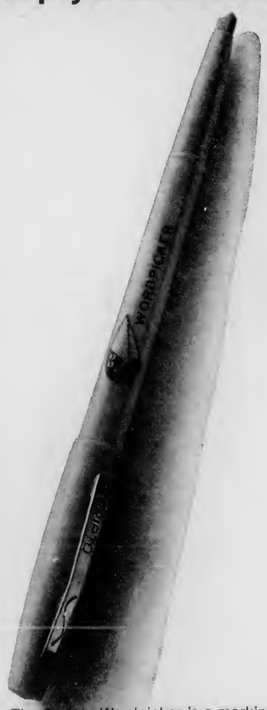
The same adviser notes, however, that there is another vested interest in holding off on secondary education expansion. About two-thirds of the 471,000 students in secondary schools are in private institutions, which are money-making propositions. Those educators who run them have little interest in free public education, since private school enrollments may drop as public school enrollments rise.

The reason cited by the Saigon goverment for the slowness of progressin secondary education is the shortage of teachers. Approximately 8,000 teachers would be required to insure "sustained economic and political growth."

The new military mobilization law may be a serious blow to secondary education. It has been promised that teachers called up will be returned to their schools after nine weeks of military training, upon the request of the school, but the actual effect of the mobilization will not be known for several more weeks. To many the new call-up represents a downgrading of secondary education.

Few province chiefs really fight for more educational facilities, either because they are afraid of Saigon or because they don't care.

Canadian Students Reject Tokenism



OTTAWA (CPS) --Two Canadian university student bodies have rejected tokenist attempts by administrations to restructure university government.

The University of Manitoba Students' Union refused to send seven student senators to the university's 90-man academic senate.

At Toronto, the student council declined to accept administration president Claude Bissel's offer of two seats on a commission to examine university government.

At Manitoba, UMSU set the following conditions to their acceptance of the seven seats:
- that the council determine the method of election of student senators;
- that the students be guaranteed seats on the board of governors;
- that senate and bord meetings be open to the public (two representatives of council walked out of senate Wednesday when a motion to open the meeting was tabled).

HUMPHREY AND WALLACE CAMPAIGN IN BOSTON

Humphrey Speaks to Students

Waiting for Wallace

Nightsticks Implemented

Wallace at Parkman Bandstand

Tuesday and Wednesday of last week were busy days in Boston for Police and newsmen.

A Vice-Presidential motorcade was traveling through the streets of Boston only a few hours after the largest security force ever assembled in the Bay State Capitol had dispersed the last remaining demonstrators who had been out in force on the Common during a rally for Third Party candidate George C. Wallace.

In this election year, visits of Presidential candidates are not taken lightly by anyone involved, the police, the press, the crowds, and least of all, the candidates themselves.

When George Wallace came to Boston last Tuesday, 20,000 persons, the majority of them hecklers, and a 700 man security force were waiting for him.

His speech was a patchwork quilt of his well known phrases and the crowd responded as crowds have responded for him all across the country. It has been said that Wallace thrives on the hecklers. Boston must have been a feast for him as it was very apparent that few in the crown had come to cheer the American Independent Party to victory.

"George Hitler, The Friendly Fascist; Are you for Wallace, Where's your sense, That Racist Nut, For President." There is something wrong when a man who could be President draws sentiments such as these. There is something wrong when a secret service man's face pales at the sound of a firecracker and policemen move towards their guns. There is something wrong when a man carrying a pro-Wallace placard is beaten by three youths and his sign burned. There is something wrong when several hundred policemen must put on riot helmets and carry three-foot nightsticks and there is something wrong when they have to use them.

Tuesday night on Boston Common melted into Wednesday morning at Logan airport as newsmen awaited the arrival of the Vice-President.

As the motorcade headed towards the Sheraton-Boston at the Prudential Center, Hubert Humphrey found that this was not the same Boston he had been in a few weeks before. His car was mobbed by hundreds of cheering students and he was greeted at the hotel by several hundred more who had come to pledge their support. All in sharp contrast to heckling he had received, along with Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, at a previous Boston rally.

The third major Presidential candidate, Richard M. Nixon, will be in Boston this Friday.

The police will be ready, the crowds will be out, and the press will be waiting as yet another White House aspirant brings his programs and policies to "the cradle of liberty" where people aren't taking that Boston-born word lightly this year.

Part 4 – What Can We Learn from Columbia

Report Says Violence Is No Answer to Problems

VIII

Our next five observations must be taken as a unit. Language requires stating them one at a time, but none can survive unless joined with the others.

A.

A university is essentially a free community of scholars dedicated to the pursuit of truth and knowledge solely through reason and civility.

A privately endowed university depends upon the experienced guidance of wise counselors and managers both inside and outside academic ranks, and also upon the financial and moral support of a large, organized body of alumni and friends.

But their vital contribution must never obscure the essential quality of the institution; the university is a community of scholars, both teachers and students. Any tendency to treat a university as business entreprise with faculty as employees and students as customers diminishes its vitality and communal cohesion.

B.

Resort to violence or physical harassment or obstruction is never an acceptable tactic for influencing decisions in a university. This principle does not require notions of property or legality to sustain it. It derives from three considerations.

First force, harassment, and physical obstruction contradict the essential postulate that the university is dedicated to the search for truth by reason and civility.

Second, resort to such physical coercion tends to set in motion an uncontrollable escalation of violence. This is the plainest lesson of the rising cycle of violence that began at Columbia with the Naval R.O.T.C. demonstration in 1965 and culminated in the brutality of April 30 and May 22. The sequence of steps was not inevitable but each was the readily predictable consequence of those that went before.

Third, the survival--literally the survival--of the free university depends upon the entire community's active rejection of disruptive demonstrations. Any sizable group, left to pursue such tactics, can destroy either the university by repeatedly disrupting its normal activities or the university's freedom by compelling the authorities to invoke overwhelming force in order that its activities may continue.

The only alternative is for the entire community to reject the tactics of physical disruption with such over-whelming moral disapproval as to make them self-defeating.

This vital decision rests with the liberal and reform-minded students. They can save or destroy the institution.

C.

The acceptability of the foregoing principle depends upon organization of the scholarly community in ways that produce both loyalty and the relief of grievances. The government of a university depends, even more than that of a political community, upon the consent of all the governed to accept decisions reached by its constitutional processes.

The consent of the dissenters depends partly upon their knowing that their views effectively entered into the process of consensus, even though they did not prevail. They must also be convinced that the opportunities for change are open and the goals and stance of the enterprise are sufficiently right for it to deserve their loyalty despite specific points of disagreement.

Administrative intractability and resistance to change contribute to the breakdown of law and order.

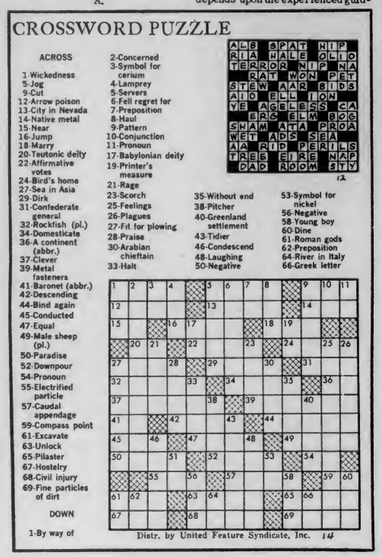
D.

The student body is a mature and essential part of the community of scholars. This principle has more validity today than ever before in history. It is felt more keenly by a wider number of students, perhaps because of the increasing democratization of human institutions.

As with all human activities, the wise division of functions and responsibilities must take into account the special skills or limitations of particular groups, as well as efficiency of operation.

The process of drawing students into more vital participation in the governance of the university is infinitely complex. It cannot be resolved by either abstractions or tables of organization. It does not mean that issues must be settled by referenda.

We are convinced, however, that ways must be found, beginning now, by which students can meaningfully influence the education afford them and other aspects of the university activities.



The activist supporters of reform who voiced the grievances pressed by the rebels included many of the natural leaders among students - both political and intellectual leaders. They were deeply hurt by statements treating them merely as disloyal trouble - makers aligned with a small band of rebels.

While their own releases, for reasons of student politics, contributed to the polarization of opinion by their lack of civility, we have not the slighest doubt that the survival of Columbia as a leading university depends upon finding ways of drawing this very large and constructive segment of the student body, which supported the strike, back into the stream of university life where it can share in the process of rebuilding.

With participation, students will surely acquire a more sophisticated understanding of the universities' difficulties and complexities and of the necessary functions of the faculty and administration, the alumni, and the governing body.

In the same process, the latter would come to an understanding they cannot otherwise acquire of the true needs and aspirations of students and values and shortcomings of current educational measures.

By Walt Stachura
STAFF REPORTER

Junior forward John Sahnas' late fourth period goal gave UConn a thrilling 2-1 soccer victory over UMass at varsity field Saturday. It was the first loss for the Redmen this year.

Sahnas took advantage of a UMass mixup to tally his game winner. A UConn player booted a high floating kick towards the Redman goal which UMass goaltender Steve Kramer tried to grab. However, it squirted out of his grasp when he collided with one of his defenseman and the ball rolled to Sahnas who booted the ball into wide open net.

Sahnas' goal came with a little less than five minutes to go in the game and killed a spirited second half UMass rally.

The Redmen had tied the game early in the third quarter when high scoring soph Duane Brown had scored his sixth goal of the season.

Brown's goal came after Kramer made a fine diving save at the corner of the net on a Robert's head. The Redmen brought the ball upfield with Larry DeFelice leading Brown perfectly. Duane broke by the defenseman and had half a net to shoot at when the UConn goalie came out to try and cut the angle.

The Redmen were fired up after Brown's goal and applied some heavy pressure in the UConn end but were unable to penetrate the strong UConn defense.

Early in the final quarter, Kramer made a leaping save of a Sahnas' indirect kick that would have caught the top crossbar except for Kramer's hand.

After this close miss, the Huskies began to press the Redmen for most of the final quarter with Sahnas goal finally breaking the tie.

UConn held a 1-0 first half lead and the Redmen were lucky to be only one goal down at halftime. The Huskies completely dominated the action in the opening half outshooting the Redmen, 14-5.

Kramer made some great saves in the first half to keep the Redmen in the ballgame. The lone UConn goal was scored by Mark Roberts at 17:20 of the first quarter as he headed in a loose ball over Kramer's shoulder after Steve juggled a hard shot by Sahnas.

After the game, UMass soccer coach Peter Broaca remarked that UConn had simply outplayed the Redmen. Broaca added, "they (UConn) continually beat us to the ball and controlled the action throughout the game."

Final statistics show the wide advantage held by the Huskies. They outshot the Redmen, 25-15, had one more corner kick, 7-6, while Kramer was forced to make 15 saves while UConn goalie John Smith made only 6 saves.

The loss was a costly one for UMass. It gave the Redmen a 1-1 record in Yankee Conference play dropping UMass a game behind undefeated Vermont. Overall, the Redmen are now 2-1 while UConn is 1-1-2 with a 1-1-1 record in the Conference.

UConn Outruns Harriers

STORRS, CONN.-Both the varsity and frosh cross country teams were given a harsh treatment when they met UConn Friday. The varsity was beaten 20-35 and the frosh, 22-42.

The undefeated varsity Huskies won their third straight meet, all on their new curvy, hilly course. For the third time this year John Vitale of UConn led the field of runners. His time of 23:32 was 9 seconds off his record. Second place in the meet went to Craig McColl of UConn.

Finishing first for UMass was soph Ron Wayne, whose time of 23:52 was good for third place in the meet. Wayne has been top man for UMass in the last two meets since Paul Hoss has been injured. Hoss was dressed for Friday's meet but Coach O'Brian decided to pull him out of the meet and not allow him to endanger his injured ankle on the hilly course.

Placing fifth overall and second for the Redmen was Leo Duart, who was timed in 24:11. The Huskies placed the last two point scorers Young and Flanagan after Duart.

Following the fifth Huskie and coming in before the sixth were seven Redmen harriers. Marc Gelinas was 8th, Charlie Lang 9th, and Larry Paulson 10th to complete the Redmen scorers. Following Paulson were Dave Evans 11th, Diego Gonzalez 12th, Bob Benshimol 13th, and Tom Derderian, running with only two days practice after coming out of the infirmary, 14th.

The frosh were also defeated by the UConn squad. The UConn team had the stronger third, fourth and fifth men that made the difference. UConn's Scott Carter won the race, setting a frosh record for the course. The Little Redmen then scored as Don Dunsky placed second, UConn grabbed third and Wayne Lucas of UMass was fourth. But the UConn 3, 4, and 5 men came acorss to give UConn the win. The Little Redmen's third man was Mike Cowles, fourth was Steve Whicher and fifth Don Brigham.

Frosh Gridsters Shutout B.U. 21-0

BY STEVE SHAMBAN
Staff Reporter

Freshman grid coach Dave Kelley's Little Redmen played dogcatcher Friday afternoon and impounded Boston University's frosh Terriers 21-0. UMass completely dominated this home game, outgaining BU on total offense 296 yards to 102.

The first quarter was a virtual standoff as neither side was able to pick up a first down. However, a short B.U. punt towards the end of the period set the stage for UMass' first touchdown.

Taking over at the Terrier 44, UMass picked up the initial first down on two runs for 14 yards and went on to score on an eight play drive capped by Lenny Fitz' three yard touchdown plunge.

The big play in the drive was an 18 yard pass from Marty Evans to John Hulecki at the nine yard line on a crucial third and seven situation. The extra point failed and UMass led 6-0.

BU was not to be put down this easily however, and came back to make their only two bona fide threats of the game, only to be thwarted by an alert Little Redmen defense.

Following the kickoff, BU drove from their own 29 to the UMass 13 on a deft combination of passes and runs and it appeared that the Terriers would move in for the score. But, on second and ten, cornerback Jim Kiley made a nice move to pick off Sam Hollo's pass in the end zone. UMass was able to hold the ball for only three plays, as the Terriers recovered a fumble at the 30 and were threatening to score once again.

B.U., hurt by penalties sandwiched around a first down, lost four yards in the next six plays. On a third and 26 situation and in the face of an awesome pass rush, Hollo, trying for the score, threw a wobbly, deflected pass which Bob Cabrelli intercepted and ran out to the twelve. For all intents and purposes the game was over as BU was not to come so close again.

UMass ran out the clock and took a 6-0 lead at halftime. For the half, UMass had the edge in first downs 4-3, while BU controlled the ball for 39 plays as compared to UMass' 36.

Kelley's charges iced the game in the third quarter with 15 points. Dennis Gagnon scored first with a 42 yard field goal. Following a short BU punt on the next series, UMass scored on a 53 yard bomb from Evans to speedster Walt O'Malley. The extra point attempt again failed.

The final touchdown came on a 58 yard burst by fullback Mike Sawyer. This run was a thing of beauty as Sawyer crunched off right tackle, cut outside, then inside, bowled over the last defender and was gone. Gagnon missed his third extra point of the day.

The fourth quarter was uneventful as the Little Redmen offense concentrated on ball control and the defense continually frustrated BU efforts as the score remained at 21-0.

Hull Signs For 100 G's

CHICAGO (AP) - Bobby Hull goal-making ace of the Chicago Black Hawks who last week announced his retirement from hockey because of a salary dispute, signed a contract and was to play against New York Sunday night.

Hull, who announced his retirement Thursday after failing to get a $100,000 contract for the 1968-69 season, huddled with General Manager Tommy Ivan prior to Sunday night's game and the announcement of his signing came 20 minutes before game time.

Hull, who holds the NHL goal-making record of 54 a season, also has scored 50 and 52 goals in his 11 year career.

Hull was not available for comment before the game and it was not known the type of contract he signed or for how much. His previous contract, which had expired, was for three years. Hull, 29, missed Friday night's season opening 4-3 victory over St. Louis.

Rugby Club Bows

This past Saturday the UMass Rugby Club traveled to Williams College in hope of gaining its first victory. Williams scored early in the game and was then halted after they had tallied 12 points.

UMass rallied in the second half with eight points scored on a try and its conversion and a three point penalty kick. Although UMass ended up losing 12-8 it demonstrated its ability to gather momentum and to run up a score while holding another scoreless.

UMass plays its first of three successive home games Saturday, October 19 on the UMass Rugby Field behind Alumni Stadium. The B team will start playing at 1 p.m. and the A team game will start at 2:30 p.m.

Grasso Scores Only Redman Touchdown
B.U. Ground Attack Proves Decisive

Boston University scored twice in the fourth quarter to beat UMass, 21-7 Saturday at Alumni Stadium. The loss was the Redmen's third straight and dropped their record back to a 1-3 mark.

The Terriers, coming into the game with a 2-1 chart, had scored only 13 points in their first three games. Against UMass, however, they were able to roll up over 300 yards rushing enroute to three touchdowns.

BU scored the first time it had its hands on the ball. Sophomore quarterback Peter Yetten moved the Terriers 56 yards in seven plays, the big one being a 26-yard jaunt by fullback John Rafalik, which gave the visitors a first-and goal from the UMass six. On third down Bob Calascibetta dove over from the one and Wayne Baldwin's conversion, the first of three, made it 7-0.

A few minutes later the Redmen offense set up in good field position, thanks to a Mike McArdle fumble recovery. Tim Adams hit Ed Sarno for a good gain on second down to move the ball into BU territory. It was UMass' first first down of the game, but it was a costly one, as Sarno suffered a severe ankle sprain.

The second quarter was strictly a defensive struggle: Boston University got off one good drive which went from their own 23 to the UMass 12, but the Redman defense led by Randy Robinson and Al Becker held fast on downs.

That was about all the excitement in a very dull first half for the 13,200 fans at Alumni Stadium.

After intermission the Redman offense had its chances. UMass' defense, collared the invaders, holding them without a first down for the entire third period. Four times Redman defenders turned the ball over to their teammates in good field position three times and three times the offense couldn't get a concentrated drive underways.

Adams passed and ran the ball into B.U. territory only to have Pat Hughes, a Terrier linebacker, stop the march with an interception.

Randy Robinson's fumble recovery then went down the drain as UMass fumbled the ball right back. John MacLean blocked a punt only to have the offense lose the ball on another fumble.

Finally, the home team got on the board at six seconds of the fourth quarter. Lovell's running and the passing of Adams to Bruce Cochrane and Jerry Grasso sparked the drive. A 14 yard pass, Adams to Grasso picked up the touchdown and Marty Scherall's extra point tied the game at seven-all.

REDMAN ON A TEAR-UMass linebacker Dennis Gray (56) breaks in to grab B.U. quarterback Peter Yetten (16), who was trying to throw.

This shook up B.U. and they started driving upfield after the ensuing kickoff. This march, featuring a 35 yard run by halfback Jerry Smith was stopped when Don Dotson and Bill Sroka broke through the Terrier line to block a 32 yard field goal attempt.

The visitors didn't give up, however. Holding UMass on downs they regained possession of the ball in good field position after Nick Warnock punt. Barry Pryor, Rafalko and Calascibetta split the running chores as BU moved to a first-and-goal. Pryor, on a beautiful eight yard run put the Terriers ahead by a touchdown.

A fumble deep in their own territory cost UMass any shot at getting back in the game. B.U. clinched the game after the fumble recovery, moving in from the Redman 24-yard line in six plays. Yetten came up with a smart fourth-and two call from the five, hitting Calascibetta on a play-action pass.

That was all the scoring for both teams in what proved to be a rather frustrating home game for the Redmen.

Net Matchups

As of October 10, all Singles matches in the Fall program of Intramural Tennis were completed. Final matches are to be conducted during the week of October 13 - October 19. Listless Redmen Outplayed Again

BY PETER PASCARELLI
Assistant Sports Editor

It was a long, dull afternoon at Alumni Stadium Saturday for UMass fans. They saw their favorites lose to Boston University for the first time since 1962. They also saw for the first time a Vic Fusia-coached team lose its third straight game.

B.U. fans, of which there were surprisingly many, weren't exactly lifted from their seats with excitement. Maybe, it was the marathon tailgate luncheons the Terrier fans drank before the game. More probably, however, it was the lifeless play of both sides.

Opposing teams don't have to worry about their offensive arsenal anymore when they play the Redmen. All that has to be done is to run off tackle, with a few sweeps thrown in to liven up proceedings. Don't pass too much either. Just, run, run, run.

B.U. used this offense to perfection. The Terriers ran a total of 76 plays. 70 of them were runs, good to the tune of 301 yards. B.U. had 16 first downs. 14 of them were by rushing. As you might remember, Delaware last week literally grounded the Redmen with 286 yards rushing.

Terrier coach Warren Schmakel, who beat Fusia for the first time, intended to pass more. But, he said, "We kept on using Pryor and Calascibetta on the sweeps and Rafalko up the middle and they never could stop us. So we didn't see any reason for passing."

B.U. had a little offense their first three games so that this week's performance must have seemed like an explosion. Schmakel said, "Our offense finally has began to jell. I'm really proud of the way this team has come around the past three weeks."

The B.U. coach thought that the loss of UMass defensive end Tom York hurt the Redmen. "He is tough to contend with," praised Schmakel, "and UMass suffers a great loss in not having him."

Schmakel also praised the UMass team, as having "fine personnel" and being a "very fine team." He added, "They will have to come back quickly since their conference race is still in the making."

Fusia UMass coach said this team gave a "pretty good" effort but again made too many mistakes. Fusia also was well aware the Terriers would run a lot.

"We knew they would come off tackle and we made the adjustments. But we were breaking our defenses and this was costly," defenses and this was costly."

Fusia said of his using quarterback Mike Marchev for the first time in a few spots, "we had a couple of things in store that we thought he could do."

The coach also revealed that he had Tom York on the sideline. However, Fusia decided against using him. "He might have been ready, said the coach," have been ready, " said the coach, "But he really hadn't worked too hard in practice due to his injury."

The Redmen really did not have any bright spots. There was Marchev's first varsity action. There was also Randy Robinson's usual excellent defensive job. Don Dotson and John MacLean both played well, each blocking a kick. Marty Scherallis also looked good in his return to action.

Offensively there wasn't much on the UMass side. They had the chances but really never could sustain any attack, outside of the one touchdown drive. Fumbles and interceptions were again the downfall.

As each week goes on, UMass looks more and more listless. Potentially this is a fine ball club. Every opposing coach has praised Every opposing coach has praised the personnel. The ability is there. The coaching is there. But it seems this Redman team either doesn't realize it or doesn't care to realize it.

With four conference games plus Holy Cross and Boston College left on the schedule they better start soon. Redman Rantings - The UMass band had a good sound, but the best show at halftime was an amorous couple in the empty corners of section 20... It was a typically rough B. U. game with several penalties...Noel Schablik saw his first action of the season in the final quarter...The Terriers got a break in the second quarter when quarterback Pete Yetten slipped while going pass and caught himself with his right hand, which held the ball. The referee didn't see it... Randy Robinson is probably in line for another Varsity M award with his two fumble recoversies...B.U. must have felt offended when they felt turf tearing under their feet... Rhode Island tuned up for next week's joust with the Redmen by crushing Vermont 52-10...Larry Caswell passed for 257 yards and three touchdowns to lead the Rams... New Hampshire also served notice that the Wildact sophmores have matured by routing Maine, 42-17... Boston College kept winning this week defeating Villanova 28-15... Holy Cross was upset by Colgate, 14-6...Connecticut traveled down south to North Carolina and got beat by Davidson 30-18... Buffalo used the sleeper play to down Delaware 29-17.

BY JOHN HICKEY
Staff Reporter

BOSTON-OVER 200 UMass Boston students opposed to the location of their school on Columbia Point received some satisfaction yesterday when the Trustees of the University voted unanimously to delay the final decision on the campus site until November 22.

Although student leaders have not abandoned hope that a corecity site will be chosen, they readily admit that they face an uphill fight. Before deciding to delay the permanent location of the campus, the Trustees voted to reject the North Station area as a possible campus site because of the shortage of available land. Joseph Healey, vice-chairman of the Board of Trustees, said that the Trustees see Columbia Point as the only viable proposal still before them. Columbia Point now remains as the only site under consideration.

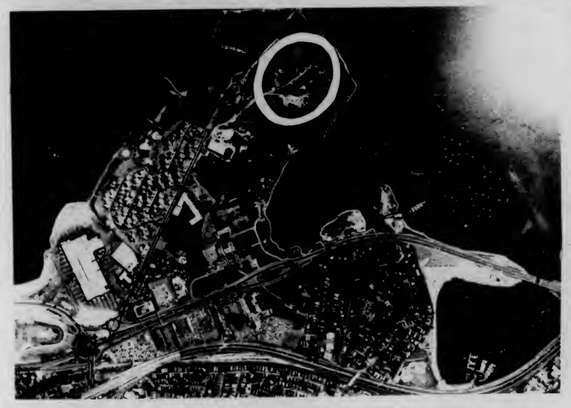
Before the meeting, which began an hour later than scheduled, Stephen Berkowitz, head of the Students' In-Town Site Committee, urged the students present not to "react violently" to whatever decision was made.

The small meeting room was filled long before the meeting began. Students from the university filled all available seats, lined the walls, and squatted on the floor around the tables and rostrum, while newsmen scrambled over them and broadcasting crews set up heavy lighting and sound equipment. By 2:45, fifteen minutes before the session began, police were barring anyone from entering the already overcrowded Venetian Room of Boston's Sheraton-Plaza Hotel.

In opening the meeting Joseph Healey thanked all the observers for their interest and asked their attention during the presentation. At the conclusion of the session he again thanked the students for their active show of concern and suggested that, if they were able to produce anything to aid the Trustees in their decision-making, they make their ideas known to the Board of going through the proper channels. He assured them that the Trustees had the same goal as the students, faculty, and administration, that of establishing a great urban university, and that they would be receptive to any suggestions towards that aim.

The presentation of the Columbia Point site plan was made by Hideo Sisaki, of Sasaki, Dawson, and Demay made the preliminary studies for locating the campus on the Point. After tracing the process of elimination which made the choice one between Watertown, Copley Square, or Columbia Point, Sisaki said that the Columbia Point site was chosen because of its greater prospective development.

Sisaki said that transportation is the major problem in the plan. Extension of the M3TA line at Columbia Avenue is impossible, for both financial and engineering reasons. Shuttle busses could not accomodate the volume of students. The proponents of the plan visualize a high-speed, high - capacity, light-weight "skybus" system. Kai Alexander of Sisaki's firm claimed that students could be transported from the Columbia Station to the campus in one to two minutes with the skybus.



Other difficulties in locating the campus at Columbia Point are soil conditions and the noise from air traffic to and from Logan Airport. Sisaki said that acoustical engineers have studied the situation and feel that with proper construction the noise would be no more bothersome than elsewhere in Boston.

Following Sisaki's presentation, Trustee John Hargis, chairman of the Building and Grounds Committee, made two recommendations, both of which were unanimously accepted by the Board. The first called dor the elimination of further consideration of the North Station site because of its size. The second was that Columbia Point be the only site under consideration, but that a final decision be put off until November 22, at the request of Chancellor Broderick of UMass Boston.

Although not mentioned in the meeting itself, another factor in the delay decision was the alternate plan for Columbia Point proposed by private developers. William Write, who helped to coordinate the efforts of the private developers, said that the Building and Grounds Committee expressed no reaction to the developers plan when it was presented earlier in the day. The chairman of the committee, John Halgis, said that the plan was new and had to be made available to the rest of the Trustees, but that it certainly appeared feasible and deserved consideration.

The mood of the meeting was not one of anger or of resignation. The students, having achieved their immediate goal of delaying a final decision, were, said Berkowitz, "pleased with the outcome" of the session. Berkowitz and the In-Town Site Committee plans a publicity drive to familiarize the people of the area with the advantages of a Park Square campus, in an attempt to martial large-scale support for location of the campus there.

Although the In-Town Site Committee has been in the vanguard of student opposition to the Columbia Point campus, other student factions were also present. A Committee for a Free University is concerned with the relationship between an urban university and the environment in which it exists. The Students for a Democratic Society saw the choice of Columbia Point as a threat to the present occupants of the area.

SDS Plans Strike At Election Time

BOULDER, COLO. AP - Members of the Students for a Democratic Society, saying they intend to "destroy the myth of American democracy," are planning a nationwide student strike and big city demonstrations coinciding with the Nov. 5 presidential election.

Officers of the radical organization meet today to work out details of the plan outlined in a four-page resolution adopted by the SDS' national council at a weekend conference on the University of Colorado campus.

The SDS' objective, said one officer, Tim McCarthy, "is not so much to disrupt the election, but to show the fraudulent nature of the election. We're going to destroy the myth of American democracy."

Besides calling for "a national strike of high school and college students on Nov. 4 and 5," and for "large militant SDA regional demonstrations in major cities," the resolution adopted Sunday:

-Declared "elections are a fraud because they fester the illusion that people have democratic power over the major institutions of society. In fact, jails, courts, schools, factories, the army and the election process itself are controlled by a ruling class."

-Demanded immediate withdrawal of U.S. troops from Vietnam. "We support the people's war in Vietnam," the resolution said. "We support people's liberation struggles throughout the world."

-Called for an end to "racism," adding: "We affirm the right of black people to defend and liberate themselves by any means necessary. We demand that the police be disarmed."

Bernardine Dohrn, one of SDS' three national secretaries, said there will be student demonstrations "in at least six, eight or ten" major cities as the presidential campaign draws to a close. She mentioned New York, Milwaukee, Boston, Chicago, Washington and Los Angeles, but said no firm sites had been selected.

Another resolution adopted by the conference, attended at times by upwards to 1,000 SDS members and nonmembers, promised stepped up efforts to organize SDS chapters in high schools.

Apollo TV Stars Make Debut Monday

Schirra, who refused to turn on the on-board television camera Saturday, could not resist the temptation Monday to flash signs to the folks back home. Moments after the first sign, the Navy captain showed a second message which read, "Keep those cards and letters coming in, folks."

The TV pictures from inside the Apollo 7 cabin showed Schirra on his commander's couch, and Air Force Maj. Donn F. Eisele standing in the center, still wearing the suit he wore into space for last Friday's launch at Cape Kennedy. Walter Cunningham, the third crewman, was seen only briefly on the left side of the screen.

The crew spent much of the seven-minute transmission grinning into the camera and laughing at comments from the ground. None of the three waved at the camera.

The television transmission, mission control said, "was shorter than anticipated," but the quality was called "amazing and much better than expected."

Graduate Student Senate Discusses ROTC Question

Two motions concerning investigation of the ROTC question on campus were defeated by close votes at the Graduate Student Senate meeting Monday night.

Sen. Wendell Cook moved for committee consideration of a resolution concerning "the academic place of the ROTC program on campus." The motion would have referred the study to the GSS academic affairs and procedural code committee.

Senate President Thomas Minogue explained that the study might have relevance for the representative body because some graduate students are enrolled in ROTC courses although no academic credit is available to these students.

The university administration and undergraduate students "might be looking for a clarification of one position," according to Minogue. The study could have led to a resolution as to whether the GSS "agrees or disagrees with the Student Senate," he added.

Lengthy floor debate raised issue concerning the scope of the proposed investigation. Discussion focused on determining the number of graduate students who participate in ROTC, the "academic relevance" of ROTC courses, the function of military training and whether GSS should become involved in the dispute.

The motion was amended on the recommendation of the Senate's Executive Committee that the study should be conducted by an ad hoc committee rather than by the academic affairs and procedural code committee. The standing committee would be too pressed by other business, Minogue explained.

When the question was called, the amended motion was defeated by a vote of 14 to 17.

Sen. Herbert Nichols introduced a new motion to have an ad hoc committee "investigate the relevance of academic credit for ROTC on campus." After further debate, the second motion was defeated by the same margin.

In other action, the GSS approved an appropriation of $200 to the Social Committee for a program which will include an event for graduate students being planned for the first of next month. Musical entertainment and refreshments will be offered, said Michael Rosen, committee chairman.

Vice-president David Yelton announced the election of senators from three additional departments, bringing GSS representation to over 70 percent of the graduate student body. The newest senators are Lois Giodano of speech, Klaus Jaeger of German and John Manson of agricultural engineering.

Under old business, Minogue reported that a total of seven dollars was received from the Diners' Club as its per capita payment for graduated students who were accepted as club members last year. The president said he felt that efforts were not sufficiently rewarded.

Also during the meeting, it was announced that the Student Union Governing Board has approved office space in the Union for GSS, which expects to share Rm. 216 beginning Monday. Minogue discussed the possibility of hiring a secretary to staff the office for approximately 10 hours a week.

Ethan Roberts, GSS representative on the SUG Board, suggested that the GSS push for an additional graduate student representative on the board to equal the undergraduate representation of two students.

N.Y. Public Schools Face Another Strike

NEW YORK AP - The New York public school system with its 1.1 million pupils was paralyzed anew Monday by a city-wide teachers' strike, the third in five weeks of the fall term.

The issue was the same that previously cost school children 11 days of classroom education -the demand by the AFL-CIO United Federation of Teachers for reinstatement of 80 ousted white members in the Negro and Puerto Rican Ocean Hill-Brownsville experimental school district in Brooklyn.

"This could be a long one," said President Albert Shanker as his predominantly white 55,000 member union launched its latest walkout, which violates state law and which was held illegal by the courts in its earlier, second stage.

But Rhody McCoy, deposed Negro administrator of the eight Ocean Hill schools, disagreed. He declared: "I don't think Mr. Shanker will be able to hold out this time."

The latest strike focused around the reopening of Ocean Hill's Junior High School 271, where Shanker said 16 of the ousted teachers have been subjected to "acts of terrorism and violence." The school was closed for two days last week.

The union chieftain insisted the Board of Education either keep JHS 271 closed, or remove "those people who threaten to kill others."

"The next step," Shanker said, "is to get the gangsters out of the school so the teachers can teach."

The Philadelphia Composers' Forum will perform here on Thursday in Bowker Auditorium. The program is sponsored by DVP.

Composer's Forum To Perform Here

The renowned PHILADELPHIA COMPOSERS' FORUM will highlight TWO WORLD PREMIERES during a single performance at the UMass Thursday, October 17 at 8 p.m.

The performance sponsored by the DISTINGUISHED VISITORS PROGRAM will be in Bowker Auditorium. Featured in the program will be two avant-garde world premieres plus two works that will be new to Amherst concerts.

The latter category includes Igor Stravinsky's "Renard" A Burlesque Tale, a chamber opera distilling Russian folklore elements, and first performed in 1916. Soloists for "Renard" will be David Dodds and Raymond Gibbs, tenors, and Richard Frisch and Franklin Summers, basses.

The premieres are Diane Thome's "Le Berceau de Miel" and Jacob Glick's "Octet - Four Hands." New to Amherst will be Pauline Oliveros' "Night Jar." Another piece of new music from Eastern Europe is also planned.

Jacob Glick, considered one of this country's great violists and mandolinists, has composed an aleatoric score for "Octet" in which the music is played "by chance." Glick will be soloist, playing the viola d'amore, in Miss Oliveros' "Night Jar."

Glich and Miss Oliveros have been involved with concerts at the Electric Circus, psychedelic emporium in New York, using lighting and other electronic media to accompany the live music.

A lecture-demonstration is scheduled with Mr. Glich for 3:30 p.m. on the same day.

Famed Chorale Coming to UM

The Robert Wagner Chorale will perform on Oct. 29, at 8:00 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium, sponsored by the Concert Association Program.

Described as "second to none in the world," the Chorale's 14 men and 14 women are headed by its celebrated leader and founder, Robert Wagner.

The Chorale's repetoire includes sacred and secular music of the Renaissance, liturgical masterpieces by Bach, and contemporary works.

Presentation of the Robert Wagner Chorale is purposed to fulfill the Concert Association's objective of bringing to this campus professional musicians "of fame and accomplishment."

The Concert Association, which is sponsored by the Fine Arts Council, schedules Phyllis Curtin, American soprano, on Nov. 12.

Dean Field, Guests, 'On the Line' Tonight

Dean Field will host Vice-Dean John Maki and Richard Story at 9:30 this evening over WMUA as guests on his "On the Line" program.

Vice-Dean Maki, of the College of Arts and Sciences, and Story, chairman of the Academic Affairs Committee and Education Editor of the MDC, will discuss the state of education generally, and curriculum change in particular on the hour program.

Deam Field's program is a regular bi-weekly feature on WMUA, and always attempts to get to the heart of matters of most concern to University students. The matter of general academic and curriculum reform is one which is of the most timely concern on this campus at present. Dean Field's guests, involved in much of the current campus action on educational matters, will answer listeners' questions on this topic, in an effort make as many people aware of what is now going on as possible.

Vice-Dean Maki, for example, will be able to speak in a general way on current work within CAS towards a possible reorganization of the College. Story will be informed on the state of student sentiment regarding academic matters, and of the efforts underway within his committee to write a new curriculum for the College of Arts and Sciences. Despite the backgrounds of the participants, the program's focus will not be restricted to CAS, but will look at the state of the entire University.

In discussing this evening's program, Dean Field said he saw no reason why it couldn't tell it like it really ought to be.

London Students Plant Bombs

LONDON AP - A secret students organization claimed Monday it planted two incendiary bombs that destroyed part of London's Imperial War Museum. The group threatened to attack other public buildings in its protest of the Vietnam war.

The huge dome of the museum exploded into flames late Sunday night, destroying a collection of records from two world wars. The museum is said to have the most extensive exhibition of modern military history in the world.

Big Brother, Janice For Homecoming '68

Big Brother is alive and well and coming to Homecoming '68 Friday night, with the pulsating power of their big amplifiers and Janis Joplin.

Part blues, part rock, a lot of soul, Peter Albin, one of the group, refers to their music as, "white, middle-class, old-time, beatnik music."

One of San Francisco's oldest groups, Big Brother and the Holding Company have only lately begun to receive "Big Time" contracts and concert tours. At the Newport Folk Festival, where the group played last July, a crowd of almost 18,000 demanded encores until nearly 1 a.m.

The four guys, Peter, Sam, James and Dave, originally got together just to enjoy themselves and to play for dancing, not to make money. At this time they were practically the Hell's Angels' private band. But, in the mid-sixties, Janis Joplin joined them and gave them a voice.

Janis, at 25, is the heart and soul of the group. She is also the most distinctive female performer to emerge from the rock movement. All really good singers put part of themselves into what they sing.

Janis puts her guts on the line and invites you to "take a little piece" of her heart. "I'm a victim of my insides," she says. She lives a lot more in one song than most people do in a lifetime.

Janis doesn't try to be little and pretty on stage. When she stomps and moves and screams, she feels and is what she sings.

A bottle of Southern Comfort before each performance puts her in the right mood.

If you miss Big Brother, you are really missing something. So, as Janis might say, "For two bucks a head, let's fill the joint!"

Tickets are on sale now at the Student Union Box Office. The concert is in the Cage at 10:00 p.m., Friday, October 25.

Richard Nixon Calls For Re-evaluation

KEY BISCAYNE, FLA. AP- Richard M. Nixon, describing the Democratic administration as unwilling and unable to give Latin America effective aid, called Monday for a "sweeping re-evaluation" of the Alliance for Progress.

As he prepared to resume active campaigning Tuesday with public rallies in three states, Nixon issued a statement outlining his ideas for revitalizing the seven-year-old alliance, which he said is foundering.

One proposal put forward by the Republican presidential candidate: completion within five years of the Pan-American Highway through the center of South America in order to open up the heartland of the continent.

Nixon said "the present administration has clearly shown its unwillingness and inability to give our neighbors the priority status and effective aid which they deserve."

The GOP nominee suggested establishment of a single agency to handle cooperative efforts to develop Latin America, saying responsibilities and functions currently are fragmented. "Our emphasis should be upon trade instead of aid," he said. "Proposals deserving full consideration include: a new inter-American fund to assist in the stabilization of prices of Latin American commodities; special financial assistance to those countries burdened with interest loads on their debts; and a system of tariff preferences for Latin American exports."

Sen. Kennedy Asks Senate To Probe Army Training

WASHINGTON AP-Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., told the Pentagon Monday he will ask for a Senate probe of charges that Army reserve units are being sent to combat in Vietnam before they receive adequate training.

In a letter to Secretary of Defense Clark M. Clifford, Kennedy said he is only partly satisfied with the Army's handling of allegations that many members of the 513th Maintenance Battalion, a Massachusetts reserve unit, received inadequate training-both as a unit and as individuals.

Referring to a letter from Secretary of the Army Stanley Resor, Kennedy said he was particularly unhappy that one of the unit's members, a sergeant who Kennedy said was a key figure in charges that certain of the units training records were falsified, has already been sent overseas as a member of an advance party.

"Can this matter be best investigated if one of the central figures has been sent to an overseas combat area, and cannot it be assumed that such action against this individual would adversely influence the entire unit's morale?" Kennedy asked Clifford.

Resor reported that all unit training has been brought up to date and that all but two of the men were found to be qualified in their military occupational speciality.

Resor said officials are still investigating charges that Army training records were falsified to indicate members of the unit had received certain periods of training to which they had not, in fact, been exposed.

"I can only conclude," Kennedy told Clifford, "that a substantial segment of this military unit would have been deployed to a combat area on schedule without having received the required training, had not this matter been raised."

"The larger question now is: could the same situation occur in another unit; is our military effort being affected by this training deficiency?" Kennedy asked.

A group of 92 reservists submitted affidavits to Kennedy alleging they received inadequate training for members of a military unit scheduled to be deployed to a combat zone.

Greeks Judiciary Newly Set Up

BY PAUL ANDERSON
Staff Reporter

Beginning this year, the Greek system will have the services of a judiciary apart from the functions of the Inter-fraternity Council. The purview of the new judiciary does not include any action which is sponsored or originally supported by a fraternity or a sorority or participated in by a majority of a fraternity or a sorority. The Inter-fraternity Council will retain jurisdiction in these cases.

Any person may make referrals to the new judiciary, but most referrals are expected to come from the Deans of Men and Women. If a Greek's offense is considered to reflect on the Greek system, the referral would be made to the IFC.

The judiciary is composed of seven persons, who reside in a fraternity or a sorority, no more than four of whom shall be of the same sex. "In no case shall the composition of the board exceed two members of a given fraternity or sorority."

The Greek judiciary extends the jurisdiction of the student Judicial System to the fraternities and sororities. In the past, cases were handled by individual house action or by the IFC.

Independents who commit offenses on Greek property also will go to the Greek judiciary. Appeals will be heard by the General Court.

Selections for the Greek Judiciary will take place tonight. Interested Greeks are urged to attend the selection session in the Middlesex Room at 7:00 p.m.

Dr. Brubacher Speaks Today

Dr. John S. Brubacher, noted authority on American education, will be delivering a paper on student power at 3 p.m. today in the Colonial Lounge of the Student Union.

Dr. Brubacher, in semi-retirement from the Center for the Study of Higher Education, University of Michigan, is an authority on the history and philosophy of education in this country. He is spending this fall living and working at Yale University. With his paper today, Brubacher will be inviting comment and reaction from invited faculty and student guests.

The Center for the Study of Higher Education is one of relatively few such organizations in the country, devoted to the investigation and analysis of all aspects of higher education. Dr. Brubacher has been associated with the Center for many years.

Dr. Brubacher, father of Assistant Dean of Students Paul Brubacher, will be on campus as the guest of the United Christian Foundation, inaugurating a new program of occasional lectures on higher education.

Racism in America

Frank Joyce, National Executive Director of People Against Racism, spoke in the Student Union Ballroom last night. He discussed what he believed to be the racist elements presenting the current political scene. He called the atmosphere of the country "racist and repressive" as he compared Chicago to Prague.

Joyce surprised many when he called the supporters and the opponents of the Columbia Point site for UM-Boston racists. Noting that mostly Blacks live in the Columbia Point area, Joyce said those who favor the site want to establish a relationship with the Black community similar to the Columbia University--Harlem relationship, where he said, certain people make money from the community. He explained that they want to segregate themselves from the Black community.

Lederle Claims Campus Riots Will Affect Public Support

UMASS - President John W. Lederle said at a national meeting of the American Council on Education last Thursday that campus disorders may affect future financial support of public higher education.

Speaking at the Denver meeting as a panel member on the financing of higher education, the UMass president said: "Future financial support, the willingness of private philanthropy and the taxpaying public, will depend on our conducting internal affairs in a business-like deliberative fashion, comporting with the dignity of a community of scholars interested in hearing all points of view."

Dr. Lederle explained that projections of America's future economic growth indicate that there will be ample per capita income to meet the projected needs of higher education and of competing public services as well. There can be no question of the public's ability to meet the needs of public higher education; what educators in that area must do is insure that there is a climate of willingness to meet those needs, he said.

According to Dr. Lederle: "We face at least two tasks in creating this climate of willingness to pay. First, we must devote more effort to enhancing educational productivity. Second, we must conduct our campuses as scholarly communities and deal vigorously with those who would go beyond the limits of academic freedom and prevent orderly deliberation."

Detailing educational productivity, the UMass president called for more research on learning theory and motivation, improvements in the teaching process and year-around campus use. "It is hard to justify in economic terms an educational plant remaining idle during the summer, " he noted.

Commenting on campus demonstrations, Dr. Lederle defended the university's traditional role in providing an environment "in which teachers and students may pursue the truth wherever it may lead and no matter how palatable to society."

"I am not suggesting that we get control of ourselves simply as a matter of good public relations. Rather I suggest that we do so inorder to carry on as a community of scholars meriting continued and expanding financial support," he concluded.

Orchestra and Ballet To Perform Tonight

Works by Stravinsky and Beethoven are on the program for the season-opening performance of the Smith-Amherst Orchestra tonight.

The performance will be given at 8 p.m. in John M. Green Hall on the Smith College campus. There will be no admission charge and the event is open to the public. Members of the orchestra are enrolled at either Smith or Amherst College.

Stravinsky's Pulcinella Ballet Suite after Pergolesi will be performed. The contemporary composer derived the score from fragments of music by Giovanni Battisa Pergolesi, an 18th century Italian composer who wrote music for church, opera house and drawing room. It has been said that Stravinsky, in this work, sought to produce a portrait of Pergolesi and his times.

The work of Beethoven will be that composer's Symphony No. 1 in C Major. Premiered in Vienna in 1800, it faintly echoes Hayden and Mozart. But it is considered a piece that essentially looks ahead of its times to romanticism.

William Wittig will be the conductor and Mrs. Rosalind deMille, the choreographer; both are members of the Smith faculty.

UMass Students Urged to Register For Future Red Cross Blood Drive

The annual UMass Student Blood Drive, sponsored by the Students For Ecumencial Action and the University Women in cooperation with the Hampshire County Red Cross, will be held at the Student Union, November 12, 13, 14.

Students are urged to register now for the drive, not only because blood is urgently needed, but because as donors they become members of the Hampshire County Red Cross Blood Insurance Program. Membership entitles the donor and his immediate family to any blood needed during the next 12 months anywhere in the United States.

Registration will begin Wednesday, October 16, in the Student Union Lobby and continue daily, 10 a.m. - 5 p.m. until October 25. Manning the registration table will be members of University Women, Newman Club, Protestant Students, Hillel, APO, GSS, and Pan-Hellenic. Evening registration areas in the three Southwest dining commons, dormitory lobbies, and the Newman Center will operate Oct. 21-25.

Anyone in normal health, weighing at least 110 pounds, and between the ages of 18 and 61, is eligible to give blood. PARENTAL PERMISSION is required for those under 21. PERMISSION CARDS WILL BE GIVEN TO STUDENTS UNDER 21 AT THE TIME OF REGISTRATION. IT WILL BE THE STUDENTS' RESPONSIBILITY TO OBTAIN PARENT'S SIGNATURE and mail the stamped, addressed card, or bring it with him to Donor Days.

Appointment reminders will be mailed out to students on November 2, 1968.

Ten Colleges May Go Coed

BRUNSWICK, Maine (AP)

Athern P. Daggett, acting president of Bowdoin College, said recently that Bowdoin and nine other Eastern colleges will present a proposal for an exchange of male and female students to the faculties and governing boards.

The women's colleges are Wheaton, Smith, Vassar, Mt. Holyoke and Connecticut College and the men's schools are Bowdoin, Amherst, Williams, Wesleyan and Dartmouth.

In the Student Union last Thursday the SDS held an open meeting for all prospective members.

Since this meeting was one of the first meetings, it was mostly dedicated to setting up a structure for the organization. Offices were decided upon, and people volunteered and were elected to fill the positions. Also, some general goals of the SDS here at UMass were discussed.

With approximately 100 attending, one of the pioneer SDS organizers, Steve Gaman, opened with a discussion of the proposed organizational structure which was open to revision at the wishes of a majority of the members. By concensus, it was decided that the SDS at UMass would have merely administrative offices with no specific power delegation. Those decided upon were: a secretary-treasurer, a communicator with National SDS, and a chairman.

Administrative personnel were elected for the semester. Janet Traverse, a freshman, was elected to the position of secretary-treasurer. The person elected to the position of communicator declined to be identified. The position of chairman is to be filled by a different volunteer member each week. A provision was also made for a voluntary publicity committee.

These positions and their associated duties differ somewhat from those decided upon in the first organizational meeting held during the first week of October. In a later interview, Gaman attributed these changes to the fact that there were new people at Thursday's meeting who had new ideas.

Throughout the meeting, one of the most frequently stated goals of SDS was to make the University community more aware and less apathetic.

Faculty to Debate Voting Choices

Tonight at 7 p.m. a faculty debate entitled "Political Debates Number One, will be held in the Hampshire Dining Commons in Southwest. The topic to be discussed is the desirability of voting for Hubert Humphry for president or casting a protest vote or no vote at all.

The contestants will be Mr. Guenter Levy of the Government Department and a partner who will take the affirmative position against Mr. Ronald A. Rubel of the Industrial Engineering Department and Dr. Milton Cantor of the History department who will argue the negative position.

The debate is jointly sponsored by the Southwest Area Programming Committee under the direction of Dr. John Hunt, Master and by CONCERN: Students for Participation Politics.

Dr. Hunt will moderate the debate in what is planned to be the first in a continuing series of open forums sponsored by the Southwest Area. The debate is open to the University.

No Nixon Rally

BOSTON AP-The Nixon campaign headquarters Monday called off a noontime rally which had been scheduled for Friday during a New England campaign tour by the Republican Presidential nominee, Richard M. Nixon.

Nixon is to take part in an hour long TV show beamed to the six New England states that night, and has other meetings scheduled with party leaders.

NDEA Loan Cuts Hits Students Hard

BY JOHN ZEH

WASHINGTON (CPS)--Colleges and universities requested $247 million for National Defense Education Act (NDEA) loans this year, but federal budget-makers would only let them have $190 million.

Financial aid officers at some schools approved students' requests based on the smaller figure, only to find out later that the final allocation would be only $186 million-nearly $5 million less than last year.

That's all Congress would approve, despite the earlier promise from the Office of Education.

The shortage of NDEA funds has resulted in some students' losing loans they thought they would have. Others found their loans cut when they returned to school this year. Financial aid programs elsewhere are being crimped.

At Vanderbilt University in Nashville, for example, the student aid office absorbed the general allocation cut by whacking off about ten percent from each loan going to about 1500 students.

"It's a very binding situation," says Vanderbilt's loan director Cannon Mayes. "The cut is causing us, students, and parents to do a good bit of scrambling." Mayes said because of the cut there would be no money available for NDEA loans next summer session. And, because money is being used for small university loan funds to partly make up for the cut, adverse effects might be felt next year.

The University of Kentucky probably will not be able to approve new applications for NDEA loans next semester, and it may not be able to meet all present commitments. Student aid director James E. Ingle says it depends on collections from loans due for repayment.

The Office of Education lets schools use a portion of money they collect on payable loans for new loans. That policy has kept the University of South Dakota from having to deny new NDEA loans this semester. Nearly $5,000 was cut from its original allocation, but aid director Doug Steckler avoided problems by "not making any promises I might not be able to keep."

Schools in 45 states were affected by the federal cut. California, Hawaii, Maryland, Texas, and Utah weren't hit because requests from schools in those states were under the limits set in the Office of Education's formula for assistance.

The director of student aid at the University of New Mexico, Charles Sheeman, said he expected it would be a "tough year" and alerted students that less NDEA money would be available. He relied on an "insured loan" program through private banks that the state just implemented.

In March, the Office of Education notified financial aid officers at the 1800 schools in the NDEA program that the tentative 1968-69 allocation would be $190 million. But Congress stalled on approving the legislation containing the appropriation. Finally last summer, a continuing resolution granting the $184 million was passed. In August, OE notified schools that the regular allocation would be that lower figure.

Will Hollingsworth, chief of the NDEA program management section at the Office of Education, says the cut is "so minor" that there is not "much impact." Apparently not many schools have had to cut off any students' entire NDEA loans. But the money being used to make up for the cut might have gone to others.

Under provisions of the National Defense Education Act, a student may borrow up to $1,000 each academic year to a maximum of $5,000. Graduate and professional students may borrow as much as $2,500 a year up to $10,000. The repayment period and interest do not begin until nine months after the student ends his studies. Interest is three percent on the unpaid balance, with repayment spread over 10 years.

The act's "forgiveness" provision allows cancellation of up to one-half the loan if the borrower becomes a full-time teacher at the rate of 10 percent for each year of service. Borrowers who teach handicapped children or in certain areas may qualify for further forgiveness.

Repayment is delayed if the student resumes study, or serves in the Armed Forces, VISTA, or the Peace Corps.

Eligibility is based primarily on need, with the college deciding the merits of individual cases. A student is asked to list this expected income for the semester with his costs. All or a portion of the deficit may then be granted.

Since the loan program was authorized in 1958, more than a million students have borrowed over $1 million.

In Any Case - Vote

In Senator Brooke's speech here on Sunday night, he advocated that Americans, particularly those in minorities who represent radical views in our society carry out their viewpoints by working within the existing political framework. This idea seems to have occurred already to many former supporters of Eugene McCarthy, the late Robert Kennedy, and Nelson Rockefeller as was demonstrated by the acceptance of Vice President Humphrey in Boston last week. This was in contrast to the hostile reception given to him, perhaps by many of the same students on September nineteenth.

Although Senator McCarthy has refused to endorse Vice President Humphrey for the Presidency, he has nevertheless endorsed Senator Edmund Muskie for the Vice Presivotes for President. Although Americans may vote reluctantly for one candidate or another, at least they will be voting for somebody, even if the choice is made with reluctance.

Americans who do not vote in this election only express the desire for a hiatus in the Presidency, which will not occur, even if the election is thrown into the House of Representatives. Although the President of this country is not elected strictly on the basis of the popular vote, our form of government is certainly better than that of many countries, even so-called democratic ones. Under the British form of government, for example, if a voter wants a certain person for Prime Minister, he must vote for a candidate of the same party in order to express his choice even if that candidate is not satisfactory to him.

Perhaps the candidates this year are not the greatest this nation has ever seen. Perhaps their stands on the issues offer the voter little to choose from. Nevertheless, not voting in the coming election will resolve nothing and will only reflect complete dissatisfaction in our present form of government.

Michael Darman

Louder Than Words

It seems that Nixon and his loyal Republican followers in the Congress would like to have the American voter believe the converse; that is, "Words speak louder than actions." For although their actions of the past week seem to be indicative of one trying to avoid open confrontation in a debate with Humphrey, Nixon insists that he is actually eager to discuss the issues with the Vice-President in a public debate. Those congressmen who were involved in the debate bill delaying tactics assert that their move was merely intended to pressure Democrats into action on congressional and election reform legislation that had been bottled up in the Rules Committee. It was merely good strategy to wait until the debate bill came up to push the reform issue. This supposedly had nothing to do with the concensus that Humphrey would be likely to benefit from any national debates.

As for Nixon's supposed eagerness to debate, it has more stipulations, more strings attached to it, than LBJ's supposed bombing halt of last March. And the list seems to be growing. A three-way debate is out, that would definitely be "an abortion" and damage the two party system. (Apparently Wallace's third party is still too insignificant to be seriously dealt with.) Avoiding the equal time provision by holding a town hall type debate between himself and Humphrey wouldn't be proper. Such a plan "isn't legal". The list goes on and on, but omits the one that is probably foremost in Nixon's mind. That is that the debate can't take place before November 6th. But other than these few minor stipulations, there is nothing that should keep Nixon from encountering Humphrey in a debate. Or so he says.

"Man, That Nixon Can Really Run"

INSIDE REPORT:

Nixon's Toughest Issue

BY ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

EN ROUTE WITH NIXON--Vice President Humphrey's demand that Richard Nixon face him in debate has now surpassed the Vietnam war and the racial crisis as the most difficult issue facing the smoothly efficient Nixon campaign, with no final Nixon response in sight.

To nail down his challenge, Humphrey fund-raisers have now received a pledge of cold cash to cover one-half the cost of a network debate if free time is unavailable.

With Nixon so far in front that the election seems to be in the bag, it is natural he would do everything to avoid the unknown pitfalls of a face-to-face confrontation. Front-runners never want to debate their opponent.

Thus, Nixon up to now has taken refuge behind section 315-B of the Communications Act. This prevents the TV networks from offering free time to any presidential contenders unless they offer it to all the minor candidates too.

Even if Congress does amend that law, as now seems probable following the extraordinary all-night session in the House this week, third party nominee George Wallace will in included, and Nixon says he will not be a party to giving Wallace exposure on nationwide television.

But that excuse is no longer valid, because of Humphrey's offer to raise one-half the approximately $250,000 to buy network time and finance the kind of debate Nixon could not turn down--a Humphrey-Nixon debate with Wallace excluded. In fact, Humphrey's eagerness for a Nixon debate may soon lead him to offer to finance the entire cost.

We can now report that, before Humphrey made his offer to pay a half share of the debate costs, Minneapolis grain man Dwayne Andreas, Humphrey's astute chief fund-raiser, had pledges in his pocket for $130,000 from two big contributors -- enough to cover Humphrey's share. The prospect of a dramatic confrontation and a chance that it might reverse Humphrey's fallen fortunes have loosened pursestrings that otherwise have stayed tightly shut to the Democratic presidential nominee.

Some Republican leaders have told us that Nixon's reluctance to accept the Humphrey challenge is already beginning to hurt him politically among rank-and-file Republican voters. They worry that, if Nixon continues to play coy in the face of Humphrey's harassment on the debate issue, Humphrey soon will charge him with cowardice and make the debate the central issue of the campaign.

At this writing, the inner Nixon strategy team has made no final decision on how to handle this. In fact, it had not even held a full-scale private strategy session on the issue.

But within the Nixon camp there is wide difference of opinion. Some advisers say privately that Nixon is now so confident of himself and the momentum of his campaign he might suddenly decide he wants a debate with Humphrey. But these same advisers worry that Humphrey might get under Nixon's skin and cause him to lash out in the old Nixon style.

Other advisers ridicule that prospect. Nixon, they say, has complete mastery over his emotions and would never let Humphrey get under his skin.

Thus, to debate or not to debate has become the first real threat in the Nixon camp and the first solid issue Humphrey has been able to develop.

VIETNAM COMMENTARY - II

Land Reform : Revolutionary Stronghold

(Editors Note: This is the second in a series of articles on Vietnam written for CPS by D. Garth Porter, a political science teacher at Manchester College in North Manchester, Ind., currently studying at Cornell University on leave. He was a correspondent in Saigon for CPS during last summer.)

A classic (Viet Cong) internal document analyzing the success of the National Liberation Front in one delta village some years ago observed, "The main interest of the farmer in 'XB' Village is land." The comment pointed to what is perhaps the single most important source of political support for the revolution against the Saigon government--one which the allies have not succeeded in neutralizing.

It was the Anti-French Viet Minh movement, driving landlords off the land and distributing it to the tenant farmers which first made substantial changes in the traditional land tenure system of Vietnam. When the old resistance fighters and new recruits rose against Diem, they promised to repeat the Viet Minh performance, and in most cases, they fulfilled the promise.

Land reform under the Viet (Cong) was carried out by local cadres without complicated guide lines or a burdensome administrative structure. The usual method was a village meeting at which both landless peasants and landowners (when they were not absentee owners) were assembled. Those who owned larger ricefields were asked to give part of their property to their poorer countrymen.

As might be expected, none of them refused. The landless would receive, in the case of the delta, where plots are quite small, anywhere from two to five cong, or one-half to one and a half acres. Those farmers whose holdings were so small that they had to rent land as well, also received enough to support their families. Land belonging to the government or its supporters was automatically distributed.

As it contemplates its return to areas controlled by the Front, the Saigon government has been faced with a dilemma of policy: should it try to placate the occupants of the land redistributed by the Viet Cong, admitting the legitimacy of the enemy's land reform, or should it risk their continued anger by restoring the original owner to his land?

Last year a formula was adopted which would reinstate the original owner on all his land if it did not exceed 3 or 5 hectares, depending on the land situation in that village, and allow the recipient of Viet Cong land to remain on one-third of the land if it exceeded 3 or 5 hectares (7 to 12 acres). The latter would have to make a rental contract with the landowner to continue cultivating it.

Thus, the government chose to reaffirm, in effect, the legitimacy of the old order and the illegitimacy of the changes made by the Viet Cong, who were accused of "confusing" the situation. Experience has confirmed that Saigon's formula was precisely what the Liberation Front needed to confirm the peasant's suspicion of the government.

Now the Americans are trying to get the regime to drop this unpopular policy and offer to sell the land to its current occupants. The hope that this more liberal policy would speed up pacification may be optimistic, since the peasant is still given no compelling reason to desire that the government regain control of the village.

The history of Saigon's land reform program is marked by a half-hearted and sometimes dubious commitment to agrarian justice. In large part this has been due to the inherent character of the regime, which has drawn its officials and its political support from that segment of the population least interested in change in land tenure.

Land reform under the Diem regime was ostensibly intended to safeguard the interests of the tenant farmer and to provide land to the tiller, but in fact it was the bare minimum in concessions to the rural poor--done only because the Eisenhower Administration insisted on some kind of action as a condition of increased U.S. aid.

The law limiting land rental rates to 25 percent of the crop represented in effect a return to the old system, only slightly modified. Although rental contracts were supposed to be registered with the government, there was really no protection for the peasant from the unscrupulous landlord. The provisions of the legal contract make less difference than the realities of power in determining how much the landlord will receive, and 35 to 50 percent of the crop is not an unusual rate.

Province and district officials are frequently landowners themselves, and even if they are not, they are happy to take a cut of the landowners' rent in return for taking him along on the annual harvest-time military operation in Liberation Front territory. Although landowners were required by a 1956 law to register all holdings exceeding 247 acres, it is clear that many large landowners evaded it by dividing up their estates among several children and that others didn't even bother to register. No one knows how much land is still owned illegally, but it is believed to amount to several hundred thousand acres.

Most of this land was ultimately sold to the cultivators, but only ten percent of the tenant farmers benefitted from the program. Now, it has been verified by U.S. officials in at least one province in the delta, Chuong Tien, that many landlords have taken back some of the land expropriated from the earlier.

Another 325 thousand acres of cultivable land was obtained by the Diem government though an agreement with the French in 1958. But instead of selling it to the squatters then working the land, it was decided in 1961 to rent it under a system of bidding which resulted in exploitation of poor farmers by middlemen. In landscarce Central Vietnam, according to an official Ministry of Agriculture document, these rentals often exceeded 50 percent of the crop.

According to the arrangement, Saigon was to receive 60 percent of the rentals, while the provincial government would keep 40 percent. The system lent itself well to the interests of province officials. It became a source of provincial income over which there was no check. Since some of the rent obviously could not be collected due to insecurity, no one knew how much rent was in fact collected. According to U.S. sources, Saigon has received only a "trickle" of rent money.

In 1965 Premier Ky announced the end of the rental system and offered to sell the land to the tiller in 12 yearly installments. But now, three and a half years later, only 13 percent of the fertile land available had been sold.

Over 70 percent of Vietnam's farmers are still either landless or must work someone's land to supplement their own small plots. Saigon's "moderate" land reform has not and affect the vast majority of them.

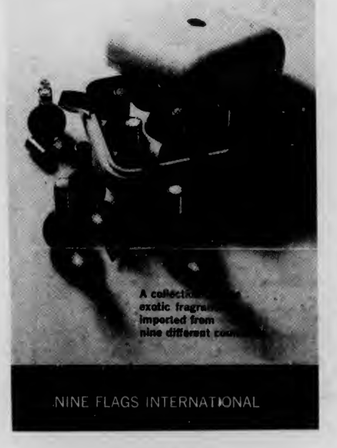
SAN FRANCISCO (CPS)--Military recruiters refused to come to San Francisco State College this week when they were asked to share space with antiwar groups.

The plan, thought up by placement director Vernon Wallace in the wake of several demonstrations against recruiters last year, called for a "military information day" at which both the military and war opponents would be allowed to make their case.

But the military refused. "We're not out to get into a debating society. We're out to recruit students," said one military spokesman. The recruiters may also have been influenced by the plan of about 150 students to dump the recruiters' tables into the street.



When the recruiters failed to show, about 500 students marched to the office of President Robert Smith to demand that he state his decision on Air Force ROTC within a week. Unlike his predecessor, John Summerskill, who was trapped in his office last year during a demonstration, Smith met the marchers halfway to his office and told them, amid jeers and boos, that ROTC would stay on the campus as long as a majority of students wanted it.

Smith also said he plans to review campus recruiting arrangements, which he said were "not too successful for many of those wishing to disseminate or receive information."

SGA Sub-committee Views Class Gov't.

A subcommittee of the Senate Committee on Student Government Affairs has been established to investigate the necessity of class government, Chairman Deverton C. Cochrane revealed last night in an interview with the Collegian.

The main purposes of the SGA Committee this year are threefold he said, listing subcommittees dealing with area government, class government and the Student Union Governing Board. The committee will also be dealing with "any other areas of student concern which might come under the jurisdiction of the Student Senate."

The subcommittee on area government will deal primarily with the entity of Southwest, a section which has opened a new field for area government. Cochrane prophecized a time when area governments "on their own" will legislate and act upon the less important matters which the Student Senate now handles.

"Continuing investigation into the idea of class government and the structure and philosophy of student government," Senator Cochrane added, "are constantly under scrutiny as they should be. Our campus tends to stagnate otherwise."

Campus Chest Plans

This year, as every year, the Sophomore Class will sponsor the campus-wide charity drive traditionally called Campus Chest. This year the class of 1971 has already initated plans for the 1968 campaign. Many innovations have been incorporated to bring the theme of Campus Chest to the University. Taking place at a new time this year, the drive will be held the first week of December, in conjunction with Sophomore Weekend. Planned for that weekend known as S.E.N.D.O.F.F. are two major concerts. The university will witness its first "Sophomore Week".

Working with bold plans, the Campus Chest Committee, under the direction of Richard Palumba, has set their sights on a record breaking $3,000 goal

Class president Joe Tabacco believes the success of the drive will come from an increased awareness among the university community.

He has no doubt that this goal will be exceeded, and it is his hope that each person in the University might share something of this worthwhile drive. The Class of 1971 Executive Council will soon be selecting a worthy recipient charity for the 1968 drive.

There are presently many jobs available on campus for students under the College Work Study Program. Eligibility for the College Work Study Program is based upon established financial need criteria. Any student interested in working on a part time basis should contact Mr. Siegrist in the Placement and Financial Aid Office, Room 237, Whitmore Building.

work of the SGA committee, is the class government. Is it a totally social organization? Or does it perform a vital function in student government? These questions Cochrane said are to be answered at the biennial Constitutional Convention, a meeting of the full Senate and the four class officers of each class. The subcommittee will investigate the question of abolition of class government and submit a report to the full committee before the convention. "At that time, the Senate may or may not move to amend the constitution," Senator Cochrane said. An amendment should abolish the function and existence of class government.

"But our work does not end there," concluded Cochrane. "Our duty is to continually investigate the philosophy and function of student government. The definition of student government should be in a constant state of flux."

Draft Protesters Sentenced Today

BOSTON (AP) - Federal Judge W. Arthur Garrity Jr. sentenced two young draft protesters to prison today for sloshing paint on Selective Service records.

The judge sentenced Miss Suzanne Williams, 19, of Leverett, to an indeterminate prison term and ordered her placed in the custody of the U.S. Attorney General.

Judge Garrity also sentenced Francis T. Femia, 20, of Williamson, W.Va., to one year in prison, to be served after completion of his current four-year term on a charge of failing to report for military service.

Miss Williams was convicted Oct. 2 by a U.S. District Court jury of willfully injuring government property and willfully attempting to obliterate and destroy records.

Court aides said Miss Williams' sentence could mean as much as four years in prison plus two years under supervision.

Miss Williams acted as her own attorney at her trial and told the jury she dumped paint on the records of Draft Board 20 at the Custom House "as an act of love."

Miss Williams sent letters to news media identifying herself as one of those involved in the record smearing. She was arrested in Northampton Sept. 11 while applying for a driver's license.

Curriculum Changes Demand Lacks Student Initiative

Are students really becoming more involved in that much-discussed and hitherto rarely - seen phenomenon, Curriculum Change? A memo from the Provost on August 26, urging departments to establish student - faculty advisory committees, seems to have provoked some thoughtful consideration on the part of most departments. The Provost's blessing has not only served as a catalyst for programs already functioning, but has been an administrative Jiminy Cricket for others notably recalcitrant.

As these committees painfully shape up, it is evident that neither God nor the Provost has sent a blueprint; but that yet there has been a gesture towards adaptation to diverse departmental needs. The committees are differing greatly in size. Some have segregated their graduate students (e.g. Physics and Psychology), which habit seems to mark an unfortunate trend towards specialization and priorities for high-numbered courses and low numbers of students.

Most departments have established a ratio of students to faculty, and often even quotas for each graduating class - but again there seems to be inadequate representation for those infamous survey courses. At least one department will appoint its student members by the balloting of upperclassmen; but in general the criterion for membership is not popularity but simply interest.

Each department has its own interpretation of the general problem of student involvement, and it is to be expected that there will be some inter- and more intra-departmental discussion of the vast possibilities of these "liaisons," hopefully stimulated by a disinterested stand by the Provost.

Some preliminary scouting by the Education staff of the MDC has unearthed a few names, reluctantly extracted from some of the larger departments of CAS. It is to be hoped that their progress reports to Whitmore will indicate a respectable amount of student participation. The following seem to be generally responsible for student - faculty liaison committees in their respective department.

*Note that the Mathematics department is the one which in the past has unerringly calculated its rate of student interest at six percent.

A Southwest U. S. Indian tribe which has repeatedly refused to be Christianized will be the topic of a lecture given at Smith College tonight.

Dr. Triloki Nath Pandey an Indian anthropologist, will consider the religion of the Zuni tribe. He will speak in Wright Hall at 8 p.m. tonight. The public is invited to attend.

The Zuni are a sedentary people who farm irrigated land. They are noted for their basketry, pottery, turquoise jewelry, weaving and ceremonial dances.

Dr. Pandey is one of the few scholars who has worked directly with tribal peoples in both Asia and the United States. He has done field work with the Navaho and Zuni Indians of the Southwest as well as with the Tharu, a tribal people in the north of India.

A member of the department of anthropology at the University of Pittsburgh, he received his B.A. and M.A. degrees from Lucknow University, India. While there, he studied under A. K. Saran who is now Ada Howe Kent Lecturer on the Smith faculty. In 1967, he received his Ph.D. in anthropology from the University of Chicago.

At Lucknow University, he did field work in the Tharu village, Semrahwa, and five other villages near Lucknow.

After graduation from Lucknow University he did field work with the Ramah Navaho and among the Zuni in New Mexico. He spent the academic year 1966-67 among the Zuni under a National Science Foundation grant.

Dr. Pandey's lexture is being sponsored by the Ada Howe Kent Fund which brings an Asian scholar in religion to the campus each year.

Dean Allen Describes Teacher-training Method

SUSAN SHERMAN
Education Staff

Dean Dwight Allen of the School of Education spoke recently, about a new method of student teaching which will eventually replace about half of current techniques.

"Micro teaching," as it is called, was developed about five years ago at Stanford University, with Dean Allen as one of its originators. Basically, it consists of a student teacher (trainee) teaching a real lesson to a small number of students (one to four), for a reduced period of time (five to twenty minutes). The lessons are video-taped.

Each lesson is followed up by a critique in which students and supervisors offer suggestions for improvement. A five minute videotape is also played back so that the trainee can watch his own behavior while teaching. After the critique the trainee has a chance to re-teach the lesson to new students.

Micro teaching simplifies the complexities of teaching by the isolation of specific aspects of teaching, by providing more appropriate experiences for the beginner, and by enhancing precise research and experimentation. Moreover, it opens new avenues for evaluating teacher training in that it provides good records of teaching performance at periodic intervals under standard conditions, and permits several judges to evaluate and re-evaluate a single performance.

Preliminary results showed that trainees in micro teaching made greater performance gains than trainees receiving traditional practice. Micro teaching evaluation also predicted beginning classroom performance in cooperation schools.

In a sentence that could apply to all the innovations at the School of Education, Dean Allen said, "We are only at the beginning of research stragedy in micro teaching. We've just scratched the surface."

Physics Conference To Start This Week

Amherst, Mass.---The Seventh Annual Eastern Theoretical Physics Conference will be held at the University of Massachusetts Oct. 18 and 19.

The Conference will bring together leading theoretical physicists in the United States for a series of 16 invited talks specifically aimed at the young theoretical physicists in the eastern part of the country. Attendance of 200 to 300 is expected.

According to Dr. LeRoy F. Cook, chairman of the program committee, the talks will be divided into five sessions. The first, devoted to many-body systems, will be chaired by Dr. Conyers Herring of Bell Telephone Laboratories and will have as speakers Dr. J. J. Hopfield of Princeton University, Dr. Mark Kac of Rockefeller University, Dr. P.C. Martin of Harvard University and Dr. P. Wolff of Bell Telephone Laboratories.

The second session, devoted to astrophysics and general relativity, will be chaired by Dr. M.A. Ruderman of New York University. Speakers for this session include Dr. A.G.W. Cameron of the Institute for Space Studies and Yeshiva University, Dr. Icko Iben of M.I.T., Dr. N.H. Baker of Columbia University and Dr. J.A. Wheeler of Princeton.

The third and fourth sessions on elementary particle theory will be co-chaired by Dr. M.L. Goldberger of Princeton and Dr. Abraham Pais of Rockefeller. Speakers include Dr. G.F. Chew of the University of California at Berkeley, Dr. F.E. Low of M.I.T., Dr. S.B. Treiman of Princeton, Dr. Steven Weinberg of M.I.T. and Berkeley and Dr. Lincoln Wolfenstein of Carnegie-Mellon University.

The fifth and final session on nuclear theory will honor the late Dr. M. E. Rose of the University of Virginia who organized the first of these important yearly conferences in 1962. It will be chaired by Dr. Eugen Merzbacher of the University of North Carolina and will have as speakers Dr. Ugo Fano of the University of Chicago, Dr. Henry Primakoff of the University of Pennsylvania and Dr. Joseph Weneser of Brookhaven National Laboratory.

The invited speakers and session chairmen, according to Dr. Robert L. Gluckstern, conference chairman and head of the UMass department of physics and astronomy, are all world-recognized authorities in their fields. Their visit to the UMass campus for the first time is real evidence of the development of the University toward major status as a state university, Dr. Gluckstern said.

Dean Richards Discusses Greeks

Assistant Dean of Men and Director of Fraternity Affairs, William Richards expressed his opinions, after the end of the first fraternity rush, on the lack of growth and spirit in the campus Greek System.

"The Greek System is a vital element within the academic community. The 18 fraternities and 10 sororities conduct social and service activities and offer an alternative to campus living in University residence halls."

"However," Dean Richards objects, "there is not a comparable increase of members and houses with the growth of the University in the past ten years. There are more students living in southwest then the total number of students claiming membership in fraternities and sororities! The ratio is approximately 5-1."

When asked about this apparent lack of growth in the Greek System, Dean Richards cites the many restrictions for establishing new houses and the size of present houses as the reason. Dean Richards is hopeful that the Fraternity-Sorority Park will alleviate this problem.

"There must be more universal appeal toward the physical appearance of most existing fraternities." Dean Richards notes that "a lack of spirit" among the fraternity brotherhood results in a "lack of beauty" in the houses. "Many fine, young Greek candidates are lost to the system merely because of their dissatisfaction toward fraternities' run-down appearance."

Fraternity-Sorority Park will begin construction around Homecoming. Dean Richards has great assurance that this will strenghthen the Greek system on campus. His final comments were, "although the Greeks are competitive, they should unite as a powerful system. It is hoped the Fraternity-Sorority Park will perpetuate this union."

Saying they feared a repeat of the scuffle, university officials agreed to SDS demands that cameras and tape recorders be barred from the meetings. Gov. John Love, saying he deplored the situation created on the campus by the SDS, called for the university to re-examine its policies toward such groups as SDS.

The SDS responded Sunday by adopting a motion to censure Love

Fusia Hopes to Eliminate Fundamental Mistakes

Rushing Defense Vulnerable, Offense Sporadically Effective

BY STEVE ROSS Sports Day Editor

"Our problem," said coach Vic Fusia, "is a combination of inexperience and men trying too hard." Fusia then went on to praise the B U eleven saying, "They didn't surprise us with anything. We knew it was coming. It was a simple question of them outexecuting us."

Five starters on the offensive line have either very limited or no experience. The only exceptions are tackle Mike Cooney and split-end Nick Warnock. In the backfield, the Redmen are experienced with the exception, of course, of Tim Adams. As Fusia put it, "Our kids are making mistakes, but it isn't a question of them being listless or nothustling, it's a matter of them not reacting quickly enough."

Fusia then went on to talk about the biggest problem that the Redmen have had lately, an ineffective rushing defense. He said, "Our defensive linemen were making a few fundamental errors. We correct one of them and then they make a different one. We had men lining up improperly and this made it very easy for B.U."

On the plus side for UMass was the fine play of offensive center Bob Sheehan. The giant center from West Roxbury, received a grade of 75 on his performance. Sheehan was injured in the final minutes and was replaced by Noel Schablik. Sheehan received a head injury and his status for the next game is a question mark.

This is the first time since 1959 that a UMass team has lost three straight. For Fusia it is a new experience because he never has been a head coach anywhere else. Fusia came to Amherst in 1961. His record is an admirable 48-19-1. The last time the Redmen were below .500 in October was in 1965 when they lost to Maine and Buffalo while only beating A.I.C. Landry, Morin and Myers managed to win the rest of that scheduled game. Since that year UMass compiled records of 6-3 and 7-2. Fusia hopes and expects that his team will return to the winning habit. Only time will tell if they can.

Hines and Matson Win Gold Medals

MEXICO CITY AP-Randy Matson, the mammoth shot put king from Pampa, Tex., and sprinter Jim Hines of Texas Southern won America's first gold medals as United States track and field strength asserted itself at the Olympic Games Monday.

Americans captured two other medals with George Woods of Los Angeles taking the silver in the shot put behind Matson and Charlie Green of Seattle finishing third for the bronze behind Hines in the 100-meter dash. Hines put on a spectacular finish and was timed in 9.9 seconds for the 100, shattering the Olympic record and tying the pending world mark.

Matson heaved the 16-pound ball 67 feet, 4 3/4 inches and won the shot by better than a foot over teammate Woods.

Woods, a 300-pounder, was second with a toss of 66 feet, 1/4 inch.

Trinity Bantams Face Soccer Team

BY WALT STACHURA Staff Reporter

After Saturday's disappointing 2-1 loss to UConn, the UMass soccer team hopes to bounce back against a powerful Trinity team today at varsity field. Starting time is 3.

UMass soccer coach Peter Broaca calls Trinity, "one of the best teams we will play this year." Broaca added, "the Bantams have a well balanced scoring attack with no real apparent weaknesses."

The balance of the Trinity scoring attack was apparent in their 8-1 drubbing of M.I.T. Eight different players scored in that convincing victory.

Trinity has almost their entire squad back from last year's 9-2 team. The Bantams played in the NCAA soccer tourney beating Army, 6-4, and losing to national runnerup LIU 3-1

In their 4-2-4 lineup, Roy McCord plays one of the linkmen positions while Abdillaha Hajal will play the other linkmen position.

The Redmen will be looking for revenge as the Bantams topped UMass last year, 3-1. In the long series between the two teams, Trinity has a wide edge, 21-8-1.

The Redmen will still be without the services of Marc Cantor.

If the Columbia Point sight for the new UMass Boston extension becomes a reality, then a distinct mark of the future may go along with it. A mini-bus shuttle service, enabling UMass students to reach a rapid transit station within three minutes, would be constructed.

The mini-buses are lightweight, electric powered coaches about half the length of a trolly car. Each one would carry twenty passengers. The system was presented to the UMass trustees on Monday.

As Visualized for Columbia Point, the vehicles would ride a mile-long, elevated structure at 35-40 miles an hour, on rubber tires, and be capable of complete automation.

The initial cost is estimated at $5-$6 million with annual operating costs of about $500,000.

Westinghouse has been experimenting with the new system on an elevated loop in a Pittsburgh suburb. The skybuses move on concrete road runners, supported by a steel superstructure.

"Skybus" would be much cheaper than an extension of present rapid transit facilities. It would fulfill UMass needs at Columbia Point and would also be more preferable than a shuttle bus service. Individual drivers would be required and peak hour congestion would only be compounded.

Although "Skybus" was the only specific system mentioned, a UMass official told the Globe "We're talking about a generic system; not a trademark.

"Anything that is new or possible is what we're interested in even though the opening of the school is probably 6-7 years away in its new location."

The viability of Hubert Humphrey as the Democratic candidate and the implications of the presidential campaign were the center of discussion in a debate last night between four UMass professors.

Professors Lewey and Harvard of the Government department asserted that Humphrey was a suitable candidate and that the problems in this country would not go away by changing the party in power.

Speaking on the other side were Professor Cantor of History department and Professor Rubel of the Engineering department. Cantor said that the major objection to Humphrey lies in the war, and both Cantor and Rubel agreed that Nixon might well win the election.

The debate was sponsored by Concern, a new student political organization on campus.

Professor Harvard opened the debate with a dissertation on the dilemna that faces the Democratic party in the areas of domestic crisis and social reform. The appeal of Humphrey, he said, lies in his past accomplishments and tasks, and those which he promises to perform.

Basing his line of argument on the Vietnam war, Professor Cantor said that the Johnson administration may have ruined the democratic processes by committing the United States to a military solution of the war.

From the early days of his political career Humphrey has sincerely believed in the threat of world communism, said Cantor. Beneath his smile and vigorous handshake and bubbling evangelism, Humphrey has not changed from the early days of his career, Cantor continued. What Hubert Humphrey supports, he said, became clear in Chicago and cannot be forgotten or forgiven. "The Democratic party deserves to lose," he said, for having lied to , cheated and degraded the American people.

Professor Lewey was the next to speak, saying that the major issue of this election should not be whether or not to vote, but who to vote for. Lewey began with an enumeration of the stands which Humphrey has taken on the issues of foreign, social reform and the

An Analysis

Power In Educ. Is Important Issue

By Richard W. Story
Education Editor

Dr. John S. Brubacher spoke here yesterday afternoon, discussing "the anatomy of power". The question of power is a very important one, he said, and no less so in an educational situation. This is becoming clearer each day in universities around the world — students internationally are concerned with the problems of the assignment and exercise of power.

His talk was an exercise in the clarification of issues and delineation of phenomenal.

Particular problems arise in the exercise of power against a person's will. The exercise of power, as by an agency carrying out a public's nearly unanimous wish, is generally an uncomplicated thing.

When power begins to be exercised in violation of some appreciable minority's will is when problesm arise. This condition of the exercise of power in opposition to some expressed wishes can be subdivided into a condition of still lawful power, as by a charged truant officer in the school system, or a second condition, as a despotic, and generally unlawful, power of a tyrant.

When power is exercised against significant wishes, a form of opposition is liable to arise. This opposition may take either the non-violent or violent forms. The non-violent tradition is an old one in this country-Thoreau s imprisonmetn on the poll tax issue is a case in point. The violent reaction to power, at least with any really sizable expression, is a newer phenomenon in American society and education. This form-the violent expression of opposition-is one of the greatest importance to higher education today. This much is clear. Beyond this point, the issues and going become muddier and harder to follow.

Violent opposition to power can now itself be subdivided, into that opposition which continues to agree with the socially prescribed goals and the avenues for their realization, and that second form of opposition based upon a rejection of the socially-prescribed goals-the "Establishment's" goals. Senate Treats Major Issues Tonight

Tonight's Senate meeting will see the consideration of several important bills, and the possible re-consideration of two other previous Senate actions.

Two Finance Committee recommendations make mention of the newly-reconstituted Campus Humor Magazine for the first time this session. One bill is a routine transfer of funds, while the seond appropriates $322. to cover advertising costs.

Another bill, sponsored by Senator Steve Walt (John Adams Lower) and Senate Treasurer Alan Gauthier, will, is passed, open up a dialogue on an official level regarding establishment of a system for emergency transportation to the infirmary. Included in the measure is an indictment of the campus police, who, according to Walt and Gauthier, "have not provided adequate assistance in this matter."

Vice President Frederick Hartwell had placed in the minutes last week a re-consideration of the so-called Kilmartin "grape-picker" bill. Hartwell stated he had done this in order to create a dialogue between Senators and their constituents as to whether this type of bill is legitimately considered by the Student Senate. Hartwell noted that he feared extension of the precedent to include political indorsements.

The second possible re-consideration is of the controversial ROTC bills, S 147 and 148 , which elimnated credit for all ROTC courses.

Supporters of the re-consideration motions will need a majority to first bring the motions to the floor, and another majority to reverse the previous actions of the Senate.

Pre-Swap Conference Votes On Issues For Debate

What started last night as a debate to decide between three possible topics for discussion at the SWAP Conference in November quickly turned into a general discussion of SWAP's purpose and power in the university structure.

Susan Tracy, chairman of the SWAP Committee, opened the Pre-Conference with an announcement of the annual SWAP Conference to be held this year at the Oak and Spruce Lodge in South Lee, Mass., on November 1-3.

A brief history of SWAP, the Student Workshop on Activities Problems was given along with the major changes it has accomplished-the abolishment of curfew for upper-class women and revision of the open house policy.

Three suggested topics for discussion at the SWAP Conference, thought to be current problems of the academic year, were proposed for debate: academics, the student voice in the decision-making processes of the University and the University in society.

The proposed debate turned into a general discussion where questions were raised as to what SWAP was trying to accomplish at its convention. The chairman hoped that this year more of the ideas and suggestions raised at the conference would be carried out by the formation of committees.

Several faculty members expressed their views as to what SWAP's function is, and should be, in the University. Among them, Dr. Stanfield, of the department of sociology, showed how the organization's growth, from originally being a group of campus leaders banding together to learn the "mechanics" of their positions to that of an organization representing various groups of faculty and students who are able to meet on an equal basis to discuss major issues on campus. He stated that this growth represented SWAP's continually changing image and purpose in the University; it is growing with it.

Professor Barber, of the Sociology department, suggested that the group's topics at the Conference be restricted to those of deep interest to the students and that they be something so limited in scope that actual changes could be made during the academic year.

The general feeling of the faculty members present was that the students ought to decide the topic for discussion themselves since they would be the ones most affected by any changes made.

At the suggestion of the secretary of the Faculty Senate, the proposed topics were listed to be voted on separately, with the top three to be taken for discussion at the Conference. The seven possible topics were 1) changing to a twelve point, rather than a four point, grading system, 2) the responsibility of the University in society, 3) who are the student voices on campus, 4) the relevance of the curriculum, 5) student awareness, 6) a multiple degree program, and 7) academics, including the twelve point grading system, change in the physical education requirement, and changes in the pass-fail system.

The top three voted, 1) the relevance of the curriculum, 2) the three point academics topic, and, 3) the question of who are the student voices on campus.

An agenda using these three topics will be drawn up by SWAP Committee for the Conference, and published at a later date in the Collegian.

this last form, we seem to come closest to the variety of violent opposition characterizing much of contemporary campus dissent.

Definitions of power itself, and of the state of its legitimate exercise, are partially-lacking and imprecise. Dr. Brubacher was able to offer no clear and final light on the matter. Questions of the right to power and its exercise are thorny. Violence, as a power of its own, practiced in opposition to the exercise of other power, does, clearly, have a strong tradition in America. H. Rap Brown calls the tradition of violence "as American as apple pie." This may well be true. Some contemporary violence professes to be aimed at bringing about a state of participatory democracy, in which the varieties of power are shared. John Dewey thought of a good society as one which maximizes shared power. Shared power seems to be what the whole of the "student power" movement is about today.

ROTC cadets are not being trained in riot control tactics, say spokesmen of both the Army and Air Force detachments on this campus. Asked by the MDC to comment on rumors that this was being done, spokesmen for both service units replied flatly and eephatically in the negative.

The rumor reached this campus through a query from the College Press Service, which asked local editors to check with military units on their campuses. The feeling had been that the ROTC units were being trained for possible use in quelling any campus disturbances which might arise. The Pentagon had refused to comment on the matter when asked by the CPS, and this prompted them to put the question to their subscribing papers.

An officer at Dickinson Hall, speaking for the Army ROTC units said "Negative, negative, negative" to the question on riot training. An Air Force spokesman said that it would be a most inappropriate thing to do. Neither service is currently doing such training, and neither was aware of it having been ordered

Apollo Working So Well That Moon Trip Is Plausible

One Engineer Says Performance So Far Is 'Terrific'

SPACE CENTER, HOUSTON (AP) - With all the hoop-la over the daily television shows from space, the public may have lost focus on the main goal of Apollo 7, which is to qualify the ship for the moon.

The fact is that such mundane-sounding things as radiators, radars and control rockets are working so well that it's looking more and more like Apollo can transport men to the moon and back.

As Navy Capt. Walter M Schirra Jr., Air Force Maj. Donn F. Eisele and civilian astronaut Walter Cunningham near Wednesday's half-way point of the planned 11-day journey, ground controllers report Apollo 7 has achieved 75 per cent of the major objectives needed to qualify it for a lunar journey.

The primary goals Apollo 7 still must demonstrate are long duration flight and the critical re-entry and recovery techniques.

The initial moon landing flight will last eight days, with seven days for the round trip, interrupted by a one-day stay by two of the three Apollo astronauts on the lunar surface.

The engine that will steer the astronauts to the moon, kick it into lunar orbit and then out again has performed flawlessly in three test firings on the Apollo 7 mission.

Throughout the first four days of the Apollo 7 flight, the radiators, life support, electrical and other systems have performed almost flawlessly with only a few minor problems reported.

John Healey, a leading spacecraft engineer, said of the performance to date:

"I can put it in one word: terrific."

Registry Publishes New License Manual

Registrar Richard E. McLaughlin today announced publication of new drivers' license-manuals -- the first significant change in format of the Registry publication in more than half a century.

McLaughlin said that today's publications represent the culmination of more than three years' research and preparation by the Registry staff.

The new manuals are approximately 6 x 8", boldly printed with generous white space and profusely illustrated with diagrams and pictures.

Vietnam war. He attempted to show that Humphrey and Nixon differed substantially in these issues, thereby making a choice between the two candidates plausible.

"It seems that Nixon will win," said Professor Rubel, but there is not much of a choice between Nixon, Humphrey and Wallace. The only candidate, he said, who seems to understand the people and appeal to them is Muskie. McCarthy, said Rubel, gave the electorate a choice in a candidate.

VIETNAM COMMENTARY - III

Governments Use Refugees For Own Purposes

SAIGON (CPS) --The tide of refugees in Vietnam has slowed from its peak in 1967, but many thousands of Vietnamese are leaving their homes each month, either forcibly removed or wishing to avoid ground fighting, airstrikes or artillery.

In Quang Ngai province, for example, refugees have been generated this year at a rate of about 500 each month, with the total number in the province now exceeding 192,000. In Thua Thien province, in which the city of Hue is located, U. S. forces destroyed hamlet after hamlet during the summer in their pursuit of North Vietnamese troops, creating fifteen thousand refugees during the month of July alone.

In some cases, Americans are now trying to hold back the Vietnamese refugee tide. In Binh Duong province, the people from a hamlet near War Zone D were once forcibly removed because they were letting the Viet Cong use it as a rest area with no opposition from PF outpost. Now the Fifth AIRVN division commander wants to move another hamlet for similar reasons, and U.S. advisers are arguing against it.

It is the official line that the U.S. does not deliberately "create refugees," although some province advisers use the term in describing U.S. policy through 1967. Such a policy was undoubtedly implicit rather than explicit, and it developed not by any high-level plan but as a result of the decisions of individual field commanders. The long-run advantages of creating refugees were realized only after the flood of refugees had begun.

Throughout 1965 U.S. military commanders planned operations which they knew would result in thousands of refugees, but would not notify Vietnamese provincial officials for security reasons. As a result assistance to the refugees was haphazard and inadequate.

The Saigon government insisted on labelling the victims of these operations "refugees from communism." But according to an official in the Refugee Office of CORDS (Civil Operations and Revolutionary Development Support), the attitude of many Vietnamese officials in the provinces has always been unsympathetic to the refugees.

In the first place, they were looked upon as liabilities, diverging time and energy from other tasks. That effect gave rise to the theory--shared by some Americans as well--that the Viet Cong were trying to break down the government administration and logistics system and infiltrate subversive agents, by sending multitudes of refugees.

Others argued that the refugees were Viet Cong anyway, according to one U.S. refugee official, since they came from Viet Cong-controlled areas. These Vietnamese officials argued that they should not receive any government aid; confronted with thousands of refugees from a U.S. military operation, a Province Chief would say, "Help these VC? Forget it. Let them starve."

Officials who had little use for the refugees to begin with thought little of "raking off" commodities intended for refugees. An official survey of refugees in the northern-most region tells how a district chief in Quang Nam had padded the books, " delayed official registration and meanwhile stolen many of the refugee commodities. One International Voluntary Services refugee worker says U.S. officials assume 10 percent of the commodities and money provided by USAID for refugees falls into the pockets of government officials.

In some urban areas, where refugees also distrubed the local political balance by providing potential mobs for Buddhist or Catholic demonstrations, province authorities have refused to aid them, hoping they would return to the countryside. There were even cases of officials sabotaging the water supply of refugee camps to discourage them from remaining there.

It was not until December 1965, that high officials in the Defense Department and the military command began to think of refugees in a new light. For the first time they expressed interest in them as positive assets in the pacification program.

The results of studies done by the RAND Corporation made it clear that guerrillas were being hurt by the reduction in manpower and food production in areas under their control. Military men began to look at refugees as an additional source of manpower for the army, even though only a small percentage of those who became refugees were of draft age.

From early 1966 on, USAID policy papers on refugees began to emphasize the benefits to be derived from the rise in refugees. The Chief of the Refugee Office even wrote a magazine article in January 1966, arguing that the Saigon government could develop a "badly needed sense of nationhood" if it could gain the respect of the refugees. This theme is still found in official situation reports.

Throughout 1966, therefore, restrictions on military authorities in generating refugees were virtually nonexistent; they had no responsibility to take care of the victims of their operation. But by late 1966, according to the USAID refugee official, U.S. civilians were sending regular complaints to Saigon about the situation.

It was not until late 1967 that an annex was attached to the directive to military commanders making them responsible for providing care for refugees in their operations. This policy was underlined by a letter written by General Abrams in July and sent to all field commanders. Far more important in stemming the tide of refugees have been three factors: the movement of large-scale military operations into less populated areas; the lack of government resources to handle the refugees; and bad publicity in U.S. newspapers.

The South Vietnamese government has never quite been equal to the task of providing for its refugee population, and, at its worst, the refugee problem is one of starvation. Last October, the Vietnamese Refugee Chief said publicly that in some refugee camps in I Corps, there was such a serious food shortage that starvation threatened. When refugees could not find food, they simply escaped from the camp, often returning to Viet Cong-controlled territory. According to a U.S. Refugee official, most of the refugees who go back to the Viet Cong do so for economic reasons. "They weigh the risk in going back to a free bombing zone," he says, "and they accept it."

Most refugees do not face the problem of starvation, but they continue to face serious economic problems as well as social and psychological ones. Although some refugee sites and resettlement villages are located near American bases or cities, thus providing employment and higher wages, many others have high rates of unemployment. A survey of refugees in Phy Yen province last year found one-third of household heads unemployed; another study of camps in two Central Vietnamese provinces indicated that close to two-thirds were unemployed.

Since most refugee sites are located on the worst land, farming is difficult if not impossible, and in the northern region, where most refugees have been generated, farmers are faced with what the U.S. Office of Refugees has called "an acute shortage of useable land" for refugees to farm temporarily.

The jobs available to refugees are almost entirely in unskilled labor, and they are competing with native inhabitants of cities, thus driving down the wages for everyone. In one Central Vietnamese village, for example, the wage for transplanting rice fell from 30 piastres to 15 piastres after a large influx of refugees.

An IVS refugee worker, who assists at four camps in a delta province, says there are people without hope of improving their lot in the camps. He has given up hope of stimulating self-help after several projects have failed because of lack of enthusiasm on the part of the refugees. When he returned after the Tet holiday earlier this year he found one camp, which had been the poorest of the four, completely empty.

While the refugees do not talk politics very often, he says he believes most of them lean more toward the NLF than toward the government, in part because U.S. airstrikes and artillery made them refugees.

State Support of Education Handicaps Nation's Schools

WASHINGTON (CPS)--The University of Montana had to cancel implementation of an honors program. Colorado State could hire less than half of the additional professors it needed. The University of Massachusetts shelved plans for educational television. Enrollment projections at Michigan have been revised downward.

Why?

Inadequate state support to higher education is why, according to the National Association of State Universities and Land Grant Colleges.

A survey conducted a NASULGC by Dr. M. M. Chambers of Indiana University reports that state aid is up 43 percent over 1967, but not up enough to meet rising costs and demands.

Since 1960, state assistance has risen 223 percent to the present $5 billion level. The figures are deceptive, the report says, because at the same time state aid has steadily declined as a percentage of total income for many public institutions.

State legislatures have cut budget requests, forcing postponement of expansion, delayed improvements, curtailed enrollments, and higher tuition and causing "dangerous threats to quality and educational opportunity."

A day of reckoning is rapidly approaching when it will be harder and harder to catch up and compensate for years of reduction, postponement, and, in some cases, neglect," Edward M. Crawford, director of NASULGC's Office of Institutional Research, warned.

Expansion, inflation, and salaries are the areas that account for growing university budget requests.

Pennsylvania, Georgia and Ohio led the states in percentage of increased support compared to appropriations of two years ago. Alabama, Louisiana, Michigan, and New Mexico are at the bottom of that list.

B.U. President Defends University Freedom

ED NOTE: The following speech was delivered recently by Arland F. Christ-Janer, president of Boston University to students assembled in Marsh Chapel. In the speech he discusses the raison d'etre for a University and the role of the University President.)

In the past ten days a number of the members of the Boston University community expressed, as a matter of conscience, their protest of a war which sheds a dreadful shadow upon the world. I am persuaded that Dean Walter Mueller, Dean Robert Hamill, and Dean Staton Curtis and other officers as well, did their utmost to maintain the welfare of all those concerned with the symbolic sanctuary in Marsh Chapel. Those in the Chapel itself, in acting in accordance with their consciences, appeared to be expressing what so many young people understandably feel about the war in Viet Nam and the draft.

Throughout the event the University acknowledged its obligation and its responsibility to observe the laws of the land. At the same time, without itself engaging in civil disobedience, Boston University maintained the principles of freedom of assembly and freedom of speech. The University respected the right of peaceful protest.

In this same manner, the men and women in the Chapel respected the authority of the arresting officers who were acting in the performance of their duty.

As one views the event in its entirety, it may properly be noted that in these days when across our country citizens are engaged in debate and in a search for a solution to a conflict, the issues of which have become compoundedly obscured, there were those in our community who, through their response to their consciences, made a point, not without its blemishes, but a point.

What is to come of it? At best, the event will elicit from the participants and the rest of the University community a renewed dedication to the search for means by which mankind may resolve its problems without resort to physical or ideological violence; at its worst, it will be used as a source of authority to exercise power, which in turn will deny the freedom of others.

Again there is an assembly, Dr. Everett Walters, Vice President for Academic Affairs, has responded to the inquiry concerning the present status of ROTC on our campus.

It has been demanded of me that as President I declare the position of the entire Boston University community specifically with respect to the engagement of the United States in Viet Nam. It is in regard to this issue that I have come to express my opinion and to warn of the dangers of such a course.

The fundamental spirit and meaning of Boston University, indeed of any educational institution, is the free interchange of ideas and of scholarly inquiry. The role of the President is to maintain and protect that freedom in the University.

Regarding those matters which lie outside of the educational sphere, I have consistently refused to enunciate the position or the attitude of the University, which is comprised of tens of thousands of faculty, students, staff and alumni. It is not the function of the President to prejudice an issue by committing the many individuals within the University and therefore the University itself to a particular view or specific political stance. The "Boston University position" on matters not within the academic or educational function is represented through individuals, their beliefs and their actions.

The University will therefore be viewed as diverse in its postures. Precisely for this reason no one individual, be he student or President, should commit the entire University community to a particular or single viewpoint. By this same logic, I reserve my own individual right to hold personal views without having to fear that someone will usurp my freedom by pledging me to an announced disposition.

If the University closes an issue and commits itself to a bias, its environmental conditions become restrictive and, accordingly, there is a lesser degree of freedom for individual members of the educational community. The role of the chief executive officer is to make certain that at all times there is an atmosphere and an attitude of open inquiry for all points of view. These essential conditions are to be highly prized and cherished for it is only in such an environment that the University may truly exist and flourish; where individuals may pursue intellectual inquiry without imposed ideological restraints.

In concluding my remarks to you, I must reaffirm the necessity for the University to maintain its posture of unbiased freedom.

As I deny the demand to commit the entire University community to a particular view, those who oppose my decision have greater security in their freedom to do so.

Lack of Funds, Library Resources Pose Problems in Higher Education

The public higher education picture in Massachusetts parallels in many ways the national situation, according to UMass Dean of Administration Leo F. Redfern.

He said: "The problem is compounded in this state by the restrictive revenue situation which must provide the funds to maintain adequate state services in all areas, including public higher education."

There are some areas, Dean Redfern explained, where the limit on funds available has created needs that approach the emergency level. One such critical area is support staff--people needed for more efficient administration and technicians to assist faculty so that the latter can devote time to their primary teaching and research functions.

"It is more economical," he said, "to have an expert typist handle the typing and filing than to require a professor to do these jobs because the typist position is not authorized."

Another area of extremely serious need is library resources. Institutions must acquire a minimum basic collection adequate to insure continued accreditation and must also improve their levels of annual acquisition and library operation. Increased state support of libraries is urgent to compensate for past year's neglect of this vital area.

A third essential need is funds for scholarship programs so that family economic circumstances do not bar any deserving young person from obtaining a good education. Also needed are equipment and renovation funds to replace obsolete and wornout equipment for better utilization of old facilities.

"As the Medical School prepares to accept its first students, funds must be made available for the appointment of qualify faculty, the providing of support services and the acquisition of medical supplies and equipment," he said. Development of the school has been aided in part by federal funding, he noted.

"Every effort will be made to gain maximum federal aid in building the next phase of the Medical School, but substanial State support is still mandatory," Dean Redfern added.

In Boston, development of a permanent site for the UMass-Boston campus and building a major campus on that site will require very large expenditures over the next several years, the UMass dean noted. As the Boston campus extends in program offerings and in enrollment, comparable increases in support will be required. "Such expansion," the Dean said, "is necessary if sufficient opportunities for a university education are available in the years ahead to people in the Greater Boston metropolitan area."

"Vitally needed new programs and services that would utilize the educational resources at UMass more widely have been curtailed by the tight revenue situation in this state," the University administrator continued. The development of new professional schools and new academic programs have been slowed, a statewide program of University continuing education and a University educational TV network both await funds, and research contributing to the State's technological economy has been inhibited.

Dean Redfern said: "Looking at past state support we are impressed with the efforts made by the governor and legislature in granting operating and capital funds. It is a remarkable record and stands as a monument to the commitment of elected leaders to the support of public higher education."

He added: "What they have provided so far is in effect a base to build on for the future. If we rest now on this base we will, as the national picture indicates, be dropping behind. Although it costs significant amounts of money, public higher education is one of the most prudent and economical investments a state like Massachusetts can possibly make. As an advanced state, industrially and socially, Massachusetts is in a position to make this wise investment in its own future."

Image, Organization, and Time Campaign Headache for HHH

By CARL P. LEUBSDORF
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON AP - Although Hubert H. Humphrey says he is pleased with the "momentum" of his Democratic presidential campaign, the Vice President's drive for the White House is not completely free of the problems that made the first week a disaster.

Misstatements by the candidate and antiwar heckling have all but disappeared. But Humphrey is still unable to curb the love of talking that bores some audiences, and scheduling is far from perfect.

Republican nominee Richard M. Nixon is following a formula combining downtown and suburban rallies in the nation's metropolitan areas, but Humphrey still has a tendency to wander around, frequently making poor use of the time which grows shorter each day.

One strategy remains clear and central: the effort to goad Nixon into a debate. But the GOP candidate continues to refuse Humphrey's advisers claim they have put Nixon into an untenable position, that as the polls show his lead dropping, he will eventually have to give in.

Humphrey's campaign schedules, presumably designed to enable him to bring his case before as many voters as possible, remain highly erratic.

There are seasible days like last Monday, when the Vice President appeared before good crowds in three Pennsylvania industrial centers and largely wasted ones like last Tuesday when he spent most of the day in Washington making a foreign policy speech before flying to Utica, N.Y. for an evening campaign speech.

This week, he opens his campaigning with a trip tonight to Evansville, Ind., an area where there is considered to be strong support for third-party candidate George C. Wallace in a state Humphrey's top aides feel he has little chance to win.

Top advisers said Humphrey has emphasized the cities, rather than the suburbs, because he needs to bring out the vote in the most solidly Democratic areas. They also point out that the cities are where the television studios are. Humphrey needs all of the free interviews he can get because lack of funds is preventing a large-scale television advertising program.

But John F. Kennedy defeated Nixon in 1960 partially because his heavy emphasis on suburban appearances helped reduce normal Republican majorities there

Humphrey needs those big states even more than Kennedy did, because he lacks the Southern base of past Democratic campaigns.

This week, Humphrey has some suburban campaigning scheduled in the St. Louis and Detroit areas and through Connecticut.

As for Humphrey himself, sometimes, such as at a Scranton, Pa., rally last Monday or in two New York speeches Thursday, he is vibrant, hard-hitting and wins enthusiastic reactions.

But in between those two efforts, among the best of the entire Humphrey campaign, he lost a predominantly youthful audience in Utica, N.Y., by talking too long, unloaded a 67-minute effort to a druggists convention in Boston and mesmerized New York's Liberal party by taking a brisk text and approximately doubling it in delivery.

HUBERT H. HUMPHREY'S campaign has been plagued by poor scheduling, hecklers, and the constant identification with President Johnson. In the last month of the Campaign, Humphrey must gain momentum quickly, and hope to lure Richard Nixon into a debate. (MDC Photo by Ron Lubreeque)

"After much soul-searching, we further wondered whether we should worry excessively about the hopefully small percentage of students who in all likelihood would be able to find an 'easy' path to graduation if a curriculum with very few requirements were adopted. However, it seems illiberal, unwise, and unacceptably paternal to force a student to obtain a general education by requiring him to take specific courses which we believe to be 'good' for him."

Reverend Deported From Republic Of South Africa Speaks At Smith

A former Anglican bishop in South Africa, deported for outspoken criticism of that nation's apartheid race policies, will speak at Smith College Sunday (October 20).

The Rt. Rev. C. Edward Crowther will preach at an 11:30 a.m. service in the Helen Hills Chapel on the campus.

The Rev. Mr. Crowther was deported from South Africa June 30, 1967, by the Republic of South Africa summarily and without trial, presumably for his sharp criticism of the country's separation of blacks and whites as a deliberate national policy. He was then Anglican bishop of Kimberley and Kuruman in South Africa.

The author was chosen bishop while serving as Dean of St. Cyprian's Cathedral, Kimberley. He had previously been chaplain at the University of California at Los Angeles (.U.C.L.A.). He is a graduate of Leech University and Oxford University in England, with honors in history and law.

He earned a Masters of Law degree in 1953 and taught criminal and constitutional law at Exeter College, Oxford, while studying for the Anglican priesthood. He was ordained by the Bishop of Oxford in 1956.

Smith Play Views Life

The "piped-in" music at the dentist's office and the Vietnam conflict both come under satirical scrutiny in a play to be offered at Smith College.

The play, titled "Muzeeka," will be performed at 8:30 p.m. this Friday, and Saturday in Sage Hall 2. Cast members will be Smith undergraduates and graduate assistants.

The hero of the play is named Jack Argue, who has graduated from college, music school and business school. He is married, lives in a suburb, and works for a "piped-in" music company. When he is suddenly drafted and sent to Vietnam, he sees a vivid contrast with the normal, respectable, uncommitted life he had been living.

A satirical view of several aspects of modern life is offered in the play, including television, war and the "Establishment."

Coffee House Saturday at Orchard Hill

There will be a coffee house on Orchard Hill Saturday night at 8:00 P.M., sponsored by the Grayson-Field Program Committee. "Mirkwood" will be held in Grayson's Main Lounge and will last until approximately 12:30 A.M. There is no admission charge and all are welcome. Coffee will be provided.

As it has in the past, "Mirkwood" will present a great variety of entertainment, from folk singers to poets to jug bands providing an enjoyable evening for all.

Anyone who is interested in performing at Mirkwood should call Crickett Foxx (6,6743), Cindy Jefferson (6-6801), or Bruce Penniman (6-7000) to be scheduled.

Cadet of the Week

Cadet William Sawyer has been selected as the Army ROTC Cadet of the Week here for the period Oct. 15-22.

Sawyer, a freshman at UMass., is from 2nd Platoon, Company A, 1st Battalion. He was chosen at Brigade Activities Tuesday morning from among four other candidates for his knowledge of drill and military proficiency.

As an Army ROTC Cadet he will receive a commission as a 2nd Lieutenant following successful completion of the four year program and graduation from the University.

Cernik, Moscow Plan Soviet Troop Pullout

MOSCOW (AP) — Premier Oldrich Cernik of Czechoslovakia agreed with Kremlin leaders Tuesday on a treaty dealing with the basing of Soviet troops in his country, Czechoslovak sources said. It was eight weeks to the day after the Warsaw Pact invasion.

The Czechoslovak radio's Moscow correspondent, Antonin Kostka, reported in a dispatch received in Prague that the treaty covering economic and legal conditions for stationing troops probably would be signed Wednesday. Prague television reported Cernik was assured by the Kremlin that Russian troops would not interfere in Czechoslovak internal affairs.

Czechoslovak sources reported Cernik, who returned to Moscow Monday for his fourth visit since the Soviet Union and four orthodox allies dispatched military forces to curb Czechoslovakia's liberalization program, would be heading back soon to Prague.

A communique, relayed abroad by the Czechoslovak news agency CTK, said the two sides exchanged views on certain questions resulting from previous Moscow agreements, "especially as regards the conditions of a temporary stationing of Soviet troops on Czechoslovak territory as envisaged by the communique on Soviet-Czechoslovak talks held in Moscow Oct. 3-4. 1968."

The Soviet news agency Tass, paraphrasing the same communique, said the topics included "the question of the terms for the temporary stay" of the troops. It reported: "The negotiations proceeded in a spirit of comradeship and businesslike cooperation."

Soviet participants included Premier Alexei N. Kosygin, Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko, Defense Minister Marshal Andrei A. Grechko and Vasily Kuznetsov, a deputy foreign minister who has been a frequent visitor lately in Prague.

No official figures have been made public on the number of soldiers to leave and the number to stay. It has been reported in Czechoslovakia that the Soviet Union wants to keep from 50,000 to 100,000 troops there. The present occupation force has been estimated at from 250,000 to 600,000.

In the Oct. 3-4 talks here the Czechoslovak leaders agreed to a number of measures aimed to at least the partial restoration of Soviet-style rule in their country.

RELATES TO WHOM?

After listening to Senator Edward Brooke's speech last Sunday evening, I came away even more assured than I ever was that Mr. Brooke does not relate to black people. Mr Brooke relates very well to most liberally-minded white people, but when it comes to blacks; he is on a completely different wave length.

Here is a fine example of a black man who has struggled, forged ahead, and has made it, at last, kept right on going seldom bothering to look back and give a damn about his fellow black man. For a black man in Senator Brooke's position to tell the black community to take it easy and not to rock the boat too much for salvation is just around the corner is nothing less than pure blasphemy. And for this same man to carry the banner of a presidential candidate who spouts the doctrines of "law and order", "safe streets for democracy", and other such racist slogans is nothing less than treason, and the man nothing more than a Quisling. What it comes down to is the fact that Mr. Brooke is a very ambitious man with a very compromising character. Such a man will do almost anything to stay at the top including selling out himself and his people. And needless to say, such a man is a very dangerous person.

Mr. Brooke knows well that if he were to suddenly change and take up the black man's burden like he should, he would lose a lot of his supporters and worshippers. He might even lose the support of his party come next election, and this, of course, a man like Brooke couldn't stand. Yet other black leaders have seen their duty and have not been afraid to take up the black man's burden. Julian Bond is just such a man. Mr. Bond has taken it upon himself to take up the black man's burden, and his political career has suffered as a result. But to a man of firm convictions and a strong moral character, a career in the white man's world comes second to his duty to his race.

Mr. Brooke is essentially a good, just, and honest man in the eyes of most white people, but in the eyes of the black people, he is just another white senator saying much, meaning less, and doing nothing. Mr. Brooke is nothing more than a pacifier stuck in the mouth of the black man by white men who use the senator as a tool for their benefit. It seems that our white leaders take the black man for some sort of fool who will follow anybody who has a white man's title and a black face. This just goes to show that the white man, as of yet, still does not know the black man. And this is essentially what is holding everything up. Whites still think that black people are satisfied with tokenism and black paper idols. Let's face it squarely, and tell it like it is. The time for shallow pacifiers, long elegant speeches, and just plain kidding ourselves is gone. We have run out of time, for the publishing date of this segment of our history has already slipped past us. We're on the verge not of rewriting history, but of prewriting the future. And when that segment is written, there will be no space nor mention of pawns, pacifiers, or broken promises.

Keith M. Bromery

Social Leadership

"One final word about the social revolution. Earlier I urged universities to provide intellectual leadership for this revolution, but this is quite different from urging universities to become agencies for performing massive amounts of social action. I do believe that some colleges and universities may choose to follow the path of overt social action, but if they do, I believe they will forsake their even more important and more sorely needed role of providing the intellectual leadership for current social action and the intellectual training for those who will institute effective future action. . . . Our universities now must provide the intellectual leadership for the peaceful and continual war on poverty, on discrimination, and on urban blight. Unless we thoughtfully examine what constitutes intellectual leadership of the social revolution we stand in danger of losing necessary perspective."

INSIDE REPORT:

Humphrey's Polling Game

BY ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON--Last Wednesday, when the election was four weeks away, Democratic leaders and labor chiefs received a remarkable memorandum from William Connell, Vice President Humphrey's chief aide and political mastermind, triumphantly entitled: "Humphrey on the Upswing, Gallup or Not!"

Asserting that the continued 15-percentage-point gap between Richard M. Nixon and Hubert Humphrey in the Gallup Poll "has damaged the confidence of Humphrey supporters," Connell presented evidence "which pointedly dispute(s) Gallup.'

The evidence: a natural telephonic poll by a firm inexperienced in political surveys plus some dubious state surveys ordered by Humphrey himself. Since these state polls show Humphrey considerably higher than other surveys, they are not taken seriously either in the polling fraternity or the Democratic National Committee's own research division.

What's happening here is that Humphrey is playing an old polling game, endemic with underdogs, of releasing questionable data to bolster sagging morale. For although Humphrey's campaign definitely is moving, he is not--as Connell's memo claims--"on a sharp upswing throughout the country."

The Humphrey camp began the polling game on Sept. 22 when Democratic National Chairman Lawrence F. O'Brien released three polls conducted by Oliver Quayle, a top political pollster. Quayle showed Humphrey trailing badly in Wisconsin but narrowly ahead in Michigan and Missouri.

In keeping with pollsmanship, O'Brien withheld a fourth Quayle survey showing Humphrey trailing Nixon by 17 percentage points in Illinois, which every winning presidential candidate has carried since 1916. Nor, for obvious reasons, did O'Brien reveal a private survey purchased from Pollster Don Muchmore of Los Angeles showing Humphrey far behind in California.

Moreover, O'Brien began pouring out surveys from pollsters less qualified than Quayle or Muchmore. An organization called "Midwest Research of Minnesota" (never heard of in the polling fraternity) showed Humphrey 16 percentage points ahead in Minnesota, 15 points higher than the respected Minnesota Poll. Texas pollster Joe Belden, notoriously inaccurate in recent years, showed Humphrey ahead in Texas--contradicting other private surveys.

Most suspect were polls taken in five Eastern states by Joseph Napolitan, who happens to be O'Brien's political protege and is skillfully running the Humphrey national media campaign.

Furthermore, Napolitan's present polls for Humphrey show an abnormally high undecided vote (33 percent in Connecticut)--the tell-tale sign of faulty interviewing. In Napolitan's state surveys, Humphrey runs around 6 percentage points ahead of other private polls.

But Connell included them in his Oct. 9 memo along with findings by Sindlinger and Co., Inc., showing Humphrey less than 4 percent behind Nixon nationally. Sindlinger, which is in the business of testing public preferences for toothpaste and cigarettes but is new to the more complex business of political opinion sampling, does all its interviewing by telephone. In contrast, Dr. George Gallup, respected by his colleagues for both methodology and probity, uses more reliable and expensive home interviews.

Indeed, Connell was reaching for any favorable straws. In an early draft of his memo, he noted Humphrey's 3-point margin in New York shown by Napolitan and added parenthetically: "Kraft shows more margin for HHH." He was referring to a survey by pollster John Kraft taken late in July before either nominating convention. With recent polls giving Nixon a slight edge in New York, the misleading reference to Kraft was omitted from the final version of the Connell memo.

In the covering letter to his memo, Connell urges "duplication and distribution of the attached to the key people in your organization"--tipping off its morale-boosting purpose. That's the polling game as played by underdogs. The trouble with it is that campaign managers sometimes begin believing their own inflated polling results, which may be happening in the Humphrey operation today. Thus the polling game can backfire with a vengeance.

Blanks and Gaps

WASHINGTON (CPS)--In a speech several weeks ago, Maryland Governor Spiro Agnew called for a "greater national sense of humor." Last week the House Committee on Un-American Activities (HUAC) and its subpoenaed witnesses responded to the call: HUAC by taking itself seriously, and the witnesses for refusing to.

The committee was looking for evidence of "subversive activities" involved in the last week of August in Chicago. It brought to Washington leaders and anti-leaders of the political and cultural peace movement--most prominently Dave Dellinger, Tom Hayden and Ronnie Davis of the National Mobilization and Jerry Rubin and Abbie Hoffman of the Youth International Party (YIPpies).

This was the first formal meeting of radical leaders and "system" politicians since Chicago. If what happened is any indication of meetings to come, it is apparent that the politicians will sidestep the New Leftists rather than attack them as they have in the past.

In a normal HUAC hearing, a case against subpoenaed witnesses is built by the Committee staff; then amidst the usual publicity the witnesses refuse to say anything under the protection of the First, Fourth and Fifth Amendments. This time it was different.

The first witness, Bob Greenblatt of the National Mobilization, spoke at length on his activities in anti-war work. (He was the first of what HUAC called the "hostile" witnesses. Earlier the "friendly" witnesses gave a summary of Mayor Daley's report on the week's activities.) Dr. Quentin Young, of the Medical Committee for Human Rights, successfully managed to monopolize his time on the stand with well-planned propaganda on the medical needs of demonstrators everywhere.

Periodically one of the other witnesses would interrup the testimony with comic relief. After Jerry Rubin stood up once to make an announcement, Committee chairman Richard Ichord (D-Mo.) proclaimed, "The chair is not conducting a circus here today." Earlier, while one of Daley's police infiltrators was testifying, Abbie Hoffman asked to be excused to go to the bathroom. His request was granted.

Plagued by interruption and witnesses who didn't see things his way, Chairman Ichord constantly repeated the intent of the hearings: "We want to find out," he said, "if communists in this country inspired and took part in the riots in Chicago...and if certain organizations in the United States have connections with foreign communist powers."

Ichord found his main troubles with Dr. Young. The Committee was trying to establish that Young loaned Ronnie Davis $1000 to lease office space for the Mobilization in Chicago. Davis had traveled to Hanoi last spring, and this was enough to link him in the Committee's minds with all sorts of anti-U.S. activities. Young quietly replied that he does not ask for travel dossiers from people to whom he loans money.

After more haggling over the legitimacy of some evidence with the ranking Republican on the Committee, John Ashbrook of Ohio, Young explained why Medical Committee for Human Rights staffers are present at street demonstrations. "MCHR was born out of things we didn't believe happened in this country" he said.

After Dr. Young spoke on the third day of hearings, the Committee brought Greenblatt back for an hour or so, then adjourned the hearings until Dec. 2.

The Committe hearings were most noteworthy for what didn't occur, rather than what they did. The most articulate and colorful anti-war leaders were not called to testify; the questions of free speech and suppression were not raised. Most strikingly, the Committee failed to put the Movement in the slightest bit of disrepute.

Candidates' Wives Join Campaign

WASHINGTON AP - Muriel Humphrey and Jane Muskie will campaign in Ohio and Minnesota this week in behalf of their husbands' Democratic presidential ticket.

Flying aboard a chartered airplane, the two wives will spend Thursday and Friday speech making and appearing at party rallies and meetings of professionals and working men.

The first stop Thursday is Akron, where they will hold a morning news conference in the Sheraton-Akron Hotel and make an appearance before a gathering of Summit County Women for Humphrey-Muskie.

Next stop will be Geneva, Ohio, for an appearance before Democratic women of the counties of Ashtabula, Geauga and Lake.

Flying to Minneapolis that evening, they will appear at the National Association of Music Therapy conference, where Mrs. Humphrey is the scheduled speaker.

The two wives will spend Thursday night at the Humphreys' home in Lake Waverly, Minn. Women editors and reporters have been invited for brunch and then to set forth on a day-long "Meet Minnesota with Muriel Day", that will take them to Minneapolis, Moorhead and Duluth.

The Pill, The Pope, and the Precipice

The Pope's ban on birth control put St. Peter's rock on a precipice. The Pope's personal theologian Msgr. Lamburschini upholded the Pope's encyclical with the statement:

"Catholics who cannot see the reasons for the Pop's encyclical have no right to challenge it but must accept it humbly and with complete submission."

But this raises many questions in which a key word is "change."

Do values, as they relate to different situations, change? Darwin proved that the world is constantly changing. Values change, situations change and people change; nothing can remain eternally absolute. Even our idea of God has shifted from wrathful to a more loving Being. Therefore, values, as they relate to situations, must change since situations are constantly changing.

The encyclical was written by a man. It came after much thought and prayer, but it was still a personal opinion and may be reversed by the next Pope. This ruling of a man ordering other men to do an act because he "knows", is what bothers many people. All people--not just the clergy--were born with free will and the intelligence and the consciences with which to guide it. Isn't this being ignored by the Pope?

This leads to the question of the supreme authority of the Pope. Can he possibly lead the world's Catholics responsibly? Is he to be a point of unity or a Mason-Dixon line? In out freedom-oriented culture it is very possible our religion could be better set up to serve our new religious needs. The Church in the past has always adapted to a changing environment; it is this ability to adapt that has kept it alive for so long.

The Church has fallen from its precipice many times, caught itself midway, and come back stronger. The Church has again started to slide. Can it adapt?

An Alternate Choice

To the editor:

I should like to address the students, faculty, and administration of the University of Massachusetts as well as the entire University community.

As you know by the above address, I am writing from the Star of Isreal. Why I came here, almost ten months ago, and why I hope to make my home here, I hope to explain in this letter, as my reasons stem from the persecution I felt from the Selective Service System. Before I left the United States, I was enrolled at Greenfield Community College, in Greenfield, Massachusetts, and participated with The University of Massachusetts Symphony Band and was on the staff of your college radio station, WMUA. But my main love in life was, and still is, music. I wanted to perform fulltime, but could not, as I was enrolled in school. If I withdrew from school, in all probability, I would drafted, and I would have found myself, plunging through the swamps of Viet Nam. In essence, I was staying in school to avoid the draft, while at the same time, my music was stagnating.

I investigated possiblities of obtaining employment abroad, and Isreal came into the picture. My life in Israel would not be easy, at least six months on a kibbutz, learning Hebrew, and then auditions with the various orchestras. But this outlook did not hinder my enthusiam in any way. I came to Israel and started working toward my goal. With help by friends here, I was invited to audition with the Kol Yisrael Orchestra in Jeruselem and also was able to perform with the Haifa Symphony Orchestra.

I had to make a big choice in coming to Israel. It was either face the consequence of the draft in the United States or come here to start anew-but never return to the States. I am quite happy with my choice.

I would like to speak of citizenship laws here in Israel. Some may want to come to Israel, but not give up their American citizenship. Under Israel's Law of Return, an American citizen may become an Israeli citizen and may retain, at the same time, his American citizenship and receive a deferment from the Israeli Army. This deferment would last indefinitely because this person is still an American citizen. However, as soon as he gave up his American citizenship, he would be drafted into the Israeli Army.

If, on the other hand, the American wanted to live permanently in Israel without gaining citizenship, he could become a permanent resident holding American citizenship. He would still be subject to the American government and the draft.

In either case, I feel that the choice to come to Israel is a wise one. If a student wanted to continue his education there is plenty of opportunity to do so in Israel.

Jobs are plentiful in Israel, especially if one holds a college degree.

I realize that, in all probability, I can never return to the United States. But I have not regretted my choice.

Evidence Wanted

To the editor:

The events that occurred in Chicago during the week of the Democratic Convention have aroused concern throughout the country. The Illinois Division of the American Civil Liberties Union has already received many statements from witnesses as well as copies of pictures that were taken of the disturbance, and we are trying to determine what kind of legal action, if any, can be taken as a result of these events.

If you have any information or photographs of the events in Chicago, please contact us at once. If you know of other people who might have such information, send us their names and addresses or have them get in touch with us. Please indicate if you want your statements to be kept confidential.

Statements and pictures should be sent to The American Civil Liberties Union, Illinois Division, 6 S. Clark Street, Chicago, Illinois 60603, (Phone: 312-236-5564). We hope that you will be able to assist us in this opportunity to document the events in Chicago and act against any violations of your civil liberties and constitutional freedoms.

Comedy is an Agnew Press Conference

Here we are, Ladies and Gentlemen, at another of the famous Spiro Agnew press conferences. These conferences, as you know, are in demand overseas and for the first time at any press conference it will be sent over Early Bird to all the countries of the world. It is my estimate that there are over 800 million people listening and watching this press conference. If you have never heard a Spiro Agnew press conference you are in for a treat...He's stepping up to the podium, as over 1000 journalists from all over the country are waiting for him to officially begin the press conference. He acknowledges a reporters hand and the conference is beginning... Let's listen...

A-Mr. Agnew, could you tell us how you feel about the Polls.

Spiro-I think those people are o.k. even if they are a little stupid.

A-Excuse me, Mr. Agnew, but I was referring to the Presidential Polls, not the Polish people.

Spiro-Oh, ha, ha-Well, I think the Polls are great as long as we're ahead.

B-Mr. Agnew, do you think the Black people have a just cause for rioting.

Sprio-Excust me, the black people?

B-Yes, the Negro.

Spiro-Oh, ha, ha,- Is that what you calling them now, well I'll go along with the game. No, I don't think the Black people-ha, ha, have a just cause for rioting. Next question!

C-Mr. Agnew, what do you think of this press conference being broadcast around the world?

Spiro-I think that by watching this telecast they get a first hand look at how America operates, and that's good for them and good for America.

D-Mr. Agnew, isn't it true you had a beautiful Greek name, why did you change it?

Spiro-I changed it because I'm in America and proud of it! I changed my name because America is an Anglo-Saxon country and I Anglosized my name to fit in better.

D-But America is an immigrant country with people who have names like Pizzani, Steinberg, Wong, Yen-shun, MacDonald, and O'Reilly. What about the Indians, they are not Anglo-Saxon and they were here before anybody.

Spiro-Yeah, that's the trouble!

A-Why?

Spiro-All these immigrants who won't have their name changed are proud of their name, right?

D-Yes.

Spiro-So that means that they prefer the names from the countries they came from over an Anglo-Saxon name to fit America, right?

D-Yes.

Spiro-Therefore they also like the country they came from bette than America and that's where a the trouble comes from. A these foreign spys are infiltratir America and giving informatic to the Commies!! Why do yc know how many spys there mu be?!! Millions, millions!!! He; what's your name?!!!

A Girl's Guide To Football

BY MARTHA CURRAN
Senior Reporter

Once upon a time, the quickest was to a man's heart was through his stomach. No longer. Want to win him? Learn (at least a little) about football.

The object of the game is to win. Points are scored when the ball is advanced by the offense over the opponent's goal line by running, passing or kicking it.

The eleven-man offensive team battles its eleven-man defensive opponent and receives six points for a touchdown when a runner with the ball crosses or touches the opponent's goal line or when a player catches a pass or recovers a loose ball within the opponent's end zone.

A single bonus point (Point after Touchdown) is earned when a player on the offensive unit place kicks the ball through the top half of the goal posts. The place kicker can also earn three points with a field goal anytime during the game, but his position is farther back from the goal posts. Safeties, a rare score, are worth two points for the opposition when an offensive ball carrier is tackled behind his own goal line by a defensive player.

When the ball is whistled dead, that is, unplayable because the player has been tackled or has run out of bounds, the platoons line up: Team A's defense and Team B's offense come out and take position opposite each other on the imaginary "line of scrimmage." This is where the action is; you'll recognize it not by a white marker but as an invisible line extending laterally from the nose of the ball.

Team B now has four chances to move the ball 10 yards. Each chance is called a "down", a unit of play action which begins when the Center snaps the ball to the Quarterback and continues until the ball is whistled dead by an official.

If Team B advances 10 yards or more in less than or four attempts, they get another four tries to move another ten yards. Progress is made towards the goal line in rushing, either on the ground in carries or in the air through passes. Incomplete passes count as one down and the ball must be returned to the preceding play's "line of scrimmage."

Team B must relinquish the ball to Team A if it fails to make a first down; punt formation is generally called for and a kicking specialist boots the ball as deep as possible into his opponent's territory. The platoons switch again because now the ball belongs to Team A.

Keep your eye on the Quarterback. He calls the signals for the offensive unit while they stand in the "huddle." If he changes his mind as the players line up and he sees the position of the opponent and realizes that a different play is essential, he will call out a different code, an "automatic," which is frequently called an "audible" because even the spectators can usually hear him.

There are sixty minutes of actual playing time in a football game, but time often stands still on the field: the clock is stopped after each first down and as officials assess penalties and pace out lost yardage because of an infraction of the rules. Each team may call three 1-1/2 minute time outs during each half. The clock is also stopped following incomplete passes and whenever the ball goes out of bounds. Each of the four quarters lasts 15 minutes. After the first and third quarters there is a two-minute rest period as the teams change goals so that neither team will have the advantage or disadvantage of weather conditions. Halftime lasts 15 minutes while the teams leave the field and return to the locker room. Plan on 150 minutes of audience participation; stand up for kickoffs which open each half and follow every score.

DEFINITIONS

Draw play: the Quarterback steps back, drawing the defensive linemen with him, but hand the ball to a back instead of passing it.

Fair catch: a signal made by a player about to receive a punt indicating that he will not run the ball back.

Pitchout: an underhand toss from the Quarterback to a carrier on a wide running play.

QB sneak: the Quarterback fakes a hand-off and runs straight through the line with the ball, usually for short yardage, often for a touchdown.

Pocket: a seven-yard area behind the center where a Quarterback retreats before he retreats before he passes.

Roll-out: the Quarterback rolls out of his protective pocket and swings wide, ready to pass or run.

Tackle: to overpower a ball carrier and bring him to the ground.

FOOTBALL POSITIONS

Quarterback: calls signals, primary ball handler and passer. Numbers 1-19

Set Backs: halfbacks and fullbacks: blockers, ball carriers, receivers and sometimes passers.

Cornerbacks and safeties: "the secondary" must be fast enough to keep flankers from catching passes. Numbers 20-29, 30-39, 40-89.

Tackles and ends: "front four" must stop the run and rush the passer. Numbers 70-79, 80-89.

Flanker: Primary receiver, called a wing back on the UMass team. Numbers 20-29.

Split end and tigit end: receivers, also perform blocks. Numbers 80-89.

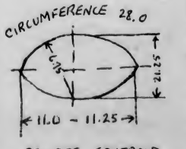
Center: snaps the ball to the Quarterback, the punter, and the place kicker. Must also block to provide protection for ball carriers. Numbers 50-59.

Tackles: on offensive unit, must provide protection, run interference. Not permitted to use hands. Numbers 7-79.

FOOTBALL-A GAME OF BRAIN AND BRAWN



"The objective in the game is to win," UMass Head Coach Vic Fusia said, "but football is a game of chance and we must work to reduce chance and error by constant repetition and drill of the inevitable."

Superior force is in action on the football field; success is determined by team play which, Coach Fusia said, "begins with the most qualified players in depth and depends in a measure upon organization and a desire to excell on the part of each participating individual."

Precision reaction is as necessary to victory as confidence and a unique "winning" attitude. A player's best reaction time, the Coach continued, has been scientifically proven to 25/100ths of a second. Football, unquestionably, combines brain with brawn.

"You must out-think your opponent," Fusia said, "football involves speed and accuracy in movement; stamina, courage and morale."

Long practice improves basic skills, but the coaches know that a player has proven himself when, in addition to full comprehension of the game of football, he has picked up little coaching points and has become a total athlete.

Coming: Eateries Evaluation

Whether it be Homecoming, a parents' visiting day, a holiday, or just a weekend meal, "where to eat?" is a question asked by all students.

Each week we will present a "Student's Guide to Dining Out" based upon our weekly visits to various restaurants in the Amherst area. We are not, like Craig Clairbourne, who provides readers of the New York Times with dining-out information for New York City gourmets. No, we are merely anxious to escape Dining Commons food so the purpose of this column is to acquaint the student with available dining-out facilities in the University area.

Each review will include cost of a complete luncheon or dinner, the specialities of the house, service and atmosphere evaluation and location of the restaurant. Required dress and credit policies, entertainment, liquor and wine lists, seating arrangements and capacity will be included as points of information.

Royal Decree Outlawed Football

Girls, if you shudder because football seems a rough game, you're not alone. As long ago as 1314, Edward II of England enforced sanctions against "hustling over large footballs, from which many evils arise, which God forbid."

In spite of prohibitions, football flourished. Look at the TV listings for any Sunday from August, when the pre-season exhibition games start, to January, when the Super Bowl and All-star games wrap things up. What's on? Football.

If you go to a game, follow a few basic rules: don't be late. Missing the kickoff is like missing the entrance of the conductor at Symphony Hall, only maybe worse. Dress warmly and wisely if the weather calls for it. Men feel about football the way mailmen feel about their route, "neither rain nor snow nor hail nor dark of night..."

Mental Retardation Traineeships

Undergraduates, who will be juniors, seniors, or beginning graduate students by the Summer of 1969 are invited to apply for Pre-Professional Traineeships at The Devereux Schools, a group of residential multidisciplinary treatment, remedial education and rehabilitation centers. Some consideration may also be given to freshmen and sophomores, as space permits.

Summer traineeships for appointment as a Research Aide, Professional Aide, Resident Camp Counselor and Day Camp Counselor/Tutor are available at the Pa. branch in suburban Phila. A few traineeships may also be available at other Devereux branches.

Tax exempt training stipends of $200 per month for a 2-3 month period, plus room and board, are available to qualified applicants who are unmarried U.S. citizens. The traineeships are designed to provide an orientation to career opportunities for work with the mentally retarded and the emotionally disturbed

Further information on the Summer Pre-Professional Traineeships and application blanks are available from Dr. Henry Platt, Director, The Devereux Foundation Institute for Research and Training, Devon, Pa. 19333.

Advertising Conference

The Twelfth Annual Career Conference, sponsored by the Advertising Women of New York Foundation, Inc. will again be helping college students with a realistic, professional panorama of the vast career opportunities available to bright young men and women in Advertising.

Hundreds of students representing key colleges will attend this annual career conference, Saturday, November 2, 1968 from 9:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. at the Hotel Commodore, New York City.

Registration must be made in advance. There is a registration fee of $5.50 for each student.

This conference is designed to provide college juniors and seniors interested in advertising with an in-depth understanding of the opportunities, challenges and rewards of advertising and communications. The Career Conference is a project of the Advertising Women of New York Foundation, Inc. and is co-sponsored by The American Advertising Federation; The American Association of Advertising Agencies; Association of National Advertisers, Inc.; The Magazine Publishers' Association; and the National Association of Broadcasters.

Law Class To Be Held

Professor Arthur Murphy of the Dickinson School of Law will be offering a sample class in Criminal Law. The class will be held October 21 at 10 a.m. The location has not yet been determined. It will be chosen on the basis of enrollment.

Professor Murphy has prepared topical material for distribution to those students attending the class. This class will provide an excellent opportunity to observe first hand the method of instruction emphasized at Law School--a must for all pre-law students.

RICHARD LANE
Staff Reporter

The new Rugby Club meets M.I.T. this coming Saturday in its first home game of the season.

Led by captain Jeff Freedman, the club is in its second season and is made up of over 45 members, including graduate and undergraduate students, faculty members, and "anyone interested in playing rugby."

After losing its opening games with Dartmouth (29-3), Fairfield (25-0), and Williams on Columbus Day (12-8), the club has five contests remaining on its schedule. Following M.I.T. the Massachusetts "ruggers" (as rugby players are called) take on Tufts here on Homecoming weekend, Sunday afternoon.

Upcoming November games will find the club playing Holy Cross and Boston Rugby Club on the road, with a final game at home against the Boston Rugby Club again.

Organized last semester as a spring-fall sport, the club is still seeking new membership of anyone interested in playing either season, or both, says Freedman.

The Rugby Club has been awarded $300 by the Recognized Student Organizations office for purchase of equipment.

There are presently many jobs available on campus for students under the College Work Study Program. Eligibility for the College Work Study Program is based upon established financial need criteria. Any student interested in working on a part time basis should contact Mr. Siegrist in the Placement and Financial Aid Office, Room 237, Whitmore Building.

'Nothing will shock me' Claims House Mother's Other Half

Dressed in green dungarees, loafers, a green shirt, and a camel corduroy sports coat with a yellow tie, Mr. Eric Beekman "Male consort to the house mother of Webster dorm" and English teacher at the University is an example of what makes up a "house father".

Beekman is a 29-year-old PhD in Comparative Literature. He received his B.A. at Berkeley, after two years at Hope College. His doctorate is from Harvard.

He also has a command of French, German, Dutch, English, and Ancient Greek, and is a "cool guy" according to one of the residents of Webster.

With his background in languages, Beekman doesn't like to confine himself to English, but enjoys international literature, "the one area left where there are no political boundaries."

"Students talk freely to me and my wife because we are so young", Beekman said. "And I haven't found anything that will shock me, even though students will talk about anything and everything."

Although newly initiated to the residential college and the Orchard Hill complex, Beekman feels strongly that there is a purpose in this structure. The purpose is "to be able to live with one another as human beings."

"Minor instances of ungentlemanly behavior in Wooster have been settled by the students in their House Judiciary and in a very mature and responsible way" Beekman added.

Open Houses are a good way to do away with childish notions about sex that cause such infantile behavior as the panty raids according to Mr. Beekman.

"They are one of the ways to help develop a mature attitude towards sex which is greatly lacking in the UMass students" he concluded with emphasis.

New Hampshire quarterback Ed Walsh (So. Boston, Mass.), Massachusetts middle guard John MacLean (Williamstown, Mass.) and Rhode Island kicking specialist Steve Collis (Trenton, N.J.) have been chosen as the top offensive, defensive and specialist players in the Yankee Conference for their performance last week.

Walsh, a 5'9 165-lb. senior, had his greatest game in the 42-17 Conference win over Maine. He completed 8 of 9 passes for 169 yards, including a 54-yard touchdown toss, ran the ball five times for 94 yards, including a 72-yard touchdown, and caught a 26-yard pass that set up a touchdown on the one yard line.

MacLean, a 5'10 205-junior, was a standout defensively in the Massachusetts' 21-7 loss to Boston U. MacLean made 10 tackles and blocked a punt in the third quarter.

Collis, a 6' 177-lb. junior, started his day Saturday morning by booting the winning goal in Rhode Island's 2-1 upset soccer victory over Vermont. In the afternoon he kicked seven consecutive extra-points plus a 45-yard field goal, a new Rhode Island record, and also made four unassisted tackles after kicking off, to help the Rams to a 52-10 win over Vermont.

Fusia Praises Redman Effort; URI Game Could Be Aerial Circus

By Peter Pascarelli
Assistant Sports Editor

Varsity M Club awards for outstanding play in the Boston University game were awarded yesterday to Bob Sheehan on offense and John MacLean on defense, to highlight the weekly luncheon held at the Newman Club.

JOHN MacLEAN

BOB SHEEHAN

Sheehan, the 6'6" 250 pound senior center was honored for the fine blocking job he did in a losing cause. The West Roxbury native was furthered honored by being nominated for Yankee Conference offensive player of the week in the conference's weekly poll.

MacLean, a 5'10" junior, was honored for his outstanding play at middle guard. MacLean who made 10 unassisted tackles and also blocked a punt was also voted the Yankee Conference defensive player of the week.

UMass head coach Vic Fusia, who had never lost three games in succession while coaching at UMass until this season addressed the luncheon. Fusia quickly squelched any notions that his team was not giving 100 percent.

"There is a rumor going around that we aren't trying," said Fusia. "Well, all I've got to say is that they are trying so hard they are at the point of no return."

The coach did not want to give the impression that he was pleased with the team's performance. "We are making too many mental errors," said Fusia, "but we are not losing because of lack of trying or disloyalty. The injuries have just caught up with us."

The UMass coach went on to say that his team was perfectly prepared defensively for the Boston University running attack, but they just went out of position on several occasions.

"We were deployed well on those plays," said the coach, "but a couple of people may have got fooled."

The coach thinks that the team will get a mental lift going back into conference play this week against Rhode Island. "We have dominated the conference the last few years so our pride should be a factor," said the coach. "This can be the biggest game of the year for us."

Strategy-wise Fusia hopes to pass more this week. He emphasized, "We have to get the ball in the air 30 times to be a winner. Field position has hurt us, but we still haven't passed enough."

Fusia concluded with a reiteration of his main point, "It's not that we aren't trying enough. We give it all we have, and seeing in the films how hard these kids are trying makes you appreciate the type of individual that is up here. We are proud of them all."

Assistant coach Milt Piepul, who has scouted Rhode Island, sees a great test to the Redman defense coming.

"Rhode Island has their best team in four years, said Piepul and are a great passing team. They will pass the great majority of the time."

Piepul also said that the Rhode Island defense is the biggest UMass will face all year, with tackles ranging in size from 240 pounds to 255. The ends will be anywhere from 225 to 240.

But, Piepul mainly warned of the Ram offense. "They are a quick-striking team that scores from long range. They have had only two long drives all season."

"They have many seasoned veterans on both offense and defense," concluded Piepul and will present a tough test for UMass."

A. L. Expands K. C. Takes Foy

BOSTON (AP) - The Kansas City Royals and the Seattle Pilots each shelled out more than $5 million for players such as Tommy Davis, Hoyt Wilhelm and Gary Bell and a flock of virtually unknown talent yesterday at the American League expansion draft.

The Royals concentrated on youth, starting with Baltimore right-hander Roger Nelson, before they pulled a couple of surprises by drafting right-hander Moe Drabowsky, 33, from the Orioles and then 45-year-old Wilhelm from Chicago in the fifth round.

The Pilots went for seasoned pros at the outset, taking Don Mincher of California, Tommy Harper of Cleveland, Ray Oyler of Detroit and Gerry McNertney of Chicago in the first draft. Later, they added Davis, a two-time National League batting champion who hit .268 for Chicago this year, and Bell, who had an 11-11 record with the Boston Red Sox.

None of the 10 established clubs appeared hurt too badly as they collected $175,000 for each of the six players they lost.

The world champion Detroit Tigers didn't have to give up much in the cash windfall. In addition to Oyler, a light-hitting shortstop, the Tigers lost pitchers Jon Warden, Bill Butler, Dick Drago and Mike Marshall and outfielder Wayne Comer.

The Pilots selected 17 pitchers, one more than Kansas City. Seattle picked 13 right-handers and four left-handers. Kansas City chose 12 right-handers and four southpaws.

Each team drafted two catchers. The Royals drafted eight infielders, three more than the Pilots. Seattle selected six outfielders, two more than Kansas City.

U. S. Wins Discus Oerter Tops Mark

MEXICO CITY (AP) - Amazing Al Oerter became the first athlete in Olympic history to claim a fourth straight gold medal and Wyomia Tyus took her second consecutive gold yesterday, giving the United States four victories in eight track and field events.

Oerter, the 32-year-old veteran from West Islip, N.Y., tossed the discus an Olympic record-shattering 212 feet, 6-1/2 inches to continue a victory string he started in 1956 at Melbourne, Australia.

Miss Tyus of Griffin, Ga., led a 1-2 American finish in the women's 100-meter dash, breaking the tape in a world record time of 11 seconds.

That smashed the mark of 11.1 which she shared with three others, including teammate Barbara Ferrell of Los Angeles, who took the silver medal Tuesday.

Miss Tyus' victory gave the United Stated a sweep of 100-meter events following Jimmy Hines' victory in the men's 100 Monday and ran America's gold medal haul to four. The United States also has two silver medals and two bronze.

The U.S. basketball team, meanwhile, gained its third straight victory, overwhelming the Philippines 96-75.

Trinity Wins 2-1 In Soccer Battle

By Walt Stachura
Staff Reporter

Two second half goals paced the undefeated Trinity soccer team to a hard fought 2-1 victory over UMass yesterday before a large crowd at varsity field.

Midway through the final quarter, Allen Gibbey's direct kick from just outside the penalty area threaded its way through an opening in the UMass defensive wall into the right side of the net lunging Redman goalie Steve Kramer to break a 1-1 deadlock.

Gibbey's goal was set up as Kramer picked up a loose ball and kicked it from outside the goalie's area trying to clear it resulting in the direct kick being awarded to the Bantams.

After the Bantams go ahead goal, the Redmen pressed the Trinity defensive zone but were unable to put the ball in the net. Trinity apparently tallied another goal late in the game but it was disqualified because of an offside.

With two minutes left, the Redmen broke out of their own zone and Rick Matuzsczak had a partial breakaway but he was stopped by a combination of a Bantam defenseman and the goalie to end any Redman comeback hopes.

UMass grabbed an early 1-0 lead with Duane Brown's goal midway through the second quarter. Duane took a pass from Larry DeFelice and broke down the middle to tally on a short low shot. Marty Mughogho and Rick Matuszczak set the play up with some clever passing at midfield.

Trinity knotted the count midway through the third quarter as linkman Abdillaha Hajai weaved his way through the UMass defense with some fine footwork and plunked the ball into the left corner of the net.

A questionable hand ball call was ruled down by the referees as it appeared that Hajai may have touched the ball with his hand on his brilliant rush downfield.

Although the Redmen lost, they came up with an improved effort over their performance in the UConn game. Their passing was sharper and they were not being beat to the ball as much as they were in the UConn contest.

Trinity dominated the statistics, outshooting the Redmen 18-8, and having an amazing 11-1 edge in corner kicks. Steve Kramer had 11 saves while the Trinity netminder had 6.

The Redman may have suffered a costly loss when Kramer had to be removed late in the game with an injured right wrist.

The next opponent for the Redmen will be Rhode Island on Saturday. This game will be very important for the Redmen in Yankee Conference action as URI upset defending league champion Vermont 2-1 last week.

Leaman Greets 19 For Hoop Drills

Amherst, Mass. — University of Massachusetts basketball coach Jack Leaman welcomed 19 varsity candidates to the opening practice session of the 1968-69 season yesterday afternoon.

Eight returning lettermen from last winter's Yankee Conference co-champions are providing Leaman with an optimistic outlook toward the 59th season of formal competition for Redmen basketball teams.

Johnson Says No Halt To Bombing In North Vietnam

WASHINGTON (AP)-President Johnson apparently ruled out yesterday a halt to the bombing of North Vietnam at this time on grounds of insufficient evidence that such action now would be a step toward peace.

Administration sources said that the President was still keeping possible peace moves under review and that a bombing stop was still possible at some later date.

Reports of a U. S. proposal to end the air attacks first came early in the day from Saigon amid an extraordinary series of meetings involving top U. S. and South Vietnamese officials.

By late morning, Washington time, Johnson was personally on the telephone in a special conference call to the three major presidential candidates - Republican Richard M. Nixon in Kansas City, Democrat Hubert H. Humphrey in St. Louis and Independent George C. Wallace in Los Angles.

Press secretary George Christian said Johnson wanted the presidential aspirants to know what the White House was saying "in light of the uncertainty created by the various reports," and that he read them this statement issued to newsmen at 10 a.m. EDT:

"The position of the United States with respect to Vietnam remains as set forth by the President and the secretary of state.

"There has been no basic change in the situation: no breakthrough."

The U. S. position, as Johnson put it in his March 31 announcement of a self-limitation on the U. S. bombing, is that the attacks will be stopped altogether if this leads promptly to serious negotiations and "Hanoi would not take advantage of our restraint."

Both Johnson and Secretary of State Dean Rusk have been saying that no word has been received from Hanoi that North Vietnam would scale down her drive against the South in response to a bombing stop.

In recent days, however, a substantial lull has marked the ground fighting in South Vietnam.

Military authorities have been cautious about attributing any political significance to this lull-there is a long history of ups and downs in the war's combat level and after a lull last summer the enemy launched another series of offensives.

Some of Johnson's advisers and foreign friends were said to have urged the President to interpret the current slowdown in Vietnam fighting as the sign needed to declare a complete end to bombing of the North.

But administration sources said the North Vietnamese have failed to give assurance - at Paris or elsewhere - that they would not take advantage of a bombing halt or to say that the present lull in fighting in the South has any political meaning.

Johnson says that in the absence of evidence to the contrary, the U. S. bombing now aimed at the Southern part of North Vietnam is needed to protect the lives of U. S. and allied soldiers below

Astronauts on Last Leg of Orbit

SPACE CENTER, HOUSTON (AP) - With Americans watching for Apollo 7 shining like a star in the morning sky, the bearded and busy astronauts scooted yesterday toward the last half of their 4.5 million mile space voyage.

In rapid succession, they made a brief television appearance, gave their ship a quick rocketing jolt that felt like the bump of an amusment park ride, and then precisely charted Hurricane Gladys by flying high over the eye of the swirling storm.

Apollo control told them the precise location of the hurricane eye had been passed on to the National Hurricane Center. Schirra replied, "Tell 'em to get it out of the way by next Tuesday," the day Apollo 7 is set to land near Bermuda in the Atlantic Ocean.

Earlier, the astronauts tested their 20,500 pound thrust rocket engine again to see how brief a burst of power it would produce.

The half-way milestone was passed at 7:52 p.m. CDT, with Command Pilot Walter M. Schirra Jr. and engineer Walter Cunningham awake, but navigator Donn F. Eisele was said to be asleep.

At the precise moment of midpoint, two clocks in Apollo Control read exactly the same at 129 hours and 50 minutes. One of the clocks counts the elapsed time of the flight, and another counts down to the minute of retrofire that shoots Apollo 7 our of orbit Tuesday.

Counting the amount of time it takes the Apollo to come out of orbit and parachute to the sea, the mid-point came at 8:00 p.m. CDT.

When the midpoint came, the Apollo 7 was out of contact with any earth station.

On one orbit, as they coasted through their closest point to earth they noted a slight wobble to the ship, but the cause isn't known. Guesses are that it might be drag from the upper fringes of the earth's atmosphere, the sloshing of fuel in the rocket tanks, or some other yet undetermined cause.

Much of the early day was spent with the weather which was pummeling Cuba and Florida with rain and high winds. They precisely charted the eye of Hurricane Gladys. Then later they saw small dimples in the centers of Thunderheads rising over Latin America and noted their small scale similarity to the eye of the swirl-

Senate Postpones Action On ROTC, Farm Workers Bills

BY SHARON O'BRIEN

For the second meeting in a row, the Student Senate last night adjourned without hearing the two reconsideration motions which had previously been entered in the minutes. These motions pertain to previous Senate action on ROTC credit, and on a bill which supports the migrant farm workers in California.

New committee appointments were as follows: John Cowie, SUG Board; Rick Staples, SGA; Floyd Forman, Finance. John Jubois resigned as chairman of Ways and Means and Senator Daniel Madden was appointed in his stead.

SGA Chairman Dev Cochrane moved to go into Special Business to accept the results of the re-election which was held in Lewis House last Thursday. It resulted in a 51-51 tie and tonight the residents of Lewis will try again to elect their representative to the Senate.

The first seven motions of the evening, including two special business motions, were financial in

Editors Look Toward All-American As Delivery Time Nears 8A.M.

The DAILY COLLEGIAN has been awarded a First Class rating by the Associated Collegiate Press, Editor-in-Chief Jack Dean announced today. The rating is based on the paper's performance during the spring semester.

"It's quite an accomplishment when you consider that last year was our first as a daily paper," commented Dean. The paper was judged in comparison with those produced by other schools of similar enrollment and with the same frequency of issue.

"We only missed an All-American rating by a small margin," he said. "And after carefully reading the critical evaluation, I'd say we've made nearly all the necessary improvements this semester to insure that we won't miss next time." He also explained that there are five different ratings: All-American and First, Second, Third and Fourth Class.

The ACP judge's critique stated that the Daily Collegian " just falls short of the top dailies in the country."

"Right now," Dean said, "we're looking toward breakfast-time delivery coupled with complete coverage of campus news." The paper was on campus at 10:30 a.m. Monday, he said, and before 9:30 on Tuesday and Wednesday.

Said Managing Editor Don Epstein, "Jack and I won't be completely satisfied until we see a regular 8:00 a.m. delivery every day." He added that such a delivery time is imminent.

VICTORY IS IN SIGHT---After an uphill battle of several weeks, Daily Collegian editors congratulate each other as an 8 a.m. delivery appears to be in sight. Dr. Janowitz:

'Games Married People Play'

RICHARD LANE-Senior Reporter

Lecturing before the Dames Club at the Farley 4-H Lodge on campus last night, Dr. Julian Janowitz, Head of the Dept. of Mental Health at UMass, warned of the many dangers of "Games Married People Play."

Janowitz told his female audience that many of these "games" can lead in numbers of cases to destruction of the mariage (through divorce), hurt feelings by members of the marriage or family and bad consequences for the children involved.

The "games" the University Dr. was referring to are those situations in which there is a transformation of personality from the adult stage of an individual to another social role such as parent or child.

Janowitz stated that the adult which every husband and wife is in reality that objective, rational being of personality is some - times turned back in chronological order to childhood or parenthood. This change, he continued, based on the influence of an identity or ego that once was. In the case of reverting to the role of a child the reason is usually a desire to shed the responsibility and rationality, anddecision-making of adulthood. In the case of the parent role it is based on the exposure to parental environment in the past.

Janowitz stated the husband may act as the child trying to shed his adult responsibilities, the wife acts as mother trying to look over him.

According to Dr. Janowitz every married adult plays these games at one time or another. The trouble comes, saidJanowitz, when this shedding of the adult role for another in marriage becomes "a way to live."

"Uproar" was one "game" which Janowitz referred to as particularly bad for marriages. In this instance husband and wife become quarrelsome due to their shifting of roles and identities and create a state of constant turmoil in the family.

The consequences of this situation are that the children learn the "script" of this game, according to Janowitz, and thus when they grow up and marry they in turn act as their parents did because of parental influence in their environment.

Janowitz did state, however, that people "often need to play games" as a way of "passing and getting through time or a situation." He referred to parties where the husbands and wives separate and in which the men may act as children by engaging in "meaningless" sports talk while the women act as parents by talking of the "P.T.A," and other areas in which they really are not qualified.

In this type of "game" playing and role shifting "nobody is hurt," though, "nobody gets to know each other, either," said Janowitz.

Dr. Janowitz concluded his lecture by stating that the way to make sure this "game playing" did not get out of hand is to "be able to stop and say 'what happened?' "One must become an observer rather than a participant, step out of the role and become an adult again."

There must be much "thinking, confrontation, and discussion" in order to handle the problems, Janowitz concluded.

nature. Two of these involved appropriations to SWAP. The first was to cover a deficit which was incurred at last year's conference; the other was to appropriate funds needed to cover the expenditures in this year's budget which were previously overlooked. Both these motions were passed.

The other financial motions which were acted upon favorably included category changes in the budget of the Campus Humor Magazine, in order to allow members of the staff to attend a conference in New York; an appropriation to the Campus Humor magazine to cover advertising costs; and the loan of $200 to the Accounting Association with the stipulation that this is to be repaid by November 1.

A motion to appropriate $162 for a telephone to give recordings on the activities in the Five College Area was defeated. The rationale behind this action was the fact that there already exists sufficient advertising of these events.

The remaining financial motion, to appropriate $137 to the Volunteer Fire Department to cover the cost of expenses for the 1968-1969 year was recommitted to Finance Committee for one week.

The only bill pending under the heading of "Old Business" was the acceptance of the constitution of Ralph Waldo Emerson House, and this was passed with no objection.

The bill which provoked the most discussion was one presented by the Academic Affairs Committee which proposed to "recommend to the Provost that there be three classes of honorific graduation designations". The first two "designations" are the ones which already exist, while the third would award the phrase "With College Honors" to those students who have satisfactorily participated in the particular honors program of their School or College. An amendment proposed by Vice President Hartwell which would add a fourth designation, "With distinction in department" for those persons having an overall cumulative average of 2.6 and an average of 3.4 in their major field. This amendment was passed.

However, in discussion on the main motion, there was raised the philosophical question of the grading system as it now exists and whether or not by giving support to this motion would put the Senate behind the present grading system. Senator Robert Skrok stated the case briefly when he stated that those in favor of the present grading system should vote for the motion, while those who did not favor the system should vote against it.

This motion was defeated on a roll call vote, 38-32-5. Reconsideration of this motion was entered in the minutes.

The final motion of the evening, calling for the Senate to request the administration to act toward the resolution of the problem of emergency transportation to the infirmary, was withdrawn by its co-sponsors. A motion, similar in nature, will be proposed in the Services Committee, calling for that Committee's investigation into the problem.

Former UM Prexy's Daughter Aims For Top Union Position

BY NEAL NOVACK
Staff Reporter

"I feel that I am uniquely qualified to provide leadership for the local union (1776) at its particular stage of development, because I've gained a knowledge of the structure of the union and the laws governing state employees through my connections with labor unions in the state." These are the reasons expressed by twenty-four-year-old Mrs. Barbara L. Fifield, principal clerk in the Labor Relations Office in Draper Hall, for her announcement yesterday that she will run for president of the local.

The election will be held in Draper Hall, Room 124, Sunday Oct. 27, at 10 a.m. Eligible to vote will be a union membership exceeding 300, all of whom are employed at UMass. They include workers in the custodial, police, and agricultural departments.

Mrs. Fifield, daughter of former UMass president, J. Paul Mather, maintains a close daily contact with local union members and strongly affirms that the basic and most vital issue confronting the union is its need for autonomy. Mrs. Fifield went further by saying that, "local union autonomy can't be maintained unless local union leadership is aware of state laws and regulations governing union activities." She stressed the fact that it is the members of the local who determine the actions of the leadership.

During the recent seven day custodial walkout at the University protesting working conditions and wages, Mrs. Fifield, acting as advisor to the president of the local union, provided information on negotiations to the union members involved in the wild-cat work stoppage. Efforts by the union and Mrs. Fifield have resulted in contract proposals soon to be submitted to the UMass administration.

Mrs. Fifield's candidacy is not, as such, a competitive one; she says she has no quarrel with the present local leadership. Aiding her in her efforts, Mr. Nelson H. Jaegar, a resident of Amherst, and current vice-president of Local 1776, has appeared with Mrs. Fifield before local union groups. Mr. Jaegar, a working foreman in the maintenance department at the University, supports Mrs. Fifield's essential argument for union autonomy on the local level.

Previous to serving as adviser to Local 1776, American Federation of State, County and Municipal Workers, AFL-CIO, Mrs. Fifield was employed by the Dean's office in the College of Arts & Sciences at UMass from 1962 to 1965. A native of Denver, Colo., she moved to Amherst on the appointment of her father as president at UMass, and attended Amherst High School. She continued her education at a business college in Iowa City, Iowa and then returned to the Amherst area in 1962.

Young Republicans To Meet Tonight

George T. Sulzner, PhD., of the University's government, will address the Young Republicans Club tonight at 6:30 in the Plymouth Room.

Dr. Sulzner teaches American Government, the Presidency in American Government, and Political Parties and Elections.

The Young Republicans welcome all those interested in attending the meeting.

This being an election year, the Young Rwpublicans have been active, both at the Hartford Headquarters when Richard Nixon spoke there October 4th, and at the Massachusetts Young Republicans Association. They participated on the opening of the Republican Headquarters on the commons in Amherst.

Nixon

NEW YORK (AP) - Richard M. Nixon, launching a series of 10 nightly radio speeches, said Wednesday night he listens carefully to young people-even strident dissenters-and could help close the generation gap.

The Republican presidential candidate backed voting rights for 18-year olds, establishment of a volunteer army and an eventual end to the draft, and creation of a Youth Service Agency in Washington to coordinate all programs dealing with the younger generation.

Humphrey

ST. LOUIS (AP) - Hubert H. Humphrey acknowledged Wednesday that he is trailing Richard M. Nixon in the race for the presidency, but said he will defeat the Republican candidate in a "hair-breadth" decision.

"We'll give you the biggest surprise in many, many years," the vice president said.

Humphrey said in a local television interview that he still wants the support of Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy. But he recalled that although McCarthy has refused to endorse him, McCarthy has endorsed Humphrey's running mate, Sen. Edmund S. Muskie of Maine. Humphrey said he took this endorsement of Muskie as a "perverse, inverse, outverse" endorsement of himself.

The vice president predicted it would be a close election and "very uncertain"

Soviet Presence Legalized As Czechoslovaks 'Normalize'

PRAGUE (AP) - Czechoslovakia reluctantly signed with the Soviet Union Wednesday night a treaty legalizing the presence of Soviet bloc troops on Czechoslovak territory. Most will withdraw soon but there was no indication how many would stay, Tass quoted Soviet Premier Alexi Kosygin as saying in a speech.

Kosygin said at the signing of the treaty with Premier Oldrich Cernik that the withdrawal will include troops of Poland, Hungary, East Germany and Bulgaria. The four East bloc nations joined the Soviet Union in invading Czechoslovakia Aug. 20 to smother a liberalizing trend away from Sovietstyle rule.

Kosygin's speech was made available by Tass, the Soviet news agency, in Moscow.

Kosygin made clear that the Soviet Union expects the Czechoslovak leaders to take further measures to return their country to old-line communism-what he called "normalization of the situation."

The Kremlin has used the term "normalization" to mean restoration of features of communism as practiced in the Soviet Union, such as press censorship and suppression of dissent.

The agreement set "conditions for the temporary stay of Soviet armies on our territory" the Czechoslovak state television reported.

The conditions were not made public immediately.

The airport reception for Kosygin on his arrival from Moscow was chilly, reflecting antagonism aroused by Kremlin pressures that have forced the Czechoslovaks to abandon various reforms instituted since last January.

Hampshire College Appoints Dean Of School of Humanities and Art

President Franklin Patterson of Hampshire College today announced the appointment of Francis Dennis Smith as Dean of the School of Humanities and Arts and Professor of Humanities and Arts. In his new post, Dean Smith will assume resonsibility for developing the faculty of the School and leading in the design of a humanities and arts curriculum for Hampshire College.

"Francis Dennis Smith brings high ability and a wide background of relevant experience to this task," President Patterson said in commenting on the appointment. Hampshire's plans for the School of Humanities and Arts will stress studies that relate the humanities to man's modern environment and will emphasize experience in the arts, particularly those arts that affect urban life today. "These plans," said President Patterson, "require the kind of leadership Dean Smith can give. He is a novelist and poet, a man experienced in government service, and a teacher-scholar deeply interested in students who are living in a culture of revolutionary change."

In his announcement, President Patterson observed that classicist William Arrowsmith, consultant to Hampshire College in the humanities, responded to Dean Smith's appointment as "superb," saying that "he is unmistakably right for the post: brilliant, unconventional, imaginative, endowed with very shrewd judgment of men and an obviously ferocious eye for talent." Responses from other scholars and artists were similarly enthusiastic, according to Mr. Patterson.

Homecoming 1968 Highlights Rascals and Hugh Masekela

Saturday night, Homecoming 1968, will highlight two of the top names in show business today. Featured in the concert will be The Rascals, one of the nation's top ranked rock groups, and Hugh Masekela, a bright new instrumentalist.

There will be two shows Saturday night, October 26, 1968, at the Cage. Show times are 7 and 10 and admission is $3.50. Tickets are on sale at the Student Union Ticket Office.

In the past two years The Rascals have become consistent hitmakers on the U. S. record scene and a highly popular group throughout the world. They have been awarded two gold records for their hits "Good Lovin" and "Groovin". Two of their albums, " Collections" and "Groovin", have made the top five album chart listings.

One of the factors that has contributed so much to the Rascals' success is the fact that they write and arrange all of the songs they record.

Hugh Masekela is the most talked-about new musical talent in the contemporary field today. He's the man that brought the musical hit of the summer of 1968 to the American people - "Grazing in the Grass".

Masekela has developed a new sound, combining traditional South African music with contemporary pop music. His new music has surprised and won audiences across the nation.

Prof Sees No Danger To Credit

BY ROSE MILLER
Staff Reporter

At least one professor of military science is unconcerned over the Student Senate's recommendation to abolish ROTC credit. However, Captain Ramille R. Rebello admits he would be concerned if the Faculty Swnate considered such action.

Captain Rebello, assistant professor of military science in the Reserve Officer Training Corps program told the daily COLLEGIAN that the failure of ROTC to rebut the Student Senate's arguments if due to the level to which the issue has been carried.

Captain Rebello, interviewed last Thursday after the Senate failed to reconsider the abolition of ROTC credit Wednesday, asserted that the Student Senate's action "will not affect students already in ROTC." ROTC was established on campus under the Morrill Land Grant Act of 1863.

The Faculty Senate Subcommittee on Military Affairs, under the direction of Associate Dean E. E. Lindsey, was established on Nov. 20, 1967, and addressed itself to four main questions dealing with ROTC's presence on campus. In answer to the question, "Does the country need ROTC?" the Committee adopted a resolution that ROTC "insures...large proportions of officers who will have had their principal education in civilian educational institution... have avoided the rigidity of purely military schools." It would, according to the subcommittee, "lessen...growth of a professional military clique."

On the basis of these resolutions, the conslusion of the report reads, "the Committee heartily endorses ...the continuation of ROTC on campus."

The Faculty Subcommittee justified its overlooking the question of credit for ROTC, saying "Some of the committee feel there is no such thing as University standards and the way to determine whether military courses meet University standards is to examine the practices of various departments. . . we feel such a procedure would not be welcome. . .for this reason the committee has not seen fit to make any comment on the compatibility question or on the credit question for ROTC courses."

If the ROTC issue is re-introduced in the Faculty Senate, Captain Rebello implied there would be need for concern because that unit has not decided the credit issue.

Examining the question of how many students are interested in ROTC, Captain Rebello admits that fewer freshmen have entered the program in the past two years, but, he submitted, it may be due to change in recruiting practices. Since 1967, when freshmen orientation recruiting groups were dropped, fewer freshmen have been made aware of ROTC's program.

This is not in accordance with the Morrill Land Act of 1963 which provided the military training for all entering males. This mandatory education was reaffirmed in 1890 and continued until 1963.

Referring the general conclusions of the subcommittee on military affairs, Captain Rebello summed up ROTC's role as producing "leadership qualities." To prove his point he pulled out a notebook filled with letters from all major U. S. industries asking for ROTC's graduates to fill their positions, for in the companies' words, "ROTC graduates are known for their leadership qualities."

'Liberation Day' Sparks Violence In Roxbury

BOSTON (AP) - Scattered incidents of violence occurred in the Roxbury Negro district Wednesday as hundreds of junior high and high school students stayed away from classes to attend "Liberation Day" exercises.

Sponsors of the program said it was held to "liberate and educate the minds of the black student to think black."

School officials reported 1,972 students missing from classes in eight schools in the Roxbury-Dorchester area.

A group of teen-agers forced their way into the Martin Luther King School and demanded that the Negro principal, John Joyce release students 40 minutes early to participate in Liberation Day. Joyce agreed, explaining later that "I am a black principal and I want to get along with my community."

Police sent a dozen motorcycle officers into the area and held a busload of officers in reserve at a police station. Order was restored in about two hours. TC920ped Oct. 16 the border.

With the Thieu regime publicly set against relaxing pressure on the Reds, South Vietnamese security chiefs were reportedly alerted to prepare for an announcement that might touch off adverse public reaction.

President Johnson was confronted with a lull situation last summer in which some advisers urged him to cut out the bombing. He decided against this in late July after intelligence reports indicated the enemy was gathering for more attacks, rather than intending to taper off.

Intelligence reports on the current situation have convinced some U. S. officials that the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong may be less inclined to launch new offensives this time.

LBJ Signs Billion Dollar Aid To Education Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) - The nation is investing over $10 billion in the education of its young people-college students and slum kids.

The funds, authorized in two bills signed by President Johnson, extends school and student aid programs for three years and increases funds for work training programs designed to break youngsters from slum poverty cycles.

Contained in the $7.3-billion aid to higher education act is a provision shutting off aid to students convicted of taking part in activities which disrupt a college or university.

Violations of college regulations "of a serious nature" or a civil conviction stemming from disruptions make the student liable to loose federal assistance for two years.

The higher education bill also contains a section removing from the Office of Economic Opportunity the Upward Bound program designed to acclimate ghetto youngsters to campus atmosphere. The Department of Health, Education and Welfare takes the program over.

The $3.1-billion vocational education bill contains a rider which some legislators said would nullify much of the $6-billion federal spending cut decreed by Congress.

Sponsors of the rider said it was intended to remove the power of the President and his Budget Bureau to make any reductions in education funds below the amounts appropriated by Congress.

The biggest authorization in the higher education bill, $3.1 billion, would cover grants and loans for building construction.

The next biggest item in the bill, $1.87 billion, will make funds available for direct loans to students, federal scholarships, and government insurance of private loans.

About one-quarter of the more than six million students in college use one of these forms of aid.

The bill also contains a number of new programs proposed by the administration.

These include special services for disadvantaged students, grants to strengthen graduate education, provision for cooperative arrangements among colleges in a program called "Networks for knowledge," specialized types of training for public service personnel in federal, state and local governments, and grants to provide clinical experience in preparation and trial of cases for law students.

Holyoke Complex Destroyed; Fire Marshals Investigate

HOLYOKE (AP) - Investigators are expected to begin today the task of sifting through the rubble from an industrial complex that was virtually levelled yesterday by a general alarm fire.

No one was hurt in the blaze, which raged for two hours befpre being brought under control.

Unofficial damage estimates ranged as high as $1 million.

Firemen from four communities responded to the alarm, which first was sounded shortly before midnight Tuesday. Witnesses said the building already was engulfed in flames when the first firemen began arriving.

Fire Chief William W. Mahoney said late yesterday a state fire marshal would investigate.

The fire was the second serious blaze in western Massachusetts in less than two weeks.

CCENS Scholars Receive Tutoring

The 125 Freshmen Black students enrolled at UMass in the C.C.E.N.S. Program-- the Committee for the Collegiate Education of Negro Students--spend almost as much time with tutors as they do in regular classes.

Students who carry twelve class hours a week spend eight hours in tutoring sessions, for which they receive two credits per semester. The sessions are conducted individually and in groups of five or six.

The C.C.E.N.S. students are not academically "deficient," Mrs. Shepard stressed. They have the potential to do college work, but require assistance. The compulsory tutorial sessions "prove to the rest of the University that the C.C.E.N.S. students, as all students, must work to succeed academically."

The Shame of Biafra

The Biafrans are dying, men, women and children are being slaughtered, by starvation or by Nigerians. Genocide, albeit unpremeditated is occurring in West Africa. Many Ibo children who do survive this holocaust will be mentally or physically inadequate for life due to protein shortages. The adults will always carry the terror in their hearts the fear that because they are Ibo they are not safe in Nigeria.

There is a parallel. Substitute Jew for Ibo and Germany for Nigeria. Yet in a perverse way the tragedy of European Jewry did have a salutory consequence for Jews. After 2000 years the Western world woke up to what had been done to the Jews for 2000 years. A vast guilt feeling arose about what had been done to Jews by Christians. The surge of pro-Jewish feeling found an outlet in support for the establishment of Israel. The photographs of Arabs killed in 1948, to paraphrase one sociologist, reinforced acceptance of Jews, since it was shown that they, like other peoples, could kill. Thus anti-semitism in the west has decreased immensely. Today Jewry and Jewishness is an accepted, indeed imitated, segment of western society.

Unfortunately for the blacks both in America and abroad, the Nigerians are Negroes. Since butchery is being perpetrated anyway, it would be far better for the cause of Negro rights and of equality for all colored peoples in the world if the Nigerians were white. In Biafra the murderers are black. The whole scene serves to bolster the warped arguments of those who spout black inferiority and lack of civilization, both in Rhodesia and Alabama.

The sight of whites slaughtering blacks would be beneficial to blacks. It might at least bring home to the white man the inhumanity with which he has treated the black man for 400 years, for it seems that no matter how well documented the persecutions, what has been done to the black man in America does not horrify whites. A final, foreign (if Americans are guilty they will rationalize as Germans do) holocaust seems necessary for whites to accept blacks as equals.

This seems to be the pattern, we must nearly destroy a people before we acknowledge their worth. And tragically, though blacks are being slaughtered, blacks are also the slaughterers. This new link in the chain of historical accidents and white-man-made catastrophes which have befallen the black man is just one more outrage. Maturing today, living in America, you feel, if only vicariously, the truth of James Baldwin's words, "To be a Negro in this country and to be relatively conscious is to be in a rage almost all the time." White, middle-class, you still might ask youself, "How does the black man stand it, what will have to happen before we accept him as a man?"

Ugly Soviet Justice

Last Friday, October 11, the Soviet government convicted five Soviet citizens of protesting Russia's invasion of Czechoslovakia. They had protested in Red Square but only for three minutes before they were beaten and arrested by Soviet police. The verdict was never in doubt. It never is in Russia. Three of the five were sentenced to exile for three to five years and the other two received jail terms of 2-1/2 and 3 years.

After the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia, critics of America's involvement in Vietnam charged the United States with hypocrisy in our condemnation of the Soviet's actions. However, they haven't said a word about Russian "justice" toward the five protestors. Yet communism has again reared its ugly head and dealt a harsh blow to world peace.

Merely the fact that the five protestors were arrested, let alone convicted and sentenced to exile, instills a feeling of shock and repulsion in those who have experienced democracy. The Soviet facts of life, no freedom of speech, no freedom of religion, no freedom of the press, no freedom to protest, no individuality and complete servitude to the state, have made apparent to the free world the evils of communism.

In view of the fact that over 1/3 of the people in the world are ruled by communism, those in the free world should indeed, count their blessings.

Preoccupying Force

INSIDE REPORT:

Nixon Eyes Wallace Electors

BY ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON-Secret discussions are now underway in Richard Nixon's Park Avenue headquarters on the possibility of enticing a handful of Wallace electors into the Nixon camp in case Nixon's Electoral College total fails to reach the 270 votes needed for election.

The underlying theory in the Nixon camp today is that any negotiation with third-party candidate George Wallace himself is out. Dealing with Wallace, Nixon's advisers believe, would put the Republican nominee in an intolerable political bind at the outset of his administration and must be avoided.

But detaching a handful of Wallace electors in direct negotiations with them, not with Wallace himself, is quite another matter. And although the whole issue may very well be moot on Nov. 6, the day after the election, Mitchell's tentative strategy at the present time is to take that route if Nixon fails to get a majority in the Electoral College.

As of today, Nixon is so far ahead in the presidential campaign that he almost certainly would wind up with a solid Electoral College majority without help from Wallace. But Nixon can't be certain. It is mathematically possible for him to run far ahead of Democrat Hubert Humphrey and third-party nominee George Wallace in the popular vote but still fall a few votes short of the required 270-vote majority in the Electoral College.

If the election is then thrown into the House, Nixon knows, and makes no secret of it in talks with friends, that with each state having one vote the odds-on favorite to win election would be Humphrey, not Nixon. As of today, the Democrats control 28 of the 50 state delegations in the House. The Republicans have only a small prospect of capturing a majority of the state delegations in the new House, to be elected in November. Thus, Humphrey would probably emerge as President, or the nation would face a prolonged and dangerous Constitutional crisis.

It is precisely that possibility that Mitchell's tentative plan would guard against. If Nixon gets, say, 260 electors, 10 shy of the majority, Mitchell's plan would be to negotiate separately for 10 Wallace electors, get them to cast their votes for Nixon and thus prevent the election from moving to the House for the first time in 144 years.

At this writing, there has been no contact at all between Nixon's New York headquarters and any of the Wallace electors in Southern states where Wallace is likely to win. But working for Nixon in the South are several Republicans, ranging from conservative to right wing, who could play a key negotiating role between Nixon and electors nominally (but not legally) pledged to Wallace.

For example, a Wallace elector in South Carolina named James Hammond showed up at a testimonial luncheon for former Gov. James Byrnes at Greenville, S.C., on Oct. 4. Sen. Strom Thurmond, the state's top Republican who kept Southern delegations in line for Nixon at the Miami Beach convention, arranged to have Nixon drop in at the luncheon. Whether Nixon even met Hammond is not known, but Thurmond and possibly Byrnes himself, who is backing Nixon, would be natural bridges between Nixon and Wallace men in South Carolina.

In Louisiana, former Gov. Robert Kennon, who is backing Nixon but has close contracts with Wallace men, would be an obvious go-between.

The only Southern Republican working out of Nixon's New York headquarters who is privy to Mitchell's tentative Electoral College strategy is Fred LaRue, former National Committeeman in Mississippi. LaRue himself, however, is regarded as too closely identified with the national Republican party to negotiate directly with Wallace electors.

Nixon's Southern leaders are fully aware of the powerful hold that Wallace has over his own electors. They are convinced, however, that the threat of a Humphrey presidency, plus concessions by Nixon on political patronage, could swing enough electors into the Nixon column if Nixon comes out of the election just a few votes short of the 270 electoral votes needed to win.

Inside Line

Column of Controversy

BY CHRIS McGAHAN

Ever since Inside Line made its debut in the "Collegian"--now about three weeks ago--people have been approaching me and offering various comments, such as: "I liked your editorial yesterday," or "That article you wrote was terrible!" (I make no comment on the respective frequency of the two remarks.) One person even had the temerity to say that my "article", as he put it, had bored him.

My immediate reply to all three remarks is to say: "it's not an editorial or article; it's a column." After that point in our conversation has been reached, any additional response is significantly influenced by a number of factors, among them: 1, size of commentor; 2, tenor of his remarks; 3, vehemence with which remark was delivered.

But I at least stay around long enough to make that one point--it is a column. It is presented to COLLEGIAN readers as one person's opinions about politics and things political in the community we all live in. My judgments are purely my own, made on the basis of personal observations of people and circumstances surrounding political situations. As such I take full responsibility for any bruised egos or offended sensibilities as a result of my remarks.

This column grew out of a series of conversations last summer between Jack Dean, Don Epstein and myself. At that time they indicated to me they were looking for an "old political person" to serve as Student Government Editor. Although I could have quibbled with what seemed to me their rather premature analysis and description of my status, since I was only 21, and since the phrase "old political person" seemed like a polite way of saying "has-been", I chose not to and accepted the job.

Not being a masochist by nature, I will avoid name-calling and mud-slinging of any kind (especially about the 95% of people on campus who are bigger than I am), seeking by this clever device to avoid reciprocal name-calling, mud-slinging, and other types of response. But I intend to call the shots as I see them.

Many people who will read this column will have already heard my point of view. Many others will not. (Most probably won't care.) But if this column can serve to draw attention to politically significant situations on campus, if it can even minimally heighten interest in the issues affecting all of us, if it can create just a little excitement and controversy, then it will have served its purpose.

"You're treated like a professional right from the start."

Don earned a B.S.E.E. in 1965. Today, he's an Associate Engineer in systems design and evaluation at IBM. Most of his work consists of determining modifications needed to make complex data processing systems fit the specialized requirements of IBM customers.

Depending on the size of the project, Don works individually or in a small team. He's now working with three other engineers on part of an air traffic control system that will process radar information by computer. Says Don: "There are only general guidelines. The assignment is simply to come up with the optimum system."

Set your own pace

Recently he wrote a simulation program that enables an IBM computer to predict the performance of a data processing system that will track satellites. He handled that project himself. "Nobody stands over my shoulder," Don says. "I pretty much set my own pace."

Don's informal working environment is typical of Engineering and Science at IBM. No matter how large the project, we break it down into units small enough to be handled by one person or a few people.

Don sees a lot of possibilities for the future. He says, "My job requires that I keep up to date with all the latest IBM equipment and systems programs. With that broad an outlook, I can move into almost any technical area at IBM—development, manufacturing, product test, space and defense projects, programming or marketing."

Check with your placement office

If you're interested in engineering or science at IBM, ask your placement office for more information.

Or send a resume or letter to Paul Koslow, IBM Corporation, Dept. C, 425 Park Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10022. We'd like to hear from you even if you're headed for graduate school or military service.

Last Sunday Pilgrim Airport in Hatfield was busy with club activity. Pictured here are students and staff members receiving instruction as student pilots and introductory rides as pilots-to-be. Activity planned for this Saturday, October 19, is geared to spectator interest and participation. On-lookers are invited to be bombardiers in a "bombing" contest - $1 buys three "bombs" (each a two-ounce bag of flour). The more timid can purchase the co-pilot's seat at the same rate to assist in a "spot-landing" contest. Take-offs begin at 12 noon at Pilgrim Airport on River Road, just four miles South of Mt. Sugarloaf. Come out and fly with the club. (Rain date - Sunday, October 20.)

Security Warns Student Body Of Increased Automobile Theft

Lieutenant Daniel Schwartz of the University Security Police force has announced an increase in automobile thefts here compared with a year ago at this time.

The campus policeman's remarks were in connection with the thefts of three cars and a Honda motorcycle, all stolen within a one week period this semester. The three cars were parked in F Lot, the Honda in Orchard Hill.

Schwartz warned students to lock their vehicles and check them periodically, especially in isolated areas.

Security Director John Marchant has stated that he has received complaints on vehicles being parked in loading zones at construction sites, tow zones and fire lanes at the University towers.

"Students should not be surprised if they park in tow zones and their vehicles are missing," stated Marchant.

Fine Arts Council Elects Chairman

Ray Taylor, class of '69 was elected chairman of the Fine Arts Council for the 1968/69 season at a meeting of the Council on October 3. Taylor succeeds Professor Paul Norton, head of the Art Department.

Taylor comes from Pittsfield and has been a member of the University Bands for three years. He has served as a member of the Fine Arts Council for two years and is currently Chairman of the Student Senate Activities Committee and Fine Arts Editor of the Collegian.

The Fine Arts Council represents the entire University community and is composed of ten members divided equally between faculty and students. Various programs relating to fine arts activities such as the Concert Association, Chorale and Bands etc, are financed in part or entirely by Council grants.

Composers' Forum Performs Tonight

The Philadelphia Composers' Forum will perform tonight at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium, preceded by a lecture-demonstration this afternoon at 3:30, also in Bowker.

Founded in 1954 as a "non-profit educational institution devoted to the performance and dissemination of contemporary music," the Forum will present two avant-garde world premieres and two works new to Amherst. The premieres are Diane Thome's "Le Berceau do Mile" and Jacob Glick's Octet-Four Hands.

The performing group includes 27 gifted young professional musicians, although the size varies according to the works performed. Unique in its diversity and presentation of new music, the Forum also attempts to involve the community in discussion and lectures to stimulate interest and to gain a better understanding of the music it performs.

Both events are sponsored by the Distinguished Visitors Program, and the public is invited to attend without charge.

Student Unrest - The Whys and Wherefores

NEW YORK (AP) - Is there rhyme or reason behind the current student unrest?

Parents, educators and others have agonized over the question since the student "movement," so full of sound and fury, so vague in its objectives, invaded the once placid campus scene.

To anthropologist Margaret Mead, the answer is affirmative and the reasons fairly clear. She believes the students are trying to break out of a snug cocoon, woven for them-and accepted - in times past but no langer useful.

She spells out her views in an article in the current Columbia Forum, at a time when the university, a storm center of student activists, is gingerly adjusting to the problems highlighted by last spring's great campus disturbances.

Rebellious students generally square off against the "system" -which may mean a particular university, the national "establishment," or the universe.

At Columbia, Dr. Mead writes, the system was "neither despotic nor systematically exploitative," merely archaic. More fundamentally, she holds, students at Columbia as at other colleges until recently were treated as "wards of the academic institutions, a position that joins special controls with special privileges and immunities from the civil authorities."

The students' postion was one of "tutelage, socially privileged but politically and economically in the role of minors," Dr. Mead writes, adding: "The moralists who have lost out in regulating the private lives of maturer adults still attempt to regulate the private lives of young adults by treating the late teens as an extension of childhood."

This worked while acceptable to all concerned. But now, according to Prof. Mead, higher education is no longer a privilege; it has become a "requirement laid on young people by the standards of employment in our society."

"It is no longer appropriate," she writes, "to treat students as a privileged and protected group who, in return for this special station, abstain from political activity . . . submit to the regulation of their private lives, and risk expulsion for every minor infraction of outmoded rules."

Dr. Mead recalls that the suffragettes, when women impetuously were seeking the right to vote two generations ago, "resorted to similar types of behavior - marches, hunger strikes, throwing themselves in the path of mounted police."

And she adds: "Whenever a group that has been required to be docile, segregated, submissive, undemanding, and unparticipating, glimpses the possibility of wider participation in the society, we may expect phenomena like these."

"Today's students should no longer be dependent on their parents-those whose parents have any funds-nor should they be dependent on scholarships grudgingly dealed out after a means test.

"They should be given full economic status, the status of an adult who is expected to marry, who works and has a Social Security number and may become a member of a trade union; someone who can get a morigage and a telephone, buy furniture on time and can, if necessary, collect unemployment insurance.

"Under the guise of privilege and protection, we have been penalizing our student population, separating them from participation in the affairs of the real world

Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow To Be Shown

Sunday, October 20, in Bowker Auditorium, The Student Union Movie Committee presents, "Yesterday, Today, and Tomorrow". The cost is .50 cents per person.

Sophia Loren and Marcello Mastroianni are superb in this Italian comedy. The movie is set in three episodes with Sophia and Mastroianni starring in each. In the first, Miss Loren is a black marketeress who must stay pregnant or go to jail. Mastroianni plays her worn out husband.

In the second episode, Miss Loren is a wealthy matron who is playing around and Mastroianni is her new plaything.

In the third episode Miss Loren is a prostitute who has made a solemn pledge to a young priest next door to keep her morals if he will stay in the cloth.

Rewrite Education

We're looking for a girl interested in doing re-write work for just a few hours each week. We regularly receive posters and flyers announcing scholarship and graduate programs that are worthy of announcement in the paper. The trouble is that these don't come in a prose form suitable for publication. Their fragmented style has to be fleshed out, and put into suitable news copy format. If you'd be willing and able to do this, please contact the COLLEGIAN office and leave your name with the secretary.

Redman Conference Win Streak On Line Against URI

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Sports
Thursday, October 17, 1968
Page 12 Vol. XCVII No 29

Rams Defense Grown Stronger

Two streaks may come to an end Saturday when the Redmen take to the field against the Rhode Island Rams at Kingston. The Redmen have won 15 straight Yankee Conference games and beaten the Rams for the last nine years.

Rhode Island has been getting stronger recently, however. In 1966, UMass came from behind to beat them, 14-9, and last year another Redmen rally toppled the Rams, 28-24.

After dropping their first two contests this year, to Temple, 28-0, and Brown, 10-9, the Rams have now taken two straight and appear to be in top midseason form. They trounced Southern Connecticut, 33-8 and last Saturday they clobbered Vermont, 52-10.

The Rams are led by Larry Caswell, an outstanding passing quarterback who last season broke an NCAA record for least interceptions in a season. So far this year, Caswell has completed 50 of 109 passes for 722 yards and five touchdowns.

Caswell's backup man, who starred against the Redmen two years back, is Tom Fay, who has hit 12 of 24 for 202 yards and a TD.

Split end Henry Walker, 23 receptions for 312 yards, and converted quarterback Steve Stramin, 13 catches for 214 yards, are usually on the receiving end of these tosses.

Rhode Island has a decent ground game. Sophomore fullback Tom Wheeler has picked up 224 yards going into Saturday's contest. All-Yankee Conference fullback Brent Kaufman, who's been out with an injury, may be ready to take over his old spot against UMass.

KEN KUFMAN, URI Co-Captain

The defensive unit has just as much size and speed. The front four average about 235 and are experienced at blowing in on enemy quarterbacks. This quartet features Leon Spinney, Mike Healy, Greg Bogdanick and Warren Negri.

Behind these men are middle guards Richard Andrew and Bryan Babcock and linebackers Dave McBriar and Floyd Hightower.

Overall, one could say the Rams have the personnel and the times on their side. They're overdue to drop their Big Yankee Conference Brother.

The UMass freshman soccer team upped its record to 3-0 with two impressive wins last week. Saturday they travelled to Medford and came back with a 6-1 victory over Tufts. Monday, they won their third straight as they romped over Stockbridge, 6-0.

In the victory over Tufts, high scoring Lindo Alves opened the scoring early in the first period. He also helped the cause with four assists. Bruce Malinowski followed with the next two goals, one each in the first and second periods. John Russo scored midway through the second period to give UMass a 1-0 halftime lead.

Tufts closed the gap to 1-1, when they scored in the first minute of the second half, but this was as close as they could get.

In the win over Stockbridge, the freshmen showed fine scoring balance. Alves, Russo, McPherson and Augie Calheno all scored and the defense came up with their first shutout.

This Saturday, the frosh face a major test when they meet crosstown rival Amherst College.

Redman Runners Rip Rhody

The Redmen, now 3-2, placed five men in the top six as they came up with a top notch performance. The top five men for UMass were only 94 seconds apart.

Second to Wayne, who's time of 23:08 broke the record for the course by 24 seconds, was senior co-captain Paul Hoss, who ran with only two days of practice coming off his injury. Hoss was timed in 24:16. Leo Duart of UMass was third finishing in 24:17, a second behind Hoss. Fourth man for UMass and fourth in the race was co-captain Charlie Lang who covered URI's 4.6 mile course in 24:30.

Rhody's first runner, Pampel, finished fifth, followed closely by UMass senior Marc Gelinas, who was timed in 24:42. The Redman's sixth and seventh men were Larry Paulson, who finished 11th, and Diego Conzalez, who came in twelfth.

Head coach Ken O'Brien expressed pleasure with the way his team performed in the meet. He cited Wayne and Hoss' performances as tops for the Redmen. Coach O'Brien said that the lopsided score doesn't show who was the Eastern High School indoor mile champ last year, was the old record holder.

Wayne Lucas who has been the Little Redman's consistent number two man, placed third in a time of 14:09. He was followed by Bruce Blackburn (14:18) and Ron Swasey (14:20). Steve Whicher was two seconds behind Swasey in sixth place. UMass' sixth man, Mike Cowles, finished eighth and seventh man Al Mangan was ninth. The top seven UMass runners were exactly 60 seconds apart.

Coach O'Brien had high praise for the frosh team. He was very pleased with Dunsky's top performance.

URI's real strength. He said they are improving and will be ready for a good race when the conference meet comes up.

The frosh also racked up a victory against the Ram's frosh. Spearheading the frosh attack was Don Dumsku, who covered the 2.7 mile course in 13:43 to break the existing frosh record by three seconds. Dunsky beat Winfield of URI by eight seconds. Winfield

Crew Practices For Charles Regatta

Fall is usually associated with football, college and pro, but not to be left out of this is crew. The UMass crew club is practicing now for the annual Head of the Charles Regatta in Boston, October 27.

The regatta, which hosts over 50 clubs and 500 oarsmen, is held on a three mile upstream course on the Charles. The rowers endurance is tested by the winds, which come out of the west.

The varsity and junior varsity crews are working out seven days a week under varsity Coach Mike Faherty's direction. Faherty has been associated with UMass crew for three years, and last year he coached the freshmen to a 5-2 record.

The rowing style has been altered, and according to Faherty, the rowers, once they have adjusted to the changes, should be able to place well in the standings in Boston.

Experience will be the key for the varsity and jayvee boats. Each oarsman rowed last year for the club.

The freshmen are being coached by Kurt Betchick, a junior who has stroked both the frosh and the jayvee boats. The freshmen are rowing on the Connecticut River once a week and working out in Memorial Hall three times weekly. Coach Betchick is still looking for frosh candidates who are 6', 170 pounds.

Both coaches are planning extensive workouts in Memorial Hall during the winter in preparation for the spring. The crew club last year chalked up 13 wins with four seconds in 20 races.

The Athletic Department has increased its monetary support of the Crew Club, and the Student Senate continues to back them as an R.S.O. Varsity recognition for crew will come up before the Athletic Council sometime this winter.

Coach Faherty summed the outlook up by saying, "The boys are giving it a big effort this season, so I'm cautiously optimistic."

Bombing Halt Alive Despite Saigon Fears

Allies Skeptical; Hanoi Critical; But LBJ Continues Investigation

By LEWIS GULICK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON AP - The United States pushed ahead with bombing halt consultations with its allies Thursday despite resistance from Saigon and a denunciation from Hanoi.

But the White House and State Department kept tight silence on the latest developments in President Johnson's effort for a major peace move before he leaves office in January.

In Saigon, informed sources said President Nguyen Van Thieu refused to sign a joint declaration proposed by the United States on stopping the bombing of North Vietnam and U.S. ambassador Ellsworth Bunker was meeting again with the South Vietnamese chief.

In Hanoi, the official North Vietnamese newspaper Nhan Dan attacked what it termed "this arrogant demand" by President Johnson for reciprocity from North Vietnam in return for ending the air attacks.

Johnson himself made no reference to the diplomatic situation while publicly bestowing a Presidential Unit Citation on the 5th Marine Regiment for extraordinary heroism in Vietnam.

Other informants said the chief executive was awaiting a response from Hanoi to the latest U.S. proposal, presumably delivered through the U.S. North Vietnamese talks in Paris.

Details of the U.S. offer have not been made public. But Johnson's avowed policy, reaffirmed by the White House Wednesday, is to halt the bombing if this would quickly produce serious peace negotiations and "Hanoi would not take advantage of our restraint."

As Bunker conferred with Thieu for the second day in a row, a senior South Vietnamese political leader said his president had made plain that:

-The Saigon regime opposes a bombing halt without firm guarantees from North Vietnam that it would not escalate the war, or without assurances to that effect rom the United States.

-A bombing stop without such assurances "would lose the United States many allies."

The United States is consulting its war allies under the normal practice of discussing potential policy, practical or diplomatic moves with them. However, almost all the bombardment of North Vietnam is done by American forces, and the final decision on their actions rests with Johnson.

Administration authorities took a wait-and-see attitude on whether the Nhan Dan article foreshadows a formal North Vietnamese diplomatic rejection of Johnson's proposal.

The North Vietnamese newspaper statement was given added official backing in Hanoi's terms because it was signed "Commentator," meaning an authoritative source.

It criticized what it called "the stubborn attitude of the U.S. government" throughout the half-year old Paris talks, including the latest meeting Wednesday, and said:

"Flatly rejecting the legitimate and urgent demands of the Vietnamese people, the American people and world opinion, Johnson has stubbornly refused to stop unconditionally the bombing and all other acts of war against the Democratic Republic of Vietnam."

"Our people categorically reject the U.S. demand for reciprocity," it said. "If the U.S. government refuses to give up its stubborn attitude, it must bear full responsibility for the prolongation of the war and the stalemate of the Paris talks."

Homecoming Queen Finalists Chosen

The five Homecoming Queen Finalists are Meridith Ferguson, Sandra McCormack, Anne Robiechaud and Pam Wood. Homecoming officials also announced today that all tickets for the Friday Night Concert are sold out, some tickets still remain for the Saturday night shows, and there are still many seats left for the Sunday Concert.

Nixon For Bomb Halt

Would Support LBJ If Troop Safety Assured

ROCHESTER, N.Y. AP-Richard M. Nixon offered Republican support Thursday for a pause in the bombing of North Vietnam if President Johnson takes that action.

He said it is for Johnson to determine whether stopping the bombs would enhance peace prospects without costing American lives-and if the President makes that judgement, "We will support him."

Nixon said he has no information to indicate Johnson is going to order a halt.

But Nixon left open a route to later dissent. He said he would support a bombing pause if it would not endanger U.S. troops and if it would enhance the chances for an honorable peace.

The GOP presidential campaigner previously had fixed those terms as the proper price for a halt in U.S. bombing. His restatement, which put added emphasis on Johnson's sole determination, came amid speculation that a bombing pause may be coming.

It also came after a campaign day that included two conversations with Johnson, one be telephone from Kansas City, one over dinner in New York late Wednesday night.

Aboard his campaign jet, Nixon was asked whether he has any information pointing to a pause in the bombing. His reply: "No."

Should Johnson decide to cease the bombing, Nixon told a rally in Johnstown, Pa., "We will support him because we want peace and we do not want to play politics with peace."

Draft Foe Ferber To Speak Sunday

Michael Ferber, one of the Boston Five indicted for counselling draft registers, will speak at UMass Binai Brith Hillel Brunch, Sunday, October 20. The address will be held in the Student Union Main Ballroom at 1100 a.m.

Ferber along with Dr. Benjamin Spock, Rev. Sloane Coffin, Mitchell Goodman, and Marcus Raskin were indicted Jan. 5, 1968. Convicted on June 21, all but one were given sentences and fines. Raskin was the only one acquitted of conspiring to urge others to break the draft law.

The youngest of the five defendants, Ferber was handed a sentence of two years and a fine of 1000 dollars. At 24, he is a third year graduate student at Harvard in English.

During the prosecution the government cited ten acts in which the defendants conspired to encourage youths to resist the draft. The accused maintained that they only counselled those who had already decided to resist the draft. They claimed they were questioning the legality of the war.

Ferber was one of the founders of the New England Resistance which now has 500 nonsupporters and includes a full range of programs involving draft counseling, high school work, sanctuaries, publications, demonstrations, and research.

There will be a $1.00 admission charge (50% off to members) for the Hillel Brunch with Michael Ferber. Tickets may be purchased at the Student Union ticket office this week and next.

Collegiate Newspaper Editors Predict Nixon Victory In Poll

(ACP) Richard Nixon will be the next president of the United States, according to 91 percent of the nation's college newspaper editors.

The Associated College Press conducted an opinion survey based on a representative mail poll of 7 percent of college editors; the "Daily Collegian" is a member of ACP. The research division of the School of Journalism and Mass Communications at the University of Minnesota selected the editors using critieria such as location, circulation and frequency of publication.

Editors classified themselves as 46 percent independent, 30 percent Republican and 24 percent Democrat.

If the election had been held during the second week of October, 50 percent indicated they would vote for Nixon, 37 percent for Hubert Humphrey, 1-1/2 percent each for George Wallace and Dick Gregory and 10 percent undecided.

RICHARD M. NIXON

In the Republican classification, 83% of editors would vote for Nixon, as compared to 6% for Humphrey. Wallace would get a 4% vote from Republican editors and none from Democrats. Similarly, Gregory would receive 8% of the Democratic vote, but no Republican vote. Democratic editors vote 64% for Humphrey, 20% for Nixon. In the independent party, the votes are more equally distributed with 43% for Nixon, as opposed to 30% for Humphrey. Although each editor will vote for the man of his choice, there is a 91 percent agreement that Nixon will win.

D.V.P. branched out last night with its presentation of an avant-guarde concert. 200 listeners filled Bowker for the "good, but poorly organized" evening of entertainment.

DWP Program Branches Out With Avant-Guard Concert

BY ROBERT F. WILLIS Staff Reporter

New Images in Time and Sound were presented to an audience of 200 people and one cat in Bowker last night. The avant-garde program was presented by the Philadelphia Composers' Forum.

Organized must be the word which best describes the handling of the evening's events. It was obvious that the programs's sponsor, DVP, had things under control when none of the artists attended the dinner planned for them, when some of the artists arrived at 7:45 for the 8:00 concert, and when the program began twenty minutes late.

Once the concert began, the audience was treated to many unusual but not necessarily unpleasing sounds. The first work, "Ruptures of Flatnesses", for piano, was played by Reynaldo Reyes.

The second piece, "Octet-Four Hands" by Jacob Glick, used recorders, piano, celesta, mandolin, violin, viola, viola d'amore and viola da gamba with a narrator and slides. The aleatoric work, mixed images of heroes or non-heroes, depending on the listener's opinion of these leaders, with slogans and the familiar tunes played by the artists. The chance performance of the available themes brought about associations within the listener. These associations were the goal of the composer, who was one of the performing musicians.

Oliveros' "Night Jar" can best be described by quoting a man who entered the hall just before this work was displayed. "I only saw the last piece."

Stravinsky's "Renard", which was the final piece of the concert, could have been enjoyable, if the vocalists had been heard. The chamber orchestra accompanying them continually covered the text despite the conductor's repeated efforts to quiet them.

AP Campaign Analysis

Fulbright Faces Battle

The campaign has pushed beyond Arkansas' borders, enlisting contributors for both sides from throughout the country.

Headquarters for Charles T. Bernard, the GOP candidate, has mailed thousands of letters scoring Fulbright's foreign policy record and asking for contributions. But Bernard denies reports that he is receiving the aid of large conservative organizations.

Bernard's letter says liberal groups are "pouring thousands of dollars into the effort to save Fulbright," who is seeking his fourth Senate term.

Hoyt Purvis, Fulbright's press aide, denies that, but says "one or two" national organizations probably have encouraged their members to contribute to the senator.

SENATOR FULBRIGHT

Most observers say Fulbright holds a slim edge at this point, and some say he will do better than he did in the primary.

Wall St. Report

Hope Sparks Day

NEW YORK AP - Hopes of a bombing pause and a move toward peace in Vietnam spurred the stock market to a sharp gain Thursday on volume of 21.06 million shares, third largest in history.

Even though President Johnson denied that a bombing halt was near, the "peace rally" feeling was so contagious that investors, big and small, climbed aboard the bandwagon.

"There's a feeling in Wall Street that something is afoot," said Newton D. Zinder, analyst for E. F. Hutton & Co. as the market was booming.

Emotional buying combined with a parage of huge blocks of stocks obviously representing the big institutional investors such as mutual and pension funds, pushed first-hour volume to a record 7.66 million shares.

In the first half hour the Dow Jones industrial average spurted 7.46 to 962.77. Neither the pace of trading nor the advance of the averages could be fully maintained, however.

The Dow industrials closed with a rise of 3.60 at 958.91, its highest level since Feb. 23, 1966 when it closed at 960.13.

Pent-up orders were stimulated during the Wednesday closing by the bombing-pause rumors, giving a big lift to government bonds on that day when stocks were not traded. The big stock turnover was due therefor to a normal build-up of orders from Wednesday as well as to the rumors.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks rose ..2 to 356.2 with industrials up 3.3 to a high for the year, rails up .3 and utilities off.7.

Of 1,614 issues traded, 849 advanced and 566 declined. New highs for the year totaled 143 and new lows 12.

The New York Stock Exchange reported that a record of 120 blocks of 10,000 or more shares were traded, topping the previous record of 118 made Oct. 3. This reflected the increasing role of the big investor in the market, usually an investor representing an institution.

The market got off with a bang. Opinion was that not only the peace rumors but improving business and expectations of a Republican victory also played their parts in the rally.

Thirteen of the 15-most active stocks rose and 2 fell.

Soviet Troops Prepare For Extended Czeck Occupation

PRAGUE AP - Some Soviet troops began settling into permanent quarters Thursday for what looks like a long occupation under a treaty dictated by the Kremlin.

Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin, who flew here Wednesday to sign the treaty, returned to Moscow. His sendoff by Premier Oldrich Cernik was as cool - but correct - as was his arrival.

The terms of the treaty were secret, but some details may come to light when the pact is taken up in the National Assembly Friday.

The other troops from Warsaw Pact allies, Poland, East Germany, Hungary and Bulgaria, along with some Soviet forces, will be withdrawn in the coming months, Kosygin said after the treaty signing. But he never said how many Soviet troops will remain.

The invasion forces that entered Aug. 20-21 to end Czechoslovakia's liberalization drive have been variously estimated at between 250,000 and 500,000.

Soviet troops began moving into vacated Czechoslovak army barracks in Mlada Boleslav, an automobile manufacturing center 30 miles northeast of Prague.

The Soviet major general in Mlada Boleslav was quoted in the Prague newspaper Svoboda as saying he and his officers "will do all they can and will not give rise to any misunderstandings, since they understand that it the Soviet presence is a very sensitive matter."

The commander said Soviet rank-and-file soldiers will be allowed in town only in organized groups and only officers will have free movement, Svoboda said.

Svoboda said the Russian soldiers will get part of their pay in Czechoslovak currency to make local purchases but their supplies will come from the Soviet Union.

While the Czechoslovak leadership under Moscow's pressure has been forced to curtail press and assembly freedoms, it still showed some defiance.

Politika, weekly newspaper of the Communist party Central Committee, sharply assailed conservative factions and charged they may be plotting against the liberalized leadership headed by the first secretary.

Rugby Club Match Here vs. MIT

The Rugby Club will meet MIT in their first home match of the season tomorrow. The games will be played on the UMass Rugby Field behind Alumni Stadium, the "B" team game starts at 1 p.m. and the "A" game at 2:30 p.m.

UMass, a fired up club after playing its best game of the season last week, will be facing a strong MIT club which beat Tufts last week, 26-6. The job of winning will be made harder by the loss of "A" team scrum standouts C. C. Reider and Bill Vilkvitis because of injuries they received in last week's effort against Williams.

Don Zingale and Jerry Bruen will be managing the scrums tomorrow with Jeff Freedman, Frank Desiata and Brian Leach maintaining the backfield.

Maine Director

AUGUSTA, Maine AP - The national director of the Partners of the Alliance awarded certificates of appreciation Thursday to Gov. Curtis and Alan A. Rubin of Lewiston, who is directing Maine's efforts in the program.

James H. Boren announced the awards at a meeting called by Curtis to arrange for the Maine Maritime Academy training ship to carry medical supplies and food this winter to the Brazilian state of Rio Grande Do Norte.

Thirty-seven American states are now participating in the program, Boren said.

Mitchell Quintet Play In Concert Saturday

In response to the re-awakened interest in jazz and soul throughout the United States, and with a view towards presenting the finest musical groups to the Amherst area, the Afro-American Organization of the University of Massachusetts, with the cooperation of M.P. Productions, is sponsoring a "Jazz-Soul Happening" Saturday, at 8:00 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium.

Mr. Mitchell, currently recording with ESP records, has played with some of the top names in jazz including Archie Shepp, Rollin Griffin, Bobby Timmons, Sonny Stitt, Nina Simone and Mamie Lee. While Mitchell is primarily known as a jazz artist, his classical training has been wide, having studied at Combs College of Music, Temple University, and the Boston Conservatory of Music.

Writing in Boston Magazine, Waldren Joseph Jr. has said of the youthful drummer:

"Mitchell's talent is obviously an educated one-but beyond that it is a spontaneous and enthusiastic talent that combines the results of disciplined study as well as an almost innate genius.

Mitchell brings with him four of the most accomplished jazz musicians in the country. John Shaw, tenor saxophone, has studied with Joe Viola and Charlie Mariano at the Berklee School of Music and has played with Jimmy Dorsey, Herb Pomeroy and John LaPata.

Clifford Weeks, trombone, is a graduate of Berklee School of Music and the Boston Conservatory of Music. His experience spans both the jazz and commercial aspect, having performed with Rollins Griffith as well as Dee Dee Warwick and The Four Tops. Many of his compositions have been performed on the Johnny Carson Show.

Calvin Hill, bass, has worked in the Boston area with Sam Rivers and Alan Dawson. He combines the "strung out" hard driving force with a most sophisticated and subtle approach. Hill also is proficient with the trumpet, trombone and alto saxophone.

Dwight Dickerson, piano, is the resident prodigy of the Quintet, having demonstrated an immediate grasp of his instrument at the tender age of five. Although not attaining the fame of a Bill Evans or Errol Garner, Dickerson is considered one of the finest young jazz pianists in the East.

Tickets for the concert are available at the Student Union ticket office for $1.25 and at the door for $1.50. The concert will benefit the Afro-American Scholarship Fund.

Campus Chest Plans

This year, as every year, the Sophomore Class will sponsor the campus-wide charity drive traditionally called Campus Chest. This year the class of 1971 has already initated plans for the 1968 campaign. Many innovations have been incorporated to bring the theme of Campus Chest to the University. Taking place at a new time this year, the drive will be held the first week of December, in conjunction with Sophomore Weekend. Planned for that weekend known as S.E.N.D.O.F.F. are two major concerts. The university will witness its first "Sophomore Week".

MoV Approved By S.U.G. Board

MOTHER OF VOICES will be sold weekly in the Student Union This decision was reached by the Student Union Governing Board at their meeting last night in the Commonwealth Room. Also discussed were requests from the Arnold Air Society, the Afro-American Society, Concern, and Gamma Sigma Sigmas request for table space in the Student Union.

The request from the MOTHER OF VOICES to sell the magazine was carried over from last week's meeting when discussion on it was cut short, due to lack of time. In a voice vote, the SUG Board decided to permit representatives from the bi/weekly magazine, space for a table for selling purposes three times each week.

Given unanimous approva., were Concern's request for a table to sell peace posters; Gamma Sigma's request to sell Halloween candy apples and Christmas notions around those times, and the Afro-American Society's request for a penny voting booth during homecoming week.

The Campus Chest's request to hold a spaggetti dinner on December 8th to raise money, was referred to the Finance Committee for further study.

There are presently many jobs available on campus for students under the College Work Study Program. Eligibility for the College Work Study Program is based upon established financial need criteria. Any student interested in working on a part time basis should contact Mr. Siegrist in the Placement and Financial Aid Office, Room 237, Whitmore Building.

Muskie Blasts Wallace Lauds HHH in Chicago

CHICAGO AP - Democratic vice presidential candidate Edmund S. Muskie came to Chicago in an upbeat mood Thursday and called for George to be defeated for president "so soundly that his concept of our society can never rise again."

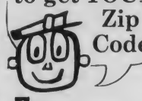
Muskie called Wallace a threat to America and said that Republican presidential candidate Richard M. Nixon is "playing the same tune" as Wallace but in a different key.

Only Hubert Humphrey is qualified for the office they seek, his running mate said.

Muskie, in his second campaign visit to Chicago, rode through the Loop financial district in a lunch-hour ticker tape parade in an open car with Mayor Richard J. Daley, Gov. Samuel Shapiro and Francis S. Lorenz, Democratic candidate for attorney general. They exchanged waves with sidewalk crowds estimated by a police official at 100,000.

Before a cheering crown of 2,500 at a Cook County Democratic luncheon, Muskie said Nixon "doesn't even claim anything" for a congressional record and "is not the tough - minded, sure-footed, self-confident leader trusting in the democratic process, whom we need as president."

He said America faces "the challenge of change so swift and far-reaching that we can barely perceive it, change on a scale never before experienced in our nation's history."



The next president, Muskie said, "must be able to inspire his countrymen and elevate the human spirit. He must be able to encourage the finer instincts of man."

Of the three candidates, only Humphrey is capable of that kind of leadership, Muskie said.

The Maine senator flew from Washington to Chicago Thursday morning at the start of a three-day Midwestern swing which will include visits to Stevens Point, Wis., and Gary, Ind., Friday and points in Oklahoma Saturday.

In a television interview, which was his first stop of the day, Muskie exhibited an optimism that appeared stronger than in recent days, although he emphasized that nothing is regarded as "in the bag."

Blue Collar Training In Colleges Studied By H.E.W.

WASHINGTON (CPS)--"Better ways of training more and more white-collar workers" might be an apt subtitle for a recently released report of the Advisory Committee on Higher Education to the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare.

The report, commissioned to make a thorough study of the federal role in higher education and how to make it more effective, spent a year deciding that a new commission is needed to coordinate federal grant and aid programs to colleges and universities, in order to better fill the demand of industry and government for trained and talented employees.

Borrowing a concept from Clark Kerr. The committee, which consisted of educators like Clarke Wescoe of Kansas University and Kingman Brewster of Yale, and such other officials as Alan Pifer of the Carnegie Corporation, agreed that the function of institutions of higher education is providing manpower for society's other endeavors and responding to their directions for training.

The immediate problem given to the advisers was that of making federal aid to education more equitable and at the same time more extensive and more important to the institution. What they came up with is disturbing, for it concentrates on the attainment of middle-class American social goals for education, while virtually ignoring the more pressing problem of changing the values of such institutions as universities so that its goals include lower-class and previously ignored segments of society.

The committee suggested the following long-range goals for the federal government with respect to higher education:

1. Ensuring that the nation possess the necessary institutional facilities to meet the society's manpower needs;

2. Ensuring that there is equal access to higher education for all qualified American citizens, regardless of race, sex, place of residence or financial ability;

3. Enhancing the "intellectual and cultural quality of American life" by supporting the arts and humanities as well as the sciences and engineering.

It recommends that, in order to reach those goals, the government agencies must be coordinated to prevent administrative inefficiency, to stabilize funding and spread it more equitably among institutions, support "tried and true" programs as well as innovative ones, and encourage private sources of support as well as public.

It suggests that matching-fund provisions should be revised, and says the practice of asking universities or student governments to pay half the grants to Work-Study programs for students should be abandoned in favor of full or nearly-full federal support.

The goal of equal access to higher education is a worthy one--but not a new one. The report contains no recommendations for improvement in this area, but does contain one that seemingly contradicts that goal. "Federal policy," it says, "should continue to support excellence and effective achievement..Negatively, this means avoiding the subsidization of students who cannot profit from higher education, and of institutions not qualified to provide it."

So much, it seems, for the goal of equal access; as many colleges and teachers have discovered, the reason racial imbalance in the colleges is so serious is that the admissions standards pick only those with demonstrated competence in accepted skills. Students from the ghetto culture, who are unable to do well on College Board exams because they have never dealt with that mode of knowledge but are nevertheless highly intelligent, are barred from universities, classified as "students who cannot profit from higher education," and shunted into a trade school somewhere. If we are serious about equal access we will have to stop relying on accepted measurement of "educational achievement" and open college doors to precisely the people who WILL profit from higher education.

US Bombing Raids Continue S. Viet Uneasy Over Halt

SAIGON (AP) - U.S. planes struck again Friday at southern North Vietnam and reliable sources said more missions were planned for Saturday. But the Saigon government was reported uneasy over the possibility that bombing of the North would stop in a U.S.-sponsored peace bid.

There were no immediate details on Friday's raids, but the U.S. Command said U.S. fighter-bombers destroyed two 6-foot supply boats and caused heavy damage to a highway ferry landing and an oil storage area in attacks Thursday below the 19th parallel bombing boundary.

U.S. Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker met Thursday night with President Nguyen Van Thieu, apparently another conference on a proposed bombing halt and other moves to get negotiations in Paris out of a six-month deadlock.

Officials here still would make no comment on the series of intensive conferences held this week.

Lowenstein Seeks Campaign Help For New York Congress Race

Volunteers are being recruited in the Four College Area to aid Allard Lowenstein in his race for Congress in the 5th New York District.

In making the appeal for campaign workers, Miss Emily Kaufman, Smith '70 , says that transportation to Long Island, and free food and housing will be provided during the weekend door-to-door solicitations.

She said that volunteers will be briefed on explaining Lowenstein's positions on vital issues.

Lowenstein is best known, she said, for forming the "dump Johnson" movement which ultimately led to President Johnson's decision not to seek re-election.

The regular New York Democratic Party has not given Lowenstein extensive support, she said, because of his general opposition to Administration policy and his failure to support Vice-President Humphrey.

Because of what he called his increasing concern over governmental policy, Lowenstein went to Vietnam in Sept. 1967. He returned to organize and become co-chairman of the Conference of Concerned Democrats (CCD) which was the first group to oppose Johnson's renomination. Miss Kaufman said CCD ultimately generated Eugene McCarthy's candidacy for the presidency.

In March, Lowenstein was nominated by 5th New York Congressional District, Nassau County, Dissenting Democrats to run for the Democratic nomination for Congress. Against strong organization opposition, Lowenstein won the June 18th primary with over 60 per cent of the vote.

A delegate from New York to the Democratic National Convention in Chicago, he was one of the leaders in the fight for the minority plank on Vietnam.

Since the Republican Party holds a 3-to-2 voter superiority, Lowenstein is relying completely on the persuasiveness of door-to-door student canvassers, a tactic proved highly successful during Eugene McCarthy's primary campaign. Lowenstein's campaign managers say they feel this campaign strategy will also be decisive in winning over the large percentage of "independent" voters in his congressional district.

Miss Kaufman told area newsmen this week of the "urgent need" for volunteers to canvass during the last three weekends before the election.

Library Dedication To Be Held

A Library Dedication Conference entitled "The World of Libraries; Past, Present, and Future" will be held at Mount Holyoke College on the weekend of Nov. 8-10. The highlight of the weekend will be the re-dedication of the newly renovated Williston Memorial Library.

The year-and-a-half renovation was finally completed this fall in time for the opening of school. The reconstruction has enlarged the stack capacity and the reading space. Improved facilities range from new lighting throughout the library to wall-to-wall carpeting in the main reading room.

The stack capacity of the library, which now owns some 306,000 volumes, has been increased to accommodate 490,000 volumes. There is seating capacity for 600 students, including 225 carrels, which afford small private study areas, in contrast to the other more spacious areas equipped with colorful modern lounge chairs, carpeting and easily accessibly bookshelves.

The original building was constructed in 1905, using the bricks saved from a previous library structure which had stood on that site from 1870 to 1904. At the time of its construction the library consisted only of the main reading room and the main circulation area, which was then the stacks.

Electron Microscope Gives Mt. Holyoke Edge In Biological Research

A sophisticated team of man and machine has been added to the department of biological sciences at Mount Holyoke College.

Douglas A. Fisher, an electron microscopist and the youngest member of the department of biological sciences of the College, is curator of the $55,000 Philips 300 electron microscope which was installed in Clapp Laboratory during the summer. It has added a new dimension to the teaching of botany and zoology, not only for the graduate and undergraduate students but for the faculty themselves.

The sensitive instrument, which has a magnification of up to 500,000 diameters, is invaluable in studying very minute details of the cell and its contents. Its resolution is approximately 500 times greater than that of the light microscope.

According to Mr. Fisher, most large universities and hospitals have electron microscopes as part of their equipment, however, it is still uncommon for an institution the size of Mount Holyoke to be fortunate enough to have such a sophisticated instument.

George Wallace took his third party campaign into the south where the bulk of his support lies. Wallace claimed to be very tired.

Wallace Calls Third Party Vote Show of Manhood in Texas Speech

LONGVIEW, TEX. AP - George C. Wallace appealed Thursday to Texas manhood and southern pride as he moved through what might well be Wallace country in his third-party quest for the presidency.

Then, admitting fatigue, he scrubbed the whole day's campaign in Missouri and Kansas and headed for home in Montgomery, Ala., for rest and some television taping.

Wallace packed some 10,000 persons into a downtown park in Fort Worth during the lunch hour for a rally attended by a relative handful of hecklers who have populated his campaign trail.

"When you vote for the American Independent party on Nov. 5," he said, "you've asserted your manhood in Texas. You've asserted your manhood in our region."

Referring-as he often has-to Richard Nixon, who charged that Wallace was unfit to be president, Wallace cried: "When they say I'm not fit, they're saying you're not fit. And the national Republican party, when they say you're not fit to be President, you know what they're saying. You're not fit to be President because you're southerner."

The Wallace organization announced that the candidate would return to Montgomery before a Sunday television interview in Washington. Newsmen asked Wallace about the switch.

"Our schedule," he joshed, "as you folks on the plane have said, has been too rigorous. All you fellows on the airplane, all the news media, said, "slow down the pace. You're about to kill us," so we're doing it for you. Now don't read anything into it except that we're doing it for you fellows."

But when a reporter asked if he were tired, too, Wallace admitted, "Well, yes, I'm tired, too. But we've got some TV tapes to do and I must go to Washington Saturday."

Wallace said he would rendezvous in the capital with his running mate, retired Air Force Gen. Curtis LeMay, after LeMay returns from a three-day tour of Vietnam. He said he would report to the nation after LeMay reports to him.

● Water Ban Continues

The strict ban of on outdoor use of water imposed by Selectmen late last month continues in effect due to the prolonged dry spell, which shows no signs of abating, officials of the Department of Public Works said today.

The ban has resulted in an average cut of about one million gallons of water daily in local water use, but pumping from Hadley's wells, arranged between the Hadley water District and the town of Amherst, continues daily.

McCarthy Ruled Off N.Y. Ballot Humphrey Campaign Given Boost

Declaring that McCarthy should not have to run against his will, the Court of Appeals unanimously upset a lower-court decision that the Minnesota Democrat's name should be on the ballot Nov. 5.

The ruling brought a much needed morale boost to Humphrey's New York state organization, which has been beset by a variety of woes. In Washington, a spokesman for the Democratic National Committee said the decision made Democratic leaders "even more confident that the vice president will carry New York."

The fear that McCarthy's name would siphon off large chunks of votes and destroy Humphrey's chances of winning the state's 43 electoral votes was only the latest in a series of continuing problems.

The biggest headache has been the serious disunity of the Democratic party, still divided into three alienated wings-the Johnson-Humphrey faction, the pro-McCarthy peace element and the remnants of the late U.S. Sen. Robert F. Kennedy's closely knit clique.

State Chairman John J. Burns has been struggling, without great success, to orchestrate the discordant elements into a unified campaign for Humphrey. His efforts have been impeded by the refusal of the party's pro-McCarthy U.S. Senate nominee, Paul O'Dwyer, to endorse Humphrey-because of Humphrey's Vietnam views. In turn, some resentful party regulars have been cold-shouldering the O'Dwyer campaign.

Hubert H. Humphrey pushing his presidential drive in this labor state, acknowledged Thursday that many workers favor George C. Wallace because they think Humphrey favors Negroes.

The vice president trumpeted his own and the Democratic party's record in helping workers and in pressing welfare legislation while he slammed at Richard M. Nixon and called Wallace "a union-busting governor."

McCarthy's removal from ballot increases Humphrey's chances in N.Y.

Humphrey told the audience in John F. Kennedy Square that he had heard that some workers - despite their usual support of the Democratic candidate - were going to vote for Wallace, the former governor of Alabama and third party candidate for president.

"And I know why," said Humphrey. "Somebody told them that Hubert Humphrey will take your jobs. He will see that some other workers will get your job and it most likely will be a black man."

The vice president said if he is elected president, there will be enough jobs to go around for both blacks and whites and he denounced those who spread rumors and hate, pitting one man against another.

Students Petition B.U. President

A four-member Ad-Hoc Committee at Boston College presented a petition on Wednesday to Rev. W. Seavey Joyce, B.C.'s president. The petition was signed by 2650 students and asked that Theology be dropped as a required course and for increased student representation in the University's government.

According to one representative of the Student Congress, the signers of the petition represent about 35 percent of the undergraduate students.

The issue at hand is the fact that all undergraduates, who are Roman Catholics, must take four semesters of theology as a graduation requirement. The students claim that these courses are not on a par with the other academic disciplines.

Ronnie Koniz, a sophomore from Poughkeepsie, N.Y., said "Often it is treated as an academic discipline, but it depends on what teacher you get."

Joyce stated that the matters on the petition will be handed over to a committee on student affairs in the Academic Senate and Curriculum Committee.

Honors Denied

It's unfortunate when the Senate defeats a good measure, and even more so when it does so on the basis of largely irrelevant debate. Wednesday evening, the Senate had before it a bill to recommend to the Provost that certain present practices regarding honorific graduation designations be codified together with a new provision of a similar sort and in the same vein as the standing practice.

The measure concerned the three "cum" phrases awarded on the basis of the final cumulative average, and the departmental honors project program — eligibility for which is based only partially on grades alone. The third aspect of the measure concerned an honorific designation to be awarded for participation in the new College of Arts and Sciences four-year honors program.

A few Senators, seizing upon the fact that the present grading system is a tangential aspect of this measure, chose the occasion to make public their dissatisfaction with the present grading system and used this dissatisfaction as the basis for defeating a measure to recognize and reward good academic achievement. This is grossly unfair to present and future students doing honors or outstanding academic work.

Dissatisfaction with the present grading system is an acknowledged fact. The Academic Affairs Committee is aware of this. The Senate's endorsement of honorific graduation designations does not, in fact or in principle, bind the Senate to an endorsement of the present grading system. This fact seems to have been lost on those Senators who voted to defeat the measure.

There is a much better way to get at the question of the grading policy, and that is to make an express charge to the Academic Affairs Committee to investigate and report on the grading policy as a separate matter. Do not, however, condemn the good just because it must coexist in a world with some bad.

Columbia Point

Last week's meeting of the board of Trustees made the location of the Boston campus of U. Mass. at Columbia Point a virtual certainty. At the request of the school's new chancellor, Francis Broderick, the Trustees delayed the final decision for a month.

The delay rekindled the hopes of the Student In-Town Site Committee and its sympathizers that the campus be set in a more centrally urban area. While the Trustees made clear their willingness to listen receptively to properly made proposals, the choice of an alternative site in the next month is unlikely.

The choice of Columbia Point is the result of four years of technical and architectural studies, business and political pressures, and much haggling on the part of the many interested parties. Comprehensive studies of fifty possible sites were made initially. These were narrowed down to sixteen, and eventually three, potential sites - Copley Square, Watertown Arsenal, and Columbia Point. The final settling on Columbia Point was made because of its size and its potential for development.

That the elimination on Copley Square, Park Square, North Station, and other intown sites was partially signalled by the power plays of opposed businessmen and politicians goes without dispute. But the unqualified characterization of the opponents of a core city site as power-hungry, money-grabbing capitalists who benefit at the expense of the people of Boston is unjustifiable. These men work daily with the problems of the city. Their arguments against locating the university downtown have merit.

The contention of Student leaders such as Stephen Berkowitz, head of the In-Town Site Committee, that these civic leaders made their decisions with a callous disregard for the true wishes of the people of Boston could be put to a telling test. If the question, "Should the University of Mass. be allowed to locate its campus in Park Square?" (or Copley Square or North Station) were placed on the November ballot, the negative response would very probably be stronger than that of all of Boston's chairmen of the board and real estate developers combined.

Eugene McCarthy should be the Democratic candidate, but he is not; that does not make the election meaningless. Robert Kennedy and Martin King should not have been shot, but they were; that does not make their ideas worthless. UMB should have been located at Park Square; but it will not be; this does not mean that it cannot be a great university and a great urban university.

"You Sure There Won't Be A Re-Entry Problem?"

Inside Report:

Daley's Old Politics

BY ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

CHICAGO --In the face of Democratic calamity on the national and state levels here, Mayor Richard J. Daley's renowned precinct organization is concentrating its money and muscle on one local office: State's Attorney for Cook County (Chicago).

Indeed, Daley has all but abandoned Vice President Humphrey, and his handpicked, lackluster state ticket. While there are few visible signs of a Humphrey campaign in Chicago, the organization's activity is intense and increasing for Edward V. Hanrahan, Democratic candidate for State's Attorney (county prosecutor).

Such a distortion of emphasis might seem incredible, but it is the essence of Dick Daley's old politics. To Daley organization regulars, politics is essentially a business wholly removed from lofty issues. Presidents and Governors may come and go with no concern to the regulars because they do not affect their business. But the mundane office of State's Attorney most definitely does.

To understand why the prospect of a Republican State's Attorney here chills city hall, it is necessary only to look at the investigations proposed by Hanrahan's Republican opponent, Alderman Robert J. O'Rourke. He would probe the city building department and its honeycombs of organization patronage employees, look into the traditionally scandalous doings of the traffic court, and open the lid on suspect city land deals.

Moving deeper into the heart of the organizations's affairs, O'Rourkecalls for investigation of the habitual election day voter frauds here and a full-scale probe of links between organized crime and the Democratic organization.

In contrast, Hanrahan, who resigned as U.S. Attorney here to run for the local office, would stick to the business of fighting conventional crime and not disturb city hall's sleeping dogs.

Although nobody has ever questioned his personal honesty, Hanrahan is an organization man to the core. Flamboyant and hottempered, he detests Democratic mavericks (and once took a swing at the leading maverick, State Treasurer Adlai Stevenson III, at a private party). The major criticism of his record as U.S. Attorney concerned his questionable handling of petty organizationpoliticians intertwined with the crime syndicate.

Consequently, Daley has put out the word: Hanrahan must win. The army of organization payrollers has been solicited, man by man, for extra contributions to Hanrahan. His campaign is the most lavishly financed in Chicago: $100,000 for television and newspaper ads exclusive of the most extensive billboard displays by any candidate in the area.

Moreover, there is evidence that the frequently collusive arrangement between Republican and Democratic leaders at the Chicago ward level is working in Hanrahan's favor. Some Republican leaders are doing nothing for O'Rourke and have not even put his photos and campaign literature in their headquarters. The quid pro quo from their Democratic counterparts: no help for Gov. Sam Shapiro against the front-running Republican challenger, Richard J. Ogilvie.

Although no such overt collusion exists on a higher level, O'Rourke suffers there, too. Edmund Kucharski, the new Cook County Republican chairman, is a staunch Ogilvie man and interested primarily in electing a Republican Governor. If his organization's emphasis has been on the state level, it is not so much that he loves O'Rourke less but that he loves Ogilvie more.

Yet, Democratic rebels in Illinois believe staunchly that the Republicans, not Daley, have established the proper order of priorities and that only in a wholly irrational political system does the office of local prosecutor excite more activity than that of Governor of the state.

Thus, even though Hanrahan's well-financed campaign and dynamic campaign style are expected to prevail over the soft-spoken O'Rourke, it may well fuel determination by the insurgents for a post-election confrontation with Daley. Stevenson, who has made his final break with Daley and is prepared to battle for the sould of the party, is even now making his plans for that battle.

Daley shows no signs of compromising. While publicly civil to Stevenson, Daley rails in private against his audacity. Moreover, even the impending statewide catastrophe that Daley helped create in Illinois won't deplete his power much if he retains the office of State's Attorney and other county posts. He is, then, the long-range favorite to crush any Stevensonian insurgency. Daley's old politics may no longer win state elections but it still runs the party.

If Elections Were Won By Bumper Stickers

If elections were won by bumper stickers, a quick survey shows Humphrey, Nixon, Snoopy and the Esso Tiger neck and neck, but none of them near beating Eugene McCarthy.

It's a part of that "McCarthy phenomenon" that no one wants to remove his stickers. McCarthy daisies are still seen everywhere: on cars, windows, stop-signs--even on the book in Longfellow's hand aton his Connecticut Avenue pedestal.

Bumper stickers sound trivial, perhaps, but the resilience they reflect is not--at least not to the Humphrey forces. The nominee himself is now saying that McCarthy support is essential to victory, and he pleads to them for "rationality" to prevail in what he calls the common desire to "stop Nixon."

But will it prevail? In New York, the state's Democratic party chairman, John J. Burns, is worried about winning his critical state for Humphrey. He said that Humphrey's strongest issue was the negative one of who he was running against, much like Johnson's anti - Goldwater appeal in 1964.

"When the McCarthy people see what Wallace and Nixon and Agnew have to say," he hopes aloud, "they will come around."

In all camps there is doubt that Humphrey can win now without McCarthy votes, or that even passive endorsement (all Humphrey could expect) would be sufficient to put him over in November.

Here in the District of Columbia, Sam Smith, a Dem-cratic Central Committee member elected on a peace slate over a Humphrey slate, said at a recent meeting (which finally endorsed Humphrey reluctantly) that "what we are really disputing is whether we should share with Humphrey the role of funeral director for the Democratic ticket. I don't want to do that."

Many McCarthy supporters are simply not impressed with arguments for stopping Nixon. "I prefer milk of magnesia to castor oil." explained Smith, "but I try to keep away from them both".

One rationale given by McCarthy supporters for their uncharacteristic political mononucleosis is that if indeed both candidates (and Wallace) would continue a war which would paralyze domestic programs, then "why not" have the candidate who will at least be frank about it and not raise unfulfilled expectations in the ghettos. As one McCarthyite put it, " I would rather deal with the 'used car salesman' (Nixon) than with a dealer who can only sell me the body because the engines are needed for helicopters".

Humphrey gambled, of course, that after winning the nomination he could restore the unity needed for winning in November. Yet a table published last week in the New York Times shows that even Wallace has more definite electoral votes at this time than Humphrey--and Nixon a clear majority.

What is becoming evident as the campaign develops is that the delegates did more than make a policy decision in choosing Humphrey. In the process they may very well have forfeited the energy and enthusiasm of the one political machine at Chicago which could outdo both Nixon's and Wallace's.

The reason that the word phenonomenon, after all, is attached to both the McCarthy and Wallace names is that both the candidates attracted-- and nourished -- the most active, enthusiastic and outgoing of their followers so as to develop the type of bandwagon which draws others. People are attracted to the dedication and enthusiasm of others.

Nixon did a good job, and the Republicans rewarded him.

One reason that Humphrey is having difficulty making " good losers" out of the McCarthyites is that McCarthy's supporters don't feel they were the losers. The party and not McCarthy, they insist, lost in Chicago. Shirking the role of "funeral director" and unmoved by the Humphrey-Nixon match, they are content to stand aside respectfully during the burial and pick up the pieces in December, much as Nixon did from Goldwater.

Vietnam Commentary - IV

South Vietnamese Deputy Bucks Hawk Tide

(Editors Note: This is a special release containing a series of articles on Vietnam. They were written for CPS by D. Garth Porter, a political science teacher at Manchester College in North Manchester, Ind., currently studying at Cornell University on leave, and was a correspondent in Saigon for CPS during last summer.)

A 28-year-old representative of South Vietnam's lower house has made the Assembly's first serious peace proposal departing from the uniform hawkishness which the Assembly has displayed on the war issue.

In an interview with College Press Service, Deputy Ly Qui Chung, leader of the "People's Bloc" in the Assembly, called for a halt in the bombing of North Vietnam and a token U.S. withdrawal to set the stage for negotiations. He advocated a political amnesty and guarantee of participation in elections as a party for the Southern Viet Cong.

Chung, a former journalist and prominent campaign aide to Tran Van Huong when he ran unsuccessfully for the Presidency last year, has established himself as the leader of the liberal left forces in an assembly where reaction has held away. Last March, he tried to introduce a motion for a debate on a no-confidence vote against the then-premier, Nguyen Van Loc, presumably to replace Loc with Huong. In April, he organized a group of deputies who drafted a "message for peace" to leaders in both North and South Vietnam, appealing to them to negotiate "under the sign of mutual concession."

Last month, Chung outlined publicly a proposal for postwar Vietnam which he called a "Malaysia-type regime". He advocated a withdrawal of all foreign forces and bases and the participation of the National Liberation Front as a lawful, but non-Communist, political party.

Later, in an interview with CPS, he elaborated further his suggestion for negotiating a peace settlement. The first phase of the settlement would involve moves toward de-escalation by the U.S. and North Vietnam, beginning with a complete halt in the bombing of North Vietnam. If this were followed by a reciprocal act by Hanoi, he suggested that the U.S.

pull back five or ten thousand troops from Vietnam. This could be done, he pointed out, without affecting the war effort, but its psychological and symbolic importance would be very great, for it would show North Vietnam that the U.S. is bargaining in good faith and would make it easier for the U.S. public to support the war.

The second phase envisioned by Deputy Chung would then consist of "true negotiations on precise points." The primary object would be the mutual withdrawal of North Vietnamese and American troops so that the problem would once again become an internal South Vietnamese matter. At this point, Saigon would make a solemn promise that there would be no vengeance against those who worked with the Viet Cong and that they could participate as a group in the next elections for hamlet, assembly and presidency. They could form any political party they wished--as long as it was not a Communist party.

South Vietnam would then be demilitarized and would have relations with all countries. But the government would be free to call for help in case of aggression against her. Thus her status would be different from either Laos or Cambodia, both of whom have renounced their desire to be assisted by nations of the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization. Nor would South Vietnam be neutral with regard to Communism, which would continue to be outlawed by the Constitution.

In summarizing his proposal, Ly Qui Chung said, "We seek a formula more acceptable to the Communists. We must have a solution which is honorable from the viewpoint of both sides. South Vietnam is geographically within the zone of influence of China. We cannot afford to be too closely tied to one side or the other." He recognized the risk that a "legal and non-Communist" N.L.F. might one day revert to its "historical character" but said that the government must have the capability to make former Viet Cong live peacefully if it is to survive.

In making this proposal Chung and the sixteen deputies in the People's Bloc are bucking a tide of reaction on both the peace issue and questions of social reform. The Assembly is the product of an electoral process monopolized by a narrow segment of the population: the conservative educated urban elite of businessmen, military officers, landowners, professionals and civil servants. The political Buddhists, peasants and working classes are virtually unrepresented.

Voting blocs which have been organized in the Assembly are neither permanent nor politically meaningful. The Independent Bloc has the strongest Catholic representatives including some followers of President Ngo Dinh Diem. But it does not appear to differ in any substantial way from the People's Progress Bloc, the Democratic Bloc or the Unification Bloc, Except for Chung's "People's Bloc" the division of deputies into blocs is mostly a gesture toward parliamentary party organizations.

The assembly has not avoided the subject of peace and peace negotiations in 1968, but its discussion has comprised little more than charges of "softness on Communism" or worse against everyone from Premier Huong to other deputies. In July, the Independent Bloc denounced the Huong government's tolerance of those "making propaganda for the N.L.F." and threatened to raise a question of confidence if it did not show its toughness toward the communists and the peace movement.

When a deputy from the Unification Bloc, Tran Ngoc Chau, proposed in August that the Assembly appoint a committee to contact responsible authorities in North Vietnam to open direct negotiations between the South and North, the Independents and People's Progress Bloc leaders charged that there was a "foreign hand" behind the plan, to test the reaction of the Assembly. The charge was completely without substance.

In a later interview with CPS, Tran Ngoc Chau said he opposed the current Paris talks as psychologically harmful to the allied cause. He wanted talks between North Vietnam and South Vietnam only to show his dislike of the contact between the U.S. and North Vietnam. He admitted that he had no idea about how to bring peace and felt that it was too far away to begin thinking about the shape of a settlement. As for

BY ED SLOAN Staff Reporter

Since its creation nearly ten years ago by the Student Senate, the Distinguished Visitors Program at UMass has brought to the campus community a wide variety of celebrated speakers. In the past, representing and defending the conservative political views of the country were William F. Buckley and General Walker.

So far this year, representing the more liberal beliefs, have appeared such speakers as Harvard's John Kenneth Galbraith and Senator Edward Brooke. Scheduled for the future is Georgia's mischievous state representative, Julian Bond who will appear on campus December 2 and noted novelist John Barth. Additionally, D.V.P. is hopefully seeking to invite Gore Vidal, a prominent and articulate liberal writer.

"But with the exception of Buckley," says John O'Connell, chairman of D.V.P., "it is almost useless to invite conservatives to speak before the student body because they don't appeal to the students. The students refuse to accept or associate with what the speakers have to say. When the ultra-conservative General Walker spoke at the University, students hissed and booed.

"Therefore, D.V.P.'s selection of speakers is limited and will generally conform to the wide appeal that a speaker will have on the students."

D.V.P. is student-run by a committee of fifteen and is financed by the student tax, which averages out to $1.25 per student. Each of the distinguished visitors who speak receive, in addition to a red carpet treatment of dinner and friendly discussion with University officials, anywhere from $1,000 to $1,500, although some, such as Senator Brooke, may speak "free"-ly.

UMass SDS Plans 'Moc' Rotc Drill And Election Day Strike This Year

Gerald Gillespie, regional SDS representative and self-appointed chairman of Tuesday's initial meeting, suggested several issues for SDS action. Among these were participation in the proposed National Student Strike at election time, and the UMass ROTC drills.

At a regional SDS conference Saturday, attended by several U-Mass members, it was suggested by members that: " a very effective way of demonstrating is to 'dog' ROTC drills." Under the guise of "Gorilla Theater", a mock drill using feathers, beads, plastic guns and noise-makers will be conducted adjacent to the official ROTC drill.

According to Steve Gaman, "Next week is international week of solidarity against the war in Viet Nam. It (the Gorilla Theater) could be our thing."

As for the repercussions of this "mock drill", an unidentified SDS member stated: "We can't get caught for disrupting a class. We might get hassled for it, but we have the right to do it." No definite date was set for the SDS drill performance.

UMass SDS is also planning to participate in the planned National Student Strike during the Presidential elections, but specific plans remain indefinite.

Space Crew Ends First Week In Orbit

SPACE CENTER, HOUSTON (AP) - The Apollo 7 astronauts -men not easily awed-looked into the furious vortex of Hurricane Gladys Thursday and one called it "really a doozy-I haven't seen anything like that -- ever."

The astronauts, in the seventh of their 11 days in space, squeezed weather reporting into their already jammed schedule. Navy Capt. Walter M. Schirra Jr., the space craft commander, described their sighting of Gladys, howling northward through the Gulf of Mexico, this way:

"That's a very spectacular view. There is a line of broken clouds around the edge of it, but it tightens up in the center. Real tight vortex. There's a few high thunderstorms about 100-150 miles out." Later he said "I haven't seen anything like that, ever."

Officials were keeping an anxious watch over the hurricane, although it was moving away from the area where the spacecraft will splash down at 7:12 a.m. EDT, next Tuesday.

Wednesday, civilian astronaut Walter Cunningham had complained about the food and Thursday, Air Force Maj. Eisele joined the fight.

"Wally and I are trying to give away our butterscotch pudding but nobody wants it," he said. "Walt likes to collect cocoa, so we can give our cocoa to him, and both of them were trying to con me out of my ham and apple sauce. Walt was offering me a whole meal for one piece. I guess we get tired of the very rich things, and we still go for the soup and salads."

As Apollo 7 streaked through the firmament over America's west coast at 17,500 miles an hour Thursday, dawn-rising Californians got a clear view. "It was just like a big blinking star-that's all it looked like to me," said a Californian. It took the ship just two minutes to travel from horizon to horizon.

Many Los Angeles people failed to take note of the spacecraft, leading one observer to comment: "I was really bugged because there we were, watching history go by and there were all these other people, walking to work and just looking at their feet.

For much of Thursday's telecast, the picture on the screen was split and several times it blanked out altogether, the fifth telecast is scheduled for 10:11 a.m. CDT Friday.

Viewers got a relatively unexciting tour of the ship, notlivened by any of the antics of previous telecasts. The word around the space center was that top officials had told the space trio to tone things down. "We have done something on every detailed objective with the exception of two, not counting re-entry," said Mission Director William C. Schneider in an interview.

On the schedule for Friday is a spectacular 57-second firing of the large space craft engine. It will be the most powerful engine test ever attempted by a manned spaceship and will give them a 1,200 - mile - an - hour increase in speed.

The "burn" will begin under ground control, but in the last 30 seconds Schirra will take over and steer manually. The sun will be too high by the time of ignition and the test will not be seen from the ground.

"It the remainder of the mission goes as it has so far, we will have accomplished everything on Apollo 7 we set out to do," Schneider said.

Apollo's Next Goal Is The Moon Astronaut's In Training Now

SPACE CENTER, HOUSTON (AP) - A top Space Agency official said Thursday a decision will not be made until mid-November whether to send the next three-man Apollo astronaut crew around the moon at Christmas time.

Meanqhile, said Apollo Mission Director William C. Schneider, Apollo 8 astronauts Frank Borman, James A. Lovell Jr. and William A. Anders "are training for the complete spectrum of missions." They range from low earth orbit to a trip around the moon.

"Nothing has come up of any consequence that we look at with alarm," in the Apollo 7 flight of Navy Capt. Walter M Schirra Jr., Air Force Maj. Donn F. Eisele and civilian astronaut Walter Cunningham, the mission director said.

However, "I keep recalling Gemini 8 when we went from a bed of roses to a deep dish of yogurt in seconds," he observed. The two Gemini 8 pilots, civilian Neil Armstrong and Air Force Maj. David R. Scott, span out of control when one of their maneuvering rockets refused to turn off. The crew was forced to make an emergency landing in the Pacific.

Four flight plans are being considered for Apollo 8. The most spectacular would have the crew orbit the moon 10 times. Another would be a circumlar mission where the astronauts would fly about a three-quarters orbit around the moon's backside and return to earth.

A third would keep Apollo 8 in earth orbit but propel the spaceship to an altitude of 4,600 miles to test how its systems work in deep space.

The fourth plan is another mission in low earth orbit, similar to Apollo 7.

"There's no doubt that going around the moon requires that all systems be pedigreed," he observed.

Once three astronauts start heading toward the moon, there is no chance for them to get back to earth for more than six days-the time it takes to get to the moon and back. Apollo spacecraft engines are not powerful enough for the crew to turn around before reaching the moon, where lunar gravity can slow them down and swing them back around the moon toward earth.

Radical Men's Fashion Hightlights 'London Look'

BY NADEANE WALKER
AP Fashion Writer

LONDON (AP)-Gone were neckties and cuff buttons. In for the new man were decollete-meaning low cut at the neck-sleeveless jumpsuits, some in silky, drapy crepe-in gree n and pinky ginger yet.

So went the first-ever men's fashion show Thursday at the once staid, fashion house of Worth.

Sighsten Herrgard, 26, Worth's Scandinavian designer of resort and male fashion, did away with the neckties, cuff buttons and most lapels, and took the bag out of trousers with a deep V cut in the back. His one-piece jumpsuits in crepe or stretch materials, were all worn with polo-necked sweaters or shirts.

Most daring number in his "Esquire" collection was a party jumpsuit in navy jersey, cut out in a low oval to the waist and worn with a white ruffled shirt and wide hip belt of gold chains. He also showed several all-white caftan evening wuits, one with copper patent boots.

A spokesman said the ready-to-wear male attire will fall into "the medium price range." Two of Herrgard's creations, including the hip-belted number, have already been chosen as entries for the Creative Menswear Awards in New York.

The "Shirt Suit" was another Herrgard original. Its jacket is yoked and cut like a shirt, and a soft tie belt goes with it. Coats are maxilength, or nearly to the bottom of the calf. Most jackets are also very long. Trousers are tight fitting and slightly bell-bottomed.

One male model wore a floppy Garbo hat in black velvet with a gray maxiraincoat. Another hat, in soft white felt with a bow on the band, would have looked just as good on a woman.

A three-piece evening suit was worn with a wide leather belt centered with a big jeweled buckle, and many models sported heavy gold necklace chains.

Suits without lapels were buttoned or zipped to the high banded neckline.

Shirts also came in pink, gold, and lilac. A caftan suit had a pullover jacket with a deep V front.

Many materials used have been seen previously only in women's clothes, notably the banlon jersey crepes, and a bold black and white check. Ties are replaced by polo necks or printed scarves.

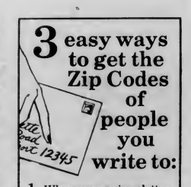
Herrgard, who was born in Helsinki, Finland, but brought up in Sweden, refers to himself as Swedish. He won his first fashion award at 15, and was elected "Best Dressed Man in Sweden" in 1963.

Jackie To Wed Shipping Magnate

NEW YORK (AP) - Jacqueline Kennedy, whose marriage to the nation's 35th president was dissolved by an assassin's bullet, plans to marry one of the world's richest men, Aristotle Onassis, more than 20 years her senior.

The wedding is expected to take place next week, but the time and place were said to be as yet undetermined.

A rash of unconfirmed reports on the impending nuptials was climaxed in mid-afternoon Thursday with an announcement by Jacqueline's mother, Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss in Washington.



"My daughter, Mrs. John F. Kennedy, is planning to marry Mr. Aristotle Onassis," Mrs. Auchincloss said.

The statement was relayed through Mrs. Kennedy's press secretary, Nancy Tuckerman, in New York, who added: "I can only tell you that the wedding will probably take place next week. The time and the place have not been determined. I will have more information tomorrow."

Onassis, 62, was divorced in 1960 after a 13-year marriage to the former Tina Livanos, blond daughter of another multimillionaire Greek shipowner. They had two children. She later married England's Marquis of Blandford.

There are presently many jobs available on campus for students under the College Work Study Program. Eligibility for the College Work Study Program is based upon established financial need criteria. Any student interested in working on a part time basis should contact Mr. Siegrist in the Placement and Financial Aid Office, Room 237, Whitmore Building.

Japanese Author Nobel Winner

STOCKHOLM (AP) - Yasunari Kawabata, a Japanese whose novel that has a tea cup as a central figure is probably best known in the West, won the 1968 Nobel Prize for literature Thursday.

The 69-year-old novelist is the first Japanese to win the Nobel literature award, and he showed pride in this fact when reporters reached him at his home in Kamakura, Japan.

Kawabata said the award showed recognition for Japanese literature. But he said he was puzzled because he was chosen from so many distinguished world authors and because Japanese literature is difficu" for Westerners to understand.

The president of the Swedish Academy of Letters that give him the $70,000 prize, Dr. Anders Osterling, said Kawabata's works have "contributed to a spiritual bridge-spanning between East and West."

The literary award is the third of the five annual Nobel prizes to be announced this year. The awards for physics and chemistry will be made Oct. 30.

Three American won the prize for medicine and physiology Wednesday, Marshall Warren Nirenberg of the National Heart Institute, Har Gobind Khorana of the University of Wisconsin and Robert W. Holley of Cornell University, Ithaca, N.Y.

Novel Problems Plague Mass. Party Leaders

BOSTON (AP) - Massachusetts leaders of both major political parties have two novel problems to fret about in the general election-the third - party Wallace candidacy, and the lack of any statewide candidates.

"With no statewide races for the first time," said Dr. Arnold Soloway, a chief lieutenant in the Humphrey-Muskie camp, "the final two weeks of the campaign have a potential impact different than ever before."

"The cities and towns haven't got enough contests to get out the vote," said Republican State Chairman Josiah Spaulding.

"We have to get 95 per cent of the Republicans voting in the towns to overcome the Democratic majority in the cities."

For the first time in modern history, statewide officers are serving four year terms, which do not expire until 1971, and the customary heavy campaigning for governor and other top offices is lacking.

Former Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace's support has developed steadily, but in a patchwork way under direction of Charles H. McGlue, a Boston attorney whose political works go back 50 years.

Members of the John Birch Society have been major workers in the campaign, and several are Wallace electors, including Col. Laurence Bunker, a member of the Society's National Council. But the society has taken no official part in the campaign.

McGlue has made much of collecting well over the 61,238 signatures needed to put Wallace on the state's ballots, and predicts up to 500,000 votes for his candidate. He says he has not had any polls taken.

"We are getting support from people in all walks of life," he asserted. "When we have kids coming in here and buying buttons we know we're getting support.

"People are fed with the violence that is going on in America. And they are fed up with both of the other candidates."

Officials of the two major parties disagree with McGlue on almost every point.

"Most of the Wallace support is from blue-collar workers in the cities," said a Republican official. "The polls now indicate he is receding in Massachusetts. He peaked about two weeks ago.

"I think from our reports he'll get about 10 per cent of the vote -and 90 per cent of it will be Democrats. The problem is that he recedes back to the Border states and the South he helps the Democratic side."

GOP leaders make no secret of the indications of their polls that their presidential candidate, Richard M. Nixon, is two or three percentage points behind the Democratic nominee, Hubert H. Humphrey.

But both party leaders say the last two weeks will be the deciding factor in Massachusetts.

Sierra Club To Publish Book On Conservation

The Sierra Club, in cooperation with the Conservation Foundation, will publish GALAPAGOS: THE FLOW OF WILDNESS on October 15. The 2 volume, boxed set of GALAPAGOS is the first in the Sierra Club's new International Series devoted to the Earth's wild places. Photographs by Eliot Porter, text by Loren Eiseley, John P. Milton, Eliot Porter, Kenneth Brower with excerpts from Charles Darwin, Herman Melville, William Beebe, and others. Edited by Kenneth Brower.

"This is a book in praise of islands. Its 2 volumes are an investigation of the virtue of islands as points of reference, both scientific and poetic." - Kenneth Brower, editor of GALAPAGOS. Volume I - Discovery - deals with what the GALAPAGOS islands have meant to men. To quote Loren Eiseley, "Voyages without islands to touch upon would be epics of monotony. Whether for diversion of thought or for the easing of the physical body, men demand mental periods, points of reference, islands fixed in the turbulence of giant waters or, if eluding the compass, still haunting the mind..."

Volume II - PROSPECT - deals with what the islands mean to us now and what they can mean in the future. To quote John P. Milton, "The remaining few years of the twentieth century will be the most critical period in the history of the world both for man's survival and the survival of the delicate fabric of interdependent life upon which man's continued existence and sanity depends."

As for the color photographs to illustrate both volumes, one need only know they were provided by photographer-artist Eliot Porter to anticipate their appearance. Mr. Porter's world acclaimed color photographs are featured in several other Sierra Club Exhibit Format Books.

During class elections only, absentee ballots shall be made available to students with extenuating travel circumstances, health problems, religious conflicts or other reasons justifiable to the chairman of the S.G.A. committee. Requests for absentee ballots will be honored if a written, signed request to that effect is, with reasons, presented to the chairman of the S.G.A. committee not later than five days before the elections.

Fraternity Park Details Set; Construction To Start This Year

Though no construction date has been set, the site of Fraternity Park, in the northeast sector of the UMass campus, will be ready for building in November. This prediction was expressed yesterday by Fraternity Manager George G. Rodgers, who also optimistically stated that 10 fraternities and sororities intend to build within two years.

Rodgers said, "All roadways and utilities are being constructed on schedule and should be ready by November." He added, however, "It is difficult to say just when any constructing can begin because so many factors are involved."

The fraternity Manger listed AEP, PMD, TKE and SSS as being chapters being very well advanced in plans, and LCA, PSD, SAM, ASP, CO and LDP, as chapters that intend to build in the next two years.

Fraternity Park site development was founded by the Park Company Corporation. This corporation was the independent agency through which lots were purchased by the separate houses.

Funds for each Greek chapter were for the most part supplied by the national house or through alumni.

Rodgers sees the purpose of building the park as twofold. First, it will better the living conditions of each fraternity and sorority something that could not be done under existing zoning laws.

Second, with the ever-encreasing enrollment of the University, the park makes expansion of the fraternity system possible. Rodgers, said, "If we are to have fraternities on this campus, we first need more chapters and we need a place for them to live."

Rodgers sees the eventual northeast site of fraternities as being a great uplifting for the Greek system. "Previously we haven't had the room and the buildings have been deteriorating," said Rodgers, "but the park should provide a whole new environment for fraternities on this campus."

In long-range plans, Rodgers envisions that all existing units-about 18 will reside in the park. "Those chapters with newer houses, such as SDT, QTV and TEP, obviously don't have immediate plans to build," said Rodgers, "but we would hope that within 10 years an arrangement can be made to have them move, too."

The process to build Fraternity Park has not been an easy one. The administration had difficulty finding a site. Also the legal people who represent the fraternities have not always been available. Rodgers emphasized, "It has been a long process."

Rodgers, however, is by no means disappointed at any delays in progress. "Actually, most of the work has been done by amateurs, people not acquainted with legal dealings," said Rodgers, "so I am both amazed and pleased that we have come so far."

Colleges Urged To Hold 'Time Out Day'

WASHINGTON (AP) - The National Student Association announced today a call to colleges and universities to suspend classes on Oct. 29 in a "Time Out Day" for students to seek an answer to the question:

"Where do we go from here?"

"It is not a strike," said Robert S. Powell Jr., president of the group, a confederation of 375 student governments that represent more than five million students at colleges and universities.

Mr. Powell said that his association was suggesting that students carry on their activities on the day, a Tuesday, even if college officials refused to shut down operations. He said some conflicts were expected but that "it is too early to tell" whether the day might bring widespread demonstrations or disorders on campuses.

The association sent its request to 1,600 colleges and universities. So far it has word that students on at least 100 campuses plan to join in the activities, Mr. Powell said. He said the association did not know how many college administrations had agreed to suspend classes.

Mr. Powell said at a news conference that "the critical need for such a day springs from our bitter experiences over the past 12 months even though students have won some significant victories on campuses and in the political system of the nation."

He said it was hoped that the event would mark the beginning of a new coalition of students into "a strong national student movement."

The event is being held early in the fall, he said, because "this is going to ba a very difficult year on campus" and students need to lay plans.

The campus mood is growing more frustrated and more cynical," Mr. Powell said, partly because "the three candidates for President seem incapable of raising the issues" that are relevant to the country. He said such issues had been raised in the campaigns of the late Senator Robert F. Kennedy, Senator Eugene L. McCarthy and Governor Rockefeller of New York.

Among the issues the student association listed as relevant were the Vietnam war, the draft, "white racism" and "the viability of our current political system."

The date for "Time Our Day" was set a week before the Presidential election on Nov. 5 Mr. Powell said, so students could enter the campaign dialogue.

Harriers Set Sights On Eagles

The UMass varsity and freshman cross country teams will make their first home appearance of the year tomorrow when they take on the Eagles from Boston College.

The varsity, coming off a convincing 16-39 win over URI, is entering the meet with their full squad for the first time since the first meet. Coach Ken O'Brien said, "I hope our injury problem is over, and we can start running as a strong unit."

Paul Hoss and Tom Derderian, who are beginning to get back into shape, join Ron Wayne, who has been running in top form of late, Leo Duart, Charlie Lang, Marc Gelinas, Larry Paulson, Diego Gonzalez and Dave Evans, the top Redmen harriers in preparing for the tough upcoming competition. Next week UMass meets two of its toughest opponents, Springfield and Holy Cross, both on the UMass course.

First the Redmen have to take on the Eagles. Leading the BC team will be junior John Kinchla and soph John Iles. The BCteam does not own an impressive record so far this year. Coach O'Brien explains this by saying that behind the top two men, BC has half-milers who have trouble adjusting to the five mile distances.

The BC Eagles have the same problem according to the coach. The top two BC frosh are Richard Mahoney and Charles Diehal. Mahoney placed second in the New England two mile and Diehal won the Catholic Invitational mile.

The Little Redmen who have been running as a real strong unit are led by their two consistent one-two combination, Don Dunsky and Wayne Lucas. Following these runners are men who are so close that they constantly change their order of finish. Bruce Blackburn and Ron Swasey, both of whom ran strong in the URI meet will battle Steve Whicher, Mike Cowles, Al Mangan and Bob Jayes for the third position on the team.

The frosh meet begins at 1 p.m. at WOPE. The varsity race begins at 1:30 p.m. in front of WOPE.

BY WALT STACHURA Staff Reporter

An injury-plagued UMass soccer team travels to Kingston, R.I., to meet a fired up resurgent Rhode Island team in a key Yankee Conference game. A loss for UMass would virtually eliminate the Redmen from the conference race.

The UMass booters are coming off two straight 2-1 losses, the first to Connecticut and the other to Trinity earlier this week. Also, the Redmen have several injuries to vital team members.

Wing Marc Cantor and halfback Marty Mughogho are both out of tomorrow's game while goalie Steve Kramer and fullback Bill Sanborn are questionable starters.

Coach Peter Broaca said that he was disappointed in his team's 2-2 record but that the team's attitude remains excellent despite the two last quarter losses in the past week.

Broaca added that Paul Bregoli and Don Griffin will replace the injured Cantor and Mughogho. Bregoli is a junior halfback that earned a letter with last year's varsity while Griffin is a sophmore winger that starred for Broaca's frosh team last year.

Rhode Island is thinking championship after last Saturday's upset 2-1 decision over defending champion Vermont. The Rams know that if they beat UMass the only team in their way is UConn who already has one loss in the Conference.

Also, the Rams will be looking to avenge last season's 3-1 loss to the Redmen which knocked them out of the Yankee conference race. In the series between the two teams, the Redmen have never lost to the Rams beating URI six times and tieing them once.

At the beginning of the season, the Rams did not appear to be as strong as the Redmen but the injuries to Mughogho and Cantor should put the squads at the same level.

WAA Racks Up Four Wins

The Women's Athletic Association tennis and field hockey teams traveled to Colby Junior College and Westfield State College earlier this week.

Against Colby Junior, the first field hockey team won, 3-1 and the second team, 5-1. Goals were scored by Helen Ladd and Debbie Harrison with Joan Nartowt and Ellen Buffington outstanding on defense.

The girls scored two field hockey wins over Westfield State, 3-1 and 1-0.

In tennis action also at Colby Junior, UMass won the three doubles matches but were overpowered in the singles games. The match ended in a tie, 3-3.

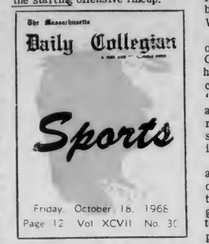
Redmen Raring To Go At Rampaging Rhody Rams

BY PETER PASCARELLI
Assistant Sports Editor

UMass still hampered by injuries and reeling from three straight losses, puts its proud 15 game Yankee Conference winning streak squarely on the line tomorrow when the Redmen meet the high powered, explosive Rhode Island Rams. Gametime at Meade Field in Kingston will be 1:30.

UMass has beaten Rhode Island the past nine years, but this year the Redmen will probably be in the unlikely position of the underdog. Head Coach Vic Fusia is well aware of this, saying, "All odds are against us, and nobody is giving us a very good chance of winning."



The reason for the lack of faith in some quarters in the UMass team is two fold. First is the fact that the Redmen have lost three straight and looked bad in doing it. But secondly and most importantly is an injury list that seems to add a new member every passing week.

This week's newest victim is hard running junior fullback Ed Sarno. The big Waltham native severly injured his ankle last Saturday against Boston University and will remain in a cast through the weekend.

Sarno will be replaced in the UMass backfield by dependable senior Bruce Cochrane. He will be the only new member of the starting offensive lineup.

LARRY CASWELL
URI QUARTERBACK

Defensively the Redmen will probably start the same lineup again this week. Coach Fusia said of this, "They are more experienced than anyone else we have."

The defensive front line may get a welcomed boost this week, however, in the person of star defensive end Tom York. York has been sidelined with an ankle injury since opening day.

Fusia said the coaches would be taking a close look at York in workouts Thursday evening to judge whether the junior will be ready for action. In the event he is not, Al Becker will continue at the defensive end post.

It is no question that the UMass defense will be severly tested. Rhode Island has probably the most explosive offense on the UMass schedule. Last week the Ram attackers showed their might by pouring out 52 points against Vermont.

The key man for the Rams is, of course, quarterback Larry Caswell. But Rhode Island also has a fine second line signal caller in Tom Fay. Fusia said, "They are two excellent passers, and coupled with their two fine receivers Walker and Stramm, it shows we have to stop their passing to win."

Rhode Island's offense may get an added weapon with the return of hard running Brent Kaufman to the fullback position Kaufman gives the Rams running strength to complement the already potent passing attack.

Coach Fusia has a healthy repect for Rhode Island team. "They are sound up front and are explosive offensively," said the coach. "They have been building and improving for three or four years now, and this is probably their best squad. It is in other words," Fusia concluded, "a really good football team."

The UMass offense will have to control the ball to win which is true in any game, but especially when playing a team as high scoring as the Rams. Fusia will be looking to do more passing to accomplish this.

MIKE MC ARDLE

BRUCE COCHRANE

"We will have to open up from different parts of the field and change our offensive patterns to keep possession and also conquer this disconcerting and discouraging problem of field positon we have had this year," said Fusia.

The coach made it definitely clear that despite the oddsmakers' lack of confidence in the Redmen, and Rhode Island's strengths that his club is far from being counted out.

He stated, "Remember, we are still undefeated in the conference. We are still the defending champions. They have to beat us. Everybody was counting us before the season even started, and everyone in the conference has been waiting to get us."

"This will be a game of pride for us. But as I said before, we will always be the champs until someone can beat us. I would say this game will prove just how much we have."

So that intangible that can't be defined or touched but is so important in football, that thing called pride could be the factor that wins this game for UMass. Rhode Island has been coming closer every year, and this could be Their Year, but it is pretty clear from the look of one proud coach at Boyden, that the Rams will have to earn it themselves.

Three Conference Games On Tap

This week's Redman opponents action is highlighted by the first full slate of Yankee Conference games. Besides the UMass-Rhode Island encounter, Connecticut will be entertaining Maine, while New Hampshire, the league leader, travels up to Vermont's Homecoming.

Vermont hopes to have sophomore sensation Vinny Clements in the backfield. Clements missed last week's Davidson contest because of a freak leg injury. Maine is hoping to shore up its defenses, which were torn for 52 points last Saturday by Rhody.

New Hampshire, gradually emerging as the soldiest all around unit in the league, should have little trouble with hapless Vermont.

In other action, Holy Cross takes to the astro-turf at BU's Nickerson Field. The Crusaders hope to rebound from a 14-7 upset loss to Colgate last week.

Buffalo, 3-2, plays host to Villanova in what promises to be one of the East's better games this week. Bull quarterback Denny Mason's is still in the top ten in the country in passing.

Small college powerhouse West Chester should provide the hard-running Delaware Blue Hens with a stiff challenge tomorrow.

Finally, Boston College travels down New Orleans way for a game against Tulane. The winless Green Wave has not been very impressive so far this year, but they'll be up for the Eagles.

But if they want to come home with another beanpot this year, they'd better use a little of their reserve this weekend.

Mrs. Kennedy Weds Onassis

SCORPIOS ISLAND (AP)-Under drizzling grey skies that by Greek legend boded good luck, Jacqueline Kennedy was married yesterday to Aristotle Onassis.

A Greek Orthodox ceremony united the 39-year-old widow of President John F. Kennedy and the Greek shipping magnate, 62, in a whitewashed chapel called Panayitas - the Little Virgin - on Scorpios, Onassis' private island paradise in the Ionian Sea.

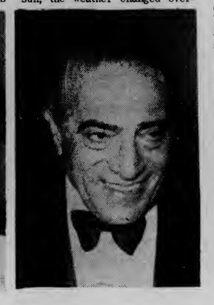
Forty persons, all "family," witnessed the ceremony, a union of fame and beauty and fabulous wealth that stirred lively interest around the world. It was excitingly romantic to some, while others were shocked at Mrs. Kennedy's crossing the lines of nationality, age and faith.

"We are very happy," said Mrs. Kennedy, clad in a pink-beige dress, before the ceremony. Onassis, in a dinner jacket and sporting a big carnation in his lapel, contented himself with smiles.

Caroline and John Kennedy were at their mother's side at the altar, along with Onassis' children, Alexander and Christina. Behind them was the matron of honor, Mrs. Artemis Garoufalidou, Onassis' sister. Mrs. Kennedy's mother, Mrs. Douglas Auchincloss, wept.

The ceremony was administered by the Rev. Polykarpos Athanassiou, who was flown to the island for the wedding.

The matron of honor picked up two white wedding crowns, joined by a white ribbon and gently crossed them over the couple's heads. Then began the Dance of Isaiah, a traditional three turns around the altar during which the bride and groom try to stamp on each other's feet to establish which will be the dominant mate.



Just who came out best was not determined.

The destination of their wedding trip, if any, was not known immediately.

The bridal party risked a wetting on the way to and from the chapel. After months of warm sun, the weather changed overnight to rain, deep banks of grey clouds and a mild morning drizzle that gave Scorpios' cypress, eucalyptus and orange trees a clean but droopy look. The surrounding sea was choppy.

Mrs. John F. Kennedy, widow of President Kennedy, married Greek shipping magnate Aristotle Onassis on the island of Scorpios yesterday.

Lederle Appoints New Budget Director

Louis R. Morrell, former Smith College controller, has been named to the new post of budget director at the UMass.

Under the direction of President John W. Lederle, Morrell will exercise budgetary supervision of all operating budgets of the University, Worcester and Boston as well as Amherst, and will make continuing studies of budgetary needs.

A graduate of Babson Institute, Morrell earned his master's degree from the University this year. He had been Smith controller since 1964. He was a systems analyst for the Burroughs Corporation from 1962 to 1964 and was with the accounting branch office of the U.S. Naval Submarine Base in New London, Conn., from 1959 to 1961.

He is a member of the National Association of Accountants and the Eastern Association of College and University Business Officers. He is the author of "A Fresh Look at College Accounting," a recent article in College and University Business Magazine.

The play by Clifford Odets which takes its title from the Biblical injunction, "Awake and Sing, ye that dwell in dust," will be presented by the UMass Theatre Wednesday through Saturday at 8:30 p.m. in Bartlett Auditorium.

"Awake and Sing!" is a portrait of a time much like our own. Doris Abramson, the director of this production, has said, "I did not choose "Awake and Sing!" simply because the 1930's are comparable to the 1960's, but as we work on the play it becomes increasingly apparent that the present revival of interest in the 30's is not in films and in clothing styles alone. It is related to the fact that we still are saying "something's wrong."

Odets does portray an America where "something's wrong", in language that is at times startlingly contemporary: "We've gotta do our own thing, Mamma... we don't believe in this society." Dan Isaac, writing about theatre as a public art, has said "It would be worth reviving "Awake and Sing" if only to remind the present generation that their parents, too, once considered revolution a reasonable alternative." The University Theatre production may move us to ask ourselves in this generation of Americans, preoccupied as were the 30's with war and poverty, can we "Awake and Sing?"

Odets' play is concerned with the Berger family and with the conflict of dream with disillusionment.

Ferber Predicts Draft Abolition If Resistance to It Is Continued

"If a sufficient number of people take the consequences of opposing the draft and fact trial, it would eventually cause so much friction that the draft would be abolished or significantly changed," Michael Ferber said yesterday.

Ferber, one of five to be convicted of conspiring to urge others to break the draft law, addressed those present at the Binai Brith Hillel brunch in the Student Union ballroom. Ferber explained the motives behind the Resistance movement and the background of his trial.

The Resistance movement has grown out of deep objection to the Viet Nam war but has addressed itself specifically to the problems of the draft. The draft is an evil in itself, not just because of the Viet Nam war, said Ferber.

One of the inherent evils of the draft is that a group of men have the power to decide what the young men of this country will do with their lives. "The draft does not exist to get men for the army," he said, "but to provide effective human beings for the national interest." Young men are "drafted" to become students, lawyers, theolgians, as well as soldiers, he said.

The draft system should be abolished, or at least changed to allow a selective conscientious objection for those who are deeply opposed to a particular war, he insisted.

If enough people disavow the entire system of the draft in an open way and take the consequences of their action instead of going to Canada, he said, they might have an impact on other people. Accepting a draft classification is an admission that a part of your life can be controlled by a group of strangers, Ferber said.

"By giving up our draft exemptions we have come to realize what it is like to be different and to have the law working against us," Ferber said. We have identified with the Negro and the poor in an intuitive way.

The Resistance does not urge young men to turn in their draft cards, said Ferber. We are interested in counseling and providing them with accurate and neutral information concerning the consequences of resisting the draft, he stressed, not in making decisions for them.

There are many things in this country that need to be changed and confronted, he said, "we have chosen to attack the draft not because it is the only thing wrong, but because it affects such a vast number of people and it is something we can get a hold on."

Ferber, along with Dr. Benjamin Spock, Rev. Sloane Coffin, and Mitchell Goodman, and Marcus Raskin, were convicted of conspiring to urge others to break the draft law.

In their trial, Ferber said, all questions of the war and draft system were considered irrelevant by the judge.

Their appeal will come before the Supreme Court probably in March, said Ferber. The conspiracy law may be changed as a result of the trial said Ferber, but he does not see a change in the draft system as a possible outcome.

UMB Directs Legislative Interns

Once again the Massachusetts General Court is serving as a classroom.

The subject is the legislative process and the students are four new members of the Massachusetts Legislative Internship Program directed by Politics Professor George Goodwin of UMass-Boston.

The four graduate-level interns are beginning a year of work and study under a program supported 50-50 by the General Court and the Ford Foundation. The program has two major aims: to give the General Court the benefit of the interns' professional staff assistance and to give the interns a practical education in how a legislative body functions.

Interns assist joint committees and serve in major offices such as those of the speaker and of majority and minority leaders. They do research, write reports, help organize hearings and help produce bills. For example, a 1965-66 intern, MIT economics graduate student David Podoff, had a key role in writing the Massachusetts Truth in Lending Bill, first legislation of its kind in the country.

Coming to the legislature with backgrounds in law, public affairs or similar fields, the interns can offer aid that "in some cases is the first professional staff service some legislative committees have ever had," Dr. Goodwin said.

He predicted a busy year ahead for the current class of interns. "They are going to be particularly useful this year in committee work in view of the recent House committee reorganization," he said. Dr. Goodwin referred to the revamping of House committees in January of this year that halved the total number.

There are three men and one woman in this year's class of legislative interns. Christine Chamberlain of Cambridge is a graduate of Tufts University working for her M.A. in political science there. John T. Eller of Newton is a graduate of Hiram College in Ohio who is studying at Andover-Newton Theological School. Thomas E. Power of Needham holds an A.B. degree in political science from Boston College and is doing graduate work in that field there. Dennis M. Sullivan of Hopedale majored in political science at UMass-Amherst, where he was awarded a B.A. degree. He is now doing graduate work at Boston College in political science and constitutional law.

In addition to their work with the General Court, interns take part in a weekly seminar on the legislative process run by Dr. Goodwin. Seminar guest speakers have included legislators, legislative staff members, representatives of parties, those from legislative pressure groups and members of the press.

This is the fourth year of the internship program. Interns from previous classes have used their training in a variety of ways, one in fact making a try for election this year to the legislature. He is Paul Hamel of New Bedford, an intern last year now running for representative from the First Bristol District. Other former interns have joined the legislative staff or have acted as part-time consultants to the General Court. Two have served on the staffs of U.S. senators.

"This is a year of experience that combines the political and the academic in an invaluable way," Dr. Goodwin said. "Its most important by-product for the legislator is that it shows the importance of having professional staff."

Union Local 1776 President Rebuts Opposition Stand on Union Autonomy

BY JAN CURLEY
Assistant Managing Editor

Mr. Paul Korpita, the incumbent candidate for president of local 1776, has rebutted a statement by Mrs. Barbara Fifield, the opposing candidate for the election which will be held next Sunday at 10 a.m. in Draper Hall.

Korpita stated, "Mrs. Fifield's stand on union autonomy is out of context with the accepted Standard Union structure." He went on to say, "It's just a matter of simple arithmetic," referring to the fact there are only 300 union members in a work force of over 2800 at the University.

"With only one-ninth of the work force in the union," he said, "it would be impossible to act independently of the International, which has been so instrumental in getting state collective bargaining to its present position."

Korpita stressed the importance of the union belonging to the national organization in the interests of collective bargaining. "We will be going to the bargaining table shortly, and we'll need the AF of L-CIO cooperation more than ever in view of our present membership."

Mrs. Fifield had stated that one of the most vital issues confronting the union is the need for autonomy. Korpita pointed out the importance of the local union being a member of the international organization during the recent janitor's walkout at the University. He said that if had not been for the presence of lawyers, which are supplied by the international, negotiators would not have been successful in negotiating a return to work.

"There is strength and unity," he said, " and to become independent at this time would weaken our ability as a collective bargaining agent for the workers at the University."

Korpita also pointed out that Mrs. Fifield had resigned in August "for the good of the union." In a letter submitted to the officers and executive board of local 1776, Mrs. Fifield stated that she was resigning because of personal and health reasons", and "I find that I can no longer continue to permit those whom I have considered to be my friends to be hurt by attempts which are actually aimed at me in terms of furthering the strength of this local union."

Muskie to Arrive in Bay State Today

BOSTON (AP) - Sen. Edmund E. Muskie brings his Democratic vice presidential campaign to Massachusetts today, a state where even Richard M. Nixon admits the Republicans are behind.

The Maine senator's campaign plane is due to arrive in Westfield at 10 a.m. from Washington. Muskie plans a press conference and noon rally at Springfield, a 3 p.m. outdoor rally at Fall River, and three appearances tonight in Boston.

In the Hub Muskie will divide his time between the old guard party workers and the liberal wing of the party.

Central to the play is the conviction that the enclosed world of the Bergers must be changed if human potentiality is to be realized. Young Ralph Berger's cry that "life shouldn't be printed on dollar bills" is an ironic counterpart ot the sacrifice of old Jacob, whose love for the youth is, in part at least, "printed on dollar bills."

Odets has captured the rhythms of life and speech in language that is both familiar and memorable, and the affirmation with which the play closes is not a set of easy answers, but a door open to possibility.

Tickets for "Awake and Sing!" are available from the University Theatre Box Office, which will be open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays and 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. on the days of performance. The Box Office is located in Bartlett Auditorim, telephone 545-2579.

Photograph Is Missing From SU Art Exhibit

Once more art work in the art corridor of the Student Union has been stolen. This time it is one in a set of black-and-white wall photographs contributed by Richard Wilkie, as assistant professor in the Geology Department at U-Mass.

Last year three paintings on exhibit in the same art corridor were also stolen. However, two of the paintings were later recovered. "But if this continues," says Judy Campbell, chairman of the Student Arts Committee, "we'll lose our insurance coverage on art and no insurance means no art exhibits in the Student Union.

The Wilkie photographs show predominantly a "mondo cane" type world. Poignantly, but accurately throughout the set of pictures is shown the misery and ugliness of this real world. Helplessness is seen in the shaggy dog eyes of a poor and illiterate looking Mexican boy who leans forlornly against a decrepit, adobe wall. Hopelessness is felt in the tired and worn, but hardened leather faces of fishermen who have fishd too many years now, but who must continue if they wish to eat tomorrow. In another picture is seen the inevitable - the wait for death by two old and frail poor people. The woman is standing with arms folded. The man i s sitting with a hand on each arm of the chair. Both people stare out an open window and wait and wait.

The photograph was stolen last Wednesday night between 11 p.m. and 1 a.m. "There's only one guard watching over all the exhibits, which are spread out in three rooms in the Union. I don't blame the guard," Miss Campbell stated, "but I do blame the person who stole the photograph. Supposedly at UMass, we are all mature and responsible adults and are capable of observing an honor system."

"The photograph can be replaced financially by the insurance company, but its true value, the personal meaning it has to Mr. Wilkie, can not be replaced."

"If the photograph is returned shortly, no action against the party involved will be taken. All I want is to get that photograph back," Miss Campbell said.

Five Flee From East Germany

BERLIN (AP) - With bullets whizzing after them through daybreak fog, a young couple, a mother and two children fled to the West through Communist barbed wire yesterday. A sixth person, the children's father, didn't make it.

The father fell just short of his goal, cut down by gunfire from East German border guards. He appeared seriously wounded but his exact fate was not known. He was carried off under a tarpaulin.

Their clothes and bodies ripped by the barbed wire, the 33-year-old mother, her sons 11 and 13, and a 28-year-old man and his 21-year-old wife were hospitalized temporarily.

The escape was staged on the East German border at Kladow, an outlying district in the British sector of West Berlin.

In a separate incident at another border area, a 24-year-old East German also used the fog to good advantage as he crossed alone into West Berlin apparently unnoticed by border guards.

The mass escape was the largest to West Berlin in almost two years, but the second involving a family this month. A family of three got across safely Oct. 1.

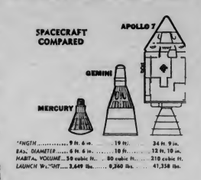
Apollo 7 Huge Success; Apollo 8 May Orbit Moon

THE NEXT STEP

A successful Apollo 7 could lead officials of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration to order the next astronaut crew to make a flight into orbit of the moon. This Apollo 8 test of navigation and communications at lunar distances could come at Christmas time, according to a NASA flight plan.

The Soviet unmanned Zond 5 flight last month only looped the moon, rather than going into an orbit around it. Apollo 8 could call for astronauts being in lunar orbit for a full day, giving them a chance to make 10 complete circles.

"We'd all be eager, including the astronauts, to go all out the next time," Dr. Wernher von Braun, director of NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center, said last week.



Assuming success, the remaining tests leading up to the moon flight would be:

...Apollo 9, a manned test of the lunar landing craft in earth orbit. It would probably come no sooner than next March.

...Apollo 10, a "confidence flight" to repeat at higher altitudes the same Apollo 10 maneuvers.

...Apollo 11, which is likely to be the landing mission if all goes well. Von Braun predicted it would come no sooner than next fall.

On the landing mission, the moon-bound astronauts would make a "turn-around" maneuver similar to the one the Apollo 7 crew made when they turned their spacecraft around to face the orbiting Saturn rocket from which they had separated. The astronauts on the moon mission would later crawl into the buglike landing craft, break away from the Apollo and descend to the lunar surface.

Thus far, the Saturn 5 moon rocket has undergone two test launchings carrying unmanned Apollo spacecraft. An unmanned lunar landing vehicle has been flown once in earth orbit. Apollo 9 would be the first mission in which all three components would fly together with men aboard-what the engineers call an "all-up" test.

SOVIET PROGRAM

American space experts are growing convinced that the Russians will not be able to land cosmonauts before 1970 or 1971. One reason for this conclusion is that the Russians have so far not tested a rocket capable of sending all the equipment to the moon necessary for a landing.

Although the Soviet Union has not sent men into space since the flight of Vladimir M. Komarov, who was killed in April last year, it has developed a powerful booster. It is this "Proton" rocket that is believed to have sent Zond 5 around the moon. The evidence is that Zond 5 was a huge spacecraft.

There is speculation that vehicles of this type may be used by the Russians for unmanned journeys to Mars and other planets. Soviet scientists have emphasized the capacity of Zond vehicles to obtain close-up photographs and radiation spectra of the planets and to deliver them back to Soviet researchers.

The emphasis in American planning for early planetary probes has been on the type of spacecraft that would fly to another planet and report its results by radio. This necessarily limits the amount of detail that can be obtained.

But at the moment, the American space teams are concentrating on the effort to reach the moon. For the Apollo 8 shot, provided all goes well with Apollo 7, the "window" opens Dec. 8. That is, for a brief period beginning on that day, the alignment of earth and moon is suited to the mission.

Apollo 8 will be launched, not by the Saturn 1-B rocket that lifted Apollo 7 off the ground Friday, but by the giant Saturn 5 designed for the moon flight. However, the lunar module or "bug" that will ferry men down to the moon's surface will not be aboard.

If Apollo 8 goes well, the target of U.S. astronauts exploring the moon's surface by no later than 1970 will be within reach.

Apollo is a program to inspire the romantic, challenge the technologist, awaken a nation to its greater capabilities. "No single space project will be more impressive to mankind," President Kennedy said when he initiated the man-to-the-moon project in 1961, "and none will be so difficult or expensive to accomplish."

Difficult and expensive it has been. From the outset the $24 billion Apollo project has been beset by engineering delays, accelerating costs, political controversy, criticism from scientists and tragedy on the launching pad. And there has always been the haunting prospect that, for all the effort and cost, the Soviet Union might reap the glory by getting its cosmonauts to the moon first.

A Manned Flight

Apollo officials took heart last week. The reason was the successful launching of Apollo 7, the first manned test flight of the mooncraft and the nation's first astronaut voyage in nearly two years.

Early Tuesday morning, if all goes according to plan, the astronauts will make the eighth and final firing of their main rocket. This should begin the de-orbit, thrusting the spaceship earthward, its nose pointed downward at a forward angle. Next to blast-off, it promises to be the tensest moment of the mission, for it is fraught with dangerous possibilities.

The Soviet Union's last manned space flight, Soyuz 1, came to a tragic end in April, 1967, during the landing when the parachute lines tangled and the spacecraft crashed to earth.

JISELE, SCHIRRA, CUNNINGHAM

"Find the Idiot's Name"

Schirra Shows Temper To Space Control Center

(AP) - Apollo 7 commander Walter M. Schirra Jr. annoyed by flight plan changes, laid down the law Sunday to Mission Control: "I've had it up here. We're not going to accept any new games."

Schirra, 45-year-old veteran astronaut in space for his last time, snapped and growled at Mission Control about the food supply and the work load through the 10th day of its 11-day flight.

"I've had it up here today and from now on I'm going to be an on-board flight director for these updated flight plan changes," said Schirra. "We're not going to accept any new games, like doing some crazy testing we never heard of before."

Schirra's subdued explosion came after Mission Control asked him, Air Force Maj. Donn F. Eisele and Walter Cunningham to run some on-board computer tests which had not been planned. He also was irritated by what he claims was a change in the profile of a firing of the service propulsion rocket engine.

At a news conference later, flight director Glynn Lunney said the purpose of Apollo 7, the first three-man flight in America's man-to-the-moon program was to check engineering of the Apollo spacecraft.

"We are bound to be performing some tests highly different than planned because of what we've learned," he said.

Newsmen sharply questioned Lunney about the changes and the 31-year-old flight director answered grimly, in marked contrast to his usual witty replies. Twice public affairs officer Paul Haney intervened on needle-pointed questions.

"You've seen Schirra's wit and charm," Haney said once. "Today you saw his temper."

At another point Haney made a comic reference to the astronauts' growing irritability and their inability to shave in weightlessness.

"Show me a man with a beard and I'll show you a protestor," he said. The newsmen roared.

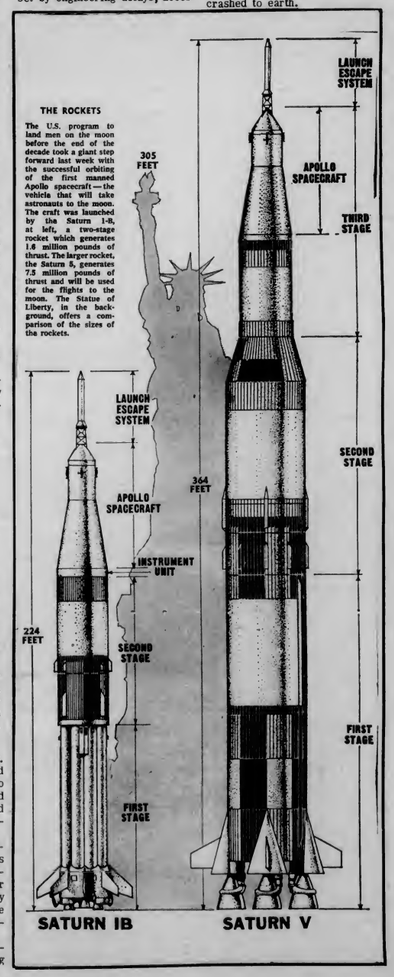
A newsman asked Lunney if Schirra had a good reason for his irritability, and Haney interjected: "He had a reason."

Schirra announced from space that the crew would follow the suggestion of chief astronaut Donald K. Slayton and wear pressure suits during re-entry on Tuesday.

The spacecraft commander said the crew would wear the suits, but not helmets or gloves. He said they would pad the cabin couches to protect their heads from the hard neck ring of the space suits during the buffeting of re-entry.

Head colds suffered early in the flight left the crew with clogged ears. Schirra said Saturday he was afraid the astronauts' ear drums could be damaged by the pressure change of re-entry unless they could equalize the pressure by holding their noses and blowing. He wanted to leave the helmets and suits off during re-entry.

But Slayton said the crew would have to wear the suits so their feet would be restrained. Without the restraint, he said, the crew could suffer leg damage.



A passive thermal test, which required the crew to put Apollo 7 into a slow tumble, angered Schirra and his teammates.

"I wish you would find out the idiot's name who thought up this test," the spacecraft commander growled. "I want to find out and I want to talk to him personally when I get back down."

The mission controllers also caught heat from Eisele after he tried a navigation experiment which had been updated.

WITH THE CANDIDATES-

Nixon Seeks Emphasis of Non-Military Aspects Of War; Humphrey Sees Win

WASHINGTON (AP) - Richard M. Nixon, calling for "De-Americanization" of the Vietnam war, says that what is needed now is "a dramatic escalation" of the nonmilitary aspects of the struggle-political, economic psychological and diplomatic.

The Republican presidential nominee, replying to questions put to him by editors of the NEW REPUBLIC magazine, said the Vietnam war is a new kind of war, more of a political than a military struggle.

"Because it is this kind of war," he said, "great emphasis must be placed upon small-unit action, destroying the Viet Cong infrastructure, police and patrol activities, intelligence gathering, and on the strengthening of local forces."

"It is my view that this type of warfare can be waged more effectively, with fewer men and at less cost," he said. "It is something that should have been emphasized a long time ago."

Nixon added: "This is also the type of warfare which can be waged effectively by South Vietnamese units, who are familiar with the terrain and who speak the language.

Asserting the Soviet Union "must recognize its own self interest in ending the Vietnam war," Nixon said: "We all know that the longer the war drags on the greater the danger of its growing into a larger war- and this poses a danger to the Soviets as well as to the United States."

"The Soviet Union is not without 'leverage' and influence in Hanoi," Nixon said, adding: "Moscow is currently supplying more than 80 per cent of the war material delivered to North Vietnam. Without these vital instruments of war, North Vietnam could not continue the war in the south."

Nixon said he would favor participation in the South Vietnamese government of all groups, "regardless of present political affiliation" which reject "the use of violence and terror."

However, he said "I oppose the imposition of a coalition government on South Vietnam."

HHH Campaigns in Northern States

WASHINGTON (AP) - "I think I have got a little more of the adrenalin in me than Mr. Nixon has," Hubert H. Humphrey told a St. Louis interviewer last week, "and I think I can bring this into victory."

A day later, speaking to a group of chanting pro-Humphrey Negro ministers in Detroit, the Democratic presidential nominee said "I would have been a good preacher if I wasn't such a sinner."

It was as preacher - with the adrenalin flowing from early morning until late at night-that Humphrey turned his attention last week to the large Northern states that are vital to a Democratic victory two weeks from Tuesday.

The crowds were generally enthusiastic - and Humphrey responded in kind, as his campaign at last picked up the momentum which he had long forecast.

" Mr. Nixon better not look back," he told crowds, "because if he does, I'm going to pass him on the inside going around the last turn."

What could not be measured, especially from within the vice president's flying entourage of three jet planes, was the impact of his increasingly sharp attacks on Richard M. Nixon.

"Richard the Lion-hearted has become Richard the Chicken-hearted," he said, his emphasis on the contrast in qualifications between Democratic vice presidential nominee Edmund S. Muskie and Republican Spiro T. Agnew, and the often evangelical fervor of his speeches.

The national polls offered encouragement, "particularly a new Harris poll released last Friday on the basis of samplings taken Oct. 8-10 which showed Nixon's lead had dropped from eight to five points, with the count showing Nixon 40, Humphrey 35, George C. Wallace 18, undecided 7.

As the vice-president campaigned in Missouri, Michigan, Connecticut and New York, he took to the attack on the racial issue in a bid to cut Wallace support among normally Democratic union members.

In concentrating on Negros and labor groups, Humphrey is trying to solidify his backing in two of the major elements of the old Franklin D. Roosevelt New Deal coalition, with the increased Negro vote-especially in the South - a key element in view of many white defections.

Central Area Contstitutional Convention

All Central Area residents interested in the formation of an area government are urged to attend a constitutional convention to be held tonight in South Commons at 8 p.m.

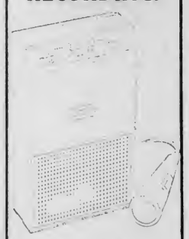
Those attending will establish the framework of an area government by writing a rough draft of a constitution for the Central Area. The government is expected to be well-established and effective by the beginning of the second semester.

Important issues to be decided by residents attending the convention are whether or not to impose an area tax, who the area government representatives will be, how they will be elected, and what committees will need to be formed.

The area government to be formed is, like the Southwest Assembly, an attempt at the decentralization of student government on campus. This means that the government established in the Central Area will be concerned with matters solely associated with the area and will be able to deal with them far more effectively than the all-encompassing central government. It will not, however, be concerned with issues of campus-wide application.

The average resident of the Central Area can expect this government to have a say in just about all aspects of his life on campus that are related to his being a resident of the area.

Among the more immediate concerns of the area government will be deciding the future of Mills House. This dorm, which has recently self-liquidated, now has $250,000 that must be put to use. A proposed plan for using these funds is changing the dorm into a campus center with ballroom, activities rooms, and lounges. Another plan is to completely renovate the dorm.



The future of the dorm and the allotment of the remaining funds are issues that will effect not only the residents of the dorm and members of the Afro-American Organization, who now use the basement as a gathering place, but all residents of the area.

Once established, the area government will deal with such issues as the co-ordination of area events, the handling of inter-dorm problems, the establishment of social and other committees, and, conceivably, with matters pertaining to the operation of the snack bar and dining commons, the rate of room rent and board, arrangements for off-campus housing, and parking assignments, all for residents of the Central Area only.

There are presently many jobs available on campus for students under the College Work Study Program. Eligibility for the College Work Study Program is based upon established financial need criteria. Any student interested in working on a part time basis should contact Mr. Siegrist in the Placement and Financial Aid Office, Room 237, Whitmore Building.

'69 Camaro SS Sport Coupe, plus RS equipment

GM MARK OF EXCELLENCE

Ask the kid who owns one.

Some people have a hard time communicating with youth.

We just bring on the 1969 Camaro, then tell it like it is.

It is: Restyled inside and out with a new grille, new bumpers, new parking lights, new instrument panel, new steering wheel, new striping, and new colors including Hugger Orange, which is wild.

It is: Full of new features including bigger outlets for the Astro Ventilation, a 210-hp standard V8, and a lock for the steering column, ignition and transmission lever.

It is: Available with a little device that automatically washes your headlights when you hold the windshield washer button in.

It is: Still wider and weightier than the rival sportster we're too polite to name.

Even if you're 42.

CHEVROLET

Putting you first, keeps us first.

N. Vietnam to Accept Peace Plan

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. AP - Well-placed diplomats said yesterday they believe North Vietnam wants to get a peace settlement under way before the next U. S. administration takes office Jan. 2 and thus will accept the latest reported U. S. proposals on scaling down the Vietnam war.

They said the acceptance probably would come out Wednesday at the preliminary peace negotiations in Paris.

Hanoi's motivation for the move, they theorized, would be that in assessing the U. S. presidential campaign the North Vietnamese concluded that, whatever new administration took office, it would be easier to deal with if some sort of settlement already was in the works.

They said it also outlines reciprocal gestures that would be welcomed by Washington, in - cluding: (1) An agreement to send no more North Vietnamese troops to South Vietnam, (2) Continuation of the current lull in attacks on South Vietnamese towns and cities and (3) North Vietnamese action toward restoring the demilitarized character of the so-called demilitarized zone between North and South Vietnam by ending infiltration across it.

They said the United States expressed willingness to let the South Vietnamese National Liberation Front, political arm of the Viet Cong, take part in final negotiations, provided North Vietnam will let South Vietnam take part too.

The sources said the U.S. proposal does not call for withdrawal of either American or North Vietnamese troops from South Vietnam or the demilitarized zone at this stage. They expect guerrilla warfare to continue in the South even after the bombing stops.

SAIGON (AP) - Captured enemy documents are "talking about a winter-spring offensive across South Vietnam" with Saigon as one of the targets, U.S. Military Sources said yesterday.

"We've got to be very careful," said one source, discounting rumors that a three-week lull in major ground fighting could be a de-escalation move by Hanoi.

"You can make a case either way. But I like to believe they the enemy command have had to do this rather than that they wanted to.

"If they are going to make a change, it should become apparent in some of the documents or prisoner of war interrogation reports and it hasn't become apparent yet. The stuff coming in each day continues to show some sort of offensive intent."

The winter-spring offensive of 1967-68, aimed at the conquest of Saigon and other major cities, was the enemy's most powerful effort of the war. All remain in allied hands.

American fighter-bombers flew more raids over North Vietnam yesterday amid continuing speculation about a possible bombing halt.

This was heightened by another meeting between President Nguyen Van thieu and U. S. Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker, their fourth in five days.

" Thieu announced Saturday there had been "no breakthrough" at the Paris peace talks. But this has not eliminated speculation that Washington is preparing, or has already presented, a new peace package to Hanoi that includes a bombing halt as one of the mutual de-escalation terms.

An American military authority reported three main force North Vietnamese divisions that once threatened Saigon have pulled back, either into Cambodia or positions near the border.

The U. S. Command announced in a delayed report that a Marine F4 Phantom fighter-bomber was shot down in the sea Friday by enemy antiaircraft fire 12 miles northeast of Quang Tri city. Both crewmen ejected and were rescued. The Phantom was the 313th American war plane downed in combat over South Vietnam.

SU Window Painting Contest Starts Today

The University Special Events Committee is sponsoring a window painting contest on the front of the Student Union. This contest which will have a Halloween theme, will take place between today and October 27.

Each dormitory, fraternity, and sorority will be asked to delegate a group to paint 2 pictures, in watercolor, on a specified section of the large Student Union window. Each window will be judged and a prize will be awarded to the dormitroy, fraternity, or sorority sponsoring the three best pictures.

Mrs. Hicks to Return To Politics in 69

At a meeting of the Massachusetts Association of School Secretaries held at UMass Friday night, Mrs. Louise Day Hicks, who was defeated for the office of mayor of Boston last fall, revealed that she plans to re-enter the political scene next year.

In her speech she called the black power movement a "sickness" premeating American society, saying "We must establish a moral climate and drive from our gates the forces of darkness that prey upon us."

Mrs. Hicks accused Mayor Kevin White and black power advocates of opening the "wedge of a deliberate, well-planned effort . . . to discredit the present Civil Service system."

"A dynamic effort must be made by all elements of American society, working together, not apart, to instill a sense of discipline and responsibility in our young people, to eliminate the social conditions that breed crime and social tension."

The former Boston school board head revealed that she has been waiting for the first anniversary of her husband's death last May to run for office.

Meanwhile she plans to make herself heard by attending City Council meetings and by speaking on "matters that concern the citizens of Boston."

Hosea Williams to Speak At American International

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. - Hosea L. Williams, director of voter registration and political education, Southern Christian Leadership Conference, Atlanta, Ga., will give a major address at American International College, Wednesday at 8 p.m.

Williams' talk, under the auspices of the AIC Religious Center will be open to the public free of charge in the Butova Memorial Gymnasium, according to Rev. Paul A. Fullilove, pastor, Third Baptist Church, a member of the AIC board of chaplains. Dr. John Homer Miller, AIC's director of religious activities, said Williams' appearance is part of AIC's contribution to the Greater Springfield community.

A native of Attapulgus, Ga., Mr. Williams has been active in the Civil Rights movement and has led demonstrations in St. Augustine and was instrumental in igniting the Selma, Ala., march. He is considered a leading organizer of the Civil Rights efforts of SCLC.

The AIC speaker is currently touring the country on a "get out the vote" campaign along with Rev. Ray D. Abernathy, who succeeded the late Dr. Martin Luther King as SCLC's top executive. Williams, who was in charge of Resurrection City in Washington last summer, was a close friend of Dr. King's and marched with him throught the nation for Civil Rights.

Winds of Change

On trial last week in Baltimore were nine Roman Catholic pacifists, including 3 former missionaries, a nurse, an artist, and 2 priests, for taking 378 files from the Catonville (Md.) Draft Board last May and destroying them with homemade napalm.

All nine were found guilty, subjecting each to a maximum of 18 years in prison and a $22,000 fine. Appeals are planned.

Although legally it was an obvious defeat for Defense Attorney William Kunstler, the moral triumph nearly compensates for it.

During the trial Chief Judge Rozel C. Thomsen told the jury that it was of no legal significance "that, in the eyes of history, they may be right." The prosecuting attorney, Arthur G. Murphy, while not admitting that the war is illegal, conceded that the Government did not necessarily consider the point of view held by the defendants "unreasonable." In other words, for the first time the Government has openly admitted that the public is entitled to the right of dissent, but merely in thought. Anything beyond merely holding an opinion including making this opinion known by overt actions, is still against the law, and punishable by imprisonment and/or fine.

At least there seems to bt some progress in a positive direction, and perhaps one day America will truly be "land of the free."

The Last Frontier

Man is presently unleashing himself from the bounds of the earth. For millennia it has been his habitat - tomorrow it will be his option of moons and planets. In his struggle to seek out the last frontier, who knows what wonders he will discover. Are the outstanding lines on the surface of Mars really canals, or just illusions caused by atmospheric and spacial phenomona? Will little green men, by the thousands, welcome us?

As the spacecraft travels on at the speed of light, it will not be too long before we arrive at Pluto. As we land in the cold harsh desolation of the endlessly flat terrain, our very souls will begin to shiver. And what we think of as hell personified, turns out to be man's long sought dream of paradise. Those who feel that theirs is the life of challenge may move to the harsh atmosphere and geography of Jupiter, or colonize a planet in a solar system of Andromeda.

Earth may become the playground for lovers and the way station for travelers. Structured government could be in the form of world representatives in a solar assembly. The President would be elected every four years, and could be from any planet in the system.

Am I being melodramatic? Who in the Middle Ages would have believed in the idea of the horseless carriage or the airplane? What sane person of the sixteenth century could understand that the press of a button would mean world obliteration? Certainly three centuries hence people will look back upon our age and laugh at its primitiveness.

The last unknown stands waiting for us. This frontier is in one way unique. It is infinite. A journey through a time dimension will be as common as a Friday night beer party; and who knows how "high" one will get. The Solar Federation For Law Enforcement would have to restrict spaceships to speeds well below those of attaining another time dimension. Otherwise people might distort their genes, or do other irreparable damage to themselves.

The last frontier is an endless - of all descriptions. You suggest it, space will surely have it. But here lie infinite dangers. Those of vacuum, radiation, and meteor storms to name a few. Space is quite a large playground. Do you think there is enough room for everybody without too much warring? I should hope so, if not, man will have proven that he cannot escape his greatest threat to security - himself.

"We've Invented A New Kind Of Race This Year"

Inside Report:

McGovern's Anti-Establishment Campaign

BY ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

ABERDEEN, S.D.--In the stockyards at Sioux Falls, early one morning, a truck driver with a gaudy George Wallace bumper sticker yelled: "Come over here, Senator, and give me one of your bumper stickers to go with Wallace."

What made the scene wildly improbable was the identity of the Senator -- school - teacherish George McGovern, liberal Democrat and unsuccessful presidential candidate last August.

McGovern is fighting for his life against a surging Republican tide in the nation's second most Republican state, but he's getting a lot of support from Wallace voters. Twinned Wallace and McGovern bumper stickers are no rarity, which tells a lot about the mood of the voters out here.

The mood is one of combative resentment against the flim-flam of conventional politics, the shellac of traditional campaign rhetoric and the mess in Washington.

Thus, on that early morning in Sioux Falls when the Senator walked over with his McGovern bumper sticker, the teamster told him: "You two guys are the only ones talking straight."

But to beat two-term Republican ex-Governor Archie Gubbrud demands a lot more of McGovern than just talking straight. His challenge to Vice President Hubert Humphrey and the Democratic party apparatus in Chicago helped him with the truck driver, but for many other voters Chicago tainted all Democrats, including McGovern. Moreover, McGovern also incurred the displeasure of voters who felt he was getting too big for his breeches. McGovern's presidential spree was no asset.

"I'd like to get away from Chicago and on to the business of the election," McGovern told a radio quiz show here in Aberdeen. And in getting away from the Democratic convention, McGovern is leaving the widest possible space between himself and the Democratic establishment in Washington.

He mentions Humphrey, but only in passing. For Secretary of Agriculture Orville Freeman, a longtime friend from neighboring Minnesota, McGovern has no kind words at all.

Freeman's farm policies are at least part of the reason the Democratic party is a dirty word in the Midwest. Freeman brags that gross farm income is higher than it was 10 years ago, but he avoids the harsher side of the farm coin--the fact that prices have soared, catching the farmer in a cost-price squeeze that is helping the Republicans in every one of the farm states.

Moreover, the threat of a sudden break in cattle prices, growing out of a heavy surplus of beef cattle, could produce a last-minute bonanza for the Republicans. In the Johnson administration's handling of agriculture, there is nothing positive for McGovern to say, giving still more point to the anti-establishment campaign he is running.

McGovern's choice of campaign helpers from outside the state is also revealing. The only Democrat with any connection to the Johnson administration to take the stump for him is Secretary of the Interior Stuart Udall, whose reclamation policies are popular here.

From the Senate, McGovern has accepted help from only two of the many colleagues who have offered it, one of whom--West Virginia's hard-line, law-and-order Sen. Robert C. Byrd--has precious little in common with McGovern. The other, Missouri's Sen. Stuart Symington, is a popular figure who captured part of the state's delegation at the 1960 convention.

McGovern's reluctance to import outside talent is only partly the result of his effort to build an anti-establishment image with the fewest possible links to the unpopular Johnson-Humphrey administration. At least as important is his concern over the major line of Republican attack--that he is a creature of the "ultra-liberal fringe" of the party's Eastern wing--a charge that Byrd will help dispel when he arrives next week.

"Does this man really represent South Dakota?" asks a half-page political ad in the Aberdeen American-News. Claiming that McGovern is spending $100,000 for his campaign, the political ad lists $72,150 of this amount from out-of-state sources.

In inbred, insular South Dakota, this could be poison to McGovern but Archie Gubbrud, an unimaginative stock-breeder is having trouble making the most of it. Accordingly, McGovern has a better than 50-50 chance to make his anti-establishment campaign pay off and become the first Democrat to serve two terms in the U.S. Senate.

The Great Umie Rebellion, - 1983

September 8, 1983: Classes begin despite riots in the Old Southwest, where students buried two towers under mud from a new construction project. The trouble was caused by protests over the towers' elevators, which had not been working since 1968. Calm was restored only when University officials agreed to remove the elevators and replace them with rope ladders.

Sept. 15: After a week of calm, trouble again breaks out, in the form of riots in the North-Northwest by Southeast residential college. Students there complained about the 500-foot deep trench around their dorms. A hastily-arranged meeting with the construction company brought promises that logs would be placed across the trench to allow students to attend classes.

Sept. 18: The first encouraging news of the year--a new site for the UMass Boston dorms was expected to be approved today. The legislature had promised that this site would be within 850 miles of Boston, possibly in Discontinued Horse Junction, New York. On another front, it was announced today that construction of the New Medical school would not begin within the next five years, as had been planned.

Sept. 21: More trouble breaks out on campus, as commuters protest the new ban on cars within 37-1/2 miles of the Campus Center. Armed with clods of mud, and chanting slogans, they advance to the Old Union and take over the Hatch. Officials fear that the riots may incite the rest of the 750 million students on campus.

Sept. 23: New problems arise, as swans disappear from Campus Pond. Later in the day, new 457-story Student Center sinks into mud.

Sept. 28: Riots spread to Amherst. Several stores damaged during riots protesting $179 charge for pizzas. UMass officials fear reprisals from residents of Amherst (Population: 23).

Sept. 29: Amherst police promise crackdown on lawbreakers. Emergency town meeting scheduled, to discuss purchase of new nightstick for the force.

October 3: Federal Health Department withdraws "condemned" rating of South Commons. Students will once again be able to go back for seconds.

Oct. 17: After two weeks of relative quiet, the campus is disturbed by news of a UMass garbage strike. Pressure felt immediately, and all Commons run short of food.

Oct. 26: Riots once again in full swing, as word leaks out that UMass Student Center is being considered as a possible site for the 1984 Republican National Convention. Republican nominee of 1980, Richard Nixon, denies reports that Chicago luminary Richard Daley will head a convention security force of 350 thousand unemployed night watchmen.

Oct. 28: In the face of continuing riots, UMass president Mark Rudd stages counter-protest by burning his office, and then resigns. Old Orchard Hill faction seizes control of campus government.

November 3: UMass secedes from United States.

Nov. 4: Northwest and Southwest secede from UMass. Van Meter North attacks Grayson. Baker attacks Van Meter North. Alabama attacks UMass.

Nov. 7: Poll of UMass students completed: Question: What is your opinion of the disturbances in the University? Responses:

1) What disturbances?	23%
2) What University?	24%
3) Yes.	3%
4) No.	2%
5) Dewey.	93.7%
6) Truman.	.05%
7) Don't know anything	377%
8) Not interested	48,950%

December 14: Student Senate learns of disturbances on campus. A bill urging a return to order is tabled until 1996. Poll taken of Student Senate asks: "How do you intend to represent the students' views on this matter?" Responses:

1) What students?	100%

Dec. 16: The Great Umie Rebellion is called off, as students go home for Christmas vacation.

EPILOGUE: As a result of the Great Umie Rebellion, the State Legislature finally realizes the needs of a superior educational system, and allocates funds for new pencil sharpeners in every dorm.

Law and Order

A very adequate example of what life in these United States would be like under Wallace exists now in Wilmington, Del. That state's governor put National Guard troops there in April when Dr. Martin Luther King was murdered and has kept them there ever since. He uses the well emphasized theme of law and order as his platform in this election, but no one explains what it means. The fact is that scholars have studied the concept of due process of law all of their lives and have not reached any definite conclusion, yet our presidential candidates have the answers.

This situation in Wilmington is an example of what Wallace stands for. It is a combination of unstable circumstances and racism. It was the Black community of Wilmington that erupted and needed troops. Is it the Black threat of violence which keeps them there, or white fear? It is an example of the governor refusing to solve a racial problem in order to stay in office.

If a Wallace supporter were to argue that the above is an attempt for law and order, rather than racism, he would be wise to examine the murder rate in Alabama while Wallace was governor. Wallace, when interviewed, claimed that this was due to the Afro-American community in Alabama.

No candidate has separated the issue of law and order from that of racism. The Republicans call for a more conservative outlook on crime, and at times it does not seem unreasonable to agree. The Boston Strangler DeSalvo wants royalty rights on the movie about him. One can listen to Bob Dylan's "Hattie Carrol" and wince. Probably the most popular example of today's courts in action is "In Cold Blood". More often than not, it is the police who are blamed, but Hubert Humphrey was in Chicago and failed to utilize the power of his Vice Presidential office.

We cannot solve the criminal problem of this country just by improving the police, who are merely arms of our legislatures and courts. We must improve all activities of law enforcement. It was the mayor of Chicago who was responsible for the slaughter, not the police.

When Congress continues to outlaw a pot-smoker and not the mindless seller of guns, don't feel so bad when a policeman cracks your skull with a club. It certainly is surprising that it has taken this long for the Black community to ung for what is so overwhelmingly theirs--law and order.

Volunteers Needed

To the Editor:

David Hoeh needs help--held that the students of the University of Massachusetts can and should give him. The coordinator of Senator Eugene McCarthy's primary campaign in New Hampshire, Mr. Hoeh became the chairman of his state's delegation to the Democratic National Convention. He was arrested and mishandled by the police in Chicago when he demonstrated the fraudulency of the credentials system by successfully using his Dartmouth identification card in one of the checking machines.

He is now running for Congress in New Hampshire's second district against an incumbent Republican and stands a fair chance of winning; but he won't win unless he gets the same assistance from students that Gene McCarthy received. Needless to say, Hoeh does not have the money for costly radio and television commercials, huge newspaper advertisements, and literature mailings. He must depend on door to door canvassing of the voters--an old, inexpensive, time-consuming, but highly effective method of reaching the citizens. This is an appeal to the students of the University of Massachusetts: Please volunteer your services! Spend an afternoon or a weekend in New Hampshire helping your country. Call 546-6993 and leave your name, address, telephone number, and the times you will be available; we will try to arrange transportation to Keene for you. For further information you may call me at 498-2196 or John Wiseman at 603/352-7464.

Canvassing is unpleasant work. An afternoon at a football game is preferable in every way; but too few good men are running for political office this year and it is of the utmost importance that the 91st Congress include Representatives like David Hoeh. His victory or defeat may depend on your dedication or apathy.

Absentee Ballots

To the editor:

With the upcoming national elections about one month away, two natural questions arise, "Has every one eligible to vote registered?" and "Have registered voters who will not be able to vote at their home of record requested an absentee ballot?" Time has passed for a person to register for the November election, but sufficient time remains for requesting and filing an absentee ballot. Most of the two and one half million people 21 and over in American colleges and universities were not able to cast ballots in 1964. They are, therefore, probably unaware of absentee procedures.

The young Republicans and the Nixon-Agnew Committee of Amherst urge all voters who will not be able to vote Nov. 5 to request an absentee ballot from their town or city clerk without delay. A simple first class letter explaining why you will be unable to return home will be sufficient. By return mail you will receive all the materials necessary. The only string attached is that you must have the ballot envelope notarized.

Fortunately Notary Publics abound in Whitmore Hall and, if requested, the Young Republicans will attempt to set up facilities in the Student Union.

The important thing to remember is that regardless how you vote, your vote counts only if you use it.

Brooke Editorial Brings Strong Reaction

Responsibility

To the editor:

I wish to take issue with Mr. Bromery's editorial, "Relates to Whom?" which appeared in Wednesday's Collegian. Last Sunday night was the first time I've heard Mr. Brooke speak, and I admit I didn't know too much about him before that. In comparing the speech to Mr. Bromery's editorial, however, I am convinced that Mr. Brooke has been unreasonably accused. First of all, Mr. Bromery claims that Senator Brooke doesn't relate to black people. Aside from the truth or falsity of this statement, it must be remembered that Mr. Brooke was not elected to serve the interests of black people but to serve the interests of all Massachusetts citizens. Mr. Bromery goes on to assert that Mr. Brooke's suggestion that the black community "take it easy" is pure blasphemy. I commend Mr. Brooke for taking the more responsible, middle-of-the road attitude instead of the more militant attitude which Mr. Bromery seems to condone. I would venture to guess that Mr. Brooke's attitude has probably contributed to his being elected. I'm sure that a Negro senator is in a far better position to help the black people than a Julian Bond who lost political ground under the weight of the "black man's burden" which he sought to undertake.

While I do not support Mr. Nixon for President, I'm sure his statements on "law and order" are not racially oriented. Senator Brooke's answers to questions asked after last Sunday's speech convinced me that his support for Mr. Nixon has been carefully considered and is not even as strong as Mr. Bromery would suggest.

Finally, Mr. Bromery states that Senator Brooke is a "token" and would probably not be reelected if he became more racially partisan. Since Mr. Brooke was elected publically, his election is a true victory for black people, the importance of which should not be diminished. As to Mr. Brooke's reelection, I, too, doubt he could long remain in the Senate by adopting Mr. Bromery's philosophy.

Perhaps Mr. Bromery doesn't realize it, but Senator Brooke has become a national Negroe leader although not the type Mr. Bromery would prefer. Instead of preaching the militant philosophy of many other Negroe leaders, Mr. Brooke has decided to work for change within the existing social structure (to the advantage of blacks and whites alike). This means Mr. Brooke won't make many headlines, but headlines do not equal social reforms which, in the end, can come about only through men like Mr. Brooke.

JEFFERY DRUCKER

Equality

To the editor:

Keith M. Bromery's column violently attacking Sen. Brooke, to put it mildly, makes me sick.

It is regretful that Mr. Brooke is the only Negro in the Senate, but that does not make him a representative of the Black race. He is the representative of Massachusetts and as such had pretty well better represent all its people--of all colors.

In this he is doing an admirable job. Abe Ribocoff (D. Conn.) and Jacob Javits, (R. NY) are Jews. Edward Kennedy, as I'm sure the average Fiji Islander knows, is a Catholic. Hiram Fong (R. Hawaii) is of Chinese extraction; yet I have never seen an editorial telling these men to represent only their own minorities.

To be a man of civil rights is to treat all men as equals. If "law and order" and "safe streets for democracy" are to be construed as "racist slogans" then Mr. Bromery is not a civil libertarian.

By giving blacks a right whites don't have--i.e., the right to have their own personal senator and the right to consider non-violent peace as racist--he is no longer treating men as equals.

BARRY M. AUSTERN

Evaluation

To the editor:

I believe that in your editorial entitled "Relates To Whom?", which pertains to Senator Edward Brooke's so called inability to relate or associate with people of the black community, is an unfair evaluation of a man who understands the problems of the Negro in a white society.

We must realize that only 2% of the population of Massachusetts is non-white and that as a senator, Mr. Brooke is obligated and is expected to represent the WHOLE state, not just a certain minority of that state. Simply because he does not wear a "Black Power" button or that his views about the racial situation do not coincide with those of Stokely Carmichael or H. Rap Brown's, is no reason to denounce him as being unfaithful to his race.

Senator Brooke is for constructive action, the kind exemplified by the Martin Luther King Social Action Council and VISTA. He is opposed to the needless rioting and violence which can only serve to alienate the black community from the white one.

His views may be conservative to some but they are sensible ones and should be scrutinized carefully. Most of us will agree that the racial situation in our country is critical but this problem like others in our nation's past should be solved through nonviolent means. Social action is healthy provided that it be used to promote meaningful goals which when achieved will enable both the black and the white citizens of our society to sleep a little bit easier each night.

Clearing Up Senate ROTC Recommendation

RICHARD W. STORY
Education Editor

The time has come, it seems clear, to make one particular effort to clear the air on the matter of the Senate's vote to recommend the denial of academic credit for ROTC courses on this campus. The tone of recent letters to the editor of the DAILY COLLEGIAN reveals that there is still a significant amount of uncertainty across the campus as to just what it is that the Senate voted to do, and for what reasons. The very recent interview with Captain Rebello of the Army ROTC unit shows that this confusion extends even to the level of the areas to be directly affected.

First, it must be clearly understood that the Senate's vote, by itself, DID NOT REMOVE academic credit from ROTC, nor could a Student Senate vote by itself remove credit from this or any other program on campus. What the Senate DID do was to vote to RECOMMEND to the Provost (chief academic officer of the University) that academic credit be abolished. A vote to recommend is not, by any stretch, a vote actually accomplishing the action.

Second, it must be further understood that the Senate DID NOT vote to recommend that the ROTC programs be banished from campus. The tests of the two Senate motions make no reference to the discontinuance of the ROTC programs. The motions speak only to the question of academic (graduation) credit for the programs. This is a far cry from either accomplishing a de-crediting of the programs or banishing them from the University.

Following is the the text of the official rationale for the Senate action - written, by the Chairman of the Academic Affairs Committee, for forwarding to the Provost with the formal transmission of the motions to him. The rationale tries to make clear and explicit the exact nature of the Senate action, and the reasons for it. It is important to read this, and read it carefully - it will be interesting to find that it does not say what many people have assumed or supposed that it would say. The rationale does not condemn the government or the war. It does not ban ROTC. It does not say that ROTC courses are known to be a bad thing (for that is not known). What the rationale DOES say is that by the only available criteria ROTC courses seem unworthy of academic credit. We commend the full text of the Senate rationale to your attention. It is our firm hope that, regardless of ones feelings on the matter, this presentation may serve to lay a uniform foundation beneath impending further debate on this question. Disagreements are bound to follow - they are to be expected - perhaps, though, future disagreements can now be over the same thing and not over differing misconceptions of an emotional issue.

Rationale for the Passage of S147 and S148 to Deny ROTC Credit

The action of the Senate in passing S147 and S148 - recommending the denial of academic credit to the ROTC program on campus - was one intended to reflect a purely academic appraisal of the courses and their content. The Vice-President and the Chairman of the Academic Affairs Committee emphasized at the outset, and reiterate here, the fact that the moral and ethical questions of the military establishment and/or current American involvement in Vietnam were not the issues under debate. It is of course clear that feelings on these issues tinged debate on the measures.

The two bills under discussion were debated at some length (in their original form) in the Academic Affairs Committee through the Spring of 1968 - the text of this debate has not been preserved; but the Committee's recommendations speak to the tone of this debate, since the Committee voted to report in favor of the measures. The essence of the Committee's feeling was that the content of the classroom portions of the ROTC program was not of such a character, and was not conducted in such a manner as to warrant the receipt of academic (graduation) credit for its pursuit. The content of the classroom material was not sufficiently academic, appraised under intuitive criteria, nor was its presentation sufficiently open and objective to permit the courses to stand in any sort of equivalence to any other University courses - equivalence being that which is made implicit by the awarding of the same academic credit as that awarded for the most explicitly humanistic portions of the liberal arts curriculum. Even in comparison with the most rigidly pre-professional engineering or business courses, ROTC courses were found academically wanting. In the engineering sciences it is at least possible to justify nondebatable formulae by reference to standards which are accessible to reason. In the humanities, it is possible to justify a position,, as of historical interpretation, by reasoned appeal to the explicit premises of the argument. This is not possible, as best may be determined, for present courses in military science.

Further, it is not the case that the intent of S147 and S148 was to drive the ROTC program completely off the University campus. The provisions of the measures recommend only the denial of academic credit to the presently - existing program. The report of the Military Affairs Sub-committee of the Academic Matters Committee, written by Prof. E. E. Lindsey (and dated July 26, 1968), presents cogent arguments for the continued presence of an ROTC program on the campus of a college or university. It is not our intention here to summarize this report, nor was it the Senate's intention to speak directly to the question of the ROTC programs's continuance on this campus. The arguments of the Lindsey report, as to the legal necessity, under the provisions of the Morrill Act (in its original form and as re-affirmed), and as to the psycho-social desirability of maintaining a college or university atmosphere for ROTC training appear sound, in the main, and are not under consideration here. What the Lindsey report did not deal with, to any significant extent, but which the Senate did deal directly with, is the strictly academic nature of the ROTC program. It is this which was judged unworthy of the dignification of academic credit.

The Lindsey report's statement on the academic aspects of ROTC is interesting and germane to the present discussion, and bears restatement here in full. The report states:

The Committee is charged with insuring compatibility with normal University standards. Some of the Committee feel that there is no such thing as normal University standards, that this is a relative thing and the only way to determine whether military courses do in fact meet University standards, is to examine the practices of various departments and various courses, looking at examinations, work loads, education versus training aspects of the subject matter in order to establish a "yardstick" by which the military courses may be measured. Most of the Committee feel that such a procedure would not be welcome on the campus and would be actively resented as an unwarranted intrusion and could be interpreted as an attempt to get a "foot-in-the-door" where the Committee and others of the faculty might dictate what is done in various courses. For this reason the Committee has not seen fit to make any comment on the compatibility question or on the credit question for ROTC courses. (Our emphasis)

We conclude that ROTC courses are unworthy of academic credit of the sort awarded traditional legitimate educational programs.

The Student Council of City College passed a resolution last night calling on the college to remove the Reserve Officers Training Corps program from the campus. The vote, 12 to 8 with one abstention, was the latest in a series of events - staged mostly by anti war groups - aimed at getting the college to end affiliation with the Department of the Army, which runs the R.O.T.C. and hires the seven teachers who instruct the program's 400 students, 200 of them from other City University colleges.

The resolution actually has no power other than to serve as a policy statement before the college's Faculty Councils and General Faculty, all of which are currently discussing the 51-year-old program of military training. In order for R.O.T.C. to be discontinued at the college each of the four Faculty Councils on the Genera l Faculty would have to recommend that action to the Board of Higher Education. Although the final authority rests with the board it has usually upheld decisions made at the individual colleges in the City University.

The R.O.T.C. program in City College is the only one remaining in any of the city university units. The same programs at Queens and Brooklyn Colleges were discontinued in recent years because of insufficient registrations.

"Law and Order Main Domestic Issue," Claims UM Prof in Book

The issue of crime or 'law and order' "promises to be America's number one domestic political issue for many years to come," UMass professor Isidore Silver writes in a new edition of the report of the President's Commission on Law Enforcement and Administration of Justice.

To be published in paperback by Avon Books today, the new edition is titled "The Challenge of Crime in a Free Society." The Avon edition's 816 pages contain the full text of the original with new critical commentary by Silver, UMass associate professor of law and American Civil Liberties Union counsel.

The report includes sections on juvenile delinquency, the police, the courts, organized crime, corrections, narcotics and drug abuse, drunkenness, and science and technology. In addition, Professor Silver includes in his 16,000-word afterword the relevant sections from the Task Force Reports compiled by the commission's specially appointed consultants and advisers, reports which he believes have not yet been adequately studied and which to a large extent were given short shrift in the major document.

ISIDORE SILVER

While Professor Silver acknowledges that the commission was plagued by problems that generally hamper the efficacy of presidential commissions, he writes that in spite of this, "The commission has made a substantial contribution, if we choose to listen, to the problem of understanding crime." He charges that although the commission's report was released in February, 1967, to an enthusiastic reception by the press, since then, for the sake of political expediency, it "has been studiously ignored despite increasingly abrasive debate about its vital subject."

Professor Silver had been evaluating the report and writing about it for over a year when public opinion polls began to reflect the current increase in public concern over crime. When "law and order" became a highly-charged political issue, Avon decided to rush the book to press for immediate release. Professor Silver urges that all work of the commission now be thoughtfully re-studied as a prelude to a non-political, non-emotional re-examination of crime in America.

Professor Silver is a practicing constitutional and criminal lawyer who has been a UMass and Business faculty member since 1966. He has contributed to law reviews and has written articles for such publications as Commentary, the New Republic and Commonwealth.

Nomination Papers Due For SU Assembly

A special election for representatives to the Southwest Assembly will be held Thursday, October 31, from 6 to 9 p.m. Vacancies now exist in nine Southwest Houses. Residents will be electing members to replace the officers of the Assembly, who no longer represent a consituency in Thoreau house, Coolidge Upper, Kennedy Upper and Washington Lower.

No nominations were received for the original election from Washington Upper, John Adams Middle and Lower, J. Q. Adams Middle and Kennedy Lower.

Residents of these houses wishing to run for a seat on the Southwest Assembly may obtain nomination papers in the Southwest College office, ground floor, Coolidge. Completed papers are due in the Southwest Office by tomorrow at 5 p.m.

If no nominations are returned from a house, there will be no election held. All undergraduate members in good standing of the above house s are eligible to run.

Israeli Memorandum Says Arabs And Israelis Must Solve Striffe

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) - A confidential Israeli memorandum on peace in the Middle East says it can come only through Arab-Iseaeli agreement - not through proposals or assurances from outsiders.

That was shown yesterday in an examination of the memorandum circulated privately among some U.N. delegations while Egypt and Jordan considered how to reply to it.

Israel's position seemed contrary to Arab ideas that the big powers, the Security Council or Gunoar V. Jarring of Sweden, U.N. special representative to the Middle East, should propose a timetable to peace and the council should guarantee that it would put into effect.

The memorandum amplified the nine principles Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban laid down in a speech to the U.N. General Assembly Oct. 8. It ran about 12 pages.

It was the first written statement of details of the Israeli position that Jarring has gotten in 10 months of talks with Israel, Egypt, Jordan and Lebanon.

The resolution says the U.N. special representative should promote agreement and an accepted settlement for lasting peace, including Israeli withdrawal from Arab territories occupied in the war and Arab acknowledgement of Israel's sovereignty within recognized boundaries.

Hurricane Gladys Churns Atlantic Ocean

CAPE HATTERAS, N.C. (AP) Hurricane Gladys brushed the North Carolina coast with winds gusting to 80 miles per hour yesterday before heading for the open Atlantic where she gained a little strength.

Gladys, which caused little damage in North Carolina, was a threat only to shipping interests as she churned through the seas with top winds of 85 miles per hour.

At noon, the storm was centered near latitude 36.3 north, longitude 73.2 west. This position, about 160 miles northeast of Hatteras, was based on Air Force reconnaissance and coastal radar reports.

Gladys was moving toward the northeast about 25 miles per hour and was expected to turn a little more toward the east-northeast Sunday night with a slight increase in forward speed. The Washington Weather Bureau said little change in intensity was indicated for the next 24 hours.

Only minor damage was reported along the North Carolina Outer Banks after winds from the storm brushed over the sandy, lightly inhabited area.

Water covered the pavements of other roads, but they were passable.

Tides were two to three feet above normal. The storm brought heavy rains to eastern North Carolina.

As it approached the Hatteras area, the storm took a slightly more northeasterly course. This kept Gladys some 25 miles off the Outer Banks and prevented the full brunt of her winds from affecting the coast.

Gladys moved northeastward 60 to 70 miles off the South Carolina coast Saturday night.

Amherst College Institutes Joint Student-Faculty Judiciary Board

Establishment of a joint student-faculty Judicial Board to consider infractions of non-academic regulations and standards of responsible conduct has been approved by the Amherst College faculty.

The new board will consist of three members of the faculty, one of whom will serve as chairman, and three students, one from each of the three upper classes, to be elected by the student council. Terms of membership will provide a continuity of experience.

Selected by the faculty as its representatives on the Board are G. Armour Craig, professor of English, chairman, John Pemberton, professor of religion, and Gerald W. Barnes, assistant professor of philosophy. Student members will be elected shortly.

The deans will continue to deal with minor disciplinary cases which do not alter a student's official relationship with the College - such as dismissal, suspension, and social or disciplinary probation. A student will have the right, however, to request action by the deans instead of the new board if he so chooses. The deans will also act in disciplinary matters during college recesses and vacations if the judicial board cannot meet within four days of a charge of student misconduct.

Student Council will continue its jurisdiction over violations of the accepted code of academic responsibility and the House Management Committee, the campus fraternity organization in which each of the college's thirteen fraternities is represented, will continue to exercise its authority over social regulations in the fraternity houses.

In its vote the faculty emphasized that in cases involving the consideration of material of a confidential nature, the student concerned must be protected from public scrutiny if he so desires. A student's right to provide supporting testimony and counsel was also affirmed.

Should the Judicial Board fail to agree on a decision, the matter will be referred to an Appeals Board representing student, faculty, and the administration. And if a student wishes, he may appeal decisions of the deans, the Judicial Board, or the Appeals Board to the president of the College.

Intramural Football Records Set

Four new Records were set to highlight the intramural football season. Campus playoffs begin tonight for all divisions as 13 teams will be squaring off for the right to wear the campus football crown worn by defending champion, PMD, who is still in the running in its title defense.

Wayne Higney, who plays for the Lobos, set a new passing record, by completing 74 of 102 passes for 72.6%. Higney led his squad into the dorm playoffs.

Rick Fredricks' 135 points, a new individual scoring mark, helped his Hi-Lo's team to set a new team scoring record, as the dormitory squad racked up 263 points over the season.

Jim Blair of the Terrors set a new receiving record by snaring 52 points. Bill Woodcock was the leading pass rusher, as he caught the enemy passer 19 times. Woodcock plays for DX.

PMD, the defending intramural and extramural champions showed they will be tough in their title defense by leading all team defensive units, by allowing only 12 points.

In the pouring rain of Saturday afternoon, the UMass cross-country team swept to an impressive 16-47 victory over Boston College.

Ron Wayne led the field, covering the 4.9 mile course in 25:35, a half minute in front of second finisher Leo Duart. Duart was clocked in 26:01 for the home course while running his best race in two weeks.

Placing third in the race was Redman senior Marc Gelinas who ran a great race, finishing the course in 26:20, 34 seconds better than his best time on the course. Finishing behind Gelinas was the fourth UMass finisher Charlie Lang. Lang, who owns the course record of 25:17, sloshed through the wet course in 26:52.

B.C.'s first finisher, John Kinchla, placed fifth in front of three more UMass runners. Tom Derderian grabbed sixth as he showed signs of recovering from illness.

Dave Evans followed Derderian, in running a "gutsy" race over the tough and hilly course. Larry Paulson picked up eighth in the race as he outsprinted B.C's Catano to the finish.

The varsity looked real good in the poor conditions of Saturday and have now put together two top races against URI and B.C. The varsity next week meets two of its toughest competitions in Springfield and Holy Cross and the way they are running they seem to be ready for them.

The frosh also registered a victory as they nipped the B.C. Eaglets 27-28. Don Dunsky ran another strong race for the Little Redman. Dunsky was battling, and was behind Rich Mahoney of B.C. but by the time the runners finished the second loop and came to the finish, the race belonged to Dunsky, who raced to a 19:12 finish. Mahoney got second in 19:19.

UMass was given another big lift when Steve Whicher turned in his best race of the year to take third in 19:54, fighting off a last minute challenge by B.C.'s Charles Diehel.

The Little Redmen got valuable points from Ron Swasey and Don Brigham who finished sixth and seventh. But the turning point of the meet came when Al Mangan outsprinted a B.C. runner to give UMass the one point win.

Next the Redmen run against Springfield. The Springfield squad is 4-2, including a loss to UConn on their home course which was their first home loss in 16 years.

UM Riflemen Win Twice

The UMass sharpshooters started their season last weekend with two strong victories. Friday evening the UMass team romped over campus rivals Stockbridge, 1228 to 1055. Jim Outram led the effort with a fine score of 256 out of 300 for the three positions.

Saturday the Redmen struck again, downing Central Conn. State College 1240 to 1025. The outstanding shot was Capt. John Lacouture with a 263. This is the sixth straight win for UMass. in their New England Division.

Last year the team finished fifth in the New England finals. But with a stronger and more experienced team for the 68-69 season, coach Mike Goodge is confident of improving upon this position next Spring.

The University also sponsors a women's team and a freshman team, and anyone interested in joining either of these rifle teams should come to the range in the basement of Dickinson Hall on Tuesday or Thursday, between 5:30 and 8:30 p.m.

Redmen Booters Get Soaked by R.I. 3-0

BY WALT STACHURA Senior Reporter

KINGSTON, R.I. - Beset by injuries and bad weather, the UMass soccer team lost its third straight game, a 3-0 decision to Rhode Island at the rain-swept Kingston, R.I. field Saturday.

The absence of three regulars, Marty Maghogho, Mark Cantor and Goalie Steve Kramer upset the balanced play of the Redmen, although their substitutes performed well.

Rich Crocker got the Rams off to a flying start when his high, floating kick sailed over UMass goalie Tom Malone's head into the net at the 2.00 minute mark of the first quarter.

Malone appeared undecided to whether or not the ball would go over the top of the net and when he finally moved the ball was in the net.

Bob Weiss gave URI a 2-0 bulge when his long, low shot caught the lower left corner. The weather played a factor in this goal because Malone slipped on the wet turf when he moved to block the shot.

After the halftime break, the Redmen made their move to cut into the Ram lead. They dominated third quarter action with Malone having to handle the ball only twice during the quarter.

The Redmen had many scoring opportunities but were not in the right place at the right time to get up on the scoreboard.

The shooting accuracy of the Redmen was not at its best. Many of their shots just missed the corner of the Rhody net but some were well wide.

Duane Brown had the best scoring chances during the quarter but he missed a wide open net on a breakaway and, a few minutes later, his hard shot was deflected at the last moment by the DIVING Rhode Island goalie.

Crocker's second goal of the game iced the verdict for the Rams. He took a crossing pass on the left side of the net and had a short shot into the open side of the net, a shot that Malone had no chance to stop.

The loss just about knocked the Redmen out of contention in the Yankee Conference race. Their conference record is 1-2 while URI leads the conference with a 2-0 mark.. Overall, the Redmen are 2-3, the same as Rhode Island.

UMass enjoyed a statistical edge over the Rams with a 21-12 margin in shots at goal, a 9-2 advantage in corner kicks and forced the URI goalie to make 13 saves while Malone had only six saves.

Injuries continued to mount for the Redmen as both Paul Bregoli and Rick Matuszczak limped off the field during the game but both later returned to action.

Dave Piccus suffered a possible concussion late in the game when he and a Rhode Island player crashed into each other at full speed near the sideline.

Next game for the Redmen will be in one week at Tufts. The week long rest may give some of the injured Redmen a chance to recover

UMass Rally Falls Short, As Rhody Wins, 14-9

BY MIKE CURRAN
Sports Editor

KINGSTON, R.I.-Two UMass rallies went down the drain Saturday as Rhode Island beat the Redmen 14-9, in a driving rainstorm. The loss dropped UMass' record back to 1-4, and was their first Yankee Conference game loss in 16 contests.

Trailing 14-7 midway in the fourth quarter, the Redmen, under Tim Adams' direction, started moving the ball consistently after sputtering all day. Starting from their own 34, UMass moved into Rhody territory as Adams hit tight-end Nick McGarry, tail-back Craig Lovell carried for five and wing-back Jerry Grasso hauled in an Adams' aerial.

After an incompletion, Adams hit Lovell over the Middle and the junior halfback carried up to the Rams 21-yard line. A flare pass to fullback Bruce Cochran picked up five more yards.

Sophomore Pat Scavone brought UMass inches shy of a first down. On fourth down Adams went over center Bob Sheehan for a first-and-goal.

The drive came to an abrupt stop two plays later, however, as Adams, after carrying the rain-soaked pigskin to the Rhody 3, was hit hard and fumbled. Ram safety Jim Eagott bounced on the loose ball and it looked like the game was on ice with under three minutes remaining.

UMass' defense, though, which had throttled the powerful Rhody offense throughout the second half, wouldn't give up. They ganged up on the Rams and forced them into a fourth-and-eight situation from the five.

With little room to punt against the inspired defense, Rhode Island head coach Jack Zilly decided to take the safety and free kick to the Redmen. Quarterback Tom Fay took the snap and straight out the end zone making it 14-9.

The Rams then set up for the free kick on their 20-yard line with punter Jim Monaghan booting the ball. He sailed a high spiral down to Steve Parnell on the UMass 27, but that's when Zilly's strategy almost backfired.

Parnell took the kick, turned left and began sprinting down the left sideline behind some great blocking. He got all the way to the Ram 22 before being hit by two Rhody defenders who were playing safety positions on the kick.

It was all for nothing, however, as a blown play and three incomplete passes sent UMass home with their fourth consecutive loss.

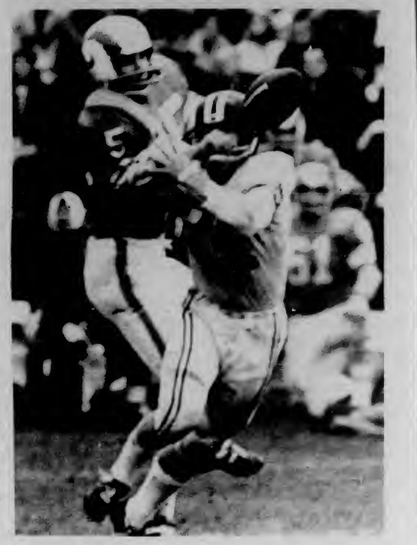
The game was played despite constant rainfall. This didn't dull the action much, however. Both teams chose to go to the air.

Early in the first quarter UMass had a scoring opportunity after a bad snap from center and a "Wrong Way Corrigan" run by punter Monaghan gave them a first-and-ten at the Rhode Island 21. The Redmen couldn't capitalize on the break, though, as a clipping penalty pushed them back.

Rhode Island scored first, moving from their 37 for a TD in eight plays. Quarterback Larry Caswell sparked the drive with four completions. Halfback Pat Spilaletta picked up the six points on a three-yard slant.

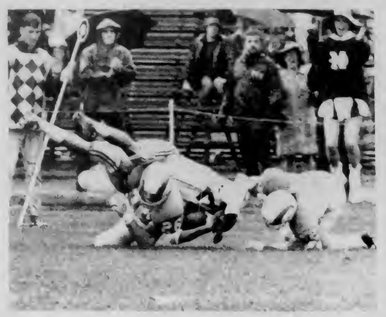
Don Dotson, in much the same manner as a week earlier when he dwarfed a BU field goal attempt, raced in to block the extra-point, leaving UMass only six behind.

After the ensuing kickoff, Mike Marchev assumed control of the visitors offense, and using Timmy Driscoll as a workhorse, got UMass moving. Driscoll and Marchev were both hurt in this drive, however, as the Ram Defenders began to really hit and halted the Redmen.



A few minutes later, after UMass defense crushed one more Rhody march, the home team recovered a blown pitchout on the visitors-12. Caswell then hit Tom Grega for eleven yards and Brent Kaufmann burst over from the one. A Caswell to Henry Walker two-pointer made it, 14-0.

Tom Fay came in for Caswell the next time Rhode Island got the ball and he kept them moving. On a fourth-and-one from the Redman 24, Andy Guarino and Dotson teamed up to halt the drive with some bone-crushing tackling.



This was the start of a brilliant performance by the UMass defense. Minutes later Billy Frye made a shoe-top interception which set up the visitors' first score near the close of the first half.

With a first down on the Redman 37, Adams scrambled to the Rhody 38, then after a loss of three and two incompletions, hit Nick Warnock on a picture 41-yard touchdown pass. Scherallis' conversion put the game at 14-7. There were only eleven seconds left in the half.

The third quarter was strictly a defensive duel as the rain continued to come down in buckets.

Fusia sees Brightness Behind Rain Darkened Clouds

BY PETER PASCARELLI, Assistant Sports Editor,

Kingston, R.I. - UMass isn't listless, as we mentioned somewhere recently. Though losing to Rhode Island, 14-9, though falling to second place in the Yankee Conference, though having a 15 game conference win streak broken, the Redman football team went down Saturday without disgrace and could become a better team because of the loss.

Although a team has to take the blame for any loss, UMass could blame others for this loss if they wanted to. In order of importance they were;

1) God, for making it not only pour for the whole game, but made it the skies unload with a vengeance not seen since a guy named Noah was around, just when the Redmen were driving for a possible tying score late in the game.

2) Rhode Island game officials for allowing the halftime show to go on despite the fact that the field was already looking pretty soggy. Added to the band, were 18 dancing girls and a jazz combo. It was good to look at but the field did not enjoy the show too much.

3) Lady Luck, for again lowering the injury boom on UMass. At assorted times in the game, Tim Driscoll, Randy Robinson, Mike Marchev, Jerry Grasso, Bill Sroka and Pierre Marchando had to leave the game with injuries. It was learned later that Marchev may be lost for the remainder of the season with a shoulder separation, and Grasso probably being lost for this week's game.

4) The referees for making some pretty poor calls. One was a questionable fumble ruling on a pass to Grasso, which was recovered by Rhode Island. Then in a similar situation when Nick McGarry dropped a pass, the officials did not make a ruling until, it seemed, they saw who would be first to the ball. Since it was McGarry, the play was ruled incomplete.

These calls coupled with the fact that the referee was sloppy in spotting the ball and the guys with the yard sticks looked like they should have been on a rugby field made for a ridiculously run game.

Despite all this, UMass could have won. All that was lacking was the knockout punch.

UMass coach Vic Fusia was encouraged by what was in most respects a good performance, though not satisfied. "We had a fine defensive game, good enough to win" said the coach. "The return of Tom York and the moving of Randy Robinson to linebacker, shored up the whole defense."

Fusia, in an attempt to get more passing in his attack, started Doc Young at end, thereby having two split receivers. However, due to the rain, the Redmen had to shelve the formation.

Fusia is still displeased at his team's inconsistent play, however. "There was some improvement over last week, but we still can not seem to put it together. We need more consistency."

The coach was heartened despite UMass' loss by Vermont's upset win over highly-regarded New Hampshire. He said, "This gives us a little ray of hope still for the Conference title. It happened at the right time."

"You know," he went on, "some people were picking us for fourth in the conference before the season. But our morale is good, our spirit is excellent and we are starting to realize we can do a few things out there.

"I think we grew a little Saturday and I think we are ready to start putting things together. Everyone is giving all they have and we could surprise a lot of people."

REDMAN RANTINGS -- The first downs were about even with the Rams having 15 and UMass 14.... there were 19 punts and Nick Warnock, despite a one yard shank, averaged 32 yards in the mud.... Larry Caswell, who was injured, did not look as good as everyone has been saying he is.... Marchando threw the hardest block of the game when he dumped the linesman early in the second quarter.... Fusia said of his opposite number Jack Zilly's decision to take an intentional safety, "I wouldn't have done because a touchdown would have won, but he won the game so I guess it was the right decision"... Bill Frye had a possible interception in his hands with an alley to the end zone, but he couldn't quite handle the ball.... It took the referee so long to call pass interference on UMass on occassion, that both teams had started to go back to the huddle.... Pat Flaherty and Pat Scavone saw their both first extensive action and played well.... UMass had seven penalties in the first period.... Although the crowd could not have been more than 2,000, the game had to be held up twice for quiet.... Correspondents Kelly and Alpert were heard to day, "It was wet".... Vermont upset New Hampshire, 12-10.... Connecticut ran by Maine 29-0.... Boston U. and Holy Cross tied 7-7 on an Astro-turf field that was like ice when it got wet.... Boston College had its undefeated record smashed a week earlier than expected when it lost to Tulane, 28-14. The Eagles meet Penn. State this week.... Villanova upset Buffalo, 28-7 while Delaware defeated West Chester State 28-0.

Muskie in Springfield Asks Mutual Trust

BY RONALD J. LaBRECQUE
Senior Reporter

SPRINGFIELD - Democratic Vice-Presidential candidate Sen. Edmund S. Muskie told a noontime crowd of 2000 in Court Square Monday the major issue in the country today is "whether or not Americans are really willing to trust other Americans".

He told the partisan audience "we are all here because of people who came from Europe seeking freedom. They didn't come here looking for fear and hatred" he said.

The Maine Senator said it was the immigrant "that enriched America and made it strong. That is the lesson of our country's growth. We have grown because we opened our hearts to these people."

He said that crowded cities which result in unacceptable living conditions "make the individual less able to shape his own life. In a situation where there is no hope he is going to rebel. When other countries have had this problem their answer has been to build a wall between those who are well off and those who are not."

"What history's answer has been in these countries is that hate, fear, and prejudice grow on both sides of the wall" he said.

The Senator said "We are worried because all Americans are not well off. We need to build a society that will benefit all."

He told the crowd the Humphrey administration would "make a great country because we face a great task. That task is to build peace and justice here and around the world."

In a speech at Barnes Airport in Westfield earlier in the day where he was greeted by U.S. Rep. Edward P. Boland and state Senate President Maurice Donahue, Muskie denounced Third Party Presidential candidate George C. Wallace.

"Can you imagine putting George Wallace in the White House with men like Harry Truman, Abraham Lincoln, George Washington and John F. Kennedy? Does George Wallace belong in that list?" the Senator said.

He added that Wallace will "divide America".

He told the 200 supporters at the Airport he "had been comparing notes with Vice-President Humphrey" which show "great receptions wherever we go."

He said that Americans were beginning to concentrate on the election choices and predicted a Democratic victory in November.

In a press conference held immediately preceding the Court Square rally Muskie was asked if he thought Nixon was "bidding for racist votes." Muskie replied "those are your words" but added that Nixon was attempting to "get votes away from Wallace."

The Senator was asked if he felt presidential candidates should refrain from commenting on Vietnam. This was in reference to statements made by Wallace concerning briefings the Third Party Candidate had received on the Paris negotiations.

"I think this is something for each candidate to decide in his own conscience," he replied.

Prior to this statement Muskie had refused to elaborate on criticisms he had made Sunday of Wallace's statement that any "unannounced concessions" given by the North Vietnamese in exchange for a bombing halt be publicized by the United States.

Muskie said that his latest briefing was "when I was in Washington in the middle part of last week."

Senator Edmund Muskie Arrives Drawing Large, Motley Crowd

BY PATT FRANCIS
Staff Reporter

A chance to see Ed Muskie, and go to a political rally, the sign said. So I boarded the bus with six other people, and we set out for Springfield, heading for the "Citizens for Humphrey" headquarters.

The rally organizer met us. He was short and stocky, and had a big cigar stuck in his mouth. The perfect image of a Politician.

Headquarters was a typical one with bumper stickers and posters pasted on any available flat space, and materials on tables. Trouble was, there were no buttons. A woman came in, looking for a Humphrey button. They sent her to Boland Headquarters down the street.

We blew up balloons for about an hour, but a lack of great enthusiasm seemed to prevail. We headed for the Retail Clerk's Assn. offices down the street, to outfit the Humphrey girls and to get straw hats, stickers, and buttons (at last). Someone asked "Where's Muskie?"' (i.e., buttons). The politician answered "With the kind of money we've got in this campaign, we're lucky we've got Humphrey."

Then it was time to go to the hotel where the Senator would have his press conference. The "Humphrey girls" started practicing their songs, sounding strangely out of place in the dignified hotel lobby.

The Politician arrived, and the girls clustered around, asking if we'd be able to meet Muskie, could we go to the press conference, and what next? He assured them they'd have a chance to meet the Senator, "Don't worry, you'll meet him". He looked as if he needed a stiff drink to help him cope with the task of being troop leader to a bunch of giggling girls.

Maybe 15 minutes had passed when all the television and radio people began arriving. Big excitement. Muskie can't be far behind. "Do you think he'll shake our hands?" "I'll die". One of the reporters remarked to the politician that no one else could have coordinated the effort as well.

Muskie arrived; great excitement. The girls screamed, sang and yelled "We want Muskie". He went up and down the lines shaking hands. Then he vanished inside to face the newsmen, while we moved to the City Hall.

Our procession went right down Main St. Comments ranged from "Dump the Hump" to Humphrey's our man." The little old ladies smiled. The guy next to me in line said "I hope I don't run into anyone I know".

The girls lined up on the platform, and started dancing to the music of the rock band that was there. Someone termed them "go-go girls". The name stuck.

Police and press and officialdom arrived, and not very far behind, Muskie. A cheer went up from the girls, who broke into their welcoming songs. No one else seemed too excited. Myskie fought his way through the crowd, was introduced, and gave his speech. The crowd remained silent, except for occasional applause for something he said.

Then it was all over, and we went back to headquarters.

The politician herded us all in, we got ourselves organized and boarded the busses. City hall looked so quiet as we passed.

Senator Brooke Speaks At Town Headquarters

BY DONNA WADSWORTH
Staff Reporter

In an informal speech Monday morning at Republican headquarters in Amherst, Senator Edward Brooke endorced the candidacies of Republicans in this district.

The senator, who recently spoke at UMass as part of the Distinguished Visitors Program, addressed the small crowd of college students and townspeople in an appeal for Republican victories in November.

He urged voters to elect Barrus as state senator, Waitlock representative, and Grife district attorney. He cited Whitlock's diligence in the campaigns of Brooke's own political career, calling him a "very efficient man of great experience".

Brooke then turned to the national scene. "Let me campaign just a little for Richard M. Nixon, our next president of the United States," he began.

"Nixon will turn the wheels of progress and restore law and order with justice."

The senator spoke of the importance of the individual vote. He expressed the hope that "the people of this great state and this great nation will not be fooled by the third candidate, who talks of law and order, but violates the Constitution."

He said that he did not believe that Humphrey was capable of governing the 91st Congress, one which he predicts as even more challenging than the 90th.

The address, which was scheduled for 10:30 , ran more than an hour late, as the Senator visited the recently fire-ravaged town of Bondsville, Belchertown, Whitlock's hometown, and Amherst radio station WTTT.

Amid cheers and applause Brooke thanked the students who had campaigned for him in '66 and urged them to demonstrate the same zeal for a Republican victory in '68.

"I think it's going to be a great year, '68," he said. "Nixon's going to win. . .he's going to really get down to the business of making this country great, truly a 'nation under God', 'of the people, by the people and for the people'."

Pass-Fail System So Far Shows Limited Success

RICHARD W. STORY Education Editor

The Registrar's office has released a statistical tabulation of some data relating to the use of the pass-fail option during its first semester of availability (last Spring). Pass-fail is apparently a hot issue on campus at present - last week Dean Field's "On the Line" (over WMUA) drew more questions on this one subject than anything else. The data from the Registrar's office is complete, as far as a summary of the use of pass-fail goes; but there is something of a further story behind the figures, which we will endeavor to get at here.

At the time of the adoption of our present pass-fail scheme, there was some opposition to its form. Many of its critics felt by the way it was worded the student could not help but come out on the short end of the stick. A passing grade of 'P' is recorded as only that, a pass, with no effect on the cumulative average; a fail, on the other hand, is also recorded with an 'F' computed into the cume. Furthermore, the qualifications about which courses could not be taken pass-fail were such as to remove large blocks of material from consideration by many students. One department went so far as to ban all pass-fail within its courses. Finally, only juniors and seniors were eligible to take pass-fail courses, and only one per semester.

One argument from the pass-fail advocates was that the arrangement would foster an adventuring and experimenting attitude, permitting students to explore beyond the normal bounds of their curriculum and (hopefully) encountering new "enriching" course material. There is no way to establish clearly whether this did happen last semester, because the reported data do not make it possible to determine which students were electing which courses. The data are not completely clear, but some rough consideration does not indicate that there was any overwhelming rush to take pass-fail courses.

Critics who contend that the option was too restricted to be much used will probably find support in the fact that only 722 (14%) of those students eligible elected to take a course on the pass-fail basis. This 14% figure comes from the juniors and seniors, students who have largely completed core curriculum requirements (which were specifically excluded from those which might be taken pass-fail anyway). Among these upperclassmen there remains, in general, only departmental "major" requirements (also specifically excluded unless the department ruled otherwise), and any few electives which ones program might permit.

There is no surprise then, or shouldn't be, that the number of students electing pass-fail was so low. One bright note: of those who did elect pass-fail, only 14 received an 'F', and only 12 withdrew from the course during the semester.

It is impossible to determine, because of the way in which the data are presented, how much diversification was going on among those who elected the pass-fail courses. 722 students took courses, overwhelmingly in the humanities and social sciences. The top six departments elected were:

English	132	18.4%
Sociology	97	13 %
Psychology	69	9.6%
Philosophy	69	9.6%
Government	46	6.4%
Economics	36	5 %

Note that four of these top six are social sciences. Ranking the three major areas of study, they stack up in this way: 5 humanities accounted for 38.1% of courses elected, 5 social sciences claimed 35.8%, and mathematics and the natural sciences took 6.1%. The remaining courses were scattered from Recreation to Civil Engineering.

Approaching this problem from another angle-that of the major department of the student electing the courses-there is still no clear way to determine who was taking what. It seems here that this is exactly the sort of data which is wanted, before making any final judgement of how much, or how little diversification is going on. The following is a list of selected usage by the majors of the students electing:

Education	38%
Nursing	27%
Sociology	27%
Psychology	23%
Art	18%
History	17%
English	17%
Government	15%
Home Econ.	14%
S.B.A. Majors	10%
Philosophy (small sample)	6%
Agriculture	4%
Engineering	4%
Phys. Educ.	3%
AVERAGE	14%

The Registrar's memorandum does report only a very few selected breakdowns of students electing courses from certain areas. On the question of language enrichment, very little activity was apparent in this area, he reports. Twelve students took elementary or intermediate language courses as a second language (8 in German, and 2 each in French and Russian) from the following majors: 3 from History, 4 from English and 1 each from Anthropology, Mathematics, German, Psychology, Zoology, French and Electrical Engineering. Enrichment in the social sciences was much more apparent-social science majors and, particularly, business-area majors, elected Economics courses. Of the 36 Economics courses elected, 11 were by business majors, 7 by Sociology, 5 by Psychology, with the rest from scattered departments. 13% of all pass-fail courses were taken in Sociology. Although Sociology majors were eligible to take such courses on a pass-fail basis, only 8 of the 97 electors were Sociology majors. The major electors of Sociology courses were: 17 Education, 14 S.B.A., 10 English, 8 Psychology and 7 Government majors. Enrichment within the broad area of the five social sciences is interesting-the five departments representing this area claimed 35.8% of all pass-fail enrollments. Although the reported data do not permit a complete breakdown, this partial table may be interesting.

COURSES ELECTED

Majors of Students Electing Courses	Econ.	Soc.
S.B.A. areas	11	14
Sociology	7	8
Psychology	5	8
Government	-	7
English	-	10
Education	-	17
Other	13	43

(-indicates figure not available)

Enrichment diversification into the social sciences, particularly from Education, appears to be appreciable.

The election of Art courses by way of enrichment might have been expected; but in fact only 31 students elected Art courses pass-fail: 8 from Education, 5 from Sociology, 4 from English, with the rest scattered.

Of the 19 students who elected Education courses, 8 were Home Economics majors, with 7 of these going into one course alone.

In summary then: while the original pass-fail legislation specifically excluded courses in a student's major, two departments within the College of Arts and Sciences opened their courses to majors on a pass-fail basis. A preliminary observation (by the Registrar) was that upperclassmen are not interested in applying this pass-fail option (but perhaps only as it stands at present, we might suggest) within their major. Sociology majors elected the pass-fail option generally twice as frequently as the average student; yet fewer than one out of six took a course pass-fail in his major. Students from the second department to open pass-fail to majors (Philosophy), on the other hand, elected the option half as frequently as the average, and only one took a course in the major. (But this is from a small sample-only 2 out of 31 took pass-fail courses.) Figured roughly, an average of 22% of students from social science majors elected pass-fail courses, while 35.8% of pass-fail elections were into social science courses. This seems interesting, and might well speak to future programs for curriculum revision. (Note again that only 6.1% of pass-fail elections were into science and math combined).

In general, students in Education were the largest users of the option, followed by Nursing and the social sciences. With their more restricted curriculum requirements, students in the professional schools (except for Nursing, apparently) were virtually excluded from using the pass-fail option. This may be regrettable, but should probably have been expected.

On the whole, the use of the pass-fail option during the first semester of its availability does not suggest that it has fulfilled the high claims made for it by its proponents at the time of its adoption. It does, however, seem to indicate that within some areas it is working, at least to a certain extent, to serve to introduce students to areas of thought which are presently popular and high on the list of in areas to study. For this is may be thanked; but perhaps there is more that it could do if made more flexible and given a better chance.

Judge, 72, Calls Modern Youths "Wild, Useless"

BOSTON (AP) - Elijah Adlow, the 72-year-old chief judge of Boston's Municipal Court, Sunday labeled the hippie generation "a crowd of wild, useless kids."

"These youths know nothing of their responsibilities and have a distorted concept of their rights," Adlow said.

Adlow made his comments on WKBG-TV's Point of View program.

"The tragedy of the hippie movement," he said, "is that it represents a formidable segment of American youth."

Adlow also challenged the Massachusetts Supreme Court's action of voiding the anti-vagrancy and anti-loitering laws.

"You wouldn't have had the hippie problem plaguing us all this last summer," he said, "if I had the anti-vagrancy act to put into action in my court these past four months."

A program of exercise instruction is being sponsored and conducted by the UMass Barbell Club on Thursday Oct. 24. The talk and demonstration will take place in the weight training room of Boyden Gymnasium from 7 to 9 P.M. The clinic will include topics such as basic physical conditioning for sports, maintaining muscle tone, gaining and losing weight and lifting as a sport. The clinic will also focus on the proper execution of exercise movements, the muscle groups effected and the program to use to best gain your objectives.

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 12, WILL BE A STANDARD TUESDAY WITH THE STANDARD CLASS SCHEDULES FOR TUESDAY.

Blood Insurance Program Outlined by Red Cross

The Hampshire County Chapter of the American National Red Cross has introduced the following Blood Insurance Program in conjunction with Cooley Dickinson Hospital. The six-point program entails the following: donation of one pint of blood, either at one of the Red Cross Blood Donor Days held during the year in all parts of the county or by giving at the Cooley Dickinson Hospital, enables the donor to become a member of the Insurance Program. Persons replacing blood at the Cooley Dickinson Hospital automatically become members.

Membership entitles the donor and his immediate family to the blood they need in the next twelve months following donation. Members and their families will receive free blood without having to replace it; non-members will be expected to replace pint for pint as soon as possible. Any healthy person from eighteen to sixty years of age, weighing at least 110 pounds, may donate. Unmarried persons between eighteen and twenty-one MUST have a signed release from parent or guardian.

SKI INSTRUCTORS

Weekend positions available for skiers to instruct high school boys and girls. Prior instruction experience not required. Good compensation. Excellent ski facilities.

Apollo Astronauts Return Home Today

SPACE CENTER, HOUSTON(AP) -The Apollo 7 astronauts, after giving America dead aim on the moon with a near-perfect flight, said farewell from space Monday and prepared for the fiery trip home.

Navy Capt. Walter M. Schirra Jr., Air Force Maj. Donn F. Eisele and Walter Cunningham, will flash from 276 miles out in space-the atmosphere searing their spacecraft during a 17,200-mile-an-hour re-entry-for a 6:11 a.m. CDT Tuesday landing in the Atlantic Ocean near Bermuda.

The 11-day flight, the nation's first three-man space voyage, is the first step in America's final dash to the moon.

The Apollo 7 spacemen joked their way through the final Wally, Walt and Donn television show from space Monday. Then they lighted the powerful 20,500-pound thrust service propulsion rocket engine for eight seconds to put them on the orbital path to home.

The rocket thrust kicked the Apollo 7 orbit high point 10 miles farther out and shifted their path through space for a proper approach to the Atlantic landing zone where an aircraft carrier, the USS Essex, awaits their return.

UMass Marching Band Will Present 'New Look at Politics' at Half Time

The 1968 Marching Band Props Crew

Election time is drawing near-November 5th, to be exact. As a reminder for this important event and for extra-special Homecoming Entertainment, the University of Massachusetts Marching Band will present "A New Look at Politics". Directors John A. Jenkins and Larry Weed have created a half-time show unlike any traditional political show. With the emergence of a third party, the traditional "Old Politics" have given way to the "New Politics" of 1968.

In order to portray the last remnant of old politics, the Marching Band will need approximately sixty "Convention Delegates". If you would like to help out the Band in this capacity, call Roberta McCarthy or Susan Clement at 5-0294 at any time. We ask that you come to Room D, Old Chapel at 4:40 p.m. on Wednesday, October 23rd to meet with the props crew managers. Delegates will be asked to wear dark suits or dresses for the game. Final details will be given at the Wednesday meeting.

Judge Rules Against Student Power Petitioners

Judge Robert Mahoney ruled against the petitioners in the Student Power case Monday morning. The petitioners had asked for a temporary injunction to prevent the Trustees from taking any action on the Student Power proposal.

Judge Mahoney ruled that the petitioners had not shown that they would suffer irreparable harm if the injunction were not granted.

The petitioners had argued that the Trustees would be violating the Student Power proposal if they took any action on it before the Student Senate had voted on it.

Judge Mahoney ruled that the Trustees had not violated the proposal by taking action on it before the Senate had voted on it.

The petitioners had also argued that the Trustees would be violating the proposal if they took any action on it before the Student Senate had voted on it.

Presidential Candidates Continue To Hack at Each Others Platforms

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS-Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey and Richard M. Nixon continued to hack at one another on the issues of law and war in Monday's presidential campaigning, while third party candidate George C. Wallace spelled out a farm program in Iowa.

Republican nominee Nixon, in Cincinnati, Ohio, said "the peace and security of the American people demand the defeat" of his Democratic rival Humphrey.

He charged Humphrey is "the do-nothing candidate on law and order."

The vice president, in New York, presented himself as a man of peace who has "not supported massive escalation" and has sought "de-escalation and bombing pauses." Humphrey also said Nixon "has not the foresight of a man of peace."

Humphrey scoffed at a knot of demonstrators in Brooklyn and was almost mobbed by scores of Hassidic Jews trying to shake his hand.

Wallace, campaigning in the Corn Belt, outlined a 10-point farm program that included price supports to 10 percent of parity, a cut-off level for farm subsidies "that would prevent a buildup of unfair advantage by the giant corporate farm structures," and limits on imports of dairy products and frozen beef.

Wallace's running mate, Gen. Curtis E. LeMay, preparing for a 19-state tour, said he advocates a major bombing effort against North Vietnam's supply routes, but would support a total bombing halt if President Johnson ordered one.

Republican vice presidential candidate Spiro T. Agnew said in Texas that he is concentrating his attack on Humphrey instead of Wallace because he thinks Wallace is slipping behind.

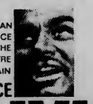
Meanwhile, Democratic vice presidential candidate Sen. Edmund S. Muskie blasted Nixon, saying: "Mr. Nixon has always had the capacity for talking out of both sides of his mouth." Muskie, referring in a Boston speech to Nixon's refusal to debate with Humphrey, said: "If he isn't willing to meet Mr. Humphrey here, how's he going to meet Mr. Kosygin, Mr. Brezhnev, Mr. Ho Chi Minh X."

British Debate Champs Challenge UMass

Thursday, October 24 at 8 p.m. in Mahar Auditorium the 1968 British National Debate Champions meet the UMass debate team.

Victor J. MacColl and James W. Hutchison, the British team, on the affirmative and Marlene Fine and Steve Daggett, on the negative, will debate the topic, Resolved: That Capital Punishment is the World's Worst Crime.

MacColl, 24, holds an honours degree in political science from the University of Strathclyde. His interests are in politics and debating. He was president of the Conservative Students at the University and Chairman of the Federation of Conservative Students. He is currently the Chairman of the Scottish Young Conservatives.



Hutchison, a twenty year old resident of Hamilton, Scotland, is a senior at the University of Strathclyde and his interests include politics, journalism and debate.

The format for the program will include a fifteen minute question and answer period with audience participation between the four ten-minute constructive and five-minute rebuttal speeches.

The British team is visiting the UMass campus as part of a tour of the eastern United States, sponsored by the Speech Association of America.

Olympics-Politics Or Human Rights?

The deepness of the racial conflict in this country has manifested itself in a succession of actions of a racial nature at the Summer Olympic Games at Mexico City. The peak of the Olympic conflict occurred early Friday morning when the two black U.S. sprinters Tommie Smith and John Carlos were suspended by the U.S. Olympic Committee for a black power salute in the acceptance of their medals after placing first and third respectively in the 200 meter dash. Not only was this the culmination of conflicts at the Games but also events encompassing almost a year.

For those unaware of the associated racial conflicts a resume is in order. First of all, Prof. Harry Edwards, a black sociology instructor at San Jose State, gathered the most prominent black amateur athletes amongst them it was decided some sort of protest would be used at Mexico City to protest the oppressed condition of blacks in the United States. A boycott by black athletes was considered. This was partially implemented at the basketball tryouts, most notably by UCLA star Lew Alcindor.

As the Olympics approached, however, it was obvious that some sort of silent protest would be adopted. The first such action was the wearing of buttons at the Olympic track and field trials saying, "Olympic Project for Human Rights." Then the Olympics began with several black athletes, most notably sprinter Jim Hines, wearing knee-high black socks as a sign of black unity.

Last Thursday the racial protest became much more open as Tommie Smith and John Carlos signified their backing of black power and black unity by raising their black gloved hands in a black power salute on the victory stand. This action brought a warning to other athletes from the U.S. Olympic Committee against similar outbursts. Then following an apology to the International Olympic Committee the latter committee pressured the U.S. Committee to throw Carlos and Smith off the team or risk expulsion of its entire team. The reason for this was ostensibly that politics should not enter into the Olympics.

But has the International Olympic Committee been truly oblivious to politics? What happened in 1936, when Hitler refused to congratulate or shake the hand of Jesse Owens, the U.S. triple medal winner because of the athlete's color? Was it not politics that forced the I.O.C. to later banish South Africa from this year's Games after first reaccepting that country or was it a genuine concern for the rights of the oppressed blacks in that country of apartheid? It seems that the I.O.C. concerns itself more with smoothly functioning events than the rights of human beings. It is more afraid of embarrassment of its members than the manifestation of human injustices in many countries.

The black athletes who had the guts to protest are to be commended for having the fortitude to risk expulsion, unfavorable publicity, perhaps in some cases loss of scholarships, and possibly loss of later income because of their actions. Their protests were not violent and only showed that these athletes, who are, in a sense, elite blacks, care about their oppressed brothers and sisters at home. They have more courage to speak out than the many prominent black professional athletes who have shown little concern for those who haven't been able to break the barriers that their great talents allowed.

In all, the International Olympic Committee has shown little wisdom in handling the racial situation at Mexico City. Its combining of human rights with politics is a narrow-minded action and should be deplored by all who value human rights. The black athletes who protested, on the other hand, showed the courage of their conviction by showing this courage in an area never previously used, but one in which they were extremely vulnerable.

"I Didn't Think He'd Shoot Back"

Inside Report:

Chinh's Hard Line

BY ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON - One of the most surprising elements in President Johnson's inability thus far to negotiate a total bombing halt is North Vietnam's worsening situation on the home front.

Hanoi's military problem in the South is now well-known. The new policy laid down by Truong Chinn, third-ranking member of the North Vietnamese politburo, abandons for the time being all thought of sudden victory. This is the result of fearful enemy losses in the offensive last winter and the failure of subsequent offenses to accomplish their objective--an uprising in the cities.

Lost in Washington's preoccupation with the military side of the war, however, is that Hanoi's home front is in far worse shape than U.S. experts had suspected, so much so, in fact, that political expediency in Hanoi would seem to dictate coming to terms with Mr. Johnson on the bombing halt to obtain a breathing space.

The depth of deterioration on the home front, most of it tied into the domestic economy, was spelled out as never before in Truong Chinh's recent and fascinating report to Communist party cadres (leaders) in Hanoi. Chinh, a veteran party leader whose name means "Long March" (he learned about protracted war from Mao Tse-tung during the Chinese civil war), lashed out at: "the rather widespread situation of corruption" and at profiteers who are taking advantage of the war situation."

Implicit in Chinh's language, couched in the understatement of Communist rhetoric, is the spectre of a major clampdown and purge by security forces on both war profiteers and political deviated. For example:

"We must pay continuous attention to consolidating the repressive apparatus of the People's Democratic State, the People's Army, the People's Police, the People's Control Institute, the People's Tribunal, and so forth."

The reason for this is manifold. In the northern provinces, the trouble between "the socialist path and the capitalist path is still going on, to definitely determine who will defeat whom."

Communists entrenched in the bureaucracy are conniving with speculators to profit from serious shortages of food and goods. This has led to a clandestine free market which is upsetting the tightly-regimented mechanism of state control over the distribution and sale of everything the people need.

On the collective farms, peasants are slicing off land and cultivating it as their own for private profit, thus reducing the food available for distribution by the state. Chinh's gloomy recital, in fact, hints at the steady growth of that decadent economic theory, free enterprise, and exhorts his party cadres to root it out.

"As for small traders," he said, "we should resolutely educate them, help them move toward more productive work, bring them into service cells, and arrange so that they may have legitimate work and income." The word "educate" in the Communist idiom implies Draconian measures of repression.

There was much more in Chinh's remarkably candid recital of serious economic and political problems at home. He predicted a "protracted, hard and complicated struggle" to root out home-front enemies of the state and strengthen party dictatorship over "the people's enemies, repressing counter-revolutionaries and maintaining security and order."

Confronted with this crisis on the home front, and having abandoned all hope of quick victory in the South, Hanoi's leadership would seem to be especially susceptible to President Johnson's latest terms for ending all bombing in the North and starting serious negotiations at Paris. Added to this is the unknown political equation that will face Ho Cni Minh after the departure of Mr. Johnson. There can be no assurance in Hanoi that a new Nixon administration would not resume full-scale bombing throughout the North next January.

But Truong Chinh's authoritative speech hints at no yielding, except possibly for expedient and temporary reasons. To the contrary, Chinh points to the opposite direction--to repressive tightening-up at home and a patient rebuilding of political and military strength in the South for eventual resumption of full-scale war.

Frosh Opinions Vary On Life at UMass

BY SUSAN SPATRICK
Staff Reporter

Freshmen have varying opinions of UMass after being here for nearly two months. Many freshman students complained that there were too many people here and that it was hard to get to know very many teachers or students. But others who said the main reason they liked the University because of the large population, offered such statements as "You can meet new people every day", "No one knows you at the beginning and you can make a fresh start", and "It prepares you for life more than a smaller or non-coed school would."

Of those who did like it, there were many who said, "I like it, but...". For instance, in Southwest, many felt all the noise and activity made it hard for them to study. Some female students were bothered by their curfew "I had more freedom at home" Surprizingly though, most girls felt it was a good idea, but it should be earlier on weekdays and later on weekends. Many suggested the curfew be gradually lengthened in the second semester until the very end, when it could be discarded completely.

Academically, most felt the students here were getting an education equal to, or superior than they would get at almost any other college in the country, but that there were too many requirements.

As a whole, the freshmen seem to have about the same opinions of their school as most upperclassmen. Most like it, including one weary person who commented, "I think I might even be able to get some sleep if only they'd stop that cackling in T-6".

Boston Symphony Performs at Smith

A Boston Symphone Orchestra performance will open the Smith College Concert Course Thursday.

Colin Davis, conductor of London's BBC Orchestra, will be the guest conductor. The concert will be at 8:15 p.m. in John M. Greene Hall.

Featured on the program will be the First Symphony by the young English composer, Richard Rodney Bennett.

The orchestra will also play Haydn's Symphony no. 99 in E flat and Brahms' Symphony no. 3 in F opus 90.

Tickets for the series and for the individual concerts are available through the department of music, Sage Hall, Smith College. On Thursday, the day of the performance, those tickets remaining may be purchased at the box office of John M. Greene Hall.

There's More Humor On the West Coast

Besides being independent, activist, politically oriented and increasing in numbers each year, California college students may also laugh more than any others.

The conclusion results from the fact that of the 31 actively publishing student humor magazines listed in the Directory of the College Student Press in America, more of them appear on California campuses than any other state.

The 200-page compilation of data on campus newspapers, magazines and yearbooks has been published by the National Council of College Publications Advisers. Its editor is Dr. Dario Politella, Associate Professor of Journalistic Studies at the University of Massachusetts.

The west coast magazines are published at Los Angeles Valley College, San Francisco State, Stanford, University of California at Berkely and the University of California at Los Angeles.

Distinguished University Trio To Perform at Bowker Wed.

The UMass Department of Music continues its series of faculty recitals Wednesday evening, with a concert by the University Trio. It will take place in Bowker Auditorium at 8:00 p.m. and is open to the public without charge.

The University Trio is one of the most distinguished groups individually and collectively, and numbers among its members Estela Kersenbaum Olevsky, the young Argentinian pianist, Julian Olevsky, noted concert violinist currently resident artist at the University and the exciting young cellist, Joel Krosnick. For their concert, the Trio has programmed Martinu's Duo for Violin and Cello, Ravel's Trio for Piano, Violin and Cello, and Felix Mendelssohn's Trio in D Minor, Opus 49.

Mrs. Olevsky made her debut in Buenos Aires at the age of eight. She has studied composition with the noted Alberto Ginastera and possesses credentials as both a pianist and conductor. Her husband, the concert violinist Julian Olevsky, is a native of Berlin, Germany. He moved to Argentina as a youngster and studied extensively with the great maestro, Alexander Petschnikoff. Mr. Olevsky has appeared as soloist with many of the world's great orchestras and as recitalist. Joel Krosnick joined the University faculty in 1966 after being Professor of Music at the University of Iowa. He was a member of the Iowa String Quartet and has toured in Europe, the Middle East, and Eastern Europe.

Julian Olevsky, violin, Estela Kersenhaum Olersky, piano, and Joel Krosnick, cello, will perform in faculty recital.

Micro-teaching Program Adopted By UMass Education Department

Breaking down the complexities of teaching into more readily trainable skills is the basis of a new teacher - training program at UMass. Developed at Stanford University in 1963, the technique is known as "micro-teaching."

Dr. James M. Cooper, Assistant Professor of Education, describes micro-teaching as a "miniature classroom situation." In a typical micro-teaching session, the teacher presents a 5 - 20 minute lesson focusing on one skill to a group of four students. The lesson is videotaped and then played back for the teacher and his supervisor.

"The video-tape is an effective but not essential, part of micro-teaching," Dr. Cooper stated. "It is a powerful source of immediate feedback which allows the teacher to analyze his performance more objectively. The teacher can then reteach the same lesson to a new group of students to try to improve his performance."

Citing the advantages of micro-teaching over the traditional method of teacher training, Dr. Cooper explained that "in a classroom situation, a new teacher often won't try new techniques because he is afraid of failure. Micro-teaching, on the other hand, is a more comfortable, low-risk situation. In the classroom, the teacher is responsible to his students; in the micro-teaching situation, he is responsible to himself. Micro-teaching gives a teacher freedom to try new things, fail, and try again."

Micro-teaching also allows a teacher-trainee to have a realistic teaching encounter with students before he begins practice teaching.

"Many skills that teachers once had to acquire through classroom experience can be accomplished in micro-teaching," Dr. Cooper said. "Therefore, the new teacher starts his classroom experience at a higher proficiency level."

UMass is one of more than 100 teacher-training institutions now using or planning to use micro-teaching. However, Dr. Cooper cautioned, some schools equate peer - teaching with micro-teaching. "Peer-teaching," he explained, "is only a simulated learning situation because the 'students' already know the material. A teacher should present a ninth-grade English lesson to ninth graders, not to college seniors pretending to be ninth graders."

Black Students Revolt and Close Detroit School

DETROIT AP - Black students took over the auditorium of a Detroit high school Monday and officials closed the school for the second time in two school days to allow police to restore order.

When Police Tactical Mobile Units arrived at Mackenzie High School on the city's West Side, students had hauled down the American Flag and were chanting, "Burn the Flag."

The school has 3,700 pupils, approximately 8 per cent of them black.

Mackenzie was closed at noon Friday when some white teachers said they felt threatened by students and walked out of an assembly called to let the students air their grievances.

are your contact lenses more work than they're worth?

If you're tired of using two or more separate solutions to take care of your contact lenses, we have the solution. It's Lensine the all-purpose lens solution for complete contact lens care—preparing, cleaning, and soaking. ■ Just a drop or two of Lensine before you insert your contacts coats and lubricates the lens surface making it smoother and non-irritating. Cleaning your contacts with Lensine retards the buildup of foreign deposits on the lenses. ■ Lensine is sterile, self-sanitizing, and antiseptic making it ideal for storage of your lenses between wearing periods. And you get a removable storage case on the bottom of every bottle, a Lensine exclusive for proper lens hygiene. ■ It has been demonstrated that improper storage between wearings may result in the growth of bacteria on the lenses. This is a sure cause of eye irritation and could seriously endanger vision. Bacteria cannot grow in Lensine. ■ Caring for contact lenses can be as convenient as wearing them with Lensine, from the Murine Company, Inc.

Absentee Voter's Day' To Be Held Next Week

Vice President William Perkins of the Young Republican Club has announced that his organization will sponsor an "absentee voters day" on campus next week.

The event will be held next Wednesday, Oct. 30, in the Student Union between the hours of 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. At this time a notary public will be present at a table in the Union to notorize absentee ballots.

Perkins, also campus coordinator of United Citizens for Nixon-Agnew, said that students may go about getting their absentee ballots by "first sending a letter to their town or city clerk asking for a ballot. They must then fill it out under the auspices of a notary public."

Reasoning behind the Young Republican action was explained by Perkins as, "There are approximately 2-1/2 million people of voting age in this country who are enrolled in college. The vast majority have never voted before. Perhaps they will find it difficult to get home for the Nov. 5th election."

He pointed out that whereas a Newsweek Magazine article of the Oct. 21 issue shows the college educated vote as being 51% of the nation's total and polls show a healthy percentage of college people for Richard Nixon, that by providing an opportunity for some of these people to vote, " the possibility of a person voting for Nixon is very likely."

The ballot must be stamped and received by the close of the polls on election day, the club officer stated.

"We wish to provide service for anyone on campus, faculty, students, etc., regardless of party. It is a service to the college community and our contribution to campaign efforts." added Perkins.

The club Vice President concluded that he expects "good campus response" to the upcoming absentee voters day.

Resident Artist at UMass Will Exhibit in Boston

The work of John Grillo, resident artist in the art department, is the subject of two one-man exhibitions in Boston, one at the Rigelhaupt Gallery from Oct. 23 to Nov. 13 and the other at the Simmons College Beatley Library from Nov. 11 to Dec. 6.

Mr. Grillo has studied at the Hartford School of Fine Arts, California School of Fine Arts, and with Hans Hoffman in New York. He came to the University in 1967 after previous appointments at the University of Iowa, University of California at Berkeley and Southern Illinois University. In addition to more than a dozen one-man shows in New York galleries since 1948, he has had two major retrospective exhibitions, one in 1958 at the Olsen Foundation and the other in 1966 at the Bundy Art Museum in Vermont.

Mr. Grillo's paintings and sculptures have been purchased by some of the leading museums in the United States and currently his major painting, "After the Sun Storm," in the collection of James A. Michener, is touring the U.S., circulated by the Smithsonian Institution.

He states the theme and concept of the recent work to be shown in Boston as "space-oriented ideas that emanate from a personal feeling of reality expressed through geometric forms, shapes and colors that relate to an aerial landscape. In the use of intense colors juxtaposed in symbolic design, a mystical visual world is created."

Delta Chi Sponsoring Advisory Help Program For Interested Frosh

The Freshman Help List was recently distributed in all freshman rooms. Last spring for the second consecutive year Delta Chi Fraternity compiled a list of all upperclassmen who would be willing to help freshmen in any problems that might arise at the University such as: rides home, books for one's major, professors one should avoid, academic difficulty, and social problems.

The program is designed to help bridge the gaps which new students to the University may encounter.

Oxford Seminar '69 At Trinity College

BY MARTHA CURRAN
Senior Reporter

Picadilly Circus, Tunbridge Wells and St. Trinian's at the High become more than just far away places with strange-sounding names when you are there, and you can be there. Picture yourself walking through London, bicycling through Kent or punting along the Cherwell, a tributary of the Thames. Picture yourself in England. And while you're there, earn six credits at Trinity College, Oxford, the greatest of the world's great universities.

You can't beat Trinity College for location in Oxford: Built in 1555 and partly designed by Sir Christopher Wren, Trinity is located right at the center of things: next door to Blackwell's, the largest book store in the world; three minutes from the Bodelian Library; around the corner from The Turf, a cosy pub where the only courses offered are bitters, lager, ale, and porter, a short walk from The Bear, another pub where you can sip cider surrounded by club ties and muralled walls. Then too, there's The Trout and the Mitre and the Turl and most important, the people you'll meet there.

The UMass Summer Seminar at Trinity College, Oxford, will be conducted from June 18 to August 14, 1969. Undergraduate credit is provided for English courses to be led by Oxford dons in: Chaucer, Shakespeare, 17th Century Poetry, English Novel Scott - Austen, Modern Novel, Modern British and American Drama, and Modern Poetry.

Graduate level courses include seminars on Ben Jonson, Charles Dickens, John Milton and English Restoration Drama. Each course carries three UMass credits; undergraduates must take two courses, graduate students may elect only one.

Undergraduate applicants must be 20 years old by June, 1969. The Seminar is not restricted to english majors, but the applicant must have at least a B average (3.0) average in English or related subjects and have completed 15 semester hours (or equivalent) in English language or literature by June, 1969. Applications are due at Bartlett Hall, Department of English, by December 10, 1968.

Graduate applicants should be concentrating on a Master's or PhD. If he is beginning graduate work, undergraduate criteria apply and he is classified a transient graduate student by UMass.

Interviews, another important aspect of application, should be arranged early. 120 students will go on the Oxford Seminar; the selection committee receives an average of 300 applications from over 40 colleges and universities.

Back to Trinity College: each student will have his own bedroom and living room. High Table will be set every Guest Night as well-known British authorities on the theatre, the novel, poetry and criticism come to address the Seminar in a series of lectures on "The current Literary Scene in Britain."

Also included in the cultural aspect of the Seminar are trips to Stratford for a Shakespearian performance, to Stonehenge, Salisbury, "the Stately Homes of England," and theatre and opera performances in London.

Cost of the program is $820 for Massachusetts residents, $850 for non-residents. This includes transportation on a regularly scheduled Pan Am flight from Boston to London to Boston; tuition, room, board and linen at Trinity College; two nights in a London hotel, theatre tickets, guest lecture series, and transfers to historic sites.

A limited amount of financial aid is available to undergraduates at UMass through the office of Financial Aid.

Departure from Boston is scheduled for June 18 and the student is free to travel on his own from June 18 to June 30. Individual arrangements for travel may be made through the Colpitts Travel Center, 85 Franklin Street, Boston, Mass.

For further information and applications, contact the Director of the Oxford Summer Seminar, Department of English, Bartlett Hall, UMass, Amherst, 01002.

Dormitory Open Houses Call For Parental Permission Slips

Nearly 90 per cent of all UMass undergrads have their parents permission to participate in dormitory open house programs.

Parental permission forms were mailed this summer to the parents of all UMass undergraduates. Of the 13,579 sent, 7,178 were returned for the students living in the residence halls. In this group, 6,446 indicated their sons and daughters could participate. Another 732 denied permission.

The permission forms were mailed by the dean of students office to all students, living on or off-campus. The questionaires served another function: to verify fall addresses. Corrections were made by 870.

The responses were counted in three categories: an affirmative response; a negative response; and no response at all which was counted as a negative.

Four copies of this list have been made, for the files of the head of resident, the house president, the area coordinator and the dean of students.

Before a dorm can conduct open house, the house constitution must be approved by an executive order issued by the dean of students or by the Student Senate and the dean.

Each residence hall must have an operational judiciary as defined by the Judiciary Act of the Student Senate. Each house must also have its open house policy approved by the Student Life Committee before the hours can go into effect.

The majority of each house's members must also approve the open house policy by a secret vote.

Several houses have begun the program. Dates and times are decided upon each month, and the policy is subject to a monthly review. Visiting hours may be conducted Monday through Thursday from 3 to 10 p.m.; Friday and Saturday nights and nights before holidays from noon to 1 a.m. and Sundays from noon to midnight.

In each house, guests must be registered at the desk in the main lobby, and they must be met by the host or hostess.

The Student Life Committee has recommended that the guest register be confidential and the name of the guests destroyed not less than 12 hours, nor more than 24 hours, after the end of the visiting period.

Sierra Club Publishes Indian Photographs

The Sierra Club will publish on October 15, ALMOST ANCESTORS: THE FIRST CALIFORNIANS by Theodora Kroeber and Robert F. Heizer, edited by David Hales, with a foreword by David Brower.

Theodora Kroeber joins with Robert F. Heizer in presenting this original collection of 117 photographs of California Indians. The photographs, collected from museums and several private collections, date back to a daguerreotype taken in 1851. The subjects of this story like the remarkable and wonderful character of ISHI will haunt the minds of readers, stir their consciences and perhaps result in much needed thought about man and his relationship to the land.

The faces portrayed in ALMOST ANCESTORS represent 50 California tribes that have been exterminated. As David Brower says in his foreword, "Perhaps these faces can be symbols for us, can make more poignant the tragedy we are inflicting on living things less like ourselves. Perhaps we can wonder a moment what it might be like, for example, to be the last man on earth who could speak French. Too many species are down to the last that speak their language, and organic wholeness will be lessened when they go, on whatever part of this planet they inhabit. What lessens them diminishes us, for there is no island."

New Electronic Speech Analyzer Adds Dimension to Therapy

A new machine that represents speech by light patterns is being used by a UMass engineer to help deaf students speak correctly.

The electronic speech analyzer devised by Dr. Ian B. Thomas could not only add a whole new dimension in speech therapy for the deaf but may also be useful in teaching language students to pronounce foreign sounds, he believes.

The analyzer translates the major identifying characteristics of human speech into electronic impulses that appear immediately as a flickering pattern on a neon light board. A vowel sound appears as a group of lights; a typical word as one or two groups connected by lines.

"Some deaf students who have used the machine have improved in their ability to produce correct sounds within a matter of minutes," Dr. Thomas said.

He explained that articulate human speech is a process in which the ear plays a constant part, monitoring the vocal sounds for clarity and correctness. The deaf lack this monitoring system and their speech quality suffers

The UMass speech analyzer serves as a visual "ear" that can show by fast-moving lights what the correct speech pattern should be and how closely the speech pattern of the deaf person approaches it.

In a typical exercise, the correct light pattern for a sound or word is outlined in crayon on a transparent panel over the light board. The subject is then instructed to duplicate the sounds by lighting the same pattern.

"Since the presence of the therapist or teacher is not essential once the subject has been instructed in the use of the machine, the device can relieve the therapist of much of the drudgery of the normal therapy session," Dr. Thomas said.

Dr. Thomas is a native of Australia who holds his Ph. D. in electrical engineering from the University of Illinois. He worked in speech synthesis and perception at Illinois before joining the U-Mass School of Engineering in 1967

Stage Design Talk At Mahar this Week

"Stage Design at the Abbey Theatre," will be the topic of a talk by Liam Miller, Irish publisher, producer, and designer, Wednesday, Oct. 23, at 8 p.m., in Mahar Auditorium. Miller is a director of the Lantern Theatre, an experimental theatre in Dublin which has produced Joyce, Beckett, O'Casey, and Yeats as well as new Irish and foreign plays. He has designed several sets for the Abbey Theatre, Dublin, including the 1966 production of Sean O'Casey's THE PLOUGH AND THE STARS. At present he is working on W. B. Yeats's THE COUNTESS CATHLEEN for an Abbey company production this winter.

Miller was literacy advisor for THE YEATS COUNTRY, a film by Patrick Carey which won several awards including the Berlin Golden Bear 1965. He is also one of the organizers of the Graphic Studio, Dublin. Chairman of the Yeats Association, he recently edited a series of essays on the poet for the W. B. Yeats centenary.

Born and educated in Ireland, Miller studied architecture before establishing the Dolmen Press in 1951. The Dolmen Press policy is to publish, in a carefully planned and pleasing format, the work of Irish writers from their own country and works of Irish interest by other writers. It has published over 150 titles including work by Padraic Colum, Austin Clarke, Denis Devlin, Thomas Kinsella, John Montague, and Richard Murphy. The Press specializes in poetry, especially by the young Irish writers. Its most recent publication is STEPHEN'S GREEN REVISITED, a second collection of poems by Irish poet Richard Weber of the Mt. Holyoke College English Department, formerly Poet-in- Residence at the Southwest Complex.

Other five-college writers whose work on Ireland the Press has published include Russell K. Alspach, David R. Clark, Jack Coughlin, and William Van Vorhis.

Reception Planned

There will be a buffet supper reception for The Rev. and Mrs. John Scott on Sunday evening at 5:00 p.m. at the Parish House of Grace Episcopal Church. At 7:00 p.m. following the buffet supper Father Scott will celebrate a Folk Mass.

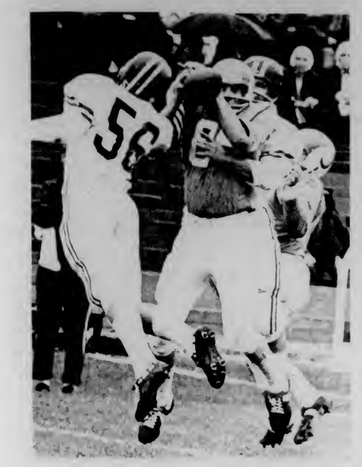
Father Scott was a member of the United Christian Foundation staff for four years, 1964 - 1968. He left UMass in August to become the rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Norwalk, Conn.

The reception has been planned by Grace Church and U.C.F. will share in hosting the event. Anyone who is interested in attending is asked to call the UCF office 545-2789 or 545-2661 for reservations.

New Novel By UMass Prof

A new novel, "The Innocent", by Richard E. Kim, associate professor of English , has been published by Houghton Mifflin Co.

Kim's first novel, "The Martyred," was a final nominee for the National Book Award. His new work is again set in Korea and involves some of the same characters as his earlier book, including Major Lee, the narrator.



The major action of the story involves the planning and execution of a coup d'etat in Korea in which an amazing number of schemes and betrayals build the plot to a suspenseful climax.

Interwoven are a series of thought provoking universal questions. Are we all beasts--some reasonably decent and others evil? Can the righteous really correct wrongs without becoming contaminated themselves, or are those who do good only slightly less evil than those they seek to replace? And, what happens to the innocent in this battle of good and evil? These are some of the issues that Kim explores in this disturbing novel.

Basically, the story revolves around the repeated confrontations between Major Lee, moralist and hater of evil, and Colonel Min, his benefactor and leader of the coup, who has a reputation for using ruthless means to achieve his ends.

Ruggers Down MIT To Win Home Game

The UMass rugby club won its first match of the season Saturday against MIT. The game was held on the rain soaked field behind the football stadium.

The first score came late in the first half when Jeff Freedman picked the ball out of the scrum from 10 yards out and drove in for the three points. Don Zingale made the conversion and the score was 5-0.

Midway through the second half, Frank Desiata made a clean run getting the ball from a short pass and going over for another one. The last score of the day was made by Jerry Bruen as he recovered a lose for UMass' final try.

Paul Joy's kicking in his first game was a threat to MIT throughout the game, Mike Meehan, taking control of the lineouts and Dick Delmonico's ability to drive, enabled the UMass scrum to keep the ball in MIT's end of the field almost all afternoon.

UMass' "B" team also beat MIT's "B" team, 3-0.

BY JAN CURLEY
Assistant Managing Editor

Last Thursday a small news item appeared in some of the local papers about a football game in New Ulm, Minn. The game was called off between New Ulm Cathedral and Mankato Loyola High because there were two inches of rain on the field. The coach quipped that the game would not be played because "one of our halfbacks can't swim."

He should have been in Kingston, R.I., Saturday. The rains there turned the turf into a sponge. The players slipped and sloshed there way through one of the muddiest games UMass has played since the New Hampshire game last year. If it hadn't been for the Rams horn on the URI players helmets, you couldn't have told the difference between the two teams. The Redman jerseys were a lovely shade of muddy brown. Pity the laundry man at Boyden.

The rain had other effects on the game, such as making the ball slippery and the running on the field treacherous.

Last Friday Coach Vic Fusia was saying that "the odds are against us, and nobody is giving us a good chance of winning" against the Rhode Island Rams. Whoever was picking the odds, sure had them pegged right. U-Mass didn't win the game, but this one was a heartbreaker.

After viewing the films of the game Sunday and last night, the coach had praise for the defense. "The defense played well enough to win," he said, "but we couldn't sustain the offense."

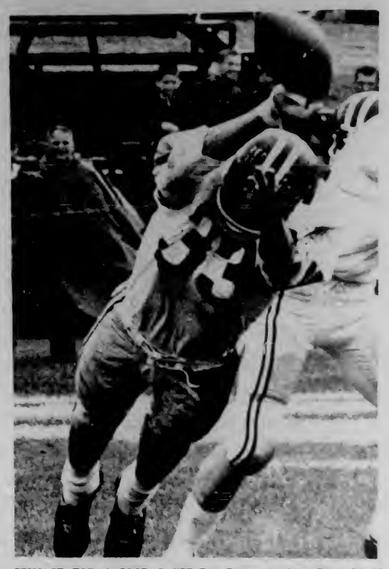
The Redmen had three or four chances to score, but only one touchdown materialized. The defense has been the weakest point of the game since the first four minutes of the Maine game when the injuries began to take their toll. Just when everyone had been saying that the team wouldn't have to move up to the infirmary this year, and the players were staying intact.

Injuries have been the key to UMass losses all along. Add to the list now, Jerry Grasso, out two to three weeks with a stretched knee ligament; Ed Sarko, out another week with an ankle injury, and Tim Driscoll and Mike Marchev, both lost for the rest of the season. Marchev has a shoulder separation, and Driscoll was operated on yesterday morning for torn ligaments.

As Fusia said, "Injuries have been the story of our life." And they will be again this weekend. Part of the defense is beginning to mend, the part which was hurt earlier in the season. Tom York returned to his spot at defensive end Saturday. Randy Robinson was converted from end to linebacker, and "that shored that side up," said Fusia.

"We're starting to jell defensively and I'm happy with it," stated Fusia. "We had two or three chances to score, but couldn't sustain the offense", he said. And then added, "Rhode Island had something to say about that."

Rhode Island had a lot to say about it. They won, 14-9. The Rams strategy almost helped the Redmen at one point. An Adams fumble on the three yard line with three minutes left put Rhode Island in possession of the ball deep within their own territory. The UMass defense was in full gear by then.



URI head coach Jack Zilly elected to take the safety and free kick to UMass. Quarterback Tom Fay took the snap, ran out of the end zone, and the Redmen got two points. The Rams set for the free kick on the 20-yard line.

The kick was well received by Steve Parnell on the 47. Parnell made his way down to the 22 before being stopped. In two easy plays, Zilly almost had nightmares. The Redmen fans, the few loyal soggy ones there, were on their feet cheering Parnell to go all the way. But he didn't quite make it, and that's the stuff dreams are made of for the opposing coach.

Fusia said the thing they'll be working on this week is putting the offense together with the defense. "We haven't been able to put the two together because of injuries and mistakes."

"We have been a thinking team", he said. "We think too much and don't react. There's indecision."

Almost wistfully he added, "Now the thing is to bring the offense along and tie it together with the defense. It would be nice to do it Saturday for Homecoming."

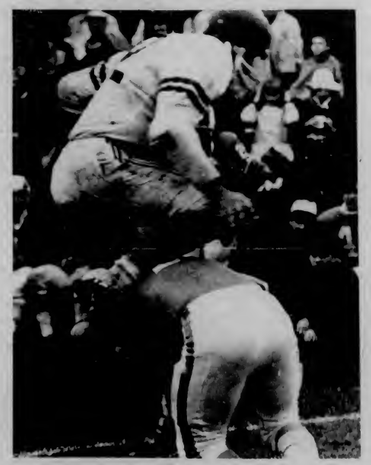
Redmen Nominated For All-Stars

Vermont halfback Bob Shookus (Newington, Conn), Connecticut end Ralph Tiner (Somerville, NJ) and Rhode Island linebacker Dave McBriar (Caldwell, NJ) have been chosen as the top offensive, defensive and sophomore players in the Yankee Conference for their performances last week.



Nominated on offense from UMass were Pierre Marchando, guard, and on defense Bill Frye, cornerback, and for sophomores defensive tackle Boli Sroka were nominated.

Tiner, a 6'3 184-lb junior, sparked UConn's 29-0 win over Maine with a 42-yard touchdown run on a fake punt play for the game's initial score.

McBriar, 6'1 210-lbs., sparked an aggressive URI defense that held off defending Conference champion Massachusetts for a 14-9 upset win. McBriar recovered two fumbles, the second on the UMass 12 which led to the actual winning Ram touchdown, and with 3:16 left to play tackled the Redman quarterback on the Ram three causing a fumble that was recovered by URI. The win broke the UMass 15-game Conference streak, put the Rams in first place with a 2-0 mark and was the first over UMass since 1959.

Other nominations were offense: halfback Mike Boryczewski (Connecticut), halfback Chip Breault (New Hampshire), split end Gene Benner (Maine), fullback Brent Kaufman (Rhode Island); defense: linebacker Harry Koulohoras (New Hampshire), tackle Paul Dulac (Maine), linebacker John Wojciechowski (Vermont), linebacker Ken Kuzman (Rhode Island); sophomores - defensive tackle Chuck Goode (Connecticut), defensive end Brent Bernier (New Hampshire), halfback Bob Hamilton (Maine), defensive tackle Gerry Elliott (Vermont).

Apollo 7 Down; Mission A Success

ABOARD USS ESSEX (AP) - Apollo 7's astronauts rode their "magnificent flying machine" to a near-pin point landing in the Atlantic Ocean today and were reported in high spirits and apparently good physical shape after being ferried to this aircraft carrier by helicopter.

Navy Capt. Walter M. Schirra Jr., Air Force Maj. Donn F. Eisele and civilian Walter Cunningham gave searchers 2 anxious moments before they were found floating in serene seas just five miles from the Essex.

The successful landing climaxed a sensational 11-day space voyage which put the United States on the doorstep to the moon.

After a blazing trip back through the atmosphere, Apollo 7 drifted to earth, dangling under its three large orange and white para - chutes. It struck the water at an angle and the astronauts immediately cut the shroud lines.

Wave action tipped the 6-1/2 ton craft over so that it was bottoms-up, which was anticipated. This submerged their radio antennae and helicopters were unable to zero in on the beacon. They were further hampered by clouds and a light rain that reduced visibility.

But within seven minutes Schirra, Eisele and Cunningham had inflated flotation bags that righted their spaceship. Helicopters then located the beacon and were overhead quickly.

Fifty-five minutes after the 7:13 a.m. EDT splashdown, the astronauts were deposited by helicopter on the rain-swept deck of the Essex.

The bearded trio appeared shaky and tired as they stepped onto a red carpet rolled up to the helicopter. But they waved happily as hundreds of sailors in dress whites cheered and a band played "Anchors Aweigh."

Muskie Talks of Nixon The Parties, and Vietnam

STAMFORD, CONN. (AP) -Sen. Edmund S. Muskie said today the Republican Party represents the philosophy of "let the buyer beware." He said consumers would get a better break under a Democratic administration.

The Democratic vice presidential candidate said the attitude of the GOP is "leave those decisions to the mercies of the profiteers" in problems relating to federal regulatory agencies.

Muskie criticized Republican presidential nominee Richard M. Nixon for a letter he sent to securities dealers "suggesting to them that the Securities Exchange Commission will be more concerned with their interests than with the interests of the public, if he is president."

Quoting from a newspaper article, Muskie said that Nixon's staff members "apply antiperspirants before he goes on camera."

"He's sweating a lot," said Muskie. "I wonder if that's got anything to do with our movement in the polls in the past few days."

Muskie, who would win Humphrey's job if the Democrats get in, told a young male questioner that advocates of an immediate bombing halt should realize that none of the candidates will have any authority until Jan. 2.

"We are still hopeful, and this is unrelated to what's going on right now because I have been saying it right along, that we could end this war before Jan. 2," Muskie said.

"We have tried in this campaign, without pulling the rug out from under negotiators in Paris, to give you some clues as to what our basic thrust is toward the question of peace," he said.

Wallace Heckled in Wisconsin; Says Major Parties Disregard Citizen View

OSHKOSH, Wis. (AP) - George Wallace, heckled again by students who hurled rocks and eggs along with words of derision, said Tuesday the leaders of the two major parties have "kowtowed to anarchists" but ignored the wishes of millions of other Americans.

Security officers guarding the third party presidential candidate at Oshkosh said rocks, eggs and tomatoes were thrown from a portion of the crowd where most of the protesters were congregated.

All in all, it was something short of a pleasant greeting to the former Alabama governor from the state where he ran for president in 1964 and got 34 percent of the vote in the Democratic primary.

Along with the noisy hecklers, Wallace had to put up with a raw, cold day and a light drizzle. He had supporters in the crowd nevertheless, hundreds of them, and they tried to drown out the shouting demonstrators but they never quite succeeded.

The third party candidate appeared to react more good naturedly to the interruptions than he has in some of his more recent appearances.

When an apple core struck him on the shoulder, Wallace remarked, "that's all right, it'll wash off. That's just a bunch of anarchists."

Wallace said that Vice President Hubert Humphrey and Richard M. Nixon "said the student protest demonstration was a great movement when it started several years ago."

Now, he said, it had reached a point where leaders of the Democratic and Republican parties "ignore the average citizen and pay no attention to his viewpoint while he works to produce the wealth that provides the taxes for some of these folks to go to school at your expense."

Campus SDS Mock ROTC Drill To Protest The Vietnam War

JOHN J. POIRIER
Staff Reporter

Armed with toy rifles, whistles, placards and waste-basket "drums", approximately 30 members of the campus SDS chapter held a mock drill Tuesday morning at regular ROTC meeting on the intramural field.

Shortly after the SDS members moved out onto the field, three male onlookers rushed them and a brief scuffle ensued in which the SDS leader, John Quinlan, was knocked to the ground. The three, who later identified themselves as former ROTC members, then left the field and joined the crowd of approximately 75 spectators who were watching from a bank overlooking the field.

The SDS members confined their demonstration to jeering the cadets and marching noisely around the field for the remainder of the drill period.

The three assailants will be brought before the student judiciary on assault charges "to set a precedent in order that future demonstrators may be free from assault" according to Frederick Hartwell, Vice-President of the Student Senate. He added "in my opinion, the demonstration was legal according to the discipline code outlined in the student handbook."

SDS member Steve Gaman said that the demonstration was the campus chapter's contribution to the "International Solidarity Week against the War in Viet Nam" and reflected the fact that SDS is "horrified by the increasing escalation of the Viet Nam war, the growing militarism of this country, and this university's complicity in the military-industrial complex." He also hinted that the demonstrations may become a weekly activity of the chapter.

Captain Kleb, Assistant Professor of Military Science, said that he had some doubt about the legality of the SDS presence on the field at that time, but he stated the ROTC units would not and could not reply in anyway to the actions of the demonstrators.

Nixon Tours In Ohio Talks Of 'Nitty Gritty'

ABOARD NIXON TRAIN, Ohio (AP) - Richard M. Nixon rolled across Ohio Tuesday on a 247-mile train tour, pronouncing it time to "really get down to the nitty gritty" of the White House campaign, and assailing Hubert H. Humphrey at every stop.

The Republican presidential nominee led the most energetic day's tour of his presidential race, a trail of nine rallies from Cincinnati to Toledo, with rear platform speeches in towns like London and Deshler.

After Nixon's Springfield speech, as he stood waving to the crowd, someone threw a small object at him. Nixon flinched, the missile hit the train and bounced away. Secret Service agents shielded the candidate, his wife and daughters. A spokesman said the missile was debris, and broke apart when it hit the train.

"It is time for us to really get down to the nitty gritty and talk about what this campaign is really about," Nixon said. "This is the clearest choice of this century."

Then, by word and mimeo - graphed statement, he tied into Humphrey, accusing him of ignoring soaring crime, espousing programs that would put the taxpayer in hock, saying his Democratic rival "has spent four years in obedience school" as No. 2 man to President Johnson.

His 15-car train was named The Nixon Victory Special.

"This is the first whistlestop of this campaign," Nixon told more than 1,000 at his first stop, in Middletown. "You've given us a sendoff that's going to send us right to Washington."

In Dayton, Nixon found a corps of hecklers-perhaps 40 or so-in a crowd which packed the courtyard near the courthouse steps, and spilled into a street beyond.

"One thing that our bearded boys in the back will learn," Nixon said, "at a Nixon meeting the cheers drown out the hecklers."

One the steps of Ohio's Capitol in Columbus, Nixon said "We've been working on the railroad because we're trying to get America back on the track." Police estimated the statehouse crowd at more than 8,000 people.

LBJ to Make Radio Speech for Humphrey

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Johnson will make his second nationwide radio speech for the Democratic presidential ticket Sunday night, the White House announced Tuesday.

The 15-minute political broadcast is sponsored by Citizens for Humphrey-Muskie. It will be heard over the Columbia Broadcasting System from 7:35 p.m. to 7:50 p.m. local time Sunday in all time zones except the Rocky Mountain Zone, where it will be broadcast at 6:35 p.m.

Presidential press secretary George Christian, announcing the Sunday broadcast, said the President probably would tape his speech in advance in Washington.

Thieu Closer To U.S. Position; Insists On N. Viet De-escalation

SAIGON (AP) - President Nguyen Van Thieu apparently edged closer Tuesday to the U.S. position on a total bombing halt of North Vietnam.

In a statement he said he would not oppose such a move if there was "good reason to believe" Hanoi would join in a de-escalation of the war.

Only Saturday Thieu had said the main problem "is to stop the war, not stop the bombing," and declared that a bombing halt "does not mean a march toward peace."

"We demand," he had said, "that North Vietnam must respond by a parallel good will and de-escalate the war as we have done."

It was the shading between this demand and his willingness now to stop bombing "when we have good reason to believe that North Vietnam intends to join us in de-escalating" that the relaxation of his position appeared.

In his latest statement, however, he insisted that the North Vietnamese must de-escalate the fighting and hold talks with his government. The North Vietnamese have refused to recognize his government, calling it a U.S. puppet.

The statement was immediately seen here as a success for the United States in persuading Thieu to relax his opposition to a bombing suspension without sacrificing any of his basic demands for peace.

Shortly before the statement was issued, Thieu and U.S. Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker met for the fifth time since last Wednesday. Their meetings reportedly have dealt with a U.S. plan sent to Hanoi for halting the bombing as a step toward peace.

While signifying an easing of the Saigon government's attitude toward a bombing halt, the delicately phrased statement avoided spelling out any precise conditions under which a de-escalation would have to take place.

Thus it seemed to indicate that Thieu was protecting all his options in case his statement should draw a negative or unsatisfactory response from North Vietnam.

Despite the timing of the statement, immediately after the latest Thieu-Bunker conference, a government spokesman said it did not result from the meeting.

The statement also coincided with reports from Paris, where the United States and North Vietnam have been engaging in preliminary peace talks, that South Vietnam was prepared to issue its own terms for participating in formal peace negotiations.

LBJ Signs Gun Control Legislation

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Johnson signed into law Tuesday the most comprehensive gun control legislation passed by Congress in 3 years but said it fell short of what is needed for effective crime control.

"We have been through a great deal of anguish these last few months and these last few years-too much anguish to forget so quickly," Johnson said at a White House ceremony.

"Now we must complete the task this long-needed legislation begins. We have made much progress-but not nearly enough.

The new law bans the mail order sale of rifles, shotguns and ammunition. Johnson said it is too weak to control crime effectively because it lacks two features he asked Congress to include-registration of weapons and licensing of owners.

Open Meeting Discusses Guns for Campus Police

BY PAUL ANDERSON
Staff Reporter

Last night, the Student Matters Committee held an open meeting on Senate Bill S-13 to disarm campus police. The meeting was attended by almost 20 people. Col. Marchant, Director of Security was present to answer questions from the committee and the visitors.

One of the first questions concerned occurences where guns had been drawn by campus police. Col. Marchant replied that there had been only one incident in his five years as Director; the shot was a warning shot which is not permitted. The officer was reprimanded.

Col. Marchant stated the conditions under which a gun may be used: to protect a citizen's life, to apprehend a known felon, and to protect the officer himself.

Staff Sheehan then questioned the colonel in the psychological factor involved between the time of those three conditions. Col. Marchant believed that it gave the officer a psychological advantage.

Another question concerned the necessity for having a gun while directing traffic. Col. Marchant stated that no one can foretell when a situation might arise with a need for a gun. The difference in opinion here concerns whether there are different types of duty (collecting cash receipts and directing traffic) or if police duty is the same danger all the time.

Marchant said that his force was well trained including a course at the state police academy if they weren't well trained, "I wouldn't have them."

Campus security has three divisions 1- campus police who are trained and have guns, 2- watchmen, and 3- security men. The latter two do not have guns.

Amherst Residents Ban Outdoor Usage of Water

Amherst residents have placed a ban on outdoor use of water in view of the water crisis. Before the ban the consumption was about 3.4 million gallons a day. Now the average is 2.8 gallons daily.

Donald Hawkes, administrative assistant to Town Manager Allen Torrey, reports that Amherst is "holding its own" in the water shortage situation. This is largely because citizens and local institutions are cooperating with a ban on all outdoor use of water imposed Sept. 24.

Hawkes said that the excellent cooperation from townspeople, UMass, and Amherst College has prevented a serious safety problem with too little water to fight fires.

Hawkes said the water shortage became a serious problem in August, when pumping facilities at a well in South Amherst were shut down for a week because of a breakdown. This meant that water had to be drawn from a reservoir, water that was much needed since the town's biggest water users, UMass and Amherst College, were opening up for the fall semester.

Hadley has agreed to give water to Amherst as long as it does not disrupt its own water pressure. As of Oct. 9 Amherst draws about 168,000 gallons of water a day from Hadley.

NY City Struggles With Biggest Labor Crisis Yet

NEW YORK (AP) - The nation's largest city struggled today through the greatest municipal labor crisis in its history, with its 1,1-million pupil public school system paralyzed by a teachers' strike, its police patrolmen engaged in a work slowdown and its firemen set for a slowdown of their own.

The crisis was at standstill, with talks scheduled late today in all phases.

Policemen continued to call in sick, in what police officials said appeared to be increasing numbers.

Off-duty patrolmen demonstrated at City Hall, chanting "Lindsay must go." Some carried signs bearing such legends as "Bullets Know No Parity" and "God is Not Dead, He is in Gracie Mansion," another reference to Mayor John V. Lindsay whose official residence is the mansion.

Besieged by the rebellious ranks of organized labor, Lindsay had called Monday on the teachers' union to end its walkout "for the sake of the city," and told the uniformed services he would not bow to their wage demands.

'Stage Design' Will Be Subject Of Irish Producer's Talk Today

AMHERST, MASS.--"Stage Design at the Abbey Theatre," will be the topic of a talk by Liam Miller, Irish publisher, producer, and designer, Wednesday, Oct. 23 at 8 p.m. in Mahar Auditorium at the University of Massachusetts.

Miller is a director of the Lantern Theatre, an experimental theatre in Dublin which has produced works of Joyce, Beckett, O'Casey and Yeats as well as new Irish and foreign plays. He has designed several sets for the Abbey Theatre, Dublin, including the 1966 production of Sean O'Casey's "The Plough and the Stars." At present he is working on W.B. Yeats' "The Countess Cathleen" for an Abbey company production this winter.

Miller was literary advisor for "The Yeats Country," a film by Patrick Carey which won several awards including the Berling Golden Bear 1965. He is also one of the organizers of the Graphic Studio, Dublin, Chairman of the Yeats Association, he recently edited a series of essays on the poet for the W.B. Yeats centenary.

Born and educated in Ireland, Miller studied architecture before establishing the Dolmen Press in 1951. The Dolmen Press policy is to publish, in a carefully planned and pleasing format, the work of Irish writers from their own country and works of Irish interest by other writers. It has published over 150 titles including work by Padraic Colum, Austin Clarke, Denis Devlin, Thomas Kinsella, John Montague and Richard Murphy.

The Press specializes in poetry, especially by the young Irish writers. Its most recent publication is "Stephen's Green Revisited," a second collection of poems by Irish poet Richard Weaver of the Mount Holyoke College English Department, formerly Poet-in-Residence at the Southwest Complex, University of Massachusetts. Other five-college writers whose work on Ireland the Press has published include Russell K. Alspach, David R. Clark, Jack Coughlin and William Van Vorhis.

The lecture is sponsored by the English Department, University of Massachusetts, and is open to the public without charge.

Blood Donors Wanted By Red Cross Blood Drive

A Big Red Cross Blood Drive is on November 12, 13, and 14. Even though you may not know anyone personally who needs blood, you still should give. Demand for blood is increasing - 6 million units a year are needed throughout the country. Someday your own life might depend on receiving blood. Help others now and they'll help you later if you need it.

Those between 18 and 60 are eligible. However, minors need parental consent.

It's a warm feeling to know you're helping others. Provide the gift of life - something only you can give - to those who need it.

Sign up now in the SU lobby.

Elizabethan Consort Will Play at AC

The first concert of the Amherst College Concert Series will be presented by the Elizabethan Consort of Viols on October 25, 8:15 P.M., in the Buckley Recital Hall.

The consort, composed of viols, lute and tenor voice, was formed by Dennis Nesbit, Director and treble violist, and first appeared at the Aldeburgh Festival at the invitation of Benjamin Britten.

Although the ensemble of seven musicians has concertized and broadcast frequently throughout England and Europe this is the group's first tour of the United States.

The program consists of music for a consort of viols by Thomas Tomkins, William Lawes, William Byrd, music for lute and viols by Anthony Holborne, and ayres for tenor voice and lute by John Dowland. There is no admission charge.

Wed's Accidental Fact

Taking Pot Luck

The New York City teachers' strike is the most obvious example of our teachers' dissatisfaction at the boiling point. The strike began as a result of a disagreement between the United Federation of Teachers and the Ocean Hill-Brownville Governing Board. The Union says the Governing Board forced ten teachers to transfer and now refuses to reinstate them, though the teachers were cleared of charges. The Governing Board says the Union and several ousted teachers were opposed to the experiment in community control. The Board of Education declares both the teachers' strike and the transfer of the teachers illegal.

New York City is not the only troubled area. It is a national disease. Dissatisfaction builds for many reasons: teachers' wanting a voice in selecting the curriculum and textbooks, better teaching materials, higher salaries, police protection in the slums, and also a relief from the menial tasks. You've probably heard the statement by a teacher on television, "I can stand being an underpaid teacher, but not an underpaid bookkeeper." Teachers often have study-hall duties, lunch-hour duties, and rest-room patrol. Teachers no longer teach-they classify and patrol.

The School Board or Governing Board is the usurper--the supreme authority on all school matters. But why? A School Board would be more productive if it incorporated the needs of the teachers and students by having the students, teachers, and community represented. This was the main problem in New York--all of these elements worked separately and against one another. Cooperation is essential. Teachers should be given a voice in all decisions, particularly those concerning curriculum and teaching material and taken out of lunch-duty.

Even students deserve a say in their education. Very often they are the only ones with information on a problem. This can easily be done by one elected student representative at meetings or simply by a panel of students discussing problems with faculty members before a meeting of the School Board

Finally, teachers have no right to strike. Teachers especially have a responsibility to the children entrusted to them. A teachers' strike is always against these children, and the loss is irreplacable. Why not work as a team? How else can education be accomplished?

The community should be kept informed of what is being taught in the schools and how. The community is ignorant and apathetic about the education of their youth; it is totally relinquishing responsibility for their education. But then you have to take pot-luck. Do you want to?

Realization of Peace

For two thousand years the Jew has wandered without a home. In this journey through time he has been extorted, harassed, and unremittingly butchered. Unique, in fact, has been his endurance to survive. For no other people have stood so much for so long. What gave him the ability to endure? - his Judaism. And if so, why did he persevere. It was an unflinching belief in God, and of His promise for a better tomorrow. To be home once again after such a challenge - truly now a time to rest and breathe in and out a deep feeling of nationalism.

But unrest and sabotage are the order of the say. Since the Arab-Israeli war of last year, teams of Arab terrorists have continuously infiltrated Israel, sabotaged equipment, and murdered civilians. In response Israel has launched counterattacks into Jordan, and has retaliated against Egypt with gunfire across the Suez Canal.

Calm realistic minds could bring about a settlement. If President Nasser has a contention with Israel, the path to the conference table is open. The same is true for King Hussein. Israel has sought numerous peace conferences. However the Arab world does not recognize Israel as an independent state. To talk peace with it is to accept its sovereignty. This Nasser cannot do, or otherwise he will be toppled from power. Evidently power must be more important to him than the regard for human life. Does he intend to send his people on a holy war for his own economic gain? If he does, then he is an obsessed man.

For there to be peace both sides must be conciliatory. Can this happen? Grown and educated people run the nations of the Middle East. Am I assuming too much when I say that these men cannot or do not wish to exercise the prerogative of the conference table over that of the battlefield? I hope for the sanctity of human life that I am wrong.

An Interview

Dr. Fleischmann Defines Comparative Lit.

BY MARTHA CURRAN
Senior Reporter

Raising his eyebrows in obvious enthusiasm, Dr. Wolfgang B. Fleischmann defined comparative literature during a recent COLLEGIAN interview as an attempt to "study literature as an international phenomenon and to think about literature as a human activity."

Dr. Fleischmann, Chairman of the Comparative Literature Department at the University, organized the program under Department status in February 1967. The program has granted degrees on a graduate level since the Spring of 1968.

A Curriculum Committee is exploring ways to formalize undergraduate studies, thus leading to a Bachelor's degree in Comparative Literature.

An interest in the study of international relations through literature is evidenced in the sophomore level options for the Arts and Sciences Humanities core. Three courses in both older and modern comparative literature are offered and a fourth, subject to the approval of the Provost, will be offered in September, 1969.

Dr. Fleischmann, lighting a cigarette and leaning back in the swivel chair in his office on the third floor of South College, said the program has been "very successful" on the undergraduate elective level. "Overall," he continued, "we can contrast the two student registrants in the fall of 1965 with the 281 enrollment in the fall of 1968.

A precise statement of the state of the Comparative Literature Department will be reflected, according to Dr. Fleischmann, in the forthcoming graduate and undergraduate catalogues of the University. A time lag between course approval and inclusion in the catalogue made an account of the progress and plans of the department too late to include in the 1968-69 catalogue.

Dr. Fleischmann, author of LUCRETIUS AND ENGLISH LITERATURE, has also published the first volume of an encyclopedia on WORLD LITERATURE IN THE 20TH CENTURY and is working on the second and third volumes. He is the editor of the American Comparative Literature Association NEWSLETTER which originates from this campus.

He did his undergraduate studies at St. John's College in Annapolis, Maryland where he is now an Alumni-Trustee and earned his Master's and Ph.D. degrees at the University of North Carolina. After two years in the Army, he returned to teach English at UNC. Since 1959, he has held appointments in Comparative Literature at the University of Oklahoma, Emory University in Atlanta, Georgia, the University of Wisconsin at Milwaukee, and the Institute for Research and Humanities at the University of Wisconsin at Madison.

Prior to his appointment at the University of Massachusetts, he was a visiting professor of Romance Languages at Princeton University.

A shaver that gives almost twice the shaves per charge is worth some study.
Our Rechargeable 45CT (below) gives you 3 weeks of close shaves on a single charge. (Which is nearly twice as much as any other rechargeable.)
And it gives you the choice of using the cord, or not.
It also has a lot of things in common with our new Tripleheader Speedshaver® 35T.
Both shavers have 18 rotary blades set in three new 'floating' Microgroove™ heads, that follow the contours of your face.
And the / both shave you as close or closer than a blade in 2 out of 3 shaves. (As tested in an independent lab by some very independent men.)
They also have some extras that make shaving a lot easier. A separate pop-up trimmer, snap-open cleaning, a handy on/off switch, and a 110/220 voltage selector for travel use.

Night of Inquiry - Student Power

King Council Plans All Night Event

The Martin Luther King Jr. Social Action Council, announced yesterday that plans are being made for an all night teach-in on Friday, November 15, in Mahar Auditorium. The event, to be called NIGHT OF INQUIRY--student power, will be an investigation of student power in all its ramifications.

The program will include speeches and panel discussions, both followed by questions from the audience. According to Gilbert Salk, the Interim Executive Secretary, the purpose of this is to prevent the frustration that can occur when a speaker makes a controversial statement and cannot be challenged on it. "We want to avoid having someone get up before the microphone and spout off the top of his head. Anyone speaking that night had better be prepared to answer some questions."

Night of Inquiry will include participants from nearly every power block on campus. Representatives are being invited from SDS, MOTHER OF VOICES, Student Senate, COLLEGIAN, WMUA, King Council, Class Officers, Fraternity and Sorority Presidents, Afro-Am, Concern, and other groups. In addition, some faculty members and administrators have been invited to discuss how they view student power, and the effect it has on their groups.

Plans are also being made to include music, light shows, and other entertainment to help keep people awake and interested as the night goes on. Salk said, "Audience participation is essential, so everyone will be kept on his toes.

The Smiffinpouts, Smith College famous singers are coming to perform at UMass. The group of young singers will present popular American songs at the Coffee Hour held by the International Club, Wednesday at 7 p.m. in the Colonial Lounge.

The Smiffinpouts is a group of 15 Smith College students who have become famous for their successful performances on the East Coast. They have performed at the Lincoln Center in New York City, where they presented popular American songs. They have also performed at Yale University.

This is a reminder that curfews for the Friday and Saturday nights of Homecoming weekend, October 25, 26, have been extended to 3:00 A.M.

A woman's mind is cleaner than a man's - she changes it oftener. (Oliver Herford)

Simply add an unusual scarf and, perhaps, an antique belt--last years' basic dress becomes up-dated to the "new look" of Fall '68.

ADD PZAZZ

This fall we have witnessed a new dimension in fashion. The rigid code of dress that once dominated the fashion scene has been pushed aside allowing each person to display an individual idea of the "right" look.

A quick look at any fashion magazine reveals innumerable moods and looks from which to choose. Finding a look is no problem since each one of us should allow our own creativity and individual personality to determine the clothes we wear and the impression we desire to portray.

One of the quickest, and least expensive, ways to bring your wardrobe up to date and to give it your own personal flair is through the use of accessories.

The basic thing to remember is - let your own personality determine the clothes you wear! L.S.

Students Guide to Dining Out

Restaurant On The Green

Where to eat out? Consider the "Restaurant On the Green:" the location is right, the atmosphere is relaxing, and most important, the food is freshly prepared, generously served, reasonably priced, and very good tasting.

This year "On the Green" shed its image of a "nicer-type" pizza parlor and blossomed into one of the top rate restaurants in the Amherst area.

Located in the center of town at 24 Main Street, "Restaurant On the Green" can accommodate 65 people on each level. From Monday to Thursday, "Upstairs On the Green" is closed to the public and set aside for banquets and special parties. But, on weekends the mural-walled, upstairs dining area is an ideal spot to visit with a date, parents or friends for a complete luncheon or dinner or just a spicy meat ball grinder. "Downstairs On the Green", a more casual area of ten booths, six tables and one round table (overlooking the Amherst Commons), serves a complete menu and is open Monday to Thursday from 10 to 9 p.m., Friday and Saturday from 10 to 1 a.m. and Sunday from 10 to 12 midnight.

In keeping with the New England tradition, the first floor is decorated in Early American wallpaper, wood paneling, red'n'black seating and wrought iron light fixtures. The juke box, which rests against the stairs, provides music chosen for those who select records at their individual booth attachments.

At noon and dinner time, the menu offers a wide variety of meal choices from four main categories entitled: "from our continental cuisine", "from the seas and streams", "from our feathered friends", and "for the hearty eater". Each entree is served with a choice of potato, a large tossed salad and hot rolls and butter. Soups, appetizers, desserts and beverages are separately priced. Other menu items include; delicatessen, hot, club and plain sandwiches, the ever-famous grinders and daily luncheon specials. "On the Green" also has a complete breakfast menu of juices, toast and pastry, cereals, eggs, bacon, ham, sausage and pancakes.

The dishes of continental cuisine are considered the specialities of the house. Manager Gerald Jolly boasts about the authentic spaghetti sauce that simmers on the stove for the entire day. Also a favorite, is the Shish-Kebab, en Brochette, cubes of lean, tender spring lamb and beef, marinated in a flavorful blend of imported wines, herbs and spices and broiled on a skewer with mushrooms, green peppers, and tomatoes. This is served on a bed of rice Pilaff and is extremely tasty.

An old-time favorite that could easily fit into a student's meal budget is chicken-in-the-basket. This consists of one half of a chicken, fried and smothered with crisp french fries. Not only is the portion very large, but the chicken is truly crisp and very delicious.

The waitress will recite the daily desserts ranging from pudding and ice cream to pies and cakes. Although the apple pie sampled was served very cold, the crust was flaky and the taste was fresh. A suggested item to order is the old-fashioned, deep-dish, strawberry shortcake - loads of strawberries poured over a freshly baked biscuit and topped with mounds of whipped cream.

There are 23 waitresses employed "On the Green" and the service has certainly improved over the past year. Checks are accepted and in the near future American Express will be recognized. Reservations are not accepted on Saturday or Sunday, but are for Fridays or weekdays.

Personal Perspective

Sororities

Chirping ability is a necessity, it seems, in order to be a good sister. Going from one sorority to another, one tends to discriminate somewhat as to how "good" the sorority is by how hard its sisters clap and how sweetly they sing.

In the short time allotted for each visit, we have time for a quick look at the bedrooms with "plenty of closet space" and a few brief introductions. Then it is back to the living room for more songs, enthusiastic or sentimental, after which you are on your way with happy memories of a fruitful visit and the strong urge to "come back soon".

After taking the concensus of a group of Campus Know-It-Alls, you find that the sorority that you really liked is considered snobby and vain. Another sorority you favored is linked to the "All American Girl" image, although they are not as "good" as the sorority known for snobbiness. (Is this a virtue of high esteem?)

One sorority is known for its "devoted service to others", another for its complete "lack of prejudice", and another is number 1 on the fraternity lists as a "fun exchange".

Maybe after a visit to the open houses, we will know what the sisters are really like...that is, if they don't spend all their time trying to live up to their reputations.

Friday night. Southwest is screaming with laughter and music as Byron, Don Juan picks up his date for the bonfire and rally. The relief of a Friday night combined with the excitement of a first date with the enticing Millicent overwhelms Byron. He trips on the lobby doorsill and bumps into the main desk.

"Millicent who?", demands the receptionist. Embarrassed, he blurts out her last name.

His shaking fingers dial her number in spite of his enthusiasm and Byron informs Millicent that he has arrived.

After the rally, Byron suggests that they sit by the pond. Any UMie knows that there is nothing more romantic than sitting by the pond (but when it's only 40 degrees and has just stopped raining two hours ago?)

Byron: Would you like to go in the bushes?
Millicent: No, Byron, I'd rather sit here with you.
B: Isn't it nice here?
M: It certainly is but I wish you wouldn't sit on my hip.
B: Oh, was that your hip? I thought it was my wallet.
M: Well, if your wallet is as big as my hip, don't bother moving.
B: Did you see Johnny Carson at Winter Carni?
M: Why no, did you?
B: No.
M: Oh!
B: But I do a great imitation of him; do you want to hear it?
M: I'd love to.
(Byron goes on to imitate Johnny Carson.)
B: Would you like to hear my imitation of Humphrey?
M: Well.....O. K.
(He goes on with his enthusiastic imitation of Humphrey)
B: What do gorillas say when no one is around?
M: What?
B: No one knows.
M: Oh, didn't Hazel tell that joke on her T.V. show?
B: I don't think so but I do a great imitation of her. Do you want to hear it?
M: NO!!!
B: What do you think of the Vietnam War, the credibility gap, the population explosion and sex in toothpaste ads?
M: Well.....I.....uh.,
B: Are you ticklish? (as he leaps on top of her)
M: No!!! (as she dives into the pond)
B: Can you swim?

Marketing at IBM

"You help company presidents solve their information handling problems."

"It's a lot of responsibility. And if you need help, you always get it," says Earl Andrews. "Because your success is the company's success."

Earl earned his B.A. in Political Science in 1967. Today, he's a Marketing Representative with IBM, involved in the planning, selling and installation of data processing systems.

Earl joined IBM because he felt the career paths were very clearly marked. "You don't have to be a technical genius to fit the job. You get the training. Then on-the-job experience. Before you know it, you're out on your own."

Works with top management

Earl works mainly with small companies—distribution houses, manufacturers, printers, warehouses, electrical supply houses and similar organizations. "I deal with top management," he says. "It gives me a lot of satisfaction to realize that I'm trained to know what this president or that vice-president is trying to learn. I help him solve his information handling problems."

Earl's experience isn't unusual at IBM. There are many marketing and sales representatives who could tell you similar experiences. And they have many kinds of academic backgrounds: business, engineering, liberal arts, science.

They not only market data processing equipment as Earl does, but also IBM office products and information records systems. Many of the more technically inclined are data processing Systems Engineers.

Men In Economics? Yes Says Head Of Foods, Nutrition Dept.

BY ELLEN BRESLAW
Staff Reporter

The UMass School of Home Economics has an undergraduate enrollment of approximately 550 young women and exactly two young men.

Why aren't there more men in Home Economics?

It is easy to understand that most men may not be interested in fashion merchandising or family development, but the Department of Nurtrition and Foods offers a program that could accommodate potential male students.

Dr. Mark H. Bert, assistant professor of Nutrition and Foods and acting head of this department explained that men will not enroll in Home Economics because of the rigorous background and core course requirements.

Men are more apt to study Hotel and Restaurant Management and Food Science and Technology.

Dr. Bert was not a major in Home Economics. His academic background was in the sciences, chemistry, biology and physics. He attended the University of Lima (Peru) and received his M.S. and Ph. D. from the University of Illinois. After working as a research biochemist for Corn Products Company, Dr. Bert was attracted to University teaching and research opportunities.

Dr. Bert said the men to women ratio at the graduate level is somewhat modified. Of 22 graduate students in the Department of Nutrition and Food, two are males.

Dr. Bert said, "those who will graduate with advanced degrees from this Department of Nutrition and Food are expected to work in research and development involved in industry or research in government agencies or in teaching and research position in colleges and universities.

Citing industry as an example Dr. Bert explained, that in the case of research and development, where the need is for science, companies will employ food technologists and nutritional biochemists. Doing work in natural science is different than working "with people." But on a more personal level, where a company must deal with people, they will call on the home economist who has the "magic touch", he said.

Male Vocalists
'Statesmen' Hold Auditions

The STATESMEN is a male vocal group formed to bring popular music to the University Community. In the past, the group has been a double quartet (2 ea. tenor I and II, 2 baritones, 2 basses).

This year the steering committee made up of last year's members has decided to expand the size and repertoire of the group.

AUDITIONS FOR THIS VOCAL ENSEMBLE WILL BE HELD THIS THURSDAY, OCTOBER 24th, AT 8:00 P.M. IN ROOM D, OLD CHAPEL. IT IS OPEN TO ALL STUDENTS.

Experience is not necessary. There are qualified members willing to teach you--all you have to be is willing to learn. You will be judged upon tone quality, range, and blend with the rest of the group. Soloists are encouraged to audition.

If you are unable to make the audition due to a schedule conflict, please contact Clif Banner at 5-0294 or 6-9732.

MARCHANDO, SROKA, M CLUB WINNERS

CRITICAL MISTAKES HURT AT URI; UCONN HAS BACKFIELD PUNCH

BY MIKE CURRAN
Sports Editor

Sophomores Pierre Marchando and Bill Sroka were recepients of the Varsity M Club awards yesterday during the weekly luncheon held at the Newman Club.

Marchando, a 6'1 225 pound guard was honored for his excellent pass and trap blocking in the line. His work was representative of the fine job turned in by the entire offensive line. The Cambridge native is a converted fullback who has been steadily improving at his new position.

On defense Sroka, another lineman was cited for some fine pursuit and tackling. The 6'2 205 pound Auburn, N.Y. resident played linebacker on last year's freshmen unit but has adapted well to the defensive tackle position.

Both Sroka and Marchando were nominated for Yankee Conference player of the week awards.

Head Coach Vic Fusia still managed to smile at the luncheon even though his troops had dropped their fourth straight.

"We keep making mistakes in critical situations on offense," was his first comment on the game. Fusia, however, did have many kind words for the players' efforts and those on defense in particular.

"We had excellent pass coverage after the first quarter," he stressed. He particularly singled out defensive halfback Bill Frye, who despite giving away five or six inches in height to Ram receivers, was able to bat away half a dozen aerials and intercept one.

Fusia used combination pass coverage to halt the Rhode Island air show in the second half, but in addition he saw the fine UMass pass rush as just as important.

Parnell's punt return brought fond reminiscence from the coach. "Our blocking was magnificent. We were knocking them into the nickel seats." That run and the Tim Adams to Nick Warnock bomb, though, were not enough to bring victory.

Assistant Coach Bob Graham gave a scouting report on Connecticut, UMass' next opponent next Saturday. The Huskies have a 2-3 record so far this season.

MARCHANDO

WARNOCK

Graham pointed out that UConn may have the best quarterback and halfback in the conference in Pete Petrillo and Vinny Clements.

Both Petrillo, a senior, and Clements, a sophomore, have missed considerable action due to injuries. Petrillo specializes in the option and waggle patterns. His running style and play selection are similar to Greg Landry's in many respects.

Clements, a former All-Connecticut schoolboy, is a speedy runner. He can get to the outside quick or bull straight ahead or off tackle.

Petrillo and Clements will both be at full speed Saturday and should provide the Redman defense with stiff test.

Defensively, UConn has also had injury problems. Many of their starters are converted offensive performers.

NEW GRID ARRIVAL—Mr. and Mrs. Jack Delaney are the proud parents of a 7-3/4 pound baby girl, born Monday. Delaney, UMass' offensive backfield coach, now has his own little backfield as this was his fourth child....

Frosh Booters Win

BY BOB GANLEY
Staff Reporter

The freshmen soccer team stretched their victory streak to four games by downing Amherst 4-1 in the rain last Saturday. This was the first victory over the Amherst frosh by UMass in many years.

Things started out badly for the Redmen, as Amherst scored within the first fifteen seconds of the first period. Actually the ball went in off a UMass player. Following the score, UMass dominated the game completely. They kept the pressure on, but were unable to score until Augie Calheno tied the score near the end of the first half.

UMass continued to keep the pressure on in the third period. At the three minute mark, Lindo Alves scored on a perfect pass from Bob Curtin and put the Redmen in front to stay. Later in the period, Amherst was guilty of charging and Alves made good on the penalty kick for his second goal. The final goal was scored in the fourth period when Calheno took a pass from Joe Ciernawski and arched a 40 yard shot over the goalie's head and into the net.

Coach Ray Cieplik expected a tougher game from Amherst and was surprised by the easy victory. He cited the fact that UMass outshot Amherst 40-6

Redmen Harriers Top Springfield

Chalking up their third straight victory, the UMass harriers dealt Springfield a 21-34 defeat for the fifth win of the year. The varsity, now 5-2, making them the winningest varsity team at UMass this fall, outran their traditional rival in front of a gathering of only 20 people.

Again Ron Wayne was the big man for UMass as he raced to his third straight victory, finishing in a time of 25:42.

Springfield then placed their first two men with Cormier and Klatke taking third and fourth respectively. But then UMass came back to ice up the win by capturing the next four places.

Charlie Lang led the four runners with a fifth place time of 26:15, Marc Gelinas followed Lang in 26:24, Tom Derderian was seventh in 26:33, Finishing behind him was Dave Evans who again ran a good race, timed at 26:37, taking almost a minute from his best time.

The varsity now has three strong races put together and has one more tuneup before the conference meet. That meet is Saturday morning when UMass hosts Holy Cross in a battle of New England powers. The meet should prove to be a great contest between these two top teams.

LEO DUART

CHARLES LANG

Following the varsity's example the frosh nailed down their third straight win and improved their record to 4-3. Don Dunsky was the big winner again as he came from behind to win. Trailing for two-thirds of the race, Dunsky strided by Springfield's Bain to of 19:13 was a little slower than his time last Saturday.

Wayne Lucas, running in his first home meet, turned in a top performance placing third in 19:29. The frosh victory came when three runners place fifth, sixth and seventh. Al Mangan ran his best race of the year and passed four men over the last mile to take fifth. He was followed by Steve Whicker and Bruce Blackburn who both again ran steongly.

The frosh, as well as the varsity, hope to keep their winning streak alive Saturday against the Holy Cross frosh.

UMass Crew Revs For Test

JAN CURLEY
Assistant Managing Editor

Faherty is still undecided for most of his boatings, but Mark Caron, a sophomore, 6'-185, has been set definitely as the stroke on the varsity boat. Glenn Chaple, the only one in the first boat with four years experience of UMass crew, will be the sixth man. He's 6'3, 205, and was the last cut form the Eastern United States rowing competition in Boston for the Olympics in Mexico.

"The starboard side is pretty well set," said Coach Faherty, "but the numbers are still undecided." Junior Ron Stoltz, 6'4, 195, will probably be fifth. Charles Leonard, a 6', 180, junior, and sophomore Phil Dwyer, 6'2, 185, are in contention for bow. Sophomore Rick Mecullo, 6'1, 185, is the other team member in contention.

Competition on the port side if the toughest. Junior Bob Kiley, 6'2, 190' Eric Mefley, sophomore, 6'4, 190, Tom Mone, also a sophomore, 6', 195 and Doug MacLean, a 6'2, 190 pound junior are in contention for the positions on this side.

For the second boat, Jean Loius Garbose, a veteran of last year's team, will be in seventh. He's a 6', 170 pound junior. Rowing fifth will be Dave Richard, a sophomore, 6', 185, and senior Wendell Frose, 6', 175, will be third.

The stroke has not been named for this boat. Bob Natusch, a 6', 170 pound junior or possibly Mone from the first boat are being considered for stroke. Dave Solar, a sophomore, 6', 185, will row either two or four. If Natusch doesn't stroke, he could row second for the junior varsity, and Solar may be the second or fourth man.

John Peterson has been working out with the jayvees and will make the trip to Boston.

Chris Jedrey and Jerry Ahearn will be the coxswains, but Faherty has not placed them in either the varsity or jayvee boats. Jedrey was the coxswain for last year's frosh, and he's 5'8, 128 pound sophomore. For Ahearn this is his first year of rowing. He's a 5'6, 115 pound junior.

The Freshmen are working out Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday in the basement of Mem Hall from 4-6 p.m. Coach Kurt Betchick is still looking for frosh rowers. No experience is necessary.

ANCHORS AWEIGH---Junior varsity crew in Connecticut River drill for big test Saturday on the Charles. Natusch, Garbose, Richard, Frost, Solar, Jedrey, Ahearn and Peterson strain to maintain the stroke rate. The varsity is also prepping for this lone fall encounter. Prospects are looking up, so a little strain on Saturday could bring satisfying results.

Barbell Club To Sponsor Clinic

A program of exercise instruction is being sponsored and conducted by the UMass Barbell Club on Thursday, Oct. 24. The talk and demonstration will take place in the weight training room of Boyden Gymnasium from 7 to 9 P.M. The clinic will include topics such as basic physical conditioning for sports, maintaining muscle tone, gaining and losing weight and lifting as a sport. The clinic will also focus on the proper execution of exercise movements, the muscle groups effected and the program to use to best gain your objectives.

Berkeley Students Protest Credit Denial For Course On Racism

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) - Locked out of the administration building, about 1,000 University of California students marched on the office of Chancellor Roger Heyns Wednesday and 200 of them began a sit-in.

Police broke up one sit-in early Wednesday with 121 arrests and Heyns ordered Sproul Hall closed on learning a second sit-in was planned there later in the morning.

Both sit-ins protested the denial of academic credit for a UC course on racism in America, featuring Black Panther Eldridge Cleaver as one lecturer.

After the doors closed, about 1,000 of the 27,000 students on campus marched to Dwinelle Hall where Heyns has offices.

Two hundred of the marchers moved inside Dwinelle Hall and sat down outside the hastily-locked door to Heyns' office. Another 800 milled outside.

Credit has been denied the student-initiated course by the UC Board of Regents on grounds that Cleaver, a convict on parole, lacks the academic requirements for an accredited course.

Tuesday afternoon, right after Cleaver dismissed the class by reportedly saying " do your thing," more than 200 students marched into Sproul Hall.

Sproul is the administration building of the nine-campus university system and scene of the massive sit-in during the Free Speech Movement of 1964 that resulted in more than 700 arrests.

In Wednesday's pre-dawn, after the remaining 120 refused to leave, they were arrested on trespassing charges and taken to jail in patrol cars. Also arrested was Physics Prof. Charles L. Schzartz.

Taken to Santa Rita prison farm, most of the 121 refused to be bailed out and said they would go on a hunger strike.

SDS Plans More Action To Harass ROTC Drills

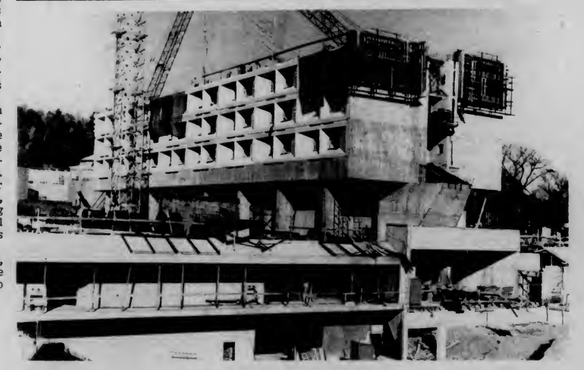
RICHARD LANE
Senior Reporter

Students for Democratic Society last night agreed to form two special committees aimed at future action for ROTC drills on campus and the upcoming national elections on Nov. 5.

The meeting initially attracted close to 100 persons.

In accordance with nationwide SDS plans to "prove the election process in this country is a hoax," and that "there is no choice at all," as one member stated, a local Strike Coordinating Committee was organized. Along with this plans were made to try and form a four college alignment in this area to get maximum student support.

SDS spokesman Steve Gaman stated that while there is "no definite SDS committment yet" as to what exactly would be done on election day or at the next ROTC drill, " something definite will be happening." "We're still feeling our way around though," he added.



Regarding the ROTC issue a special Ad Hoc Committee was formed to discuss "future policy and tactics," which may include use of signs, loud speakers for harrassment and peace vigil said Gaman.

Questioned on Tuesday's SDS demonstration at ROTC drill, Gaman expressed his belief (and agreement with student senator Rick Hartwell) that the attack made by three former Univ. ROTC cadets on the demonstrators was "premeditated." "More important, he continued, is that it did happen. It points out that demonstrations and demonstrators should be protected."

Temporary chairman of the meeting Michael Minsky said the CAMPUS CENTER proceeds behind schedule.

Campus Center Completion Date Pushed to Spring 1970

By GAIL ANDERSON
Staff Reporter

Completion of the $16 million Murray D. Lincoln Campus Center will be delayed for six months according to Campus Center manager W. Terry Grinnan.

Originally scheduled for completion in the fall of 1969 the Student Union addition will not be finished until the spring of 1970.

Grinnan told the COLLEGIAN there will be delay due to the "phasing in," a gradual process which calls for the garage to be completed first and other areas to follow.

Designed by architect Marcel Breuer (Whitney Museum of New York City), the Center's most important function is to serve continuing education. Administrators have stated that students who graduate from the University before the Center's competion may complain that they are paying for something they will never use.

It is the one facility these students will use and use again as returning alumni

The new Lincoln Center, named after a 1914 UMass. graduate who was president of CARE from 1945-1957, will include the Student Union, the new ten-story building, and the garage. There will be a service tunnel underneath the mall.

There will be several student organizations, including the DAILY COLLEGIAN, to be located exclusively on the bottom two floors. Lounges, a cafeteria and coffee shop will also be located on these floors.

The upper stories will contain overnight accommodations and dining areas for guest speakers and conference members who visit the campus each year.

Open to campus community in general will be the elegant "White Glove" dining room on the ninth floor. President Henderson of the Sheraton Hotel Corporation has offered to help decorate the elaborate room.

Dean of Administration Leo F. Redfern stated his hope that the dedication ceremony, planned for the spring of 1970, will be a "housewarming" which will last for several days.

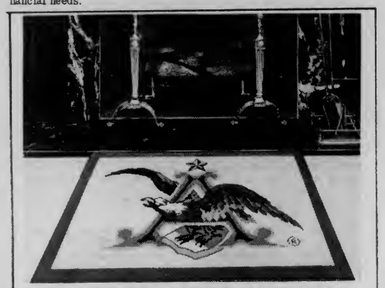
Paris Talks Center on Legal Representation Amid Rumors of Soviet Peacemaking Activity

PARIS (AP) - U.S. and North Vietnamese envoys clashed Wednesday on the key peacemaking issue of who has the right to speak for the South Vietnamese people at the negotiating table. Speculation about an agreement on a bombing halt remained speculation.

U.S. Ambassador W. Averell Harriman challenged Hanoi's claim that the National Liberation Front-NLF-was anything more than North Vietnam's "agent in the south."

Ambassador Xuan Thuy assailed the Saigon government of President Nguyen Van Thieu as "U. S. - paid" and said it had been installed by "fraud and force."

Though the two sides urgently argued for a move to pierce the deadlock at the 27th session of the Paris peace talks, they separated without making any visible advance toward a solution.



The fact that both Harriman and Thuy concentrated their arguments on the legality of U.S. allies in the South seemed to confirm that this issue is a stumbling block in secret exchanges between Hanoi and Washington.

A recent U.S. peace initiative linked a total halt in American air attacks on North Vietnam to an agreement on how South Vietnam should be represented at the bargaining table, allied diplomats have reported.

But Secretary of State Dean Rusk met in Washington with Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin amid speculation that the Soviet Union is actively involved in the peacemaking activities. A State Department spokesman said that Dobrynin conferred with Rusk last Saturday and again Monday night.

House Speaker Robert H. Quinn (D), Dorchester, left, confers with House Ways and Means Chairman Anthony M. Scibelli, (D), Springfield, center, and University of Massachusetts President John W. Lederle. Speaker Quinn and members of the Ways and Means Committee visited the Amherst campus of the University Tuesday, Oct. 22 to discuss University budget proposals and long-range financial needs.

Humphrey

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) - Hubert H. Humphrey stood at the Alamo Wednesday and urged Texas Democrats to show the same determination as the Davy Crocketts and the Jim Bowies in turning back "Republican money and Republican power."

Crockett and Bowie were among the heroes of the Alamo. The vice president was winding up two days of fence mending and campaigning in the critical Lone Star State before heading west for some more key campaigning in California.

In San Antonio, with a large Mexican - American population, Humphrey said, "If I am elected president, I pledge that the federal government will be the model employer of Mexican-Americans - and that means from the White House on down."

He also told President Johnson's fellow Texans, "You ought to lick these Republicans just for the way they have abused your President."

Humphrey also turned his fire directly on Republican Richard M. Nixon and George C. Wallace, the third party candidate.

"Richard the Silent," Humphrey said of Nixon, "Has become Richard the Verbal . . . He's getting angry with me."

Humphrey also sought to shoot down some of the Wallace sentiment in Texas. He scoffed at Wallace's assertions of being a law and order candidate saying, "Surely the state of Alabama doesn't symbolize it law and order. We don't need that kind of law and order."

Nixon

SAGINAW, Mich. (AP) - Republican Richard M. Nixon Wednesday questioned the peace-keeping ability of Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey, saying his Democratic rival has proven unable to treat discreetly either the war in Vietnam or the effort to negotiate its end.

"What he brings to that problem is this-the fastest, loosest tongue ever in American politics," the Republican presidential nominee told a rally of more than 2,000 people in a chilly airport hangar.

His assault on Humphrey as a man too talkative for delicate diplomacy came in his speech and in a written campaign statement which said:

"When a man is on all sides of an issue he creates a great risk of miscalculation on the part of our adversaries."

Nixon said President Johnson and his administration "have been unable to keep peace abroad."

"To this dismal record, my opponent brings the fastest, loosest tongue in the nation and the fastest switch of position ever seen in American politics," Nixon said in his statement.

"Mr. Humphrey has shown a constitutional inability to treat the Vietnam War and the Paris negotiations discreetly . . ."

He said Americans would question the peace-keeping credentials of a candidate who "would rather switch than fight . . . rather talk than mind his tongue on sensitive international matters."

Wallace

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio (AP) - George C. Wallace disputed Vice President Hubert Humphrey's claim to labor support Wednesday with an avowal of his own lifelong friendship for labor and a charge that Humphrey failed to stick to the truth.

Wallace chose the steelworkers' stronghold of Youngstown to accuse the Democratic presidential nominee of a "credibility gap between what he says and what the facts are."

Wallace was periodically heckled during his speech at Youngstown and twice Negroes scuffled with police. One group of about 5 Negroes massed in front of Wallace's platform raising fists in a black power sign and shouting, "Down with Wallace."

Wallace told the crowd "We're going to grab a few of these college kids by the hair, figuratively, who are raising money for the Communists, and throw them in jail."

An egg was thrown at Wallace and landed about 2 feet behind him. A small rock was thrown and also missed the candidate.

Muskie

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) - Sen. Edmund S. Muskie Wednesday condemned George Wallace in the strongest terms he has used in the campaign and warned Wallace supporters in a Polish-American neighborhood that they would "be among the first to be destroyed by this kind of doctrine."

Muskie criticized Richard M. Nixon's record, saying the Republican presidential nominee had voted against or failed to help Medicare, federal aid to education, and "everything to improve the lot of the average American."

Violence Commission Begins Hearings

WASHINGTON (AP) - Yale University President Kingman Brewster Jr. says strident protests resulting from frustrated young idealism will not be silenced even by an end to the Vietnam war.

Brewster and Tom Hayden, a protest leader in the stormy antiwar street battles during the Democratic National Convention, were lead off witnesses today as the President's commission on violence began hearings on demonstration disorders.

Brewster said violence is rooted in frustration, particularly when the government itself ignores constitutional principles.

Roger Wagner Chorale To Perform On Tuesday Night In Bowker Aud.

The Roger Wagner Chorale

The Roger Wagner Chorale, described by Leopold Stokowski as "second to none in the world," will be presented on the campus of the University of Mass. at Amherst by impressario S. Hurok on Tuesday evening, October 29th. The concert taking place in Bowker Auditorium at 8:00 p.m. is under the auspices of the Concert Association and is open to all UMass undergraduates without charge. Tickets for graduate students, faculty, staff and general public are available at $1.50, however, due to the limited seating capacity of Bowker, all tickets are available on a first come, first served basis and may be obtained at the Student Union Ticket Office.

The Chorale, header by its celebrated French-born founder and director, Roger Wagner, will be making its twelfth annual tour of major American cities. Last season, in more than fifty cities on its ten-week schedule, the Chorale won consistent praise from both audiences and critics for its performances of a variety of works that included sacred and secular music of the Renaissance, liturgical masterpieces and contemporary works. This season's program is similar and promises to be equally attractive.

Roger Wagner holds a unique position in the world of music today. Through his development of his famous Chorale, his name has become familiar to millions all over the world.

Fine Arts Council Seeks To Promote New Areas

The University of Massachusetts Fine Arts Council, a committee composed of five faculty members and five student members, is undergoing this fall a series of policy revisions. Charged with the task of allocating a budget which exceeds $70,000 in student tax money, the Council in the past has only supported such major campus organizations as the University Bands, the University Chorale, the Operetta Guild, and the Concert Association. Now, however, the Council, wishing to broaden the basis of its support, is looking for new areas to promote and encourage, in particular, the solicitation of recitals, concerts, professional theatre, professional dance, art exhibits, lectures, films, readings, etc. of general interest to the University Community.

Accordingly, and student or group of students who wish to sponsor such an event, are urged to contact Terry Schwarz, Fine Arts Manager, in 327B Bartlett; Telephone 5-2659

Kennedy To Give Address On Domestic Issues

NEW BEDFORD, Mass (AP) -Sen Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., is scheduled to give a "major address" on domestic issues at a luncheon Thursday at the New Bedford Hotel.

Kennedy will speak at 12:30 before the Joint Service Clubs of New Bedford and the Greater New Bedford and Cape Cod Labor Council.

Richard Drayne, the senator's Washington press secretary, said Kennedy plans to "discuss important domestic events" and considers the speech a "major address."

Homecoming — A New Diversity

Editors note: The following article expresses the sentiments of a black student concerning the University and the world. The opinions expressed are Mr. Smith's and not necessarily those of the DAILY COLLEGIAN.

by W. H. SMITH

As Homecoming at the University of Massachusetts draws near, it is evident that some unusual occurences have already taken place. Many of those students interested primarily in the parties, football, and pageantry of the week-end have been confronted with some important issues as to the true meaning of Homecoming. The Student Union, advertised as the place to cast ballots for the Miss Homecoming Contest, is where this conflict has taken place.

Above the voting table is a sign "Miss Homecoming Contest" with the pictures of the five contestants below it. Adjacent to this table is another sign and the pictures of five other females. The latter sign reads "Your monetary vote contributes to Biafran aid". The faces under this sign are black.

The relationship of the two signs and sets of pictures created an ambiguous situation. To those who noticed the positioning of the two signs, it appeared that ballots were being accepted for a "Biafran Homecoming Queen."

Reactions to this display varied. There were those who were moved by anger, curiosity, or interest to ask such questions as: "What's going on?" "Can only black people vote?" "Who are the Biafrans?" "What have the Biafrans to do with Homecoming?" "Is this a rival contest to the contest sponsored by the University?"

Both the emotional reactions and questions raised by this situation are important.

There is no rival contest sponsored by the black students to elect a black Homecoming Queen. Black students in general feel that it would be illogical to have a black co-ed rival a white girl as there would be little, if any, chance of victory on a campus with 98% of its student body white. It appears to them at this point difficult enough for the white student body to adjust to black students as members of the University community, let alone accept a black rival for Queen.

The question "Can only black students vote in the Afro-Am Miss Homecoming contest?" could result from the conditioning of American Society, according to the blacks. It is said that black pictures mean black votes only. However, to some, a vote from any person means a show of understanding and perhaps an appreciation for the diversity of mankind, in this country and on this campus.

Many black students on this campus would like to have a black Queen. Black students on the campus have the same interest as the black people in this country as a whole. They are concerned with their existence in a society they feel is designed to deny their existence. They are becoming fully aware of themselves, their history, and the combined beauty of it all. To them, this awareness cannot be denied by oppression, intentional distortion of history or by white beauty standards (thin lips, straight hair, etc.).

BLACK IS BEAUTIFUL. And the beauty of it all is for black people to BE. This is one of the more immediate reasons for having an Afro-Am Queen. It is not a matter of accepting the University Queen but rather recognition of a black Queen, which has long been denied.

To BE is awareness. Awareness not only of one's self but of others as well. Black students on this campus have become aware of the plight of millions of Biafrans, and realize that there is a link between the Biafrans thousands of miles away and the black students at UMass. They are linked by a heritage of blackness, a fight for existence against the ideologies of a racist West. Not only will the activities planned testify to the beauty of blackness but to its qualities of goodness and sensitivity as well.

Construction Begins Nov. 1 At Hampshire College

On September 21, 1968, the trustees and staff of Hampshire College gathered at the edge of an apple orchard with their families and their neighbors who helped create the parcel of land which is now Hampshire's campus. They were there to break ground for Hampshire's first building. This $2.0 million Academic Building will be one of the four to rise before students arrive in 1970. Construction on the Hampshire College Library and the First Residential and Dining Buildings will begin about November 1. Preliminary design work for phase one of Hampshire's Natural Science Building has been completed and construction will begin next spring.

Although Hampshire is an independent College, it has been created under the sponsorship of Amherst, Smith and Mount Holyoke Colleges and the University of Massachusetts. Therefore, participating in its groundbreaking with Harold F. Johnson, Hampshire's Chairman, and Franklin Patterson, Hampshire's President, were John W. Lederle, President of the University; Calvin H. Plimpton, President of Amherst; Richard G. Gettell, President of Mount Holyoke; and Thomas C. Mendenhall, President of Smith.

This symbolic gesture marked the culmination of three years of planning. In a brief talk after the ground was formally broken, Mr. Johnson said:

"I tend to think of this occasion as a part of the agricultural process--the breaking of the ground--the sowing of the seed--the cultivation of the crop--and the harvest. Hover, the harvest will not be the splendid buildings, which will rise from these foundations. Those will be but the stalks that bear the grain. The harvest will be the young people, who on this ground will grow in stature and mature into wellformed, wellrounded human beings.

"As was said on another occasion--the world will little note nor long remember what we say or do here--but I believe that the procession of young men and women, who are nutured on this ground and who--year after year--move out from here into the stream of life--truly educated through the ministrations of Franklin Patterson and his associates and their successors--young people with their faculties aroused and their imaginations touched-- will be a beneficent influence on the life of this country and of the world."

Hampshire's growth will complement the academic strengths of its neighboring institutions. It is, therefore, participating with the Valley Colleges in a long range planning program. Sub-committees representing each College have been formed under the auspices of the Five Colleges, Incorporated, the instrument for coordinating cooperative programs, to study the present purposes and patterns of cooperation and to determine which areas of institutional life and which specific projects are especially suited to cooperative action. Preliminary reports are due next spring.

Hampshire College is seeking funds for its development through a Founders' Fund campaign, the chairman of which is Harry W. Knight, a Hampshire Trustee and Chairman of the Board, Knight & Gladieux, Incorporated. As of October 1, 1968, nearly $15,000,000 has been pledged or awarded to Hampshire toward its October, 1970 goal of $24,500,000. Stimulant for the Fund comes from a $3,000,000 Ford Foundation challenge grant, which must be matched 2 for 1 by July, 1970.

Those will be but the stalks that bear the grain. The harvest will be the young people, who on this ground will grow in stature and mature into wellformed, wellrounded human beings.

Israel; Egyptain Planes Clash In Dogfight Over Suez Canal

TEL AVIV (AP) - Israeli and Egyptian jet fighters clashed Wednesday for the first time since the Arab-Israeli war of June 5-10, 1967, snarling into a brief action above the Suez Canal.

An Egyptian military spokesman in Cairo declared a flight of four Israeli jets violated Egyptian air space over Ismailia, a midway point on the canal, and two were shot down and a third was hit.

"After this successful dogfight," he said, "the Egyptian planes returned safely to their bases."

The Israeli army denied any losses and said its pilots accomplished their purpose of blocking an aerial intrusion.

Our planes did not violate Egyptian air space and they all returned safely to base," a spokesman said in Tel Aviv. "The Cairo claim is sheer nonsense."

The story here was that the Israeli jets took off and intercepted two of Egypt's Soviet-built MIGs near Ismailia and the Egyptians then turned back. The Israeli spokesman did not say whether fire was exchanged.

SDS

ROTC demonstration was " a good thing." Several SDS members also considered the action a "pretty good thing, " and that it should "continue again."

The consensus on SDS action to be taken on the Nov. 5 (and possibly Mon. Nov. 4th) election day process that something should be done in the campus area rather than in Boston.

There are presently plans for large student demonstrations in the state capital on election day.

Suggested plans of action were possible rallies, speakers, teach-ins, marches and passing out literature to voters as they enter the polling area, both in Amherst and the four college campuses.

Though one SDS member stated his belief that it should be the organization's goal to "effect the voters" it was also made clear that it is not the official policy of SDS to try and stop the elections.

SDT Receives Panhellenic Award

BY NEAL NOVACK
Staff Reporter

On the announcement by Dean Curtis, advisor to the Panhellenic Council, Sigma Delta Tau was named recipiant of the Panhellenic Scholarship Award ('67-'68) last night at the Annual Panhellenic Scholarship Tea sponsored by Pi Beta Phi. The informal meeting was held in the Colonial Lounge at the S.U. from 7 to 8:15 p.m.

The award is given to that sorority which has the highest overall average cume for the year. SDT's cume was 2.80. Fifty per cent of the house made the University Honor's List, with only four per cent of the house membership failing below a 2.0. In comparison to SDT's 2.80, the Uniparison to SDT's 2.80, the University average cume last year was 2.40, and all University women 2.55.

After the presentation of the award the two representatives from each of the ten sororities, including house presidents, housemothers, scholarship chairmen and advisors, formed two groups for informal discussion. An exchange of ideas were put forth on how to promote scholarship and means to effect incentive for higher educational achievement. There seemed to be agreement that the main problem is one of motivation for which there is no concrete solution, except that motivation for learning must be cultivated by the individual----it cannot be forced. On the other hand, external stimulation in the form of closer personal contact with faculty members should also be encouraged. Viewing the sorority in a unique position, it was suggested that the unity within each house be utilized by having the members of a house encourage and praise the individual's scholastic efforts and achievements.

UMass and British Teams to Debate Moral Aspects of Capital Punishment

The UMass debate team will meet the British National Debate Champions tonight at 8 p.m. in Mahar Auditorium. The topic of discussion will be Resolved: That Capital Punishment if the World's Worst Crime.

Marlene Fine, a speech major, and Steve Daggett, a government major, will argue the negative for the home team. Victor J. MacColl and James W. Hutchison will argue the affirmative for the British.

Hutchison, a twenty year old senior at the University of Strathclyde, has as his main interests politics, debate, and journalism.

MacColl, 24, is a graduate of the University of Strathclyde with a degree in political science. While at the University he was Chairman of the Federation of Conservative Students and president of Conservative Students. He is now the Chairman of the Scottish Young Conservatives and is primarily interested in politics and debate.

The format for the debate will be slightly different tonight. A fifteen minute question and answer period has been scheduled between the four ten-minute constructive and five-minute rebuttal speeches. Normally, this would be scheduled after the entire debate is finished. The purpose of holding this question and answer period in the middle of the debate if to create more interest in the audience.

Smith Professor To Speak Tonight On Roman Architecture

A specialist in the architecture of the Roman Empire will be the first in a series of four speakers here for an art department symposium on "The City."

William L. MacDonald, Smith College professor of art, will speak tonight at 8 p.m. in Hasbrouck 20. His lecture is entitled "In Search of the Roman City."

Prof. MacDonald's field is the history of architecture, particularly the architecture of the Roman Empire. His books on the subject include "Early Christian and Byzantine Architecture"; The Architecture of the Roman Empire, An Introductory Study"; and "The Roman Age of Cities."

He received A.B., A.M., and Ph.D degrees from Harvard University. He was also a Rome Prize Fellow at the American Academy of Rome for two years and a Morse Fellow at Yale University.

He joined the Smith College faculty in 1965 after having taught at Yale since 1956. He has also taught at the Boston Architectural Center, Wheaton College and at the American Academy of Rome Summer School.

Admirable 'No' Man

Eugene McCarthy is not a spoiled brat. He is refusing to support Hubert Humphrey, but not because of failure in Chicago. McCarthy didn't fail, but a moral victory is not understood by many politicians. He is selective in his beliefs and does not throw support to a cause as nonchalantly as someone would flip a monogrammed tiddlywink into a cuspidor. If Senator McCarthy went to Chicago with but a single man issue, he has at least kept on that main line. He did not add so many side lights that he could never hope to see any goal in sight. Commercial airliners don't go from house to house.

He did not run on promises, nor come close to doing so. Nor would he have spent his first and last years in office paying off debts to cronies and being stymied from acting constructively by those whose insatiable appetites he had not even attempted to placate. Party should come only alphabetically before people.

Senator McCarthy is not compromising his principles to support HHH. It would be like trying to push a green balloon into a red one in hopes of getting an amorphous brown balloon acceptable to all and instead ending up with nothing. Balloons, windmills, and political promises all require breath—some hot air and some good ole wind. Humphrey's platform is like that of an early swamp dweller's, swaying on its poles in the breeze. He is a "Yes" man, hoping somehow to better the 50% probability of being right. You may not like Gene McCarthy's answer, but you must admire "no" men.

Army Menaces Nation

One of the issues being discussed in the current election campaign is the possible establishment of a volunteer army. Richard Nixon has hinted that he might favor such a move, while Hubert Humphrey has been somewhat muted on the subject.

A volunteer army sounds good on paper, but the idea is full of danger. Over one hundred years ago de Tocqueville warned that the greatest threat to democracy in America was the military. The Cuban Crisis memoirs of Robert Kennedy shockingly depict the myopic and small calibre minds which command the armed forces. Four-fifths of the Joint Chiefs of Staff urged nuclear attacks on Cuba and preventative attacks on Russia in 1962. The military today, as in 1804, is a powerful menace to rational government.

Yet today one of those four Chiefs of Staff, General LeMay, is a candidate for Vice-President. Americans are basically right-wingers in time of crisis, witness Wallace, Joe McCarthy, and Attorney-General Palmer in 1920. The creation of a volunteer army would only serve to bolster the influence and power of men like these.

Psychological tests and field observations have shown that men who volunteer for the Green Berets often have a compulsive need to prove their manliness. They often challenge their commanders and colleagues to dangerous and unnecessary tests of courage in Viet Nam. The establishment of an army which would offer increased wages and would be wholly voluntary would attract more uneducated, insensitive, compulsive fighters and authoritarian personalities than are already in the services. More rational, educated, sensitive men do not join the army. Therefore if a volunteer army were created foolhardy and dangerous men like the Chiefs of Staff of 1962 would have an armed force behind them which would be inclined to follow any orders at all and to attempt anything.

Creation of a volunteer army would be a perilous step for although we have never had a military coup, 1968 has shown that in moments of stress nothing is impossible. An army composed of volunteers could easily become the lynchpin for an authoritarian takeover of government.

INSIDE REPORT:

Nixon And The Mutuals

BY ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON -- The Boston-Washington law form of Gadsby and Hannah formally registered with Congress on Oct. 11 as the lobbying agent of Investors Diversified Services (IDS), the giant holding company of several mutual funds from which Richard M. Nixon resigned as a director early this year.

What makes this of more than passing interest is the fact that Charles W. Colson, the counsel of Nixon's "key issues committee," is resident Washington partner of Gadsby and Hannah.

It was the "key issues committee" that drafted Nixon's much-criticized confidential letter to some 3,000 leaders of the securities industry late last month, criticizing the "heavy-handed, bureaucratic regulatory schemes" of the Johnson administration. As counsel of this Nixon panel, and a recognized expert on mutual funds, it is reasonable to assume that Colson himself, despite a denial, played a key role in drafting the letter.

Thus, while in no way illegal, the fact that Colson's law firm now has registered as lobbyist for IDS is certain to add more fuel to the criticism of Nixon's maladroit handling of the letter on the securities industry.

The law firm of Gadsby (chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission in the Eisenhower administration) and Hannah has been the registered lobbyist for some of the nation's biggest mutual funds at least since June, 1967, including the mammoth Massachusetts Investors Trust. Its new third-quarter registration for 1968, however, added IDS to the list.

The confidential Nixon letter to Wall Street brokers, which one of them then leaked to the press, pledged easier regulation by Nixon of the securities industries. It attacked the Johnson administration for having "sought wide, sweeping new regulatory powers over the mutual fund industry, which powers would be tantamount to rate-fixing.

Nixon, answering criticism over the private circulation of the letter, claimed that it was not made public only because it involved a "narrow" issue. In fact, more than 100 million investors have a stake in government regulation of the securities industry.

The IDS group of four mutual funds represents about $6 billion worth of assets and strongly opposes tighter regulation of mutual funds.

PERCY'S PROBLEMS

Senator Charles H. Percy of Illinois, whose election to the U.S. Senate just two years ago made him a rising national light in the Republican party, is in such low repute today with fellow Illinois Republicans that this year's candidates there would just as soon not have his help.

In fact, it was a matter of some embarrassment last week to Republican Richard Ogilvie's campaign for Governor when a Percy lieutenant telephoned to offer the Senator's help in joint appearances with Ogilvie the last three weeks of the campaign.

As diplomatically as possible, the Ogilvie aide tried to say he definitely didn't want Percy campaigning with Ogilvie downstate and would rather forego that pleasure in the Chicago suburbs as well. The ideal solution from Ogilvie's standpoint would be one appearance of Percy with Ogilvie in Chicago's black ghetto, where Ogilvie has little chance and Percy is popular.

The decline of Percy's standing with Illinois Republicans, a result of his support for Gov. Nelson Rockefeller at Miami Beach, is no surprise to Percy. His own secret poll in September showed just such a slump. Curiously, however, the same poll revealed Percy as an easy winner in a statewide primary for Senate renomination against anybody--even Ogilvie.

A footnote: Illinois Republican regulars are miffed that Richard M. Nixon reduced his originally-scheduled appearances in the Chicago metropolitan area yesterday (Saturday) to just one speech--his first in the Chicago area since last summer. Although Nixon is far ahead in Illinois, his presence there was urged by local Republicans to help the rest of the ticket.

DOLLARS FOR HUBERT

The all-night lock-up of the House of Representatives over the debate issue on Oct. 8 unlocked desperately-needed funds for Democratic presidential nominee Hubert Humphrey.

Hard offers of no less than $5 million were telephoned, wired, or written in to Humphrey headquarters within the next four days. In addition, 18,000 individual contributions averaging $14 had arrived by last Sunday night (Oct. 13), totaling $252,000. The all but unprecedented locked-doors session failed to solve the legal tangle over free-time televised debates with Nixon, but at least it started the money coming into Humphrey's impoverished treasury.

Negro Seminarians Present Demands For Changes At BU School Of Theology

BOSTON (AP) - Negro seminarians at Boston University's School of Theology presented today four demands for changes in school's curriculum including courses on the Black Church and the use of more black ministers in chapel services.

A spokesman for the 13 students said at a press conference a "rejection of the demands would be a rejection of the black students." He said Dean Walter G. Mueller indicated he would make a response to the demands on Nov. 5.

The students are seeking at least double the enrollment of black students, more black periodicals in the library, more outstanding black preachers in chapel services and studies on the black church.

Spokesman John Bryant said, "present education in the school is directed to white, suburban churches. We want an education that will equip us for work in the black community."

Bryant said that if the proposals are not met, the students will take "extreme measures," but he did not specify what that would entail.

Precisionettes Perform at Homecoming Game

Performing in the pre-game activities for Homecoming 1968 will be the UMass. women's drill team, the Precisionettes. They will drill in a five-minute routine scheduled to begin at one, October 26.

The Precisionettes have performed for UMass. football crowds since 1963. Other annual fall appearances include the Homecoming and the Pittsfield Halloween parades.

During the winter, the team moves inside to create and practice routines for state, regional, and national competitions with other male and female drill teams.

Their efforts won second place recognition for UMass. last spring in the annual Cherry Blossom National Intercollegiate Drill Meet in Washington, D.C. In 1967 and 1968, the Precisionettes placed first in New England's 12th Regimental Division Competition.

According to their commanding officer, Reggie Shepard, the Precisionettes strive toward "skilled precision and enthusiastic presentation" in their drills.

'What is Fundamental - Matter Or Consciousness?' Lecture Topic

JANE O. ROBBINS

Jane Robbins, C.S., of Boulder, Colorado, discusses this question in a Christian Science lecture to be given at The University of Massachusetts, October 28th at 8:00 p.m., in The Colonial Lounge, Student Union. Admission is free.

The lecture is being sponsored by the Christian Science Organization on campus.

Miss Robbins is a native of Ontario, Canada. During World War II, she was a service pilot with the Army Air Force. After the war, she lived in Alaska and flew as a bush-pilot in the Nome-Point Barrow area. Later, she became a representative for an aircraft corporation in Illinois.

In 1955, she moved to Colorado and began devoting her full time to the public practice of Christian Science healing. She is currently on a speaking tour of campuses throughout the United States and Canada

Ed. Majors Into Super Teachers

PAUL MCNAMARA Staff Reporter

"What's that funny looking thing?" asked the old-style, conservatively-educated senior Ed. major.

"Why that's our School of Ed.'s magic machine", replied the ever sharp, young, progressive UMass Ed. major.

"What's a magic machine? queried the behind-the-times, obviously non-UMass Ed. major.

"A magic machine turns UMass students into Super Teachers", said the differentiated, staff-oriented UMass Ed. major.

"What's a Super Teacher?" wondered the classical oriented, lecture-based non-UMass Ed. major.

"Why, Super Teacher can bend iron bars in his bare hands (and handle problem situations too) with strength-training. He can control an angry mob with a flip of his non-verbal cue. He can leap tall obstacles to communication with a single stimulus variation. And he can find the secrets of the ages through probing questions", reported the ever-vigilant and adaptive-to-change UMass Ed. major.

"And the magic machine makes all this possible?" asked the awe-struck, non-UMass Ed. major.

"Naturally", replied the magnaminous, obviously superior UMass Ed. major.

"Well, how does it work?" the non-UMass Ed. major asked in wonder.

"It's really very simple", responded the knowledgeable UMass Ed. major. "You see before you the magic machine. On the right is a camera. On the left is a small T.V. set. Observe that both of these are elevated slightly above what seems to be a type of tape recorder."

"I see", said the interested but classically-oriented, obviously non-UMass Ed. major.

"Well, you push this button and point the camera at an average student who is doing a fair-to-average job teaching four kids. Then the tape captures the student's soul and imprisions it in the T.V. We can then see it by pushing these two buttons." said the scientific and mechanically minded UMass Ed. major.

"I see", was the obvious, classical response of the non-UMass Ed. major. "What then?"

"Why, then our average student sees his soul on the T.V. screen and through the magic of the machine, he is transformed. He becomes Super Teacher."

"It certainly is a wonderous machine", said the now enlightened non-UMass Ed. major.

"With this machine we can produce all Super Teachers. Education will flourish. Minds will expand. New levels of learning will be reached. The world will become a paradise. There will be no wars. We may even cure the common cold!" exclaimed the glassy-eyed UMass Ed. major.

"Maybe so", said the now skeptical, non-progressive, non-mechanical, non-differentiated staff-oriented, classical, conservative, obviously non-UMass Ed. major, "But don't you think you should plug it in first?"

NSA Asks Colleges To Take 'Time Out'

WASHINGTON (CPS)--The National Student Association is asking colleges and universities across the country to suspend classes on Oct. 29 so students can take "time out" to answer the question "Where do we go from here?"

"It is not a strike," says NSA president Robert S. Powell, Jr. "We have billed the event Time Out to underscore the necessity for students (and the nation) to stop for at least a day during this political fall and begin to plan common goals and strategies for the coming year."

Flagrantly bad teaching, admissions procedures, university complicity with the war, absurdity of social rules, irrelevant curriculum, institutional racism - these are some of the issues NSA considers ripe for discussion on campuses. It's up to the campus group planning Time Out to decide which ones are most relevant locally, and to decide how to handle them.

Emphasis in the NSA proposal is on local issues, handled in a local way. Thus a campus which has been fighting a battle over military research could have a teach-in on the university's involvement. Lengths to which students will go to have classes cancelled or schedule walkouts will also depend on the local campus atmosphere, according to NSA plans.

At the University of Maryland, for example, the student government decided the appropriate issue is state support of higher education. Maryland Gov. Spiro T. Agnew (who's also the GOP vice-presidential nominee, by the way) will be burned in effigy to protest what is considered inadequate state assistance. Trinity College here will hold a program on Biafra.

Notre Dame and several Bay Area (Calif.) schools will look at Catholic education. Berkeley will pursue the grape boycott controversy. The University of Chicago will hold a "Day of Inquiry" on the Vietnam war. The University of Minnesota will hold a seminar on electoral politics.

More than 1600 schools have been invited to participate in the project. So far students on some 100 campuses have indicated they will take part.

The options range from "forget the whole thing" to a campus-wide strike. NSA officials seem to prefer avoiding a confrontation now, having instead discussions on the chosen issue in indivisual classes or holding a central program so students who can cut classes may attend.

The NSA approach, which must be tailored to individual campuses and student governments, is a tone-down from the SDS-announced tactics of student strikes on election day, Nov. 5.

The idea for Time Out was born amidst the frustration of the times. "During the past year," NSA's Powell wrote student leaders, "students won some important victories on campuses and in our political institutions. Yet those victories, however significant, hardly overshadow the enormity of the task we still face."

"Hence," Powell added, "we plan to call Time Out from this national confusion and hysteria, and allow students to plan for, and act upon, a common strategy of how we can move from here."

THE CURRENT EVENTS BLUES

(to the tune of "The Times, They Are A'Changin' ")

Come gather round students, whatever your class,
Put down your beer bottles, don't light up your grass.
It seems from our slumber we're waking en masse.
And can you belive what we're seeing:
Events that are gettin' us up off our ass,
For the school, it is a'changin'.

A tray-in, two panty-raids--much more to come.
We've taken so much, it makes Rosenthal glum.
Trask gets it from both sides; his work can't be done,
So now we have two resignations.
But one man's a martyr, the other's a bum,
For the school, it is a'changin'.

We learn there will be no more ball games to win;
Our budget is doctored, a secret it's been.
And who are the ones who've committed this sin?
The same ones who hollered last summer
That Toll had been secretly sneaking Trask in.
Oh the school, it is a'changin'.

We're here to be taught, and it's done rather well,
But some crab because they expect a hotel.
And so for three days we will have show and tell.
Ostensibly for "new direction"
Watch out our direction's not straight down to Hell
For the school, it is a'changin'.

We say "Let's take over!" but what is the use--
We've just seen our own leaders' budget abuse.
By driving for power, it seems we've induced
An unending war with the Powers.
Our great moratorium's really a truce.
For the school, it is a'changin'.

Ripon Society Urges End To 'Kangaroo Court Procedures' Of Selective Service System

The Ripon Society has urged an end to the "kangaroo court procedures" the Selective Service System uses to handle conscientious objector applicants and other young men who attempt to appeal their draft classifications.

In addition, a Ripon position paper appearing in the October issue of the Ripon FORUM asks that selective conscientious objection on the grounds of "just war" doctrine should be permitted provided it can be defended with conviction by the objector.

The Christian doctrine of just war, originally propounded by St. Augustine and currently applied in Scandinavia, establishes basic ethical ground rules that each person can use to determine whether he as a Christian should support a given military action.

"The draft should be ended for any conscription is antithetical to a free society except perhaps in time of real national emergency," the paper asserts, referring to Ripon's December 1966 position paper in favor of a volunteer army. (Richard Nixon and the Republican Platform have both endorsed the volunteer army scheme.)

"But in the meantime, the Ripon Society asks that conscription at least show a civilized regard for conscience," the paper continues.

In addition, Ripon asks a more general reform of the Selective Service System appeal structure to require:

--the right to counsel at all levels of appeal

--a clear right to appear personally before all appeals boards

--the maintenance of a written record of all board meetings

--a right to have civil courts review the selective service's decision before induction.

At present young men are usually deprived of all these basic amenities of due process.

Ripon asserts that the record of wartime Britain, which continued to recognize the right of selective conscientious objection, indicates that the practical loss of military manpower as a result of selective conscientious objection would be minimal.

If lawmakers persisted in worrying about "opportunists" taking advantage of looser grounds for conscientious objector (CO) status, this problem could be met by requiring all CO's to perform alternative service out of uniform.

Besides alleviating the moral agony that many young men undergo when confronted between the choice of fighting in a war they consider unjust or going to jail or Canada, allowing selective conscientious objection would have the practical result of damping anti-draft civil disobedience, the Society says.

"Many sincere and patriotic young men have chosen...extra-legal forms of protest because the Selective Service System allows them no other recourse."

UConn Looks To End Seven Winless Years vs. UMass

BY MIKE CURRAN
Sports Editor

It's been seven long years since the UConn Huskies beat the Redmen. Back in 1960 Connecticut came to town for the UMass Homecoming game and left with a 30-0 win. Since then, though, it's been a Redman victory every time the two arch-rivals have clashed.

This year Connecticut is hoping to change that pattern. The Huskies stand 2-3 at the halfway point in their season, and Saturday's game is a must game in their above .500 plans. They've been following UMass' disastrous season, and they'd be more than happy to get a piece of the action.

In Pete Petrillo and Vinny Clements, UConn has the offense necessary to win ball games. They've hit double figures scoring-wise in each of their first five ball games.

Backing up Petrillo is sophomore Rick Robustelli, a fine drop back passer. Robustelli is the son of former New York Giant great, Andy Robustelli.

Vinny Clements is one of the most heralded runners to ever attend Connecticut. A former All-Stater from Southington, Connecticut, Clements had a sensational freshman year and spring practice. After excellent games against Yale and Vermont, he was injured in the New Hampshire game, but should be ready to start Saturday.

Rounding out the backfield are seniors Jimmy DeWitt and Mike Boryczewki. Both these backs are excellent blockers and straight ahead runners.

Paul Tortolani and George Kuprian are the Huskies ends. Tortolani is a transfer from George Washington, which gave up football. Of the first five games, he appears to be Connecticut's best receiver.

STAN RAJCZEWSKI

PETE PETRILLO

Connecticut also has an excellent combination of experienced veterans and promising newcomers on defense. Five seniors, three juniors and three sophomores make up the starting eleven.

Senior linebackers Hank Polasek a co-captain, and Nick Turco are the keys to the defense. Polasek has been on the injury list in recent weeks.

John Krot, Mike Zito, Vic Conzani and Steve Price will start in the defensive backfield. Krot and Zito are also the punt and kick-off returning specialists. Each is short but speedy.

Connecticut will be ready Saturday when they take the field at Alumni Stadium. Coach Toner and his staff see the Yankee Conference race as wide open now with the Huskies having just as good a chance as anyone else.

Last Night's Intramurals

In the Dormitory Champion ships held last night, the HiLo's defeated the Smashers, 26-19, for the title. The loss put the Smashers back into second place.

The Terrors forfeited third place to the Maroons, which moved the Terrors back to fourth position.

Phi Mu Delta edged by QTV, 24-20, in the consolation bracket of the fraternities. Kappa Sigma, the Fraternity Champions, beat the Roadrummers, 12-6, for the Independent Championship.

In the Tug of War competition, it was Theta Chi over Delta Chi, 2-0; Beta Kappa Phi over Tau Epsilon Phi, 2-0, and Sigma Phi Epsilon over Alpha Sigma Phi, also 2-0.

U.S. Swimmers Take Three More Golds

MEXICO CITY (AP) - Kaye Hall and Charles Hickcox won their second gold medals and Sharon Wichman became the first U.S. woman breaststroke champion in Olympic history last night while a scandal involving alleged payoffs to athletes swirled around the Olympic Village.

Mike Burton also won his event, the 4-meter freestyle giving the U.S. corps a gold medal sweep of all four swimming finals for the night and 16 victories in 22 swimming and diving events overall.

Miss Hall, a high school senior from Tacoma, Wash., shattered the world record in the 1-meter backstroke, winning in 1: 6.2. She earlier had won a gold medal as part of the U.S. girls' team that took the 4-meter medley relay race.

Hickcox, an Indiana University senior from Phoenix, Ariz., won the 4-meter medley, adding to his title in the 2-meter medley and his second-place finish in the 1-meter backstroke.

Miss Wichman, a high school junior in Fort Wayne, Ind., pulled one of the biggest upsets in the swimming competition by flashing through the 2-meter breaststroke in Olympic record time of 2:44.4 and beating defending champion Galina Prozumenshikova of Russia.

While the swimmers were splashing to various records, further word on the payoff scandal came from Everett Barnes, acting executive director of the U.S. Olympic Committee.

He said the committee's investigation has failed to turn up any confirmation of reports that American athletes were paid for wearing certain brands of athletic equipment.

"At this time," Barnes said, "we have nothing to substantiate the rumors with respect to athletes subject to our jurisdiction."

Earlier, Dan Ferris, longtime American track and field official and newly-elected member of the powerful International Amateur Athletic Federation Council, said there were indications that payoffs had been made to athletes of virtually all countries.

The payoffs reportedly ranged from $5,000 to $5,000.

Hickcox staged a close battle with Gary Hall of Garden Grove, Calif., in the 4 medley, but the pre-law student spurted ahead in the final strokes and won in 4:43.4, well off his world record of 4:39.

Burton's victory was especially pleasing to the U.S. squad since the Carmichael, Calif., resident was ill earlier in the week. In fact he was unable to eat solid foods for two days.

Howe Signs Two Year Contract With Red Wings

DETROIT (AP) - Forty-year-old Gordie Howe, the National Hockey League's career goal-scoring leader with 69, signed a new two-year contract yesterday and intimated he would retire when it terminates.

"It would depend on how I feel. But this is probably it," said the star Detroit Red Wings' right winger, now in his 23rd season in the NHL.

No financial details were announced, but it is estimated that Howe's salary per year was increased from, $40,000 to $70,000. "Gordie is right up there with the top ones in salary," said Sid Abel, the Wings' general manager.

Chicago stars Bobby Hull and Stan Mikita and Boston defenseman Bobby Orr are also believed to be among the highest paid players in the NHL. Hull, is estimated salary is $85,000, Mikita's $75,000 and Orr $65,000.

Howe scored 39 goals and had 43 assists last season to finish third in the scoring race. "I can honestly admit that the game is getting tougher," he said after signing the new contract. The pact replaced a two-year agreement which had another year to run.

When he quits the game Howe will devote his energies to his job as a vice president and accountant executive with the Olympia Agencies Inc., owned by Bruce Norris who also owns the Red Wings.

Kennedy Slams Wallace Says Party Based On Hate

NEW BEDFORD, Mass. AP – Sen. Edward M. Kennedy urged Thursday that voters, especially those who supported his late brothers, reject George C. Wallace "for the health of the country and our future as a nation."

Not only must the former Alabama governor's presidential bid be defeated, Kennedy said, his entire third-party movement "must be repudiated."

The Massachusetts Democrat expressed a fear that voters who supported his assassinated brothers President John F. Kennedy and Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, might "as a protest," vote for Wallace.

"President Kennedy defended America against the extremists," Kennedy said. "George Wallace is in a league with them.

"Robert Kennedy stood for reconciliation between the races. George Wallace stands for divi-

LBJ Optimistic On Peace Hopes

Secret Plan Reported

WASHINGTON AP-President Johnson reported Thursday there is no breakthrough yet in the Vietnam peace effort but hinted he thinks secret negotiations are making headway.

Johnson refused at a news conference to give details of the latest U.S.-North Vietnamese exchanges, saying "I don't think it is good policy to try to handle all diplomacy in public." But he added, "We are working hard and diligently and earnestly."

"The only thing I can say to you," he told reporters, "is that I think the decision of March 31 was indicated, was justified, and I am more pleased by it every hour that goes by."

The President, nonetheless, warned against overoptimism based on the current lull in the fighting in South Vietnam. The weekly casualty report from Saigon listed 100 GI's killed last week, the lowest figure since August 1967.

While "we are very pleased" with the reduction in casualties, Johnson said, "In some places it is not a lull-the last thing I would want to do is to lull anyone into a false sense of security."

Meanwhile, allied sources reported Thursday night that the secret plan of Washington for peace in Vietnam begins with a bomb halt in North Vietnam and leads to a cease-fire in the South. The two-stage plan would hinge on Hanoi's help, they said.

Informants representing more than one country outlined elements of proposals they said have been submitted to North Vietnam and to America's fighting Allies-Australia, New Zealand, the Philipines, South Korea, Thailand and South Vietnam.

Neither American nor North Vietnamese delegates to the Paris peace talks would comment on the sources' accounts. The Americans have never officially acknowledged the existence of such proposals.

As the informants explained it, the hoped-for first stage would bring withdrawal of North Vietnamese forces from the so-called demilitarized zone and reduction of pressure against cities in the South. Whether those two moves already have begun is a moot point.

Once President Johnson was sure of an enemy stand-down he would feel justified in ordering an end to the bombing, the allied sources said.

In the second stage, the peace-making process in Paris would be broadened. Current U.S.-North Vietnamese talks would go on to settle political and other issues between Washington and Hanoi. Separate negotiations would consider a cease-fire and eventual withdrawal of foreign troops from South Vietnam.

The new negotiations would be between military representatives of the parties considered by the United States to be involved-a single delegation of North Vietnamese and Viet Cong envoys and one of the Americans and the Saigon government with advisers from the fighting allies.

President Nguyen Van Thieu of South Vietnam wants to negotiate with Hanoi, not with the Viet Cong. Saigon's view is that any settlement with the Viet Cong would leave North Vietnam free to ignore it

Saturday Daily Collegian To Spotlight Homecoming

The Daily Collegian, in its quest to provide the fastest and most complete coverage of all campus events, will publish tomorrow, Homecoming 1968. Copies of the Saturday issue will be available in the student Union lobby and in front of Alumni Stadium prior to the UMass-UConn football game.

Highlights of the paper include indepth studies of life in all University residential areas, up to the minute sports coverage of Redmen football, a photo spread on the UMass marching band, and, as an added feature, a look at the Daily Collegian as it was thirty years ago.

ROTC CONTROVERSY CONTINUES

BY NEAL NOVACK | Staff Reporter

In response to the passing of an amendment Wednesday night at the Student Senate meeting, calling for the abolishment of academic credit for all lower division ROTC courses, Senator James Moran, also a Cadet Lt. Colonel in the Air Force ROTC, replied: "I do believe that it's the obligation of the proponents of the bill to demonstrate that a deficiency actually exists. They have not demonstrated that the manner of scrutinizing ROTC courses is adequate. Because the vote was so close, it indicates that there is a wide range of opinion concerning the entire question of ROTC."

In an attempt to resolve the ROTC issue, Senator Rick Hartwell called up bill S148 and proceeded to present a revised petition which includes three resolutions.

Debate centered on one of the resolutions which recommended that the Provost consider incorporating the Military and Air Science departments into the College of Arts and Sciences, and subject these departments, as quoted from the text, "to the interdisciplinary influences that accrue from this status". This third resolution was an extension of the second, which suggested that the lower division ROTC courses attain interdisciplinary character by fusing with such departments as those in the social sciences.

Senator Brad Johnson questioned the legality of the third resolution, and the proponents of the bill could not respond for lack of any concrete information. Following the verbal support for the resolution by Senator Kilmartin, Senator Johnson asserted that the real issue---whether ROTC is truly an academic subject---was being avoided, and that turning the matter over to the College of Arts & Sciences would be an easy out for the student senate.

In essence, the claim made by the amendment is that the ROTC program, including its curriculum, is at present not sufficiently scrutinized. It was brought out by opponents to the amendment that, on the contrary, scrutiny did exist within the ROTC system in form of academic credit for which each school within the University has the authority to accept or reject as many ROTC credits as it sees fit.

To avoid coming to a standstill on the ROTC issue, Student Senate President, Paul Silverman moved that the amendment's resolution in question be voted down, with the remainder of the amendment also being put forth for approval, and thus eliminate the problems of legality connected with the third resolution.

Later in the session a vote was finally taken and resulted in a tie (38-38-1). The vote was subsequently sent to the chair where the tie was broken, ousting the third resolution, but approving the rest of the text. The recommendations of the amendment will now go to the administration for consideration.

Legislation which took place at the beginning of the meeting included the attempted dismissal of Senator Marjorie O'Niel, Senator-at-large for the class of '71. Senator O'Niel, during the Spring elections last year, was absent from eight senate meetings. Senator Larry Marcus saw grounds for pardon in view of the fact that Sen. O'Niel, being a member of a sorority, had to miss Senate meetings, because of time conflicting rush functions which, if she had not attended would have resulted in a $15 fee. A two-thirds required vote for her dismissal was not met.

A committee meeting was scheduled for Oct. 29 at Dining Commons #7 to discuss food services on campus. Members for the committee have been selected from the dormitories.

The meeting proceeded with the appointment of senators to serve on SWAP. They were: Rick Hartwell, Cindy Olken, Richard Story, Dev Cochrane, Paul Papaluca and Senate President Paul Silverman.

Last year's eighty fire alarms (thirty-eight false alarms and three actual fires on campus) was just evidence for needed money, as the student senate appropriated $226 to the Volunteer Fire Department.

A debate then ensued as to whether the North Quad should be allocated funds for their publication of NORTHEAST PASSAGE. It was argued that they shouldn't be granted money because they don't have a recognized area government. The main questions brought forth on this issue were: 1) Should funds be submitted by the dormitories? 2) Will the income from the ads be conclusive to publishing? 3) What monies are they making from sales?

Penn Daily Declares Independence To Safeguard Editorial Freedom

PHILADELPHIA - The student newspaper at the University of Pennsylvania has declared its financial independence from the University's student government.

The "Daily Pennsylvania", in an editorial Monday, said that the move was prompted by a belief that it could no longer safeguard its editorial freedom while receiving a subsidy from the student government. In past years the paper had received an annual allocation of approximately $20,000 for a budget of about $75,000.

Spokesmen for the paper said that without the allocation they would not be able to expand their coverage of campus news, but would be able to keep it at the present level. They also said that they hoped to form a separate nonprofit corporation, independent of the university within a few months.

Homecoming Festivities Begin With Float Parade

Homecoming 1968 at UMass will start on Friday evening, Oct. 25, at seven o'clock with the traditional float parade. The theme of this year's parade will be the defeat of UConn. at Saturday's game.

The route will be similar to that of previous years. All floats will assemble at the South Parking Lot near Whitmore Hall. The parade will then proceed down Lincoln Ave. to Amity St., on to No. Pleasant St., and back to the parking lot. The reviewing stand will be in the Pi Phi lot on No. Pleasant St.

"My brothers believed in the dignity of man. How can those who stood with them support a man whose agents used cattle prods and dogs against human beings in Alabama."

Kennedy spoke to about 300 persons at a luncheon sponsored by the Joint Service Clubs of New Bedford and the Greater New Bedford area.

After a brief reference to his support for the Democratic national candidates, without naming them, Kennedy concentrated on attacking Wallace, his running mate Curtis LeMay and their American Independent Party.

"The third party is organized, directed and underwritten by the extremist movement, which is using the party as a vehicle to power," Kennedy said.

"A significant vote this year would turn this movement into a permanent party of hate."

Morality of Capitol Punishment Topic of International Debate

BY SHARON SAMUELS Staff Reporter

"That Capital Punishment is the World's Worst Crime" was the tonic of a debate held last night between the championship debating team of the University of Strathclyde of Glasgow, Scotland and that of UMass.

The affirmative stand was taken by James Hutchison and Victor MacColl of the University of Strathclyde and the negative stand by Stephen Daggett and Marlene Fine of the UMass Forensic Society.

That capital punishment is a crime, and that it is the world's worse crime, were the two propositions set forth by the first affirmative speaker. He contended that there are no figures showing evidence that capital punishment acts in any way as a deterrent to murder. He further stated that in any country where capital punishment has been abolished there has been no significant increase in crimes as a result.

Asking what purpose capital punishment serves, the affirmative speaker said it acts only as a form of collective revenge by society on those individuals who have committed a crime. Capital punishment "kills people uselessly and continually with the full social, legal, and moral sanction of all those here tonight and of the state," the speaker concluded, ending the first affirmative speech.

Refuting the affirmative team's first contention that capital punishment is a crime, the first speaker for the negative stand showed that it is a part of our system of law and isn't considered by the state as being a crime. It acts as a form of social protection and on this basis cannot be considered a crime.

International Law, the negative speaker asserted, defines crimes that are considered far worse than capital punishment, as does our own Constitution. The negative speaker furthur stated that capital punishment would be an effective deterrent to murder if it were put to use more often than it now is.

In furthur debate, the validity of each team's statistics on the rate of murders in Great Britain after the abolishment of capital punishment in 1964, was continually questioned. This was the basis of each team's argument as to the effectiveness of capital punishment in acting as a deterrent to murder, and who was right was never established.

Whether or not the topic should be debated on moral and emotional or on logical and rational grounds was continually discussed by both teams.

The affirmative team argues that the issue had to be debated on a moral basis since the abolishment of capital punishment was itself a moral question in society.

The negative team stated that arguing the question on a moral basis would never produce any conclusive results on the issue, only differing opinions that could be proved neither right nor wrong.

The main argument of the affirmative team for the abolishment of capital punishment was that, it is felt to be morally wrong by individuals and society. On this basis, they defined its continued use as a crime.

The negative team's main assertion was that, since society has allowed the state to continually use capital punishment the majority of society must not see it as morally wrong. Since it is a part of our laws, it cannot be considered a crime of any degree.

Humphrey Stumps In California Seeks White-Blue Collar Support

LOS ANGELES AP — Hubert H. Humphrey sought to convince clergymen, garment workers and the man on the street Thursday there is a difference between him and Republican Richard M. Nixon on the issues of peace and prosperity.

Under a hot Southern California sun, the Vice President sought to mine votes-and get out voters-to swing this state's big electoral vote into his column Nov. 5-only 12 days away.

At a Los Angeles meeting the Democratic candidate talked about Vietman and the now sensitive negotiations under way.

Humphrey said he was being cautious in discussing negotiations despite his awareness of the importance of the Vietman issue in the election.

"If my reluctance to say some things costs me my election, but it can still bring peace, then maybe I will have served my country better than if I were President," he said.

And in this state where the war in Vietnam has been a major issue Humphrey zeroed in on Nixon's stand on the nuclear nonproliferation treaty, which the Senate didn't ratify in the last session.

The Vice President denounced Nixon for saying he favored the treaty but urging its delay.

"If we lose this treaty," said Humphrey, "we may lose the last chance we have to stop the spread of nuclear weaponry, because there are between six and ten nations now that within the next three years-six of them within the next two years-another four within the next three to five years-that are capable of nuclear weaponry development."

The Vice President banged at the prosperity issue in a speech prepared for a rally at San Diego. After the Vietnam war, he said, "Will America move forward inthe greatest burst of creativity in history or will we turn backward."

"After Korea," said the Vice President, "the Nixon-Republican administration forgot the American people, forgot the social responsibilities of this nation, forgot the posture of trust which our position of leadership in the world demanded."

Police Clear Berkley Building Scuffle With Student Protestors

BERKELEY, Calif (AP) - Massed policeman ripped aside barricades Thursday, arrested 76 persons and cleared a University of California building seized by demonstrators supporting a Black Panther lecturer.

in the biggest uproar at the university since the 1964 FreeSpeech Movement crisis, Moses Hall was held for 15 hours behind barricades of desks, chairs, files and assorted debris.

Some 5 police took charge of the campus shortly before dawn in the third day of sit-in demonstrations demanding that UC give college credit for a lecture series by Black Panther leader Eldridge Cleaver.

Demonstrators barricaded paths and set small fires on them. Inside the building, administration center of the College of Letters and Sciences, dissidents unrolled toilet paper from upper windows and strung signs.

A roar from an estimated 35 onlookers outside rose when helmeted, gas mask-toting police marched onto the 28,000-student campus.

The demonstrators outside scattered and ran.

Here and there police tangled physically with protestors.

Male and female police entered Moses Hall and arrested the dissidents quietly. Those arrested were charged with disturbing the peace, malicious mischief and trespassing. Each was held on $1,650 bail. The hall they left behind was a chaotic mess of stripped rooms, scattered records and garbage.

Alpha Phi Gamma Inducts Nineteen New Members

At a candlelight ceremony last night, 19 UMass students, active in campus communications, were initiated into the Delta Gamma chapter of Alpha Phi Gamma, National Honorary Journalism Fraternity.

Acting President Marjie Flanders, Acting Vice-President Harvey Elman, Daily Collegian Editor Jack Dean and Daily Collegian Business Manager Chuck Smith conducted the initiation ceremony which followed a banquet held in the Hampshire Room of the Student Union.

Newly elected officers included Marjie Flanders, President; Dick Lane, Vice-President; Jan Curley, Secretary; Norm Powers, Treasurer; and Mike Curran, Bailiff.

Mr. Harold Levenway, Editor of the Greenfield Recorder, was the principal guest speaker. His talk stressed the principles of persistence and a questioning attitude as fundamental to effective communication. Other guests included Dean William Field and Faculty advisors Dr. Dario Politella and Mr. Alvin Oickle of the Journalism Department.

The new inductees are:

Nixon Fears Security Gap As U.S. Loses Defense Lead

POTTSVILLE, Pa. (AP) - Richard M. Nixon asserted Thursday Democratic leadership has left the United States on the short end of "a gravely serious security gap."

"The present state of our defenses is too close to the peril point, and our future prospects are in some respect downright alarming," the Republican presidential nominee said.

"Strength we want and strength we need to win and hold the peace."

Nixon said when the Democrats took office, the United States held a 5 per cent advantage over the Soviet Union in land-based intercontinental ballistic missiles. He said the U.S. advantage now is only marginal.

"The trend is that even this slight edge will soon be gone."

Nixon said the next president must be able to negotiate effectively with the Soviet Union "not from weakness but with the persuasiveness of respectable and evident power."

In his recorded radio speech, Nixon said current defense policies "threaten to make America second best in numbers and quality of major weapons."

He said if the Soviet Union should surpass the United States in weaponry "in time we will generate tensions which could lead to war."

Nixon said the Democrats concluded early in their administration that "by marking time in our defense program, we could induce the Communists to follow our example, slacken their ownefort, and then we would have peace in our time. . . .

"I cannot presume to explain why such peculiar ideas were found worthy by our government," he said. ". . . The Soviets have vigorously advanced their military efforts as we put ours in second gear.

Nixon said if elected, "I would move promptly to correct these mistakes of judgment and action."

Ecumenical Appeal For Nigeria Biafra

Funds for the relief of Biafran and Nigerian natives will be collected at the UMass-UConn football game Saturday. This appeal is sponsored by Catholic and Lutheran students on campus.

The money that is raised will be equally distributed between two non-political, internationally approved organizations: Church World Service and CARITAS, and will be given to both Biafra and Nigeria-wherever the need is greatest.

Booths will be situated at the student entrance and between the two main public entrances. Donations will be solicited before the game, during half time, and immediately following the game. With each contribution the donor will receive literature describing the acute need for help in both Biafra and Nigeria.

The citizens of Biafra and Nigeria are lacking most in food and medicine. Hundreds of children die in the streets each week because there is not enough to eat. The marks of malnutrition are a common sight. To counterattack the diseases that plague a ravaged area, medicine is desperately needed and it takes money to buy these medicines. Those who will be at the game are asked to give generously so help may be obtained.

Dr. Bromery Named President Of CCENS

AMHERST, MASS.-Dr. Randolph W. Bromery, University of Massachusetts associate professor of geology, has been named president of the Committee for the Collegiate Education of Negro Students (CCENS).

He succeeds Lawrence A. Johnson, assistant dean of the UMass School of Business Administration, who has been chairman of the committee since its start last year.

Other officers are secretary, Mrs. Wilma Brady, administrative assistant at the UMass School of Education; and treasurer, Dr. James Denton, associate professor of mathematics at Amherst College.

The committee was initiated last year by a Negro faculty group to help Negro students with college potential to overcome financial and academic barriers to gain admission to the University, CCENS recruited and gained admittance for its first class of 123 this fall.

Funds to provide financial aid for the students and support for the program come from state, federal and foundation sources and include a special appropriation of student funds by the UMass Student Senate.

A group of 24 graduate teaching assistants are paid to give half their working time to tutoring these students in their basic freshman subjects. Assisting them are a larger group of volunteer faculty and student tutors.

Guard To Present Wallace Rally Tues.

A rally for third party candidate George C. Wallace will be held Tuesday evening, at 7:30, in SBA 120. The rally is designed to, in the words of William Hutton, Wallace Campus coordinator, "to orient students with the Wallace movement." The rally is sponsored by the New Guard, a campus political organization.

Speaking at the rally with Hutton will be Harold Beck, a Wallace Amherst campaigner. Beck, a former UMass Professor and now owner of a tool company, has made speeches for Wallace in other area colleges.

"There is a good chance that Youth for Wallace will continue as a political force on campus even after the elections," Hutton said.

Open UM To World

It can be said that a university's major purpose is to enlighten its students. This enlightenment comes in two general ways: academic enlightenment (to make an individual more aware of a new and specialized world of studies) and social enlightenment (to make a student more aware of the real world). It is up to the student to pursue both of these goals. But, at UMass, and many other state financed universities and schools, the second goal is not as near achievement as the first.

There are many factors that make an institution of higher education into the proverbial "ivory tower". The mass importance of Black students and poorer students is a start toward the reduction of this image. The state school systems of this nation face a similar problem which most other schools do not have. State schools tend to be just that -- for the state and seemingly little more.

State financed schools in Massachusetts rank 49th out of fifty states in the percentage of undergraduate out-of-state and foreign students. Only 2.5% of the students in state supported schools are not from Massachusetts. New York is the only state with a smaller percentage. State law in Massachusetts allows only 5% out-of-state students. Assuming the average UMass students make an acquaintance with 200 students while at the university, theoretically only ten of these are from some other state, or country.

Many reasons can be given for this situation, but the fact remains that there are very, very few non-Massachusetts residents at this University. We, the students who are here, are very severly limited in the possible breadth of our acquaintances. Our whole world, for almost four years is being almost totally confined to "good 'ole Mass."

I look on a university as being a cosmopolitan institution. A place to find many new and different outlooks on the world, and on life, all in one small area. UMass is not that to the average student. A UMass student may find what a Bostonian thinks of the Berkshires. But, does he find what a Californian thinks of Boston? And, as importantly, how a Chinese student looks at the world?

It is time that the University of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts realizes that for the benefit of its own students, it must admit more out-of-state and foreign students. One learns about the real world through people, not through books.

G. THOMAS JOHNSON

Homecoming Oh Wow

Once again the campus prepares to indulge itself. A football game is the excuse for the first of a series of "weekends". And the week-ends are an excuse for attending college.

I am convinced it does not matter who entertains or what happens as long as they provide an excuse for obtaining some co-ed's attention for the week-end. The concerts lend an air of respectability to everyone's intentions and the quality of the entertainment is not important. UMass students are willing to take the risk that this might be one of the engagements the Young Rascals keep.

I think week-ends with concerts and queens have a place in a student's life. But is disturbs me that they are the only things that can rally the interests of a large segment of the student population. How many students who will be able to pay thirty dollars or more for a week-end's entertainment, would be willing to contribute a dollar for any charitable cause? How many students are willing to give up one hour let alone one week-end of their time for something perhaps a little more important than their own fun? There are some who will and do. There are many more who won't and don't.

School spirit is a shallow thing when all it represents is a football game and a float. Until the students of UMass channel their spirit into their own academic and cultural life and the social needs of others, there is no spirit worth retention. It is up to us to make this university more than a setting for week-ends and floats.

"Slums Are For You Cops To Go Into"

INSIDE REPORT:

A Black Vote Boycott?

BY ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

CHICAGO - The spectre, underground and unmeasurable, of a Negro voting boycott on November 5 surfaced briefly last month during a secret political meeting over barbecued spare ribs in a cubbyhole restaurant on Chicago's South Side.

Attending were local Negro leaders including the Rev. Jesse Jackson, dynamic Chicago head of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, and Gus Savage, a South Side publisher and politician. Across the table were functionaries of the Republican party. They had come together to discuss a common cause: a boycott by Chicago's black voters.

Since more than 80 percent of the Negro vote this year will back Vice President Humphrey against Richard M. Nixon, the Republicans were naturally interested in any stay-at-home movement. The Negro leaders were equally eager to display black power, even negatively, and embarrass Mayor Richard J. Daley's organization.

The sticking point was money. One Negro suggested over lunch that a properly organized "voters' strike" would require around $350,000 that might well come from Republicans. At that point, interest by the Republican functionaries abruptly cooled. There were no subsequent meetings.

That abortive contact between Republican operatives and black militants typifies the fuzzy, ill-defined nature of a potential Negro voter boycott here and elsewhere. Although no organized effort of the kind envisioned in the South Side restaurant has developed anywhere, there are rumblings of non-voting everywhere. Just how much abstention there is in the ghettoes on Nov. 5 may well spell the difference between victory and defeat for the Democratic party, nationally and in key states.

There are indeed, fitful, uncoordinated boycott movements in Chicago today. The Blackstone Rangers, most feared of the black gangs, is urging a non-vote. "Don't Vote on Nov. 5. The Blackstone Rangers," is spread in aerosol paint all over the South Side. More quietly, some Negro leadrs pass the same admonition by word of mouth.

Although the "voters' strike" that he once proposed has never materialized, Gus Savage remains a focal point for boycott activity here. Savage, who unsuccessfully bucked the Daley machine last spring to run for Congress, talked a recent meeting of national black politicians in Gary, Ind., into exempting Illinois from a call for Negroes to vote. In other words, a boycott was considered appropriate here.

But beyond organized or semi-organized activity is the deep-seated resentment Chicago Negroes feel against the Daley establishment. That resentment, plus unwillingness by female precinct workers to walk dangerous ghetto streets, contributed to a sharp decline of Negro registration this year and likely will reduce actual voting.

Some sophisticated Negro leaders here, however, caution against an outright boycott. The Rev. Arthur Brazier, South Side civic leader, urges a vote for Abner Mikva, an anti-organization Congressional candidate, and an abstention against Daley's candidates.

Similarly, the Better Government Association (BGA), a Republican-oriented reform group, is distributing a film in Negro neighborhoods urging voters to appear at the polls even if they don't vote. Otherwise, hints the BGA, Daley's precinct captains might vote the absent Negroes anyway.

But militant leaders urge Negroes to keep away from polling places Nov. 5 if they don't want to vote. The reason: pressure, real and imagined, from precinct captains might panic the Negro voter into another straight Democratic ticket.

What all this will mean on Election Day is lost in the mysteries of the black ghetto. The Chicago forecast, however, is for a falloff of at least 20 percent--enough to devastate the national and state Democratic tickets, endanger Daley's county ticket, and bury one Congressman (Rep. William Murphy, a white Daley Democrat with a 40 percent black constituency).

Declines in other cities are not likely to be so severe as in racially tense Chicago, but ANY decline conjures up nightmare prospects for Democratic politicians. A national drop of even 10 percent in Negro voting would eradicate all hopes of a Truman-esque upset evoked by Humphrey's upturn in the polls--predicated on a Negro vote equal in size to that of 1964.

Demerits Of SWAP

CHRIS McGAHAN, STUDENT GOVERNMENT EDITOR

Everyone knows that the fall semester fun and frolic, Homecoming, Weekend is un-matched and un-matchable. Everyone, that is, except the select few chosen to conscientiously represent their organization at the annual Student Workshop on Activities Problems.

For these students, the fun and frolic is inversely proportional to numbers attending Homecoming and SWAP, respectively. One expects 30,000 people, gathered for a super-reunion, to let their hair down a little bit and have a good time. One does not expect the same of roughly 100 students and 50 faculty and administrators, gathered to work out student activities problems and, in the words of one SWAP committee member, establish "another avenue of communication between the three elements comprising the university community." Perhaps SWAP's participants, once they get through dinner, a speech, and a movie, suddenly realizing the enormity of the tasks they have appointed themselves to solve, instinctively resort to that age-old human remedy for all problems and seek, quickly and completely, to drown their sorrows. It seems that way to this observer.

This year the SWAP committee, under chairman Sue Tracy, who should be complimented for her efforts to improve SWAP, has outlined three areas of tri-partite concern. The delegates and faculty-administration participants will seek to define and hopefully find solutions to these problems. 1.) The relevance of the curriculum: Who makes it and why? How does it affect the University? 2.) Acadamics: How is pass/fail working? What are the advantages of a 12-point grading system? What about the phys-ed requirement?

The third topic, called "student voice" by the committee, promises to be the most interesting of the three. Some members of the SWAP committee see developing a crisis of identity for the "legitimate" student voice, the elected student government, both Senate and classes.

Stepping in to fill a void in relevance are such groups as the Martin Luther King Social Action Council, Mother of Voices, and Students for a Democratic Society. SWAP will explore this gap, if it exists, and determine what avenues are open for student expression in all areas.

To help foster a business-like atmosphere, Chairman Tracy has commissioned position papers from students, faculty and administrators dealing with each of the three problems. Maybe this technique will work. But, as Miss Tracy says, the success of the conference will depend on the quality of the participants.

Dr. Isidore Silver of the School of Business Administration will deliver the keynote address Friday evening at the Oak and Spruce Lodge in South Lee, Massachusetts. After this, the delegates get down to the business at hand, usually starting in the cocktail lounge, subsequently adjourning to individual suites -- no doubt for even more serious business.

SWAP started out about a decade ago to teach members of extra-curricular groups how to use RSO facilities such as mimeograph machines, etc. It has evolved into what is billed now as an in-depth discussion of ways to make the tri-partite system work better. This dialogue is going on even as I write this column - why do they have to go the the Berkshires to improve it?

Miss Tracy noted that SWAP is the only place that administrators have a chance to "sit down and talk with students." If they have to go to Mt. Snow or the Berkshires to talk to students, one wonders what point there is to Whitmore Hall. Apparently this is just the place all good administrators hide out until they make their yearly appearance at SWAP, when they talk to students. But Miss Tracy knows as well as I do that with few exceptions every person in Whitmore is very accessible and helpful in every way possible.

So this, the only justification I have heard for SWAP, is clearly just not so. For several years the Senate has attempted to eliminate SWAP appropriations from all budgets. For two years I supported these efforts with my votes on the Senate floor. Maybe this year these efforts will succeed.

Miss Tracy noted that in the pre-SWAP conference the question arose: "Should there be a SWAP?" It was not answered -- or even dealt with -- at that time. Miss Tracy, who feels that some significant changes need to be made in the structure of SWAP if it is to be a success in the future, says this question will be dealt with at the post-SWAP conference.

I wonder if that conference will reach the same conclusion that I have.

Autonomy

Dear editor:

Unfortunately, Mr. Korpita has exposed to the general public his typical misinformation and misunderstanding of key issues in your article of 10/21, "Union Local 1776 President Rebuts".

The issue of "local union autonomy" has been close to the heart of this local union (with President Korpita's endorsement, until recently) during the past two years we spent obtaining and winning exclusive collective bargaining representation in several areas of the campus. LOCAL UNION AUTONOMY IN NO WAY IMPLIES INDEPENDENCE FROM THE INTERNATIONAL UNION, NOR FROM THE STATE BODY, AND MOST CERTAINLY NOT FROM THE AFL-CIO STRUCTURE. Any student of union history or any knowledgeable person in the labor field will acknowledge that local union autonomy is practiced successfully in many International AFL-CIO unions.

"Local Union Autonomy" DOES NOT refer to the vital link between the local body, the state body, and the International body--it means, quite simply, adherence to the democratic system. In other words, an "autonomous" local union retains the right to express the ideas, opinions, and needs of its membership. Given this right, the local union relies upon the higher structure of the union for assistance in the areas of legislation, research, education, legal counsel, and the like. The key to the concept is that the local union retains service from the higher structure as a RIGHT, not as a PRIVILEGE. Certainly, history shows that whether we speak of labor unions or other operating structures, democracy guarantees certain RIGHTS--which are met upon request, as opposed to PRIVILEGES, which are granted at the will of an overpowering superstructure.

The American Federation of State, County, and Municipal Employees, AFL-CIO, specifically secures the right to local union autonomy of government within its constitutional structure. The strength of local unions lies with each local union's membership, with the assistance of the other levels of the union structure.

At a time when this freedom of our local union membership was first threatened during the past summer, I was indeed attacked for my strong stand in protecting the rights of our members. Finding less than unanimous support among the officers of the local, I resigned my office until such time as I could bring my position before a vote of the membership.

The question that will be decided in Sunday's election is one as old as the history of our nation and, indeed, of the labor movement and all other movements of people toward freedom and dignity. Does the local union membership choose to stand proud and strong for its rights and dignity? I believe that they do, and I offer them a leadership that will secure those rights for them with dignity.

Mrs. Barbara Fifield
Candidate for President, Local 1776
AFSCME, AFL-CIO

ATTENTION: ABSENTEE VOTERS

Many UMass students will be voting for the first time and in numerous cases by absentee ballot. In order for your ballot to be counted, you must sign it in the presence of an "official authorized to administer oaths".

If you mark the ballot before seeing a notary public, it will be nulled and will not be replaced.

Pass Fail Course Made Amherst Requirement

Amherst College has approved a pass-fail measurement of student performance in one of the required freshman courses in the curriculum introduced two years ago. Known as Problems of Inquiry I, the course is an introduction to the humanities. It is concerned with study in the fine arts, dramatic arts, music, literature, philosophy, and religion and changes its topics of discussion every two years. Members of many academic departments - including natural and social scientists - participate in creating and teaching the course.

In asking that judgment of a student's performance not be determined by numerical grades, Calvin Cannon, professor of romance languages and course chairman, stressed to the faculty that he and his colleagues were not adding to current pressures for grade-less courses, but that in an exercise of this nature a student's creativity and sensitivity could not be judged objectively. To the contrary, he pointed out, grades often lead a student to respond with what he thinks his teacher wants and restrict his own initiative. Furthermore, teachers from many disciplines learn with their students as the course develops - a situation from which both benefit.

"We don't stand before a student as authorities on photography or African sculpture," he said. 'The significant difference in this course between the teacher and his student is not that he knows more about the materials at hand, but that he has had more experience in finding his way in problems of inquiry in the humanities. Which is to say that most of us are coming to see ourselves primarily not as teachers in the traditional sense, but as older and more practiced students. We think this can be of enormous value for all concerned. For the staff, there is the excitement and exhilaration of discovering our way in new fields and hence of expanding our knowledge and sensibility."

The pass-fail program will apply to the current year. Next year the course staff will recommend to the faculty whether or not the same system should be continued.

Financial Limitations Caused By Low Federal Fund Resources

BY JILL WALLACH
Staff Reporter

Financial aid plays an increasingly important role in University life. Today, however its rapid expansion has been paralleled by an equally rapid decrease in available funds for the rising number of deserving students.

Today, 45-50% of the UMass student body is on some form of financial aid, primarily through scholarships or the work-study program. Students also receive aid through various types of loans, grants (mostly federal), and undergraduate assistanceships.

The main problem, according to Rick Shannor of the News Bureau, is that the applicants and their needs have outgrown available funds. Lynn Santner, Asst. Director of Placement and Financial Aid Services, told the MDC that the University's sources of funds, though varied, were primarily dependent on the legislature in Boston, and Congress in Washington.

He further explained that, while this year "the University got close to 100% of what they asked for from the state, they lost out on federal funds". (That is, UMass received only 55% of what it asked for through the Higher Educ. Act of 1965). Santner blamed this on the fact that direct appropriations remained the same despite an increasing number of schools and students participating in the program.

According to Santner, the administration is now encouraging students to take more advantage of the National Defense Student Loan Plan. Santner also stressed the need for students to realize that, in order to retain financial aid, they must reapply each year.

In discussing the work-study program, instituted in the last few years, both Santner and Shannor felt it has been successful it has been found to have little or no affect on student's grades. Santner further felt that the work program aids in easing the labor shortage on campus because "students often do things that might never otherwise get done. In many cases it is an important part of the education process."

Wagner Chorale To Play In Bowker Concert Tues.

Amherst, Mass. - The University of Massachusetts Concert Association has announced the program for the Roger Wagner Chorale concert Tuesday, Oct. 29, at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium.

The famed 24-voice chorale will open the program with a selection of sacred music of the Renaissance period and will include choral works by Sweelinck, Jacob Handl and Tomas Luis de Victoria. Secular works by Passereau, Lassus and Jannequin of the Renaissance period will also be sung. The Baroque period will be represented by a duet from Bach's Cantata No. 78. The first half of the concert will conclude with excerpts from Brahms' A German Requiem, a masterpiece of the Romantic period.

Following intermission, the chorale will perform sections of Leonard Bernstein's Chichester Psalms. The remainder of the concert will be devoted to works by American composers Randall Thompson and Wilbur Chenoweth and will include Negro spirituals

SUNY SUSPENDS CLASS TO CONDUCT SELF-STUDY

LONG ISLAND, N.Y. (CPS)--A three-day moratorium on the regular business and classes of the State University of New York at Stony Brook was declared in order to conduct "an extensive self-study of the University, with particular attention to its goals and priorities."

The motion to suspend classes was introduced by Professor Robert Creed, Chairman of the Faculty Executive Committee, at a Faculty Assembly meeting October 8, and was passed despite the quiet opposition of University President John S. Toll.

The moratorium was held Oct. 22, 23 and 24. Co-conveners of the three-day forum were Don Rubin, then President of the Student Policy (Assembly), and Vice President for Liberal Studies, Sidney Gelber. A committee was formed to plan for the three days with representatives from the faculty and student body. The committee has been holding daily, open meetings with various groups on campus.

There is a possibility that other groups, including the Student Council of Polity and the Organization for Progressive Thought (a breakaway from SDS), may hold their own sessions.

The decision to reevaluate followed the surprise resignation of the newly-appointed Vice President for Student Affairs, David F. Trask.

Trask had assumed the new vice presidency on August 1, amid much opposition from students, faculty and administrative staff. The opposition was largely the result of Toll's attempt to make the appointment without consulting any of the groups concerned.

Trask's letter of resignation stated, "I can make my most useful contribution as a teacher and a scholar" rather than as vice president. He said later that the withdrawal of the student members from the Council for Student Affairs precipitated his decision.

Trask was one of the principle drafters of the Council for Student Affairs, which was instituted last spring after a sixteen-hour seizure of the university business office by students.

Formation of the Council and appointment of Trask as a special vice-president to head it angered Stony Brook students. No student groups were consulted before the appointment was made; and their resentment ruined any chance Trask might have had for success in his job.

In his letter of resignation, Trask said he had seen a "general lack of credibility and trust pervading students, faculty and administration here."

Students and faculty members saw the whole incident as a sign that their school was sick; the moratorium was called in an attempt to find a cure.

The Statesman, Stony Brook's student newspaper, called in a recent editorial for special evaluation of:

1. The Council on Student Affairs. In a "Student Magna Charta" of demands, a Vice-President for Student Affairs, if there is one, should be responsible for carrying out the Council's decisions, and should have complete power to do so;
2. Curriculum at the university. "A university doesn't deserve the title if it does not educate," the Statesman said. "Stony Brook is not educating its undergraduates." A major overhaul of the academic system will include effective student evaluation of courses and professors.

"A restructured Stony Brook," the newspaper said, "is the only way to avoid a burning Stony Brook. If the Three Days and Three Nights do not produce real, positive alterations, we must be prepared to see Stony Brook explode."

A replacement for Trask has not been appointed. Two men have assumed the duties of the Vice-President for Student Affairs. One of them, Executive Vice-President T.A. Pond, has been authorized to assume responsibility "in case of a campus cataclysm," according to a memo issued to the university's student affairs staff the day of Trask's resignation.

Campus Newspapers Play the Name Game

By their names, campus newspapers are known as the lively, sometimes disrespectful but always candid, voices of today's young adults in transition.

So says the editor of the "Directory of the College Student Press in America."

Dr. Dario Politella, associate professor of journalistic studies at the University of Massachusetts, cites as evidence of the name-game such papers as "The Bear End" of Norman College, Norman Park, Ga., and the Bakersfield (California) College "Renegade Rip."

He has also found that students at Roanoke College in Salem, Va., call their newspaper the "Brackety-Ack." At St. Joseph's College in Rensselaer, Ind., they read "The Stuff." And at both St. Catherine (Ky.) Junior College and the University of Southern Mississippi at Hattiesburg, they publish "The Student Prints."

While "Ye Stirling Stir" is a product of Stirling (Kan.) College, McNeese College in Lake Charles, La., produces "Contraband."

Dr. Politella also says he likes the name that student nurses gave their newspaper at the Ancker Hospital School of Nursing at Minneapolis: "The Transfusion."

Other off-beat nameplates on College papers' mastheads include "The Gila Monster" at Easter Arizona Junior College in Thatcher; "The Howling Gale" of the U.S. Coast Guard Academy in New London, Conn.; "The Quintessence" of Quinsigamond Community College in Worcester, Mass.; and "Smoke Signals" out of Rio Grande (Ohio) College.

At Burlington, Vt., it's the "Vermont Cynic"; while the University of California's Irvine campus has "The Ant Hill." Reedley (Calif.) College Students follow "The Jungle Chant," and Pearl River Junior College in Poplarville, Miss., it's the "Dixie Drawl."

"These young people are as direct in the names they hang on their newspapers as they are in their other activities," Dr. Politella remarked. "They are demonstrating that the student press is in the forefront of the new campus awareness of the world."

Booters Seek to Break 3-Game Losing Streak Against Tufts

By WALT STACHURA
Senior Reporter

Trying to break a three game losing streak, the UMass soccer team will travel to Tufts University to take on the Jumbos tomorrow afternoon at 11 a.m.

Offense has been the main focus of the booters workouts this week as they have only come up with two goals in their losing streak.

Soccer coach Peter Broaca commented that a weak offense has been the disappointing point of the season. Except for an eight goal explosion against Boston College, the Redmen have been unable to score with any consistency.

Scoring statistics indicate the overall lack of punch in the front line. Duane Brown has seven of the twelve tallies compiled by the Redmen, indicating a lack of a balanced attack.

Defense has been a stronger point for the UMass booters as they have allowed only seven goals in five games.

The defensive part of the soccer team will be further strengthened by the return to action of goalie Steve Kramer. He was out for one game with a broken finger but it has mended sufficiently to allow Steve to play against Tufts.

DAVE PICCUS

Another ailing member of the soccer team, Marc Cantor, may see some action tomorrow after a three week absense with a sprained and infected ankle.

Halfback Dave Piccus has shaken off the effects of a possible concussion and will definitely play against the Jumbos.

The Redmen will have to come up with a strong effort to beat the Jumbos. So far, Tufts has a 2-2-1 and are the defending champions of the Greater Boston Soccer League.

The Jumbos held a 1-0 lead over Trinity for three quarters but finally lost, 3-1. Their other loss came to Ivy power Harvard.

Tufts holds 2-1 victories over Worcester Tech and Boston College while playing Clark to a 4-4 draw.

Offensively, the Jumbos are led by Donnie Foster, one of the scoring leaders in Division II of the New England Intercollegiate Soccer League.

On the defense, Tufts has no real standout performers but a group of players that play steady, unspectacular but effective soccer.

This game is a big one for UMass because a win will put them back at .500 with a 3-3 record. However, a loss would continue their losing streak with the prospect of facing two tough ball games next week.

After tomorrow's game, the UMass booters swing back into action with a home game against Worcester Tech on Tuesday. The following Saturday, the Redmen take on defending Yankee Conference champ Vermont at Burlington in a game that could prove decisive in the conference race.

CO-CAPTAIN CHARLIE LANG AND COACH KEN O'BRIEN

Harriers Shoot at Cross For Fourth Straight Victory

Saturday at 11 a.m., the Redman cross-country team meets its toughest test of the season when they meet Holy Cross on the field next to WOPE. Holy Cross, predicted to be one of the top New England teams this season, got off to a poor start but has since rebounded to become a formidable team.

Spearheading the Crusaders attack is Art Dulong. Dulong, a junior, is the defending IC4A cross-country champ and is regarded as one of the top harriers in the East. He is backed up by Jim Walsh and Art Martin, who are starting to come along after a slow start.

UMass, shooting for their fourth straight win, will need a strong effort from the entire team. Ron Wayne who has been the top runner recently will be out to upset Dulong. He is followed by Leo Duart who has been coming into his own the last two races, turning in an excellent performance against Springfield Tuesday.

Third spot on the Redman team will be up for grabs between seniors Marc Gelinas and Charlie Lang. Both have been taking turns at being third man throughout the year. Battling for the vital fifth spot on the squad will be Tom Derderian, Dave Evans and Larry Paulson. All three have been improving with every meet.

Co-captain Charlie Lang, who is the UMass course record holder, admits the race is going to be very tight. Lang candidly admitted, "I have to almost count on Dulong winning and Ronny Wayne and Leo Duart getting second and third. It will depend on their 2-5 men and our 3-5 men." Lang added optimistically that the HC fifth man is not strong and that UMass has a closley packed group of runners with the top six having a good time spread of only 66 seconds against Springfield.

Lang also feels that his course record of 25:17, which he set last year against Providence and Central Conn. in a tri-meet, will be threatened by Dulong and Wayne. Lang concluded by saying he expected a large Homecoming Day crowd for the meet.

The Little Redmen, who have been running better with every meet, will also be aiming for their fourth in a row when they take on the Crusaders' frosh. The Little Redmen have had a consistent one, two punch in Don Dunsky and Wayne Lucas.

The third, fourth and fifth positions on the team have not been nailed down by any certain runners as of yet. It seems that a different man is always coming up with a good race to give the frosh victory. Steve Whicher, Al Mangan, Bruce Blackburn, Don Brigham, Ron Swasey, and Mike Cowles are the men who are battling for the point positions.

Their Holy Cross opponent has been classified by Coach Ken O'Brien as one of the top three frosh teams in New England. And like the varsity race the frosh meet should be very close. J.D.F.

Ruggers to Host Tufts

The UMass Rugby Club will play host to Tufts University Sunday on the Field behind Alumni Stadium. The "B" team will play at 1 p.m. and the "A" team will play at 2 p.m.

The "A" squad has a 1-3 record while the "B" team has a 1-2 record. Last Saturday the teams defeated MIT on the rain soaked field to post their first home game wins.

The team is captained by Jeff Reedman. The three loses for the "A" team came against Dartmouth, Fairfield and Williams.

Jerry Bruen will maintain the scrum. Don Zingale, and Mike Meehan will also be playing. Teddy Hogue will be in the backfield and Gene Oliver at tackle. Frank Desiata will also be playing

Little Redmen Footballers

Flavio, a real hitter, will play middle guard. As at offensive guard, the tackle spots here will probably be a three man affair with Carl Dambman, John Case and Steve Greany.

John Bordereud and John Sabulis are the linebackers and Brian O'Malley will be the chief. Jim Keating will go at safety while Bob Cabrellie, who played well against BU, and Collins will be the cornerbacks.

This will be a tough game for the defense as the Little Rams are likely to throw at least 35 passes, and they have the offensive blocking to do so. Kelley noted that the URI line "is not quick, but they don't have to be, and our defense should be pushed to the limit."

Bob Erheart, the Rams quarterback, is a fine passer and has an excellent target in speedy Warren Houston who hails from Newton. The top runner is fullback Mike Marion. Erheart, in his last outing, completed 26 of 35 passes as the Little Rams edged UNH, 27-26.

Kelley was not sure what type of defense URI would throw at his Little Redmen. "They likely will use a 61 defense, but we'll probably see several other types as well."

He expressed some concern over his offenses's inability to mount any sustained drives. The Little Redman's forte so far this year has been the long scoring play or field goal. He hopes things will be different today. "We need more cohesiveness on offense, but our offense is so basic, we can adjust."

URI is capable of scoring two or three touchdowns, but some adjustments in the UMass defensive line should confuse them enough to enable the Little Redman offense to score some points against a Rhode Island defense which has allowed 54 points in two games.

Crew To Row in Charles Regatta

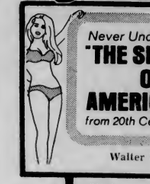
The crew club travels to Boston for the Head of the Charles Regatta to be held Sunday. The team will leave this afternoon to practice tomorrow at BU.

The head of the Charles attracts such schools as Syracuse, Holy Cross, MIT, Wesleyan and some prep schools for the junior varsity eight competition. Harvard, BU, Northeastern, MIT, University of Pennsylvania, Dartmouth and the large boat clubs in the east will compete in the Varsity Eight.

In the varsity competition, UMass is the only small college entered. This is based not on the size of the school, but the rowing program.

The course is a three mile upstream one, with winds from the West. It takes approximately 17 minutes to do the course. Coach Mike Faherty said, "Practices are going well, but we are trying new combinations every day for the best results."

Last year, the varsity finished tenth out of 35 schools. UMass will be looking to improve its time. Coach Faherty said they will be trying to cut enough time off this year's race to be in contention for the Mayor's Cup, the first prize.



The varsity will be starting behind BU and MIT.

J.C.

For those of you intending to get in line early for the Janis Joplin concert tonight, the Athletic Department has added a waiting time attraction.

There will be an intra-squad scrimmage of the basketball team at 5 p.m. in the Cage, providing a sneak preview of Coach Leaman's defending Yankee Conference hoopsters for the Redman fans.

Redmen To Pull All Stops To Beat UConn Huskies

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Sports
Friday, October 25, 1968
Page 12 Vol. XCVII No. 35

BY PETER PASCARELLI
Assistant Sports Editor

Homecoming means tradition, and it is a football tradition at UMass to win on Homecoming. The Redmen, injury plagued and losers of four straight will try to keep a seven game homecoming streak alive when they meet the University of Connecticut at Alumni Stadium at 1:30 p.m. tomorrow.

Friday night the annual homecoming float parade will take place, beginning at Whitmore parking lot. Following the parade at 8:30 will be a rally for the football team at the Student Union Terrace, which will include firewords and appearances by the varsity football team and Head Coach Vic Fusia.

Saturday at halftime, the Homecoming queen will be announced. The five finalists are Meredith Ferguson, Sandra McCormack, Anne Robichaud, Pam Wood and Claudette Fong.

The weekend actually gets an early start as basketball has edged out everything from Janis Joplin to rugby. The UMass basketball team will hold an intrasquad scrimmage at Curry Hicks Cage today at 5 p.m. and Coach Jack Leaman invites all UMass fans to take a preview look at the defending Yankee Conference champions.

Returning to the more seasonal topic of UMass football, Coach Fusia will be forced to juggle his offensive personnel this week.

Injuries which were concentrated on defense for a while have switched their menace to offense. All offensive backfield starters of just a week ago, with the exception of quarterback Tim Adams, will be sidelined this week.

Halfback Tim Driscoll is out for the season with knee injury, fullback Ed Sarno will miss his second straight game with an ankle injury and wingback Jerry Grasso will also be sidelined. To compound the problem, backup quarterback Mike Marchev is also lost for the season with a shoulder separation.

Fusia has indicated he will start Pat Scavone, a speedy sophomore at wingback, senior Bruce Cochrane at fullback and Craig Lovell at halfback. The coach also said, however, that he will be constantly alternating his backs to get some kind of offensive production.

This will mean that Pat Flaherty, John Decembrele and Steve Parnell will all be seeing backfield action. Junior Ken Hughes will be backup quarterback to Adams.

Fusia is promising to pull all stops offensively to win tomorrow. "We will do anything to win", said the coach. He anticipates passing quite a bit, as was done last week.

Defensively UMass will have its hands full and will be facing a different situation than it did last week. Fusia explained it this way, when he said, "Against Rhode Island, you had to watch for the pass first. But against UConn they have an outstanding quarterback in Petrillo who is dangerous both as a passer and a runner."

QUARTERBACK TIM ADAMS

STEVE PARNELL

UConn also boasts of possibly the finest sophomore running back in the conference in the person of Vinnie Clements.

Fusia said of Clements, "He is by far their best back. We thought that Mike Borcyzewski was a fine player last year, but Clements has beaten him out."

UMass will be starting the same defense that looked so good last week.

Fusia has not counted his team out of the Conference race as yet. "If we win tomorrow, that will leave only one undefeated team in the Conference, Rhode Island, and they can be beaten. I thought before the season that the champs would have at least one loss in the Conference anyway."

The fact that it is Homecoming is, of course, an incentive to the Redmen. Fusia said, "Football is an emotional game, besides being a physical and mental game. I think emotion is just as important as anything else. The boys will be up for this week's game just like they have been up every week, but playing before so many of their own will of course give them incentive."

The coach hopes the team is over the rash of mental lapses that have plagued them. They will have to be to win. But Fusia is hopeful that the Redmen are about ready to put it all together.

As a final added feature to the contest, the UConn president has given 6'5 statue of an Indian to UMass which has been set on pedestal on the east side of the stadium. It seems that a donor had given the statue to UConn but the president, knowing that UConn's inspiration was the Husky donated the statue to the Redmen.

The statue will be formally presented before the game Saturday. UConn only wants payment in the form of a victory, being the "Indian givers" the Huskies are. However, the UMass football team, would seem to have a lot to say about that payment.

Metawampe's Grid Picks

The Old Injun is riled. After years of faithful service, the University of Massachusetts has obtained another Indian. The Fine Arts Center lags, the Cage remains, road construction on North Pleasant Street is far behind, and what do they do? They get another Indian statue.

Metawampe has served this campus for nigh onto 80 years. The wound is deep. And yet loyalty to this great University has caused the Old Injun to pick 'em again this week. But don't expect wonders this time, for he picked them with a heavy and bitter heart. Ah, the pity of it all. Scorned by the ones he loved in the twilight of his years. Man's inhumanity to Indian.

Redmen Meet Hard Throwing Rams

BY STEVE SHAMBAM
Staff Reporter

The unbeaten UMass frosh football team will face its' toughest opponent to date as it travels to Rhode Island to do grid battle with the Little Rams this afternoon at 2 p.m. URI has only a 1-1 record but is a physically strong team which likes to put the ball in the air.

For a game such as this, Coach Dave Kelly would like to have his team intact, but there are several key operatives who are either definitely out or are doubtful starters. Speedster Len Fitz, a tailback, will not play because of a dislocated shoulder which will require surgery. Guard Richie Etna (shoulder), wingback Art Harris (ankle), fullback Dick Cummings (foot) and fullback Bob Sawyer will all play, but the question is how much and to what degree of efficiency.

To alleviate some of these deficiencies, Kelley has moved Jim Kiley, who so far this year has played tight end, defensive end, cornerback and tailback, to fullback to spell Sawyer. Dennis Collins will help out at Kiley's cornerback spot. George Tsiumis, a mini-Mike Garret at 5'9, 175, will see action at tailback. Tsiumis is too small to block well, but he does make an effort and is a shifty runner who cuts well.

Other than these changes the offensive unit will remain intact. Walt O'Malley and John Hulecki will start at split end and tight end respectively. Bob Donlin and Mike Popavitch will probably go at the tackles while Dan Kelley, Gene Smith and Etna will probably rotate at guard.

Ron Marino will be the center. The quarterbacks will be Bill Bush and Marty Evans. The healthiest wingback is Angelo DiNardo, but Harris will undoubtedly spell him on occasion.

Fortunately the defense is healthy. Curt Bristol and Dave Levine will play the ends while Bill De-

Hi Lo's Down Kappa Sigma 18-12, For Intramural Football Championship

Hills South HiLo's defeated Kappa Sigma last night for the Intramural touch football Campus Championship, 18-12. The game went into double overtime action before the winner could be determined.

Frank Holcum and Rick Fredricks caught two of the touchdown passes for the HiLo's. Fredricks is also the campus scoring champion with 135 points during regular play. The final and winning touchdown was caught by Frank Sullivan with just seconds remaining in the second overtime. Joe Pedro quarterbacked the Hills South team and tossed all the touchdown passes.

Nick DiSabato threw two touchdown passes to Jim Sulesky and Bob Hansen for Kappa Sig. Paul Sculley was outstanding on both offensive and defensive play.

In tug of war action, the Redwoods defeated the Pied Pipers, 2-0.

Injury Riddled Redmen To Meet Strong Huskies Team

BY MIKE CURRAN
Sports Editor

UMass, being ridden by its longest losing streak since 1953, is down but not out. The Redmen may still have enough to send the visiting Alumni home happy as they have for the previous seven years on Homecoming Day.

A series of injuries have cut UMass' depth to the wafer thin level. Latest victims of the epidemic are quarterback Mike Marchev, tailback Tim Driscoll, and wingback Jerry Grasso. Marchev and Driscoll are out for the season while Grasso is expected to be back for the Holy Cross game.

Of the 22 original pre-season starters, exactly half have missed action due to injuries so far. Substitutes have not been free from disabling injuries either.

UMass will have 22 starters on the field today, though, who are eager for the long overdue taste of victory.

Junior Tim Adams will be at the control. Look for him to go to the air early and often. Tailback Craig Lovell and fullback Bruce Cochrane will do the legwork.

Pat Scavone, a sophomore, will be starting at the wingback or flanker position. It's Scavone's first start, and he may be sharing the duties with kickoff and punt return specialist Steve Parnell.

Other men on the receiving end of Adams' aeriels will be tight end Nick McGarry and split end Nick Warnock. Both have been covered closely in recent weeks, but they are due to have a big day.

The UMass offensive line, an unheralded group of pass blockers, has gotten little attention so far, but they are always there. Tackles Mike Coony and Dick Donlin, guards Bruce Fulton and Pierre Marchando, and center Bob Sheehan have been giving quarterback Adams great protection in recent weeks. Jim Nangle and Noel Schablik are the able replacements with this unit.

Defensively one can look for some hard-hitting on the UMass side. During the early season, these men bore the brunt of the injury hex, but they are now coming back into their own.

Ends Tom York and Al Becker, and tackles Marty Scheralis and Bill Sroka will be starting in the line. York and Scheralis are still just getting back to their 100 percent capacities after periods of convalescence.

Middle guard John MacLean and linebackers Randy Robinson, and Dennis Gray will be right behind the front four. Robinson has switched to the linebacker post after starting off the season as a defensive end.

Substitutes for these men will be Andy Guarino, Larry Fortunoff, Mark Toner and John Farrelly.

UMass' deep backs are chief Don Dotson, halfbacks Mike McArdle and Billy Frye and safety Steve Rogers. Each has at least one interception so far this year.

Parnell will be the man to watch on Redman punt and kickoff returns. Also watch for Frank Tavolacci and Joe Colosi to make some tackles on the suicide squad.

Scheralis will handle the field goals and conversion attempts are excellent blockers and straight ahead runners.

Paul Tortolani and George Kupfrian are the Huskies ends. Tortolani is a transfer from George Washington, which gave up football. Of the first five games, best receiver.

Connecticut also has an excellent combination of experienced veterans and promising newcomers on defense. Five seniors, three juniors and three sophomores make up the starting eleven.

Senior linebackers Hank Polasek a co-captain, and Nick Turco are the keys to the defense. Polasek has been on the injury list in recent weeks.

John Krot, Mike Zito, Vic Conzani and Steve Price will start in the defensive backfield. Krot and Zito are also the punt and kick-off returning specialists.

Connecticut will be ready Saturday when they take the field at Alumni Stadium. Coach Toner and his staff see the Yankee Conference race as wide open now with the Huskies having just as good a chance as anyone else.

Fusia and Co. Plot Strategy

Vic Fusia, the 20th head football coach at UMass, brings into his eighth season a coaching record, unmatched in UMass or Yankee Conference history. Fusia's 47 wins, and 15 losses and one tie is the best, percentage-wise of all Massachusetts coaches.

Last year, the Redmen won their fourth Yankee Conference title in the last five years and compiled a seven win two loss record overall. Under Coach Fusia, UMass has lost but three conference games while winning 31, for a .912 percentage.

Ironically enough, the three losses were all by field goal margins and all cost the Redmen conference crowns each year. Fusia was honored as New England Coach of the Year in 1964, while his squad was voted top major team in the area.

Coach Fusia, a Pittsburgh native, graduated from Manhattan College in 1938, where he was an outstanding tailback. He coached at Rankin (Pa.) High School and Indiana (Pa.) High School, before beginning a four-year stay at Brown University as backfield coach. Fusia later moved to first assistant at the University of Pittsburgh, where he helped the Panthers become a national power, before coming to UMass.

Fusia had two temporary voids on his coaching staff this season. John Bamberry left his spot as defensive backfield coach to coach at Stoughton High School and former defensive line coach Burley Crowe became coach at Northampton High School.

Bamberry's spot has been filled by Milt Piepul, a 25-year veteran of the college coaching ranks. A Springfield native, Piepul graduated from Notre Dame in 1937 where he was a fullback and went on to play with the Detroit Lions. He has coached at Brown and Dartmouth before moving on to Holy Cross, where Piepul coached until this year.

William "Dub" Fesperman takes over as defensive line coach. Fesperman, who hails from Winston-Salem, N.C., was an outstanding football and baseball player at his alma mater, Duke, from which he graduated in 1956. Fesperman coached High school ball for four years before being an assistant at Wake Forest, Tulane and most recently at Georgia Tech.

Jack Delaney begins his eighth year as a UMass assistant coach. Delaney, a Columbus, Ohio, native was a backfield star at the University of Cincinnati under the coaching of Sid Gillman. He served for seven years as an assistant there before coming to UMass.

Bob Graham, in his eighth year at UMass, serves as defensive line coach. Graham, a native of Lewiston, Pa., was voted the outstanding member of his Pennteam in 1949. After spending a year in the Phillies' farm system Graham coached at St. Alban's school in Washington and at Pennsylvania before joining the Redman staff.

George Karras, in his third year at UMass, comes from Etna, Pa. Karras was a guard at Villanova and went on to coach two outstanding Pennsylvania high school teams. Karras was an assistant at Villanova for three years and head coach at Wichita for two years before his UMass appointment.

UConn Hopes to Break Seven Year Loss Skein

It's been seven long years since the UConn Huskies beat the Redmen. Back in 1960 Connecticut came to town for the UMass Homecoming game and left with a 30-0 win. Since then, though, it's been a Redman victory every time the two arch-rivals have clashed.

This year Connecticut is hoping to change that pattern. The Huskies stand 2-3 at the halfway point in their season, and Saturday's game is a must game in their above .500 plans. They've been following UMass' disastrous season, and they'd be more than happy to get a piece of the action.

In Pete Petrillo and Vinny Clements, UConn has the offense necessary to win ball games. They've hit double figures scoring-wise in each of their first five ball games.

Backing up Petrillo is sophomore Rick Robustelli, a fine drop back passer. Robustelli is the son of former New York Giant great, Andy Robustelli.

Vinny Clements is one of the most heralded runners to ever attend Connecticut. A former All-Stater from Southington, Connecticut, Clements had a sensational freshman year and spring practice. After excellent games against Yale and Vermont, he was injured in the New Hampshire game, but should be ready to start Saturday.

Rounding out the backfield are seniors Jimmy DeWitt and Mike Boryczewki. Both these backs

Varsity M Club Works To Boost Athletic Spirit

The late Bernie Dallas and Greg Landry were the first recepients of the varsity M Club Football Awards back in 1965. Joe Doyle, one of the clubs organizers is shown with the two stars.

The Varsity M Club is the official booster organization of UMass athletics, but has a misleading name. The Club is open to any booster of Redman athletics, whether athlete or non-athlete, alumnus or non-alumnus, male or female.

Now in its fourth year, the M Club has been making active strides to aid and promote the ever-growing UMass athletic program. The financial growth of the Club has enabled it to assist all Redman official sports.

After a decade of obscurity the Club was re-organized in 1965 by several senior Redman athletes. From a small beginning that fall membership has now jumped to 300. Included are 50 non-alumni and five women. There are alumni represented from every class but five from 1914 through 1968.

A minimum dues fee of $5.00 per year enables members to receive a membership card, weekly Newsletters, athletic schedules and other material regarding UMass sports. It also allows one the opportunity to be associated with others who are dedicated to the success of the athletic program.

During the football season certificates are presented to the outstanding offensive and defensive performers of each varsity game. The winners are chosen by the meticulous rating system of the Redman coaching staff. The certificates are given at the M Club weekly Tuesday luncheons which are held at the Newman Center. Color highlight films of the Redmen in action are shown, an informative discussion session is conducted by Head Coach Vic Fusia, a scouting report is given on the coming opponent and a door prize is awarded. At the end of the season trophies are awarded to the overall winners.

In May of 1966 the Dennis Della Piana Memorial Baseball Award was instituted. Dennis, who died tragically in April of 1966, was an outstanding student-athlete from the Class of 1966. The initial presentation was made May 24, 1967, to Carl Boteze '67. The 1968 winner was David Katz '68. Both young men exemplified the qualities of determination, courage and sportsmanship that characterized Dennis and were truly team performers. An engraved plaque is given the recipient.

For two years the Club worked diligently to raise enough funds to provide blazers for all varisty teams to wear to away contests. In the fall of 1967, 100 blazers were presented to the Athletic Department and are now in their second year of use.

Certificates of achievement were also awarded last winter to selected members of the Yankee Conference championship basketball team and to several deserving seniors on the gymnastic team. In its formative years the Club organized two pre-season Alumni basketball games and two Alumni football games. In May of 1967 an engraved silver tray was presented to retiring Hockey Coach Steve Kosakowski at halftime of the spring intra-squad football game in Alumni Stadium. Monetary assistance was also provided to aid the basketball recruitment program last winter.

In March of 1966 and again in April of 1968 the M Club sponsored Sports Nights in Hartford and and Pittsfield, respectively. The Hartford event was run by Tony Chambers '54 while Joe Doyle '65 was in charge of the evening in Pittsfield.

The Club has its annual business meeting the first Saturday of May. Socials have been held the night prior to the meeting. Last May, Phil Bengtston, the new Head Coach of the Green Bay Packers, was the main speaker.

Currently the Club has two prime objectives. First, to expand the membership list to at least 500, and second, to raise enough money to make significant contributions to assist the athletic program. A raffle is being run with the first prize a color television set. The winners will be announced November 23.

The 1968-69 officers of the M Club have an extensive and active background in UMass athletics. President Tony Williams '63, captained the 1963 Redman baseball team and was selected All Yankee Conference and All New England third baseman. He played in the Baltimore Orioles system. The past two years he taught mathematics and coached basketball and baseball at Easthampton High School. He currently is attending UMass graduate school to get a Master of Education degree in guidance. In the summertime Williams coaches the Orleans team in the Cape Cod Collegiate Baseball League.

Charles "Chuck" Demers '53 is Vice-President. Demers, a former UMass football letterman, was Redman Athletic Trainer from 1961 to 1965, and is now in the same capacity at Deerfield Academy. He has worked in the New York Yankees and San Francisco Giants baseball organizations and also in the summer training camps of the New York Jets and Boston Patriots.

Secretary is Dick Bresciani '60, UMass Assistant Sports Information Directors Association. In the summer months he is the publicity director for the Cape Cod Collegiate Baseball League.

The Treasurer is Bernard Bussel '49. Bussel, a member of the UMass mathematics department, has been active in numerous campus organizations such as the Faculty Senate.

The rest of the Executive Board is composed of three directors, Jim Laughnane '61, former basketball guard and now Athletic Trainer, John Awdycki, '64, 1964 baseball captain and All New England first baseman, and Joe Doyle '65, letterman on the 1963 and 1964 Conference football champs.

Assistant Coach Bob Graham gives the Connecticut scouting report while head Coach Fusia winces at the prospects.

President Tony Williams presents a Varsity M Club Certificate to Bill Sroka for being the Outstanding Defensive Player in the Rhode Island game.

HOMECOMING 1968

Janis Joplin
Big Brother and the Holding Co.

The voice of "new blues" singer Janis Joplin backed by the music of Big Brother and the Holding Company, filled the air at the first Homecoming concert at Curry Hicks Cage last night.

At the age of 17, Janis ran away from her hometown of Port Arthur, Texas, and hit places like Houston, Venice Beach, San Francisco and Austin. She dropped in and out of four colleges, worked a little and drew unemployment. Two years ago she sang country music and blues with an Austin bluegrass band and kicked around the West Coast singing blues in Frisco, but it wasn't until she joined the Big Brother that she really began to sing.

She began listening to blues and folk music back in Port Arthur and bought Bessie Smith and Odetta records. One night at a party she did an imitation of Odetta, and as she recalls, "I'd never sung before and I came out with this huge voice." Not yet aware of just what that voice was capble of displaying, Janis used it smooth and easy in the folk clubs and bars of Venice Beach and San Francisco.

Janis went back to the hillbilly bars of Austin and there a friend of Chet Helm's found her and brought her back to San Francisco. "He told me Big Brother was looking for a chick singer so I thought I'd give it a try," she commented. "I don't know what happened. I just exploded. I'd never sung like that before."

All good singers convey something of their private selves. "I'm full of emotion," she said, "and I want a release." "And if you're on stage and if it's really working and you've got the audience with you, it's a oneness you feel. I just want to feel as much as I can. It's not wise always, but it's super-valid, and maybe it's much wiser. It's what 'soul' is all about.

The Rascals

The Rascals have arrived with "The New York Sound", a sound they create, compose and deliver themselves, a sound that's the sole property and true soul of Dino Danelli on drums, Felix Cavaliere on organ, Gene Cornish on guitar, and Eddie Brigati, lead singing and percussion. They will perform with Hugh Masekela in the cage tonight at 7 and 10 p.m.

The story of The Rascals' beginning is crazy, clipped and slapstick like a Keystone Kop Chase Scene. Gene just left his own group to join this new formation; Dino, suddenly A Rascal after playing drums with every great jazz star that ever was; Felix, coming from a pre-med course at Syracuse and a stint as organist for "Sandu Scott and Her Scotties"; and Eddie, jumping in after working as a percussionist with Joey Dee's band.

Homecoming Queen

One of these five young ladies will be crowned Homecoming Queen at the halftime festivities today. The students cast ballots Tuesday and Wednesday to determine the winner.

SANDRA McCORMICK, '72 from Cohasset, Mass., majoring in nursing; likes skiing, music, piano, children-interested in Peace Corps; active in dorm government and member of Nursing Club.

PAMELA WOOD, '69 from Upton, Mass., majoring in math; likes parachuting, swimming, music and is a member of the parachuting club, and a counselor.

ANNE ROBICHAUD, '71, from Woodbridge, Va., an English major likes spectator sports, traveling, and reading. She is a Scroll and a member of Jr. Pan Hellenic.

MEREDITH FERGUSON, '70 from Idaho Falls, Idaho-an exchange student from the Univ. of New Mexico, a communication arts major; likes skiing, music, traveling.

CLAUDETTE FONG, '72 from Honolulu, Hawaii, a Home Economics major; likes: sewing, music, surfing, modeling; active in dorm government.

The Boston Pops

The Boston Pops will conclude the week long festivities of Homecoming 1968 tomorrow at 3:30 p.m. in the cage.

Conducting the Pops for this special performance will be Harry Ellis Dixon.

As conductor of the Boston Pops Orchestra, [illegible] Dixon heads a symphony orchestra, with which popular hits are presented in full symphonic arrangement only. But along with music in lighter vein by such favorites of the day as Richard [illegible] and Leroy Anderson [illegible] selections compositions of the masters Bach, Mozart, Haydn, Beethoven, Brahms, Tchaikovsky--from the regular symphony concert repertory.

The Pops has exerted a far-reaching influence in spreading the enjoyment of the classics among great numbers of people formerly afraid of them. Equally, they have won over thousands of devotees of "serious" music to the charms of "light-weight" music, played with symphonic brilliance--and with respect for its quality as entertainment.

Hugh Masekela

Hugh Masekela has developed a new sound combining traditional South African music with contemporary pop music.

Masekela is one of the legendary self-taught "naturals". After the start of his career behind the barns, he played in the clubs and streets of Johannesburg.

Soon his name and musical prowess became known, and he formed his own travelling group. He applied for, and won, a scholarship to study at the Royal Academy of Music and at the Guild Hall School in London.

Hugh won another scholarship and he came to America to study at the Manhattan School of Music. There he met Harry Belafonte, who sponsored him in America. During his four years of study, Hugh wrote songs and made many orchestrations for Belafonte and Miriam Makeba, as well as working in various clubs in New York.

Things were beginning to jell. The complete synthesis of African and American music was surfacing into the unique Masekela style.

Daily Collegian Enters Second Week With 8 a.m. Delivery

In the fall of 1967, the Collegian became the Daily Collegian. Since then expansion has proceeded at a rapid pace.

The Associated Press wire service was added previous to the expansion, and this fall it was extended to provide 24 hour coverage. An additional wire service will soon be added--one, devoted entirely to news of other colleges and universities. It is a product of the College Press Service (CPS) of the United States Student Press Association.

This fall also saw an increase in production both in the number of pages per issue and the circulation per day. The Daily Collegian now averages 12 pages per issue and circulates 11,000 copies per day--an increase of 1000 over last year. Editor Jack Dean predicts that another 1000 will probably be needed before the paper can fully meet the demands of its reading audience.

The most recent improvemeat, which took place this past week, is probably the one which has also had the greatest impact to date, as Monday saw the beginning of regular 8 a.m. delivery on campus.

Another recent innovation is a Five-College magazine supplement, The Exit, published weekly by the paper. This Thursday The Exit appeared for the third time, and editor Dean has projected further expansion for it also.

In the future the paper's editors envision a circulation of 18,000 and 16-20 pages per day as it incorporates and becomes self-supporting. And after analyzing the paper's growth in the past two years, this goal doesn't appear to be far away.

Trustees Approve New Dorms

BY DON EPSTEIN
Managing Editor

The University's Board of Trustees approved preliminary plans Saturday for a new Northeast dormitory complex to be located north of Eastman Lane, in a wooded area behind the tennis courts, next to the Women's Physical Education Building.

The three eight story buildings, which are expected to be ready for occupation in Sept. 1970, will house 1400 students. Dean of Students William F. Field told the trustees that "probably" one dormitory will be for graduate students, one for male undergraduates, and the third for female undergraduates.

Instead of the usual single and double rooms along a corridor, the new buildings will contain suites. Eight students will live per suite and each suite will be comprised of three double bedrooms, two single bedrooms, a living room and a bathroom. Commenting on the new design, Field said, "It is more responding to student needs than anything we've had so far". He called the new project, "the most thoroughly researched project we have ever had."

These "1970" buildings were originally planned to be built in the present Women's Quad; however student opposition, led by former Student Senate Vice-President Fran Boronski, before the trustees last year, resulted in the new location. The students argued that the new modern design would be out of keeping with the "traditional" atmosphere of the Quad.

The UMass Building Authority will construct the dorms. The trustees authorized President John W. Lederle to begin seeking the funds for the complex which will be built on a liquidating basis.

George L. Pumphret, chairman of the UMass Building Authority, said that the maximum cost of the project would be $10,350,000. In an interview he said he hopes the board would be able to award the contract in the first week of March. He expects the buildings to be completed by August, 1970.

In other business during their meeting in the Hampshire Dining Commons the trustees approved a new design for the exterior of the Worcester Medical School saving $250,000 from the original design.

Architect Lawrence Nulty told trustees that the simplified design will look better with a granite facade than with the limestone facade originally planned. Although granite is more expensive, the new design costs less than the original plan.

The committee on buildings and grounds reported that they would make their final decision on the UMass Boston site Nov. 22. The Columbia Point site is the only location remaining.

The board meeting was delayed an hour due to an executive meeting in which candidates for honorary degrees were chosen and approved. The list will be made public late in the spring.

Also during the meeting Provost Oswald Tippo introduced Dr. Jeremiah Allen, newly appointed associate Provost.

Protest Movements Analysed In Relation to Campus Issues

BY RICHARD W. STORY
Education Editor

Dr. Richard E. Peterson, research institutiometrician from the Educational Testing Service, highlighted the Fourth New England Conference on Student Culture held recently at Exeter, New Hampshire. Dr. Peterson presented and discussed survey findings which analysed student protest movements in relation 50 27 issues on 859 American college and university campuses.

The Conference, held annually, attracted delegates from student senates and student personnel services of the six New England state universities. The Massachusetts delegation included six people from the Counseling Center, Rev. Ronald Hardy from the United Christian Foundation, and Richard Story, Student Senate committee chairman.

In addition to Dr. Peterson's keynote address, the session involved a full day of small group workshop periods with like personnel discussing issues on their campuses, exchanging notes, and planning further regional research into areas of student activities and problems. Only three student senates were represented; but among their representatives there was an interesting exchange of feelings and problems. Student issues on the six state university campuses are quite similar, it developed, and appear at just about the same time throughout the region.

Dr. Peterson's discussion was based upon survey data resulting from a polling of deans of students about four years ago and then again during last school year. The general pattern of student protest activity to emerge from his data has remained uniform over-all, he found, with the same issues appearing in the earlier and recent poll.

He qualified the data with the caution that it was based upon the perceptions of deans on the 859 campuses. Nevertheless, the data were very good; and tended to confirm the intuitive feeling many held that more purely academic issues are coming more to the front in organised student protest.

The two issues attracting the greatest amount of student protest, in the over-all national picture, are dormitory and other living-group regulations, e.g., women's hours, which were an issue at 34% of campuses, and U.S. policies regarding Vietnam - an issue on 38% of campuses. Peterson's data were divided into five large classes of issues - three generally academic, and two concerned with student - administration and off-campus issues.

As groups, these areas of issue drew some measure of student protest activity this way nationally; issues relating to the quality of instruction drew fire at 9% of schools surveyed; the faculty were an issue at 9.3%; freedom of expression was an issue at 6.7%; student - administration relations and regulations were at issue on 19.4% of campuses; and off-campus issues were protested at 23.5% of the colleges and universities surveyed.

While the ranking of areas of protest issues may not change immediately, Dr. Peterson did add that the amount of activity regarding the first three areas - all academically related - has risen in the past several years. It was agreed that this is due to an increasing realisation by students everywhere that the most important issues now before them are coming to be those of education, teaching, and the curriculum.

By geographical regions, the issues of instruction and curriculum, faculty circumstances, student - administration relations, and off-campus issues were strongest in New England and the middle Atlantic states. The questions of free expression of ideas and beliefs were paramount in the North Central region of the country.

Considering the question of student protest in relation to the size of the institution surveyed, nearly all issues were felt more keenly on the large university campuses than elsewhere. On only 5 of 27

Cosmonaut Sends Televised Pictures

MOSCOW (AP)- - Cosmonaut Georgy Beregovoy sent televised pictures back to earth yesterday and maneuvered his Soyuz 3 spacecraft in a second approach to a pilotless Russian sister ship.

An official report said Beregovoy, at 47 the oldest of 33 humans to fly in space, was in good shape and "retaining a high capacity for work" in his second day in orbit.

Amid speculation that Beregovoy is to be joined by a third spacecraft with a multiple crew, official accounts related by Tass news agency avoided mention of the ultimate purpose of his mission.

Soyuz is Russian for union.

Tass quoted scientist Vassily Parin that Soyuz 3 has "more advanced life-support systems for prolonged flight" than previous Soviet craft. There were no more clues as to how long Beregovoy would stay up, but Western experts said more than three or four days was unlikely unless a multiship maneuver was in the offing.

On his first orbit Saturday, Beregovoy came close - how close was not reported - to the unmanned Soyuz 2, launched a day earlier. He was reported fulfilling his mission, but some believed he might have missed an intended linkup.

Tass said Soyuz 3 was circling the earth each 88.6 minutes at a maximum distance of 157 miles and a minimum of 112.

Beregovoy was scheduled for his second sleep period between 10:50 a.m. and 8:48 p.m. EST yesterday.

Education School To Hold Open Meeting Tonight

By DICK SLEEPER

The School of Education at the University is unique in that it offers opportunities to ANY undergraduate interested in his education. Tonight there will be a meeting open to all undergraduates on campus. It will begin a coordinated two-week effort to get students all over campus actively involved in the revolution at the school of Education by:

(1) Exploring in detail the opportunities for involvement.
(2) Informing the campus of these opportunities through a series of articles in the Collegian.

Here are some of the opportunities for students we would like to explore:

*There are twenty-eight committees presently operating in the School, such as HUMAN RELATIONS and AESTHETICS. These committees are open to ALL students. We need to get information about these committees. Students may be able to receive credit for serving on committees.

*All graduate courses in Education are open to under-graduates. This semester there was a slate of FORTY-SEVEN offerings ranging from STRENGTH TRAINING to THE NON TEACHER. We must discover what courses are going to be offered next semester so that we can sign up for them.

*Dean Allen has stated several times that any five students who get together and petition him for any course can have it. We must begin to explore ways of organizing students to take advantage of this offer.

*Degree programs in Education are wide open to suggestion. We must explore ways in which we can get involved in groups presently planning degree programs; and, perhaps more importantly, we must form student groups to propose some programs of our own.

It is possible, for example, for us to propose a program COMPLETELY WITHOUT REQUIREMENTS. It is possible that those of us presently in English, history, sociology, etc., can establish programs more relevant to us in Education. Next year we can switch into these new programs, still taking all the courses we want in our present major, but without the requirement restrictions now imposed on us.

Tonight's brief meeting will be at 6 P.M. IN ROOM 126 at the Education Building, and will help put you into contact with the people who can tell you exactly how you can become directly involved in all the different aspects of the expanding School of Education.

By SUSAN G. SHERMAN
Education Staff

(Ed. note: See Letter on Page 5).

It is within the realm of every undergraduate at UMass to live up to himself and take his responsibilities as a mature person living in the world of 1968. This is hardly the time to sit back and "Let George do it."

A committee of students who adamantly believe in student voices in making decisions relevant to their education, sometimes called "student power," met recently to discuss undergraduate participation in education. Their aim: to make traditional apathy of UMass undergraduates a thing of the past.

The School of Education, under the leadership of Dean Dwight Allen, is one school that has recognized the need for change and student involvement. In fact, it is hoped by the committee that the School of Education will provide inspiration for similar progressive action in other schools of the university.

The question asked by the Committee for Undergraduate Participation in Education is, "How do you get students to make a fuss?" The School of Education was used as a model.

Here students are involved in the actual planning policies by having membership on the Executive Council; there is also a need for ANY interested undergraduate in the university to join a faculty committee or to attend any faculty meeting. There exists at the school a virtual "open door" policy. Students are welcome at any time to come in to ask any general questions they might have, or just to walk around and get acquainted with the faculty.

COMMUNICATION is the key here. This is the sort of atmosphere that can make education meaningful for students. It is not limited to the School of Education though. There is no reason why other departments could not incorporate fresh ideas in place of their perhaps stale ones. But students must make their wishes known to their particular department.

The Committee for Undergraduate Participation in Education is going to try to communicate to the student body their potential power. It was decided that more information must be made available to students so as to avoid confusion as to what to do to make their voice heard. A questionnaire was suggested, which would ask for student evaluation of courses as well as suggestions for curriculum revisions. Another possibility is wider distribution of "Tabula Rasa," the twice weekly lively, witty, and often profound publication of the School of Education.

Few of Poverty Stricken Receive Aid Says Brooke

BOSTON (AP) - The United States has a pool of poverty in which millions are drowning, Sen. Edward Brooke of Massachusetts said last night.

Over 30 million Americans live in families with incomes below the poverty line, "yet only about 7.3 million are receiving support under the welfare programs to which the federal government contributes," he said.

Scarcely one poor person in four is receiving public assistance and "this finding throws a new light on the poverty problem," he said.

The nation must solve the enormous welfare-poverty problem, he said "if we are to keep our commitment to a just and progressive social order."

His remarks were made in a speech prepared for the annual meeting of the New England regional board meeting of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith.

"Even if we succeed in moving large numbers of able-bodied individuals off the welfare rolls and onto the payrolls, we will hardly have scratched the surface of the pool of poverty in which millions are drowning," he said.

The facts are grim on the possibility of removing any sizable number of welfare recipients onto payrolls, he added.

He called "staggering and sobering," the results of a study by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare to determine how many receiving assistance might be able to join the labor force.

"Of the millions of welfare, less than one per cent, 5, are men who give promise of being brought back into the work force," he said.

An additional 20,000 to 30,000 women might be employed if given job training and adequate care for their children, he added.

"If we are to make inroads on the blight of poverty," he said, "the larger task is to upgrade existing jobs and incomes for those now working at impossibly low wages.

"For the great majority of the poor, the 22 million not receiving welfare assistance, are in families whose members are working hard but not earning nearly enough."

"Perhaps the most valuable asset going for us in the struggle against poverty," he said, "is the surprising inner strength of many of the poor themselves."

"In a recent study sponsored by Sen. Winston Prouty of Vermont the sturdy hope and high expectations of the deprived come through dramatically.

"Comparing the attitudes of the residents of a middle-class New England town with those of a ghetto-dweller's in the nation's capital, the study revealed that both groups overwhelmingly felt individuals could get ahead in life if they worked hard enough."

"Is it conceivable, especially since so many of the impoverished are children, that some kind of family income supplement might be socially desirable and politically acceptable."

Placement and Financial Aid

There are presently many jobs available on campus for students under the College Work Study Program. Eligibility for the program is based on established financial need criteria. Any student interested in working on a part time basis should contact Mr. Seigrist in the Placement and Financial Aid office.

Detroit Symphony At Smith Tomorrow

NORTHAMPTON - The Detroit Symphony Orchestra will play in John M. Greene Hall, Smith College tomorrow at 8:15 p.m.

Critics have termed the orchestra "...one of the country's most admirable ensembles," and "...a continuous pleasure to listen to. Sixten Ehrling, who has been praised as an interpreter of 20th century music, will conduct.

The program will open with Beethoven's Overture to "Egmont" which was inspired by Goethe's tragedy. Next the orchestra will play Symphony No. 41, C Major, K. 551 ("Jupiter") by Mozart. This composition, Mozart's final symphony, is considered by many to represent the culmination of his symphonic development.

After the intermission the orchestra will play three modern pieces. The first will be "Alborada del Gracioso," by the French composer Ravel. It is one of five piano compositions, "Miroirs," which Ravel wrote in 1905 and later set for orchestra. The next number on the program will be "The Fountains of Rome" by the Italian composer, Respighi. Composed in 1916, it was inspired by the beauty of four of Rome's fountains.

The orchestra will conclude with Weinberger's "Under the Spreading Chestnut Tree: Variations and Fugue on an Old English Tune for Orchestra." Weinberger composed this work in New York in 1939 just after he had fled from Czechoslovakia.

Tickets for this second concert in the Smith College Concert Course may be purchased at the John M. Greene box office today and on the evening of the performance from 7:30.

Campus Construction To Continue

BY JILL WALLACH
Staff Reporter

Are you sick of detours, mud up to your knees, and the continuous drone of construction equipment? Have you motorists noticed a steady decrease of internal campus byways?

Well, much more of these discomfitures of an expanding university are forthcoming within the next couple of years, most of which will be primarily focused in the central area of the campus.

The spring of 1970 will see the replacement of Ellis Drive with the construction site of the Fine Arts Building-a seven building complex housing classrooms, labs, studios, and auditoriums for the School of Liberal Arts and Sciences. After three years of concerted effort by the Administration, the State Legislature finally granted the University the design money and; according to Mr. Littlefield, Planning Officer, Office of the Provost; the University is presently requesting construction money. Littlefield stated the projected cost of the center will be $13,800,000. The designer is Kevin Roche who designed both Orchard Hill and Southwest. In describing the layout of the building, Littlefield explained that "if one looks at it from the north, one sees seven separate buildings. A southern view though will give the impression of one building." The center itself, he further explained, would be "a series of horizontals, verticals, and 45 degree angles that would create a play on light.

The Fine Arts Center will contain 60 faculty offices, 17-20 classrooms and 75-80 studios for music and art, with facilities for choral, band, orchestra, or drama. The four auditoriums (Concert Hall, Studio Theatre, Recital Hall and Theatre for Drama) will seat 200-2200 people. Connecting the various wings of the center will be an art gallery-lobby which will be situated between the Concert Hall and one of the smaller theatres.

Theatre Tryouts To Be Held

The University of Massachusetts Theatre has announced that tryouts for its second production of this school year will be held this week. All students, whether experienced or not in the theatre, are encouraged to read for a part in THE CHANGELING.

THE CHANGELING is an Elizabethan drama by Thomas Middleton and William Rowley. Director Gary Stewart sees the play as a taut, penetrating, and subtle psychological study of two principal characters and their relationship with each other and society. Beatrice, in the view of critic Samuel Schoenbaum, is a pampered, irresponsible child with adolescent notions of love and life. "She is too ingenius to know the pathology of a man like DeFiores, too amoral to know that murder is a nasty business, too immature to realize that acts have consequences." Of DeFiores, Schoenbaum says, "Governed by a morbid, overmastering passion, DeFiores is clearly a pathological type, a study in abnormal sexuality."

Readings for these roles, six secondary characters, and numerous servants, courtiers, and hangers-on will be held in 119 Bartlett. Readings will be conducted on Monday, October 28, from 7:30 to 9:30; Tuesday, October 29, from 5:30 to 7:00; and Wednesday, October 30, from 7:30 to 9:30.

Experimental School Opens In Springfield

A new type of school has been created in the Springfield area, states Mary Lamb, the only instructor at the recently opened Community Day School in Forest Park.

A graduate of Cedar Crest College, she left her teaching position in the Springfield School System to become "the faculty" of the private, elementary school in September.

The Day School was developed, Miss Lamb explained, by several parents who were dissatisfied with the current methods of public school education.

They studied the results of experiments in British education and conferred with George Gaby, a social worker at Springfield's Child Study Home. Then they established the Day School, which soon received national accreditation. Gaby is now the president of the school, which has enrolled 13 pupils.

The British experiments were concerned with current trends in progressive and liberal education, the type of learning that is child-centered rather than subject-matter centered. The emphasis is on facts and skills learned in the process of examining projects and themes of interest to the pupils, Miss Lamb explained.

Ranging in age from five to eleven, each pupil pays a yearly tuition of $700. Their classroom is non-graded and their curriculum is based mostly on what they themselves want to study.

"The program is child-centered in that we focus on the child's interests," Miss Lamb continued. The children are given choices as to what they'd like to do on a given day. The different age groups engage in varied projects as the instructor circulates about the classroom.

Miss Lamb explained that, in her new position, neither she nor the students are tied up with administrative procedures and regulations. The students are not bound by "folded hands on the desks" and "no whispering" rules. She is not bound by "endless" administrative forms and chores that hinder the teaching process.

"We are trying to emphasize the discoverer and creator roles in the children. We give them the time and encouragement to see things for themselves, to learn from interesting activities that they themselves have taken part in, rather than from textbooks and enforced "three r's lessons."

Encouraged to take an active part in their own education, the students are engaged in projects which, through practical experience, Miss Lamb says, will eventually lead to the concrete facts and skills taught in most schools.

Evidence that the students are happy with a program that permits them to "live and learn" at the same time, is the little need for discipline.

"Because the school is in an experimental stage," Miss Lamb explained, "we try to keep abreast of all developments in the progressive and liberal educational fields

Coffeehouse Planned For Student Union

On Saturday, November 16, the new part of the Hatch will be transformed into a coffeehouse. The Student Union Program Council and the Class of '70 have made some great plans and everything is ready for the opening.

That is, everything except the name. Because the coffeehouse will serve the University community, the students should be able to choose the name. Suggestions for the "Name the Coffeehouse" contest may be left in a box in the Student Union lobby starting Monday. The winning entry will receive a prize.

The idea for the coffeehouse originated from a desire to alleviate the boredom of "off" weekends. So, the coffeehouse will provide an inexpensive place to take a date or just to be with friends.

No Votes For Eisenhower At Own Amherst College

WASHINGTON - The grandson of former President Dwight D. Eisenhower, national chairman of Youth for Nixon-Agnew, doesn't think he has been too successful on his own Amherst College Campus.

The Washington Post quoted David Eisenhower, an Amherst junior and the fiance of Republican nominee Richard M. Nixon's daughter Julie, as saying "I don't think I've won a vote on this campus yet."

The dispatch says, "to some students, he's a symbol-not just of his prospective father-in-law-but of everything they don't like about The Establishment."

"In a way, I feel sympathy for him," Robert Browa, Student Council president, said, "but after all, he asked to be a symbol."

Another student leader, David Michelmore, editor of the Amherst Student, said, "My complaint about David Eisenhower is that he believes everything he's heard since he was little. He has a snipe disdain for Amherst liberalism and he calls even the most wishy-washy liberals, radicals."

"Some here take it for granted that he will be president of the United States in 20 or 30 years," the story says, quoting Prof. William C. Taubman, one of his teachers, as saying, "It's not a question of if, it's a matter of when."

But Eisenhower, while described as fascinated by "the mechanics of a campaign," says "Politics is not something I feel particularly at home, doing."

"If the country ever makes a demand of me, which I doubt it will, I might," he continues, adding: "I'm never going to seek it out."

He plans to attend law school and then, according to the Post, be a "trouble-shooter for a big corporation--or maybe a trial lawyer in a small town."

Guard To Meet Tonight

After a series of closed meetings of its executive board, the New Guard has scheduled its first public meeting for tonight, Monday, October 28, beginning at 7:30 p.m. in the Norfolk room of the Student Union.

The New Guard, campus conservatives who have yet to be formally ratified by the student senate as an organization, are sponsoring a Wallace rally tomorrow. President Arthur Levesque says that sponsorship of the rally, "endorses free speech, not candidate Wallace." The New Guard has members from this year's three political parties.

Plans that will be discussed tonight will include a New Guard magazine, already layed out and waiting on advertisers, and counterdemonstration of the S.D.S. anti-ROTC "mock war games".

According to Levesque, New Guard had twenty dues-paying members in its three-month existence last academic year. He anticipates formation of a forty-member club this year, not including persons who may join a committee of New Guard rather than the club itself.

UMass Trio Gives Concert

BY GALE SAKARIS
Fine Arts Staff

The UMass Trio gave its first concert last Wed. at Bowker Auditorium. The Trio is composed of three faculty members from the UMass Music Department; Estella Kersenbaum Olevsky, piano; Julian Olevsky, violin and Joel Krosnick, cello.

The concert program consisted of a duo for violin and cello by Martini, a trio by Ravel and finally the Mendelsohn trio. The performers showed great sensitivity to each other during the performance thus forming an excellent trio. Even though each member of the trio is a fine soloist, each one was able to respond to the other, a mark of truly great musicianship.

The Martini was very well played. The lines were very clear and the rapid scale passages which are played in unison were impeccable.

The Ravel is a very lush Post-Romantic work and is extremely difficult, especially for the piano. Mrs. Olevsky did a lovely job with the piano part. Her tone on the instrument was beautiful and very suitable to the mood of the piece.

Olevsky's violin playing was excellent. His tone is very full yet light and singing. Mr. Krosnik is one of the finest cellists in the field. His playing has a full rich and mellow sound.

Although Krosnik was somewhat overpowered at times during the Ravel, he and the other two members of the trio had no problems in maintaining balance during the Mendelsohn.

The concert was very well received by the audience

Eliminate The Death Penalty

American voters have long been noted for their apathy when it comes to voting. Rarely does a candidate win the vote of the majority of the voters. It's usually just a majority of those who bothered to vote. With a wide-spread dissatisfaction as to the major presidential candidates, election year 1968 is in line to set an all-time record for voters staying away from the polls.

The voters of Massachusetts, however, are being presented with an issue as important as the presidential election. That is, the abolition of capital punishment. Though the law is still on the books, it hasn't been resorted to in over twenty years. There may have been a time when there was a need for something of the scope of capital punishment. However, today we realize that crime is the result of social and mental imbalances and that the criminal can be treated, rehabilitated. The sooner we eliminate capital punishment from our penal system, the sooner that the whole system can be orientated towards rehabilitation, and the better off Massachusetts will be.

The Collegian is presenting a series on the death penalty and its effectiveness, or lack of effectiveness. Read it, and then try to justify the death penalty.

Those of you who can vote, go to the polls on November 5th and vote in favor of proposition number six. In the words of one of the presidential candidates, "Vote like your life depended on it." It might some day.

Dissension in the Ranks

This past Tuesday morning on the ROTC field, a group of students under the auspices of the UMass chapter of the Students For a Democratic Society held a mock drill, simultaneous with that of the ROTC cadets.

Most of the students on campus are not aware of the fact that although the demonstration was ostensibly directed at ROTC and, perhaps it may have seemed, at the individuals themselves, it was not the intention of the members of SDS to express their personal feelings of dislike towards, or disapproval of people whose political views do not happen to coincide with their own. Rather, it was their intention to make known their views on the war, and on the military-industrial complex, whose campus representative happens to be ROTC. In other words, ROTC is a much closer form of reference than Washington for an anti-war demonstration.

The members of SDS were taking advantage of their right of dissent, which is included in the freedom of speech possessed by each person in this country. The greatest enemy of this freedom, and all freedom, is fear. Fear of change can cause irrational violence. A prime example being the three ROTC proteges who rushed down the hill and attacked the demonstrators, some of whom were girls.

To all those who contentedly support the status quo, one need only point out the American Revolution and ask where would we be now if it had not been for some of our more active forefathers, and their dissent leading to protest and finally revolution.

Peace, Politics and Music

"A New Look at Politics" was the theme of the halftime show put on by the UMass Marching Band at the game Saturday. Besides providing us with a new look at our confused 1968 elections, it also gave the Band a new look.

For the first time the Band, under the direction of John Jenkins, combined social commentary with its musical talent to provide a show as thought-provoking as it was entertaining. The warm response from the stands indicated the fans' approval.

It was a great performance worthy of an intelligent audience, and, we hope, the first of many.

"Then After Humphrey Gets Clobbered, We'll Pick Up The Pieces"

Inside Report:

NIXON'S THIN COATTAILS

BY ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

CHICAGO--On Chicago's lily-white Northwest Side, where racial tension runs high, there is evidence that Richard M. Nixon's coat tails may prove to the thin indeed.

Interviews we conducted among middle-income white workers there, assisted by the Oliver Quayle polling organization, revealed a tide of landslide proportions for Nixon. But the district's Democratic Congressman, Rep. Roman Pucinski, showed no damage suffered because of Democratic defections to either Nixon or George Wallace.

The implications of this case study are applicable elsewhere and cloud Republican prospects for capturing the House in Washington. Republicans simply must topple incumbent Democratic Congressmen in backlash districts such as this to collect the 31 seats needed for control.

Anna May Gibson, an experienced poll interviewer in Chicago, helped us select a sample of 50 voters, mostly industrial workers or lower-income white-collar workers, heavily Democratic in past voting performance (26 Democrats, 16 Republicans, 8 independents). In 1964 73 percent of our sample voted for Lyndon Johnson against Barry Goldwater.

But in 1968, these voters--small-home owners apprehensive over any decline in property values--are terrified by northward encroachment by Chicago's Negro masses. Only 6 of the 50 say the country should be doing more for the Negroes (contrasted with a national average of 40 percent). The tone was set by a machinist who told us: "Now, the colored are running the country."

Hubert H. Humphrey, invariably described as "to wishy-washy" to restore civic order, is the political victim of this mood. Nor is Wallace taking advantage of severe Negrophobia. One woman told us she has considered voting for Wallace but decided against it when her daughter "convinced me he might be another Hitler." Other potential Wallaceites were frightened away because "Wallace talks like a radical" or Gen. Curtis LeMay, his running-mate, "is a crazy man."

The beneficiary, then, is Nixon. In just four years, our sample has switched dramatically from Democratic to Republican: 29 for Nixon, 10 for Humphrey, a surprisingly small 7 for Wallace, 4 undecided.

Nor is there any sign of a Humphrey upturn. Rather, a factory worker who blames the Democrats for wanting "to take over the country" and a retired printer who says, "The Democrats give the Niggers too much" told us they were sticking with Humphrey for reasons of party loyalty but might yet shift.

Furthermore, there is a trend in our sample "for other Republican candidates: Sen. Everett M. Dirksen, running for reelection (80 percent), and Richard Ogilvie, running for Governor (67 percent)."

It would seem, then, that here is an ideal Republican opportunity for a Congressional seat. Alderman John Hoellen, a tireless practitioner of backlash politics who nearly beat Pucinski in 1966, is running again in a supercharged racial atmosphere suited to him.

Yet, our sample showed Pucinski bucking the Republican tide and improving on his 1966 victory: 35 for Pucinski, 13 for Hoellen, 2 undecided. Even more important, nine of the ten usual Democrats switching to Nixon are sticking with Pucinski (while two usual Republican voters are changing from Hoellen to Pucinski).

Most striking is the loyalty to Pucinski by the seven Wallace supporters, all of them Democrats who backed President Johnson in 1964. Contrary to Republican wishful thinking that the Democratic Wallaceites would desert their party on the rest of the ticket, six of the seven favor Pucinski.

Pucinski's strength is no mystery. "I have to hand it to Pucinski," said a Republican insurance salesman, who is switching from Hoellen. "He puts the colored element in its place." Once a liberal, 10-year Congressman Pucinski has outdone Hoellen in playing the backlash with severe attacks on busing of schoolchildren.

The singleminded obsession with race on Chicago's Northwest Side is undoubtedly more intense than elsewhere, and Pucinski's apparent route to victory may not be universally appropriate. Nevertheless, the limited magnetism of Nixon's coattails and the lack of impact by Wallace on the rest of the ticket must give pause to Republican politicans who have expected to ride Humphrey's misfortunes to power on Capitol Hill.

Co-ed Governing

Southwest is attempting a new experience in dormitory living. The upperclass residents of Moore and Pierpont have formed a co-ed house government.

This joint venture is an appropriate extension of the philosophy behind the new open-house policies. The philosophy recognizes the necessity and desirability for males and females to socialize as mature individuals.

Perhaps, one advantage of this government shall be what seems at first a disadvantage—the adaption each side will have to make. Male residents are generally more liberal than their female counterparts. The upperclass residents of Moore and Pierpont shall now have the opportunity to rationally and realistically realize their differences and resolve them to their mutual satisfaction.

This government, also, will be able to accomodate a more diverse field of interests. A student who has interests in a field of limited popularity to his or her own sex will be able to unite with members of the opposite sex who share these interests. The needs and desires of all residents will be better served by this union.

It is hoped that the Student Senate will see the merits of this new concept in self-government and ratify the constitution of Moore-Pierpont. It is also desirable that other dormitories investigate the possibility of adopting the idea of co-ed governments and thus becoming able to better serve their residents.

Mindless Machine

"All good children are poor unfortunate victims of systems beyond their control. A plague upon your ignorance that is the grave despair of your ugly life; of lies that you believe; that keeps the young from the truth they deserve." And so it goes, the mendacity oozing out of every crack on this campus - white, black, purple, orange, green. The useless chat over a SU cup of coffee, the next sexual conquest, the unbelieveable urge to belong. Insecurity of the mind that creates the social authority that prevails. This campus is a mindless machine.

Absurd statements are the products of this mindless machine. Independent black power advocates that concern themselves with, of all things, welfare. White liberals who are very confident in their liberal statements fully knowing they can, for the most part, hide that they are either Jew, Polack, Wop, etc. it seems that only presidential candidates are either prejudiced or racist. We have phony ROTC that prepares no one adequately or a military career. Those that dispute this fight a well established consensus of opinion in and out of the military establishment. Even more ridiculous is the SDS protesting against the military because they readily admit that they did not accomplish much, if anything, while "ghetto" children fall further behind in educational standards. A reply is that we protest for peace, but where in this world is there peace, or a country that does not have an army, navy or air force?

What it amounts to is that sickening toleration of evil. This also includes blaming all the world's evils on Satan and his likes, while asking some diefied image to solve our problems. Ignorance and misunderstanding are the causes of the world's problems, and this campus is truly a citadel for both.

The Circus

To The Editor:

Come one, come all, to the new and louder-than-ever SDA circus. See overgrown children masquerading as responsible adults. Watch them make fools of themselves with their toy rifles and wastepaper basket drums. Gaze in wonder as they shout, jeer, and otherwise harass the ROTC drill team. Marvel at their constructive attempts to achieve a more democratic society (THEIR democratic society). Watch in amazement as they disrupt, antagonize, and generally ignore the rights of every group and person they meet. (Spectators are warned not to get too close.) Admission to the circus is free and everyone is invited to attend - that is, unless you have something better to do with your time.

questions were large universities below the pooled mean of responses; and these were those issues on which universities long ago won the battles, such as for the free appearance of speakers, dress regulations, food service, and so forth.

Large universities were consistently far ahead of the means, in terms of the amount of organized protest, on questions of off-campus issues and racial discrimination. Private universities were ahead of public universities on nearly every measure on which universities were high.

Revision of Department

ATTENTION-all undergraduates:

Dwight Allen, Dean of the Education Department, said recently, in regard to ongoing revision of the department,

"We're here because we want to create a fuss. Unless you want to also, you might better not be here."

The "king" and his "court" (faculty members) are busily working on planning committees that range from URBAN EDUCATION to THEATER 2000. Sounds neat, doesn't it? But what about us, the objects of this fuss? Shouldn't we also have a say in next semester's curriculum?

At a recent meeting of the executive faculty committee, I questioned the members about Dean Allen's promise that the Education Department would establish a course for "any" five students interested in a subject. It seems that he made this statement because "he doesn't believe students will accept the challenge!"

One group of students already expressed a desire to study emotionally disturbed children at the beginning of the semester. They were promptly provided with a specialist in the area and are presently taking the course.

I propose we "give Dean Allen an ulcer". If all the rest of us express a desire to study subjects of our own interest, we could create a nice little "fuss". Dean Allen would approve . . . . maybe.

What about seminars at the Pub? Turning the whole department into a pass-fail system? Student-run discussions? No methods courses for education majors and minors? "Here-now, me-you" courses instead of tests, books? Credit for tutoring?

We must act now if we want our ideas acted upon by the faculty planning committees. Let's create a fuss!

Sincerely,
Sally Dolgin

Lowenstein, founder and Co-Chairman of the Conference of Concerned Democrats, the organization which launched the national "Dump-Johnson" movement, is running as a Liberal-Democrat in a district which is sixty per cent Conservative-Republican.

The views of Lowenstein's opponent Mason Hampton (a Conservative who has unfortunately received the solid endorsement of the local Republican party machine) are incredibly right-wing. Hampton's platform urges "full support for all measures necessary to bring the struggle with Communism in Vietnam to a rapid and victorious conclusion, through major military offensive action." Hampton has called for the elimination of the present Cuban government "by whatever means prove necessary." Hampton also urges annulment of the nuclear test-ban treaty, favors resumption of nuclear testing, opposes diplomatic recognition of Red China and its admission to the United Nations, opposes Federal gun-control, and supports reduction of Federal educational expenditures and curtailment of welfare programs.

Yet Hampton has an uncomfortably good chance of winning the campaign, since Lowenstein, due to his unwillingness to support Hubert Humphrey's candidacy for the Presidency, has not gained the backing of the Fifth District's Democratic machine. Lowenstein must depend heavily on personal contact with the voters through the efforts of door-to-door canvassers. It is in this capacity that students can provide invaluable help.

Only two weekends remain before Election Day. Cars will be leaving the Student Union during this Friday afternoon (and next Friday as well) for Lowenstein's campaign headquarters in Rockville Centre, Long Island. Free food and lodging will be provided for those who wish to campaign through Saturday and Sunday. S.D.S. Laugh-In

To the Editor:

I, as a member of ROTC, would like to thank the SDS for the marvelous Laugh-In they put on for our entertainment on Tuesday. I really found it enjoyable and discovered that it boosted our morale, while marching, about 100%. Since I found it so enjoyable and so obviously funny, I would like to ask the members of the SDS (all thirty of them) if they plan to make this a weekly affair. If so, I trust the acts will be more varied. Comedy is great, but a trained seal or an elephant act occasionally would serve to add a little variety. I would like to suggest that, in the future, the SDS carry signs indicating credits, that is, indicate who is responsible for each act and, perhaps, eager on-lookers could offer applause or boos, as the situation warrants. It is refreshing to see that the SDS is pulling for nobler goals rather than investigating what comes out of a wine bottle (perhaps the SDS did not know they had a double standard in grapes?). At any rate, I was pleased to note that the SDS was taking notice of the ROTC, the campus "killers". ROTC has gone unnoticed by this group for too long, while they perused the grape and what comes of it, as well as other "noble" programs. Perhaps the SDS feels left out because ROTC will not accept unkept, long-haired freedom-fighters (all thirty of them). If this is the case, I would like to invite the SDS to form an auxiliary battalion called the Massachusetts Volunteers. With enough interest, this could become an auxiliary group of the ROTC, one of the select group of fighters known as "irregulars". If the SDS is interested, I will be only too happy to help them, with drilling, especially. As evidenced Tuesday, the desire is there (see picture on front page of Wednesday's Collegian), but the talent is sadly lacking. However, with a little training, who knows what could be achieved? After all, they came out Tuesday of their own volition. Can we deny them their chance for normalcy? As for the three who mistakenly interfered with the show, we are sure that the SDS with its noble, non-violent, loving, humanitarian motives of giving a damn about their fellow man, cannot do less than refuse to press charges against these poor souls and forgive them for their misguided action. They acted for what they thought was right, which is the SDS byword, so can the SDS do less than treat them like brothers.

Homecoming 1968 Highlights

Janis Joplin performs vocal feats of strength with a voice "raw and tortured".
(MDC Photo by Ara Dedeician)

BY RON LABRECQUE
Senior Reporter

With a voice LIFE called "raw and tortured" Janis Joplin got a lot of people jumping in the cage Friday night, some with excitement at hearing her in person, others from reverberation from the amplifiers.

Miss Joplin's talent can not be denied. What she does with her voice is no less than incredible. The fact remains however, that despite her vocal feats of strength Big Brother and the Holding Company were not enjoyable. The need for high amplification can be appreciated. The Yardbirds were probably the loudest group to appear in the Cage, but at the same time the high amplification enhanced the music in their show here last spring.

Big Brother and the Holding Company offered a sound which tended to be overpoweringly grating in a set that memory records as only three numbers; "Piece of My Heart", "Down on Me", and a very long one in the middle.

The group opened with "Piece of My Heart" which Janis belted out with a feeling and gusto that few entertainers can produce. The set gradually melted into a series of songs which became almost boring in their similarity of style, only the encore of "Down on Me" worthy of the acclaim the group was receiving.

Janis will be leaving the group in December to make it on her own and it was an understatement when one of the group said that her leaving would have an effect on Big Brother and the Holding Company. Janis brought that group out of obscurity and when she leaves they will no doubt return.

The Rascal's return appearance to the Cage Saturday night was as successful as their engagement here two years ago. Their only change is improvement.

Eddie Brigati, lead singer, has cut out practically all of his joking and has matured in stage personality to a polished professional point.

Drummer Dino Danelli, a great jazz drummer prior to his joining with the Rascals, does so well with his part of the show that he seems bored by merely doing some fantastic drumming and livens things up with some tricky juggling of his drumsticks between beats.

Now bearded Felix Cavaliere on the organ and Gene Cornish on guitar round out the group which presented a well balanced set composed of the Rascals' "New York rock sound".

Hugh Masekela, songwriter for Harry Belefonte and Miriam Makeba while studying music at the Manhatten School of Music, demonstrated the "complete synthesis of African and American music surfaced into the unique Maskela style".

His numbers included a combination of a centuries old tribal song of his native South Africa combined within a framework of modern jazz.

The lively trumpet player, appearing at the Cage while out on bail from the Malibu jail because he "arrested the police when they were searching my house last week" and who described himself as an "emaciated Coppertoned Al Hirt" brought a refreshing complement to the rock trend of the two evening concerts.

Boston Pops Finale

BY CLIF BANNER
Fine Arts Reporter

Homecoming weekend was concluded by the Boston Pops concert in Curry Hicks Cage yesterday afternoon. Harry Ellis Dickson conducted the performance by sixty-five members of the larger Boston Pops Orchestra. Included in the ensemble was at least one student from the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston. Most people who attended were expecting to see the entire orchestra perform rather than just part of the group.

The slight disappointment resulting from the incomplete group was soon erased, however, after the first strain of the opening number, NATIONAL EMBLEM MARCH by Bagley. This was quickly followed by the OVERTURE TO "ORPHEUS IN HADES" by Offenbach, which includes the famous Can-Can melodies. Percy Aldridge Grainger's LONDONDERRY AIR was the next selection with the strings predominant throughout. After moderate applause, the Pops finished the first segment of the concert with the very famous 1812, OUVERTURE SOLENNELLE by P. I. Tchaikovsky.

The finest performance of the group came during the second part of the concert as Dickson conducted the SUITE FROM "THE WATER MUSIC" (Handel-Harty) consisting of three parts: Allegro-Air Allegro deciso. The Air, was played particularly well. TALES FROM THE VIENNA WOODS, several Strauss waltzes, was perhaps the least exciting piece, as it dragged on for such a long time. The next two pieces were selections from "Fiddler on the Roof" and "Hello, Dolly!"

One of the famous Pop's numbers was played as the concluding number, although the group was to play six additional pieces as encores. POPS ROUND-UP, a selection composed of many of the themes of TV westerns.

Springfield Builders Honor UMass Students

Awards of $500 each were made recently by the Home Builders Association of Greater Springfield to James H. Bakos and John L. Gajewski, both students at the UMass School of Engineering. Presentation of the checks was made by Norman B. Keddy, president of the Association, before an audience of 250 at the Twin Hills Country Club in Longmeadow on the occasion of Bankers Night, an annual Association event which this year was attended by scores of the leading bankers in this area.

In presenting the awards, Mr. Keddy underlined the need of attracting young men with advanced educational backgrounds to the home building field and expressed the hope that the recipients would find the industry one worthy of challenging their active interest.

The awards were a feature of the Bankers Night dinner program at which the principal speaker was Howard D. Crosse, vice chairman of the board of the Franklin National Bank of New York. His theme was "Every Man His Own Economist." Norman R. Vester, president of the Security National Bank of Springfield, was master of ceremonies. Seated at the head table were the presidents and executive officers of the 20 bank members of the Home Builders organization.

Chem. Prof. Gains Grant

A study which could lead to a better understanding of the ageing of plastics and fibers and possibly to a new method of custom-making polymers will be undertaken by Dr. Robert W. Lenz, associate professor of chemical engineering.

In reasearch supported by a $46,000 grant from the National Science Foundation, Dr. Lenz will lead a team exploring the reactions of polymers that undergo gradual changes in structure and properties on storage for extended periods of time.

"The alteration of mechanical properties with time is an important problem in the practical use of polymers. The means by which the change occurred is considered to be of fundamental significance for the understanding of structure-property relations of polymers," Dr. Lenz said.

These original observations were made by Dr. Lenz before joining the University two years ago

An Interview with Dr. Hunt

SHARING AIDS LEARNING

Living together can be a better way to learning together, according to early judgments from the Southwest program.

Dr. John A. Hunt, master of the Southwest Residential Complex, said last week that although the Southwest teaching program is still in its early stages, the future movement will be toward development of a special class orientation to extend "contact outside the formal academic experience."

Over the past two years, the number of classes taught in Southwest has increased from 40 to 100 sections. According to Dr. Hunt, the classes all held in dormitory lounges provide an informal teaching atmosphere while solving the University's problem of limited classroom space. These classes, mainly required English courses and history and sociology discussion groups, do not differ from the classes in other areas of the campus.

The next step in Southwest's slow but steady development of a more extensive teaching program is now being tested in Project 10. Dr. Hunt emphasized the importance of special scheduling. Hunt said it is actually "a matter of physical registration instead of computer registration". As a result, the 268 freshmen in project 10 attend three-fifths of their classes together in Southwest and are instructed by residing faculty. This living-academic experience is expected to continue after the formal class is concluded and, Dr. Hunt explained, the situation is "meant to be challenging and uncomfortable" for those involved.

An even more challenging program could be carried out in the residential living environment but, Dr. Hunt suggested two factors should be considered: the development of instructional faculty seminars devoted to the teaching methods and goals of Southwest and the extent to which students should teach one another.

JOHNSON CAMPAINGS FOR DEMOCRATIC TICKET

WASHINGTON AP - President Johnson put in a busy weekend of campaigning for the Democratic ticket, accusing Richard M. Nixon of making "ugly and unfair charges" and promising to do "anything I can" to get Hubert H. Humphrey elected.

He hit hard at Nixon, the Republican presidential candidate, in speeches in West Virginia and Kentucky Saturday; in a nationwide radio address Sunday night, and in an address made during an unannounced New York City visit Sunday afternoon.

He told his New York audience he hoped it would do what he is going to do "everything I can to see that Hubert H. Humphrey and Ed Muskie are elected on the night of Nov. 5." Johnson spoke to a luncheon sponsored by the Democratic National Committee's All-Americans Council.

The President accused Nixon of making the "ugly and unfair charges" about "our attempts to win peace in the world." He said members of his administration were working very hard for peace, but added, "I just can't make news until there is news."

Johnson repeatedly characterized Nixon as a "man from the past" and accused him of distorting the history of the last Republican administration.

The President told the New York audience that the GOP presidential nominee was "a veteran of the time when America's problems were deferred and her needs were ignored." He said the difference between the two major parties was that "Democrats face problems, Republicans defer problems."

Johnson made similar charges in his radio address. He said Nixon was "a man who distorts the history of the time when he was in office." The last Republican administration, the President said, saw the loss of Cuba to communism, deterioration in Vietnam and the collapse of a summit conference over the U2 controversy.

"Today Nixon can make whatever promises he wants to about the future, but I don't believe you, the American people, should let him rewrite the history of the past," said Johnson.

In both speeches Sunday, Johnson also criticized third party presidential candidate George C. Wallace.

He said Wallace's solutions to the nation's problems are pretty simple. For example, he said, "You line up a few thousand troops on the sidewalks of the city to preserve order."

He also said Wallace's "fame until now, rested on his ability to stand in college doorways defying the law."

Johnson praised Humphrey as the man best qualified to be president.

He said at the New York luncheon that Humphrey "is a man who began fighting for human rights before others began to pay even rhetorical tributes to freedom."

The All-Americans Council is seeking to line up support for Humphrey from ethnic and nationality groups.

King Council Helps Plan Jazz-In

The Riverview Youth Association is holding a "Jazz-In" to raise money for recreational equipment for their community. It will be held on Nov. 1 and 2, 8:30 P.M. at 103 Division Street, Riverview, Springfield.

The Martin Luther King Jr. Social Action Council is working in conjunction with the Riverview Youth Association in this project. Talent is needed. If you have a jazz combo or a soul group and would like to play call MLK at 52661.

It is open to the public and needs your support. General admission will be $1.50.

Councilor Charges Plumbing Violations

BOSTON- A member of the Governor's Council has charged that certain statutes of the state's plumbing code are being violated in construction now underway on the U. Mass. campus.

Councilor Walter F. Kelly (D-Worcester) said that new buildings are being linked into an already heavily-used sewerage system without the proper inspection and supervision. In Wednesday's meeting of the Council Kelly offered a motion asking Governor Volpe to order that plumbing inspection procedures be followed, at least until a ruling is obtained on the situation.

The University of Massachusetts Building Authority could have its power of autonomy extended by legislation to include exemption from state plumbing statutes. The Massachusetts Port Authority and the Massachusetts Turnpike Authority have similar powers of autonomy and are not subject to inspection by the State Health and Public Safety Departments.

An opinion on the necessity of following the strict code in now being sought from the office of the Attorney General. In the past the Attorney General has ruled that the port and turnpike authorities are bound only by principles of good practice.

Morris Goldings, cousel for the Building Authority, asserted that construction practices involved no threat of danger or inadequate construction. Strict adherence to the plumbing code, if forced by the legislature, would raise construction cost considerably, Goldings said.

Violence Mars London Demonstration

LONDON (AP) - A sea of yelling demonstrators swept through central London with Viet Cong flags yesterday in a huge anti-American demonstration that erupted in violence around the U.S. Embassy.

The Embassy, in Grosvenor Square, was besieged by thousands of protest marchers, many of them Mao-style Communists, hurling firecrackers and smoke bombs against solid cordons of police. The Maoists broke away from the main body of a long-heralded Vietnam protest rally which drew about 25 demonstrators into the capital-about half the number the organizers expected.

Demonstrators burned an American flag, chanted, "Ho, Ho, Ho Chi Minh," and set fire to a pile of boxes in the street near the embassy. Missiles shattered windows of the American Automobile Association building and other structures around the square.

In the general climate of disorder police reported an explosion badly damaged the John F. Kennedy memorial at Runnymede. The memorial, within sight of Windsor Castle, was unveiled by Queen Elizabeth II in May, 1965 in the presence of Mrs. Kennedy.

The Belgian war memorial in Victoria Embankment Gardens was smeared with red paint and daubed with slogans such as: "Anarchy is order."

Outside Australia House, at the start of the Strand, one group of marchers symbolically burned an Australian flag. Pamphlets distributed by an organization calling itself "Australians and New Zealanders against the Vietnam war," had urged the demonstration there.

At the Cenotaph war memorial in Whitehall, some demonstrators kicked wreaths placed there in memory of "victims of Community tyranny."

Most of the London demonstrators marched cheerfully and peacefully through downtown areas in a mile-long parade, l abreast to a rally in Hyde Park. Many of them-a third by some estimates-were hippie girls in slacks and sweaters.

But the Maoists, along with anarchists and other extremists, defied the organizers and swarmed into Grosvenor Square looking for trouble.

Showers of missiles, ranging from stones to bags of flour, fell on hard-pressed police defending the embassy from the shoving, shouting mob. Inside, 11 U.S. Marines stood guard.

By early evening police reported 24 arrests, mostly of persons charged with carrying offensive weapons such as knives, paint sprays and weighted chains.

Five policemen were reported injured.

At the London School of Economics, which students have taken over as a sanctuary and medical aid center, about 4 injured demonstrators were brought in by student-driven ambulances from Grosvenor Square.

Police, under Scotland Yard orders to treat the demonstrators as gently as possible, developed an effective technique for blocking them from the embassy, which they attacked as "the lair of the capitalist aggressors."

Standing at times 5 feet deep, the bobbies let the demonstrators surge forward and almost absorbed them in a mass of blue uniforms. Then, as the big shove petered out, the police pushed them back firmly into line.

Plan Draft Counselling

As part of the Monday night counselling program in Coolidge Tower Lobby, Southwest Residential College is now offering draft counselling.

The program is sponsored jointly by the Master's Office of Southwest and the Valley Peace Center in Amherst. While trained draft counsellors are in two offices in the lobby, a group discussion takes place on the fifth floor lounge. "This way," said Mr. Ray Werbe of the Peace Center, "provides intensive counselling one on one to those who want it and have specific questions, and general discussion for others."

Tonight, the program will be highlighted by the showing of the filmstrip, "Remember Vietnam." This is a short expose of the war in Vietnam put together by Don Luce, former director of the AID in Vietnam.

All students, especially girls who might have questions about the military status of fathers, boyfriends or fiancees may attend. The counselling and group discussion will be held in Coolidge Lobby and fifth floor lounge from 6:30-8 p.m.

Smith Girl Finds Meaning Working for Lowenstein

"Working for a political candidate is a real chance to do something worthwhile and to make a contribution to the future," according to Smith College junior Emily Kaufman.

She was speaking of a recent phenomona of the political scene--student campaign workers. They were attracted by the candicacies of Senators Robert Kennedy and Eugene McCarthy. College students imbued with idealism and tireless energy, these amateur politicos were much in evidence during recent primary campaigns ringing doorbells, answering phones and pasting envelopes. Emily Kaufman is typical of the collebe students who joined the political campaigns.

When she found that she "had a great deal of time with nothing to do, last summer I became aware of the Lowenstein campaign (Allard Lowenstein, a leading Mc Carthy Democrat, is running for Congress on Long Island). It involved someone from my area who was against the war in Vietnam. He was able to galvanize college students to action because he represented a local version of the Mc Carthy campaign.

So she entered the hectic world of the campaign headquarters.

Every week we did something different, sometimes typing or licking envelopes or answering phones. It was a good feeling to be actually doing something rather than standing on the sidelines watching."

When the summer ended, Miss Kaufman returned to Northampton as area recruitment coordinator for the Lowenstein campaign.

"Everything has been reduced to constant phoning, arranging rides and letting my studies go. It feels as if the world is falling on me, it's so hectic. But if a steady stream of volunteers can be sent to aid Lowenstein's campaign efforts and he wins, it will all be worth it. I will feel that I have contributed in a small way to keeping a liberal voice in Congress in this time of growing conservatism.

"The spirit Gene McCarthy kindled in the snows of New Hampshire will remain to help bring the 'war' to an end and bring the 'people' back into politics," she said.

Roger Wagner Chorale To Perform in Bowler

The UMass Concert Association has announced the program for the Roger Wagner Chorale concert tomorrow at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium.

The famed 24-voice chorale will open the program with a selection of sacred music of the Renaissance period and will include choral works by Sweelinck, Jacob Handl and Tomas Luis de Victoria. Secular works by Passereau, Lassus and Jannequin of the Renaissance period will also be sung. The Baroque period will be represented by a duet from Bach's Cantata No. 78. The first half of the concert will conclude with excerpts from Brahms' A German Requiem, a masterpiece of the Romantic period.

Following intermission, the chorale will perform sections of Leonard Bernstein's Chichester Psalms. The remainder of the concert will be devoted to works by American composers Randall Thompson and Wilbur Chenoweth and will include Negro spirituals and some American folk music.

Due to the limited seating capacity of Bowker Auditorium, all tickets are reserved and will be handled on a first come, first served basis by the Student Union ticket office. UMass undergraduates will be admitted without charge, but must have a ticket. Tickets for graduate students, faculty, staff and the public are on sale at the ticket office.

Ten Colleges Discuss Exchange Programs

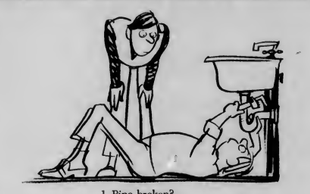
NORTHAMPTON - A group of ten colleges, Amherst, Bowdoin, Connecticut College, Dartmouth, Mount Holyoke, Smith, Vassar, Wesleyan, Wheaton and Williams, has begun discussions about various ways they might cooperate, it was announced by the presidents of the institutions today.

The initial proposal would allow exchanges of students if approved by the several faculties and boards of trustees. Later the possibility of joint urban centers and joint M.A. or M.A.T. programs in teacher training will be under study.

According to Smith College President Thomas C. Mendenhall, the student exchanges could begin in 1969-70 and are designed for sophomores or juniors in good standing, for a semester or for a year.

The exchange is intended to increase the educational opportunities for the individual student, and all students are eligible for the exchange at any college.

Each college will announce how many places it can make available for the semester or year. The academic program of any student would have to be approved by both institutions, and the colleges agree to accept any qualified and approved student up to the number of places available.



Under the possible program of urban centers the colleges will be discussing cooperation both in the establishments of centers and in programs where both faculty and students might share in the study and resolution of urban problems.

The graduate programs under discussion concern the M.A. or M.A.T. degree and the possibility of the liberal arts colleges cooperating in training programs that might be designed primarily for junior colleges and community colleges.

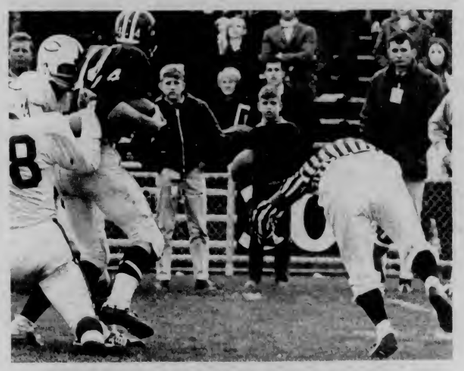
It Was 1960 All Over Again



STOPPED 'EM DEAD-The UMass defense plows into the UConn offense in Saturday's game, but in spite of their efforts the Huskies stole the game, 27-20, and the Homecoming show for the Redman fans.

ADAMS ON THE MOVE-Tim Adams rears back to throw a pass as one of the Connecticut players holds fast to him.

BROKEN UP-Steve Parnell (21) made a good try to snag a long bomb from quarterback Tim Adams, but a UConn player was there to break up the play.

THE REF THROWS A BLOCK-Although it might seem that way, the ref had been hit by Adams (14) as he attempted to run with the ball. Game action was stopped momentarily afterwards when the coaches went out on the field to check on the extent of the ref's injuries.

LOW-FLYING QUARTERBACK-Adams is upended in Saturday's game.

Varsity Harriers Take Strong HC Runners

A strong Holy Cross team became victim number six and the fourth in a row to fall to the fast improving UMass harriers. The Redmen put together a top team performance for the well over 30 Homecoming Day spectators.

Coach O'Brien was quite happy with the lopsided 23-32 victory, which gives the Redmen an impressive 6-2 mark this season. "I was happy with the time split of our top runners - only 73 seconds," the coach said. He added that UMass won the meet in the first mile when the Redmen broke up the HC runners.

The Little Redmen didn't fare as well as the varsity as they saw their three meet winning streak snapped by the Crusaders frosh. The frosh chance of victory was hindered for they had run hard practices all week and were tired on Saturday. The HC team took first and second in their 20-36 win. Donavan of Holy Cross ran the 3.6 miles in 18:57, the fastest time recorded on the course this year. Crooke of the Crusaders was second in 19:04.

Third place went to the Little Redmen's Wayne Lucas, who cut 16 seconds from his best time running 19:13. Don Dunsky, UMass' usual first man had an off day but still placed sixth in 19:37. Steve Whicher placed seventh a foot behind Dunsky and was given the same time. Ron Swasey was fourth man for the Redmen running 19:59. Whicher and Swasey both ran their best races improving by 17 and 19 seconds respectively. Al Mangan placed 11th for the frosh with a time of 20:03. Coach O'Brien said despite the loss he was pleased with the frosh's performance. He pointed out that although the frosh practiced hard during the week this was the first time this season they had five men around or under 20 minutes. Also he added, "Three men broke into the Holy Cross top five and I think they have the toughest top five in New England for frosh."

Next weekend is the conference meet in Vermont for the varsity and another shot at powerful UConn.

Art Dulong, Holy Cross' number one runner, flew over the 4.9 mile course in a time of 24:46 to shave 31 seconds off the course record. But close behind Dulong was UMass' Ron Wayne who also broke the course record of 25:17, running 25:08. Wayne, who had dropped 250 yards behind Dulong after three miles of the race, finished very strong and was only 150 yards back at the end of the race.

Following Dulong and Wayne, Leo Duart, the Redmen's number two runner raced across the line in a time of 25:55. Duart was sixth after two and a half miles but turned on his speed on the last half of the course to pick up three places and finish third. Senior Charlie Lang was close to Duart placing fourth in 26:00. It was the best race of the year for Lang. Coach Ken O'Brien said that he thought Lang has finally reached mid-season form after improving slowly from the mono he had last spring. Bob Borbet finished next getting fifth for Holy Cross.

However, behind Borbet were Tom Derderian and Marc Gelinas who completed the Redmen scoring. Derderian, running his best race of the year, stayed up with the front runners and turned in a time of 26:09, a 25 second improvement. Gelinas ran 26:21 which is only a second off his best performance. The final two, of the top seven, Redmen in the great team effort were sophomores Larry Paulson who placed 11th and Bob Benshimol, 15th.

Frosh Booters Trounce UConn 6-1

The freshmen soccer team continued its undefeated ways with an easy 6-1 victory over UConn. on Friday afternoon. The victory was the fifth in a row for the frosh and they have yet to give up more than one goal in a single game.

UMass opened the scoring in the first period when Lindo Alves lofted a high pass from the corner and Evan Kenseth headed the ball into the net. They controlled the ball for the remainder of the period and exhibited some excellent passing but were unable to score again until midway through the second period. Alves rifled a shot at the net which was stopped on a fine save by the UConn goalie but John Russo kicked in the rebound. The rest of the half was scoreless.

UConn came out strong at the beginning of the second half and began to control the ball but they couldn't get the ball into the net. The UMass fullbacks, led by Paul Slack, foiled several of their opponents' bids and the period ended scoreless.

The Redmen began to pull away in the fourth period when Bob Curtin scored in the first minute. Alves gave his team 4-0 lead when he placed a penalty kick into the corner of the net. UConn got on the scoreboard when Stachiew kicked in a rebound after two fine saves by the UMass goalie, Bruce McPherson kicked in a 40 footer and Alves closed out the scoring with his second goal of the period to give the Redmen a 6-1 victory.

This Wednesday, the frosh go after their sixth straight victory when they travel to Trinity before closing out the season at home on Friday against Springfield.

Rally Falls Short In Redman Loss To UConn 27-20

Petrillo, Clements Dampen UMass Homecoming

By MIKE CARRAN
Sports Editor

The University of Connecticut used a crunching group attack in rolling to a 27-20 victory over UMass which spoiled the Redmen Homecoming. A crowd of 17,500, largest of the season, saw UMass drop their fifth straight.

Three Husky runners, quarterback Pete Petrillo, halfback Vin Clements, and fullback Jimmy DeWitt, ran for over a 100 yards a piece in the visitors rushing show. It was the first UConn victory over their arch-rivals since 1960, another year in which a UMass homecoming was ruined.

Petrillo and his buddies started slowly. The Redmen defense contained the slippery customer for most of the first quarter.

After a Billy Frye fumble recovery on the UMass 22 yard line, Tim Adams got the Redmen moving as he hit on aerials to Scavone and Bruce Cochrane. Then Scavone took a perfect pitchout from Adams and rambled 21 yards around the right side, giving the Redmen a first-and-ten-at the Connecticut 28.

Errors forced the home team to settle for a field goal attempt and the far out 45 yard try by Morty Scheralis was short.

UConn then took over at their own 20 yard line and in five running plays, moved into UMass territory as the quarter came to a close.

After an incomplete pass, Petrillo handed to Clements for five yards, then scrambled around left end for 27 yards and a first and goal at the Redmen six.

On second down, Petrillo scored the first visitor touchdown on a five yard run. Al Becker blocked the conversion attempt to give the fans something to cheer about.

UMass countered quickly after the ensuing kickoff as they took advantage of a 15 yard penalty against Connecticut.

With a first and ten at midfield, Adams moved the Redmen to paydirt as he hit Nick Warnock, Steve Parnell, and Warnock again for the six pointer. The latter was a 13 yard scoring strike. Scheralis' conversion put the home team up 7-6.

This inspired the UMass defense to nail Husky punter DeWitt on his own three yard line.

Craig Lovell, on a second down and goal, busted over from the four to turn the defensive efforts into a UMass T.D. Scheralis' boot made it 14-6.

Petrillo picked up the visitors hopes, though, as he marched the Huskies 86 yards in 12 plays to get them back in the game. The senior quarterback hit four passes during the drive and got credit for the six points on a three yard run.

On the two-point conversion attempt, Petrillo went to his favorite play, the power option, to tie the game at 14-14, just as the half was running out.

A 74-yard kickoff return by Mike Zito on the first play after intermission set up UConn's go ahead touchdown. The speedy 5'6" scatback broke up the middle on his jaunt and was hauled down by Redmen safety Parnell on the UMass nine.

Petrillo scored his third TD of the day on second down, as he swept left end. The Redmen defenders rose up to halt him, however, when he tried an instant replay jot on the two point conversion attempt.

The Huskies tried to increase their 20-14 lead 1 later on in the quarter when they recovered a JMass fumble in Redmen territory. A long field goal attempt was blocked by Don Dotson, however.

Second later the visitors missed another three-pointer from far out

Connecticut's defense, in the meantime, was pressuring Adams. He did manage to connect with sophomore Jim Long for a nice gain, but that was the only bright spot of the quarter.

UConn continued to maintain a field position advantage in the final period. Midway through the quarter the running of DeWitt and Clements brought the visitor's another score.

An eight yard slant by Clements made it 27-14. Fans began streaming from the stands. Their heroes were down by 13 points with only four minutes and 12 seconds left in the game.

It wasn't quite all over, though. Warnock ran a short kickoff up to the Redmen 42. After an incompletion, an Adams to Warnock aerial moved the ball to the UConn 30.

Warnock made another good catch two plays later to put the ball on the 18 from where Adams found Parnell for the score. The P.A.T. was just wide leaving UMass down, 27-20.

The UMass defense then rose to the occasion, putting a three down collar on Petrillo and company.

Ralph Tiner's punt was returned by Parnell to the UConn 46.

Passes by Adams to Warnock and Nick McGany moved the ball to the 28, but the Husky pass rush caught up with Adams again making it second and long yardage.

UConn's prevent defense then batted away three passes and it was all over.

Stadium Plans Released

BOSTON AP - The problem of building a multi-million dollar sports stadium will soon be resolved and the South Station area is the most logical site for the complex, Hale Champion, Boston Redevelopment Authority director, said Sunday.

Champion discussed the sports stadium and the designation of the site for the 1976 World's Fair on WKBG-TV's "Point of View"

Champion said he believes a new committee named by May-or Kevin White will solve the problem of financing the sports stadium, and estimated its cost would range from $2 million to $6 million.

The cost of the facility should be borne by the stadium users

Asked about prospects of Boston being designated as the site for the 1976 World's Fair, Champion said:

"I would say it's about 5-5 between Boston and Philadelphia. However, it should be recognized that Boston can develop its site with the utilization of our harbor islands at a cost of $6 million while Philadelphia would have to expend $1.3 billion to build the superstructure site it proposes.

"Even if Boston is not chosen for the 1976 exposition, we should go ahead with the development of our harbor site as a new city complex," he said.

Frosh Footballers Beat URI 39-14

BY STEVE SHAMBAN
Staff Reporter

Four second half touchdowns enabled the UMass frosh gridmen to win a 36-14 come from behind verdict over URI, Friday afternoon at Kingston.

It looked like a bad day from the start as the Little Redman bus didn't arrive until 20 minutes before game time and it took them a whole half to become unfracked. URI had a 14-7 lead at the half, scoring on drives of 60 and 90 yards and they looked good in doing it.

Quarterback Bill Erheart, who threw 40 passes in the game, was mixing runs with passes beautifully and it appeared as if the URI juggernaut was unstoppable. Only a 60 yard bomb from Bill Bush to Walt O'Malley with 38 seconds left kept UMass in the game.

The second half was a completely different story however, as the Little Redmen stormed back for 29 points to turn a close game into a runaway. Tailback Art Iarris started things off with a hree yard burst off tackle to ap a 50 yard drive, tying the score at 14-14.

His score was followed in succession on similar runs by George Talumis, a gutty runner from Newton who played his best game, and full back Bob Sawyer, who's playing status was questionable up to game time. The final UMass touchdown came on another 60 yard pass to O'Malley, this time from Marty Evans, with only 28 seconds left in the game. The extra point attempts by Dennis Gagnon were all successful, with the exception of one, in which the 'fleet footed' kicker converted a bad pass from center into a two point conversion, making the final score 36-14.

Frosh coach Dave Kelley had kind words for his whole squad. The UMass defensive front five did an excellent job of containing the Rhode Island offensive line which averaged 6'4, 240 pounds, and forced five fumbles. "We got some good hard hitting from the likes of Bill DeFlavio, Curt Bristol and Bob Cabrellie. We blitzed a bit in the second half and this took away their running and hurt their passing."

"We came out for the second half psychologically high and seemed to develop a unity that was lacking before. Everyone stuck together and showed a lot of desire. Our offensive line, notably Donlin, Huiecki, Marino and Popavitch were beating people up front and this was a key to our success. We thought we'd need four touchdowns to beat them and the boys went out to do just that."

The next game will be Friday at Boston College. It should be a tough battle as the Eaglets feature much heralded Ed Rideout at quarterback. Rideout was a High School All American at Medford. Game time is 2 p.m. and it should be a good one.

Say Nixon Shows No Promise

The 1968 Delegation to the Democratic National Convention from the 1st Congressional District of Massachusetts announced today its intention to support and vote for the Humphrey-Muskie ticket.

John J. Fitzgerald of Holyoke and the Rev. John B. Lawton, Jr. of Williamstown, delegates, and Dr. Robert M. Abrams of Holyoke and Albert A. Bogdan of Pittsfield, alternate delegates, were all supporters of Senator Eugene McCarthy in the hotly contested April Presidential Primary bid for the delegate spot. In a joint statement issued today, the delegates stated: "We will understand the frustration many have felt about the results of the Chicago Convention, but we equally understand the responsibility we now have to continue to make choices within the framework of the political realities that now face us all.

"We are convinced that the Humphrey-Muskie ticket far exceeds any promise held out by Richard Nixon and his disastrous choice for a running-mate, Spiro T. Agnew.

"Not voting for President and thereby aiding Nixon or even enhancing the Wallace-LeMay percentage of the vote is a luxury of those who will not be affected by the crippling of social, educational and civil rights legislation. Richard Nixon's willingness to let the nuclear proliferation treaty die on the vine and his evasion of any effective solutions to the problem of Vietnam does not in itself offer the voters a real choice."

Dr. Abrams, a recipient of the 1967 Distinguished Service Award from the Greater Holyoke Junior Chamber of Commerce, in an individual statement noted that "the threat of a Nixon-Strom Thurmond appointed Supreme Court that could well mutilate a whole decade of progress in the judicial protection of individual and civil rights is enough to move one into the Humphrey-Muskie camp."

Fitzgerald, a UMass. graduate student in government and a Vietnam veteran awarded the Bronze Star and Purple Heart, noted that "We continue to feel that the Johnson-Rusk policy in Vietnam is a tragedy created by a series of blunders and miscalulations. We shall oppose that policy regardless of who is elected President. But it is our judgment that Humphrey by associating himself with Muskie and former UN Ambassadors Goldberg and Ball has shifted away from Johnson while Nixon may well emerge as the heir apparent of the Administration position."

Bogdan, a program manager at General Electric in Pittsfield, called for the McCarthy forces to build bridges with the progressive elements in the Democratic Party. He stated that "the promise of Hubert Humphrey is infinitely better than the kind of despair and loss of hope that would result in a possible Wallace-LeMay autocracy or a Nixon-Agnew rule."

Lawton, an Episcopal clergyman who is also Chairman of the Williamstown Democratic Town Committee, noted that "our decision in this election must ultimately rest upon a clear and honest judgment of the personal qualifications of the two main figures, Richard Nixon and Hubert Humphrey. In so far as our conclusions differ with those with whom we have had common cause in the past year, it will simply have to be that way. For us this decision has become not a matter of Party loyalty but a matter of principle. Despite our differences with the Vice-President which are surely evident by our nearly year-long struggle for the cause of Senator McCarthy, we firmly believe that Hubert Humphrey represents the best hope for domestic progress and harmony and new policy abroad. We strongly urge that all citizens who share our concerns vote Humphrey-Muskie on Election Day."

Boston Protest Planned

Election Day Protest Set, SDS To Sponsor Student Strike

- CHICAGO (AP) - Students for a Democratic Society, Chicago-based protest group, called Monday for demonstrations in 10 American cities Nov. 5 against what it called "the fraud of elections."

SDS plans to call for demonstrations at Nixon headquarters in New York City, at the White House, and in front of Chicago's Conrad Hilton Hotel, site of clashes between police and opponents of the Vietnam war during the Democratic convention.

Also called for is a student strike Nov. 4 and 5.

In addition, a spokesman for the SDS national office said there would be protests at at least one Army base.

Bernardine Dohrn, national secretary of SDS, announced the plans at a news conference at the University of Illinois Chicago campus.

She said protest sites would include Ft. Hood, Tex., Ft. Devins, Mass., and Ft. Dix, N.J.

Speaking of the demonstration planned for the White House, she said:

"There's a new statue against demonstrations near the White House. That's why the White House was picked."

Besides New York City, Washington and Chicago, demonstrations are planned for Boston, Baltimore, San Francisco, Seattle, Los Angeles, Hartford, Conn. and "some place in Colorado," she said; she did not say where.

Miss Dohrn said the protests have been called because SDS believes that the major candidates are avoiding the "real issues," which she said were the Vietnam war and racism.

"We do not believe that democracy is just going into a booth and pulling a lever," she said. "We denounce the hoax of elections."

Homecoming Concerts Spoiled By Counterfeit Tickets

By JOHN HICKEY
Staff Reporter

The success of this year's Homecoming concerts was marred for some by the resurgence of a perennial problem, numerous admissions to the concerts with falsified tickets or no tickets at all. Although the difficulty recurs with every major event scheduled for the cage, false admissions have never occured to the degree that they did this year, according to Peter Lewenberg, chairman of the Homecoming Concert Committee.

An estimated total of 1500 counterfeit tickets were used to gain admission to the Friday night performance and the two Saturday concerts. Over fifty people who held forged tickets were turned away at the door Saturday, while over 500 with fraudulent tickets or no tickets gained entry at each of the concerts.

On Friday evening, before the doors were opened, over 300 people forced their way into Curry Hicks through a broken door. Firemen arriving for guard duty prevented further entries, but made no attempt to dispel those already inside.

Over six different types of counterfeited tickets appeared Friday night. Two individuals, whose identities are known, were apprehended outside the cage before the concert selling tickets.

A police guard on Saturday prevented a repetition of the previous day's pre-concert forced entries, but the poor facilities available made it impossible for admissions officials to prevent hundreds from coming in illegally.

The Concert Committee was forewarned of the impending deluge of fake tickets on Saturday, when two forged tickets were turned in. The purchaser had recognized them as being counterfeit.

The forged tickets were Xeroxed copies of legitimate concert tickets, printed on cardboard identical in color and texture to that used by the Homecoming committee. The tickets were spotted as counterfeits by the blurred Xerox printing and the lack of perforations.

There was no reported incidence of illegal admissions at the Boston Pops concert on Sunday.

The Homecoming Committee will deal with the matter at its meeting scheduled for this week. Discussion will center on both action to be taken in regard to last week's events and steps that can be taken to prevent a repeat of the problem. Any complete solution is probably impossible as long as it is necessary to stage major events in Curry Hicks cage, the only facility on campus large enough to handle the large-capacity crowds.

The Concert Committee told the MDC it extends an apology to those who were turned away Saturday because they held forged tickets which they had bought in good faith. While the action was necessary on the part of officials, we regret that some innocent members of the university community suffered doubly, both missing the concerts and taking a financial loss."

Vassar College Goes Coed
First men Men Admitted in 1970

POUGHKEEPSIE, N.Y. AP - Vassar College announced Monday plans to begin admitting male students in September 1970, and eventually to have a student body comprising 50 per cent of each sex.

The famed women's college made the disclosure in a letter from Vassar President Alan Simpson to some 21,000 alumnae.

He said men will be admitted as freshmen at the beginning of the 1970-71 college year, and the college hoped to increase its enrollment eventually from the present 1,500 to 2,400.

Vassar has had men on campus under special programs in the past, such as armed forces men during World War II and a current group of International Business Machine employees taking science courses, but no male ever has been allowed to matriculate for a degree there.

After exploring and rejecting a proposal that the college be moved to New Haven to become a sister college of Yale University, Vassar recently announced an exchange with several Eastern men's colleges. This program will be continued.

Czechs March in Street To Protest Russian Troops

PRAGUE (AP) - Defying Soviet occupation forces, tens of thousands of young Czechoslovaks marched through Prague's downtown streets for 12 hours Monday and, waving the flag of their nation, demanded a Russian troop withdrawal. Some thunderously chorused: "Russians go home: Russians go home."

The outpouring on Czechoslovakia's 5th anniversary as a nation, placed in jeopardy the Moscow-Prague agreements for a partial troop pullout and the very future of the liberal regime of Alexander Dubcek.

It was the first mass demonstration since last August, the month of the Soviet-led invasion to halt the nation's liberalization drive.

The marchers roamed from the seat of government at Prague Castle, to the Soviet Embassy, a Soviet district command post, a Red Army officers billet and to the National Theater where they delayed a gala performance for the nation's leaders of a patriotic opera. But there was no reaction from Soviet troops or the Russian goverument.

Crowds converged on the National Theater to cheer Dubcek, President Ludvik Svoboda and Assembly President Josef Smrkovsky. The men looked grim as they entered the theater, but as Dubcek climbed a flight of stairs he turned and waved in salute to the crowd.

For days the leaders of the nation had warned that any anti-Soviet outburst on this national holiday could bring the Russians and their tanks back into Prague in force.

For a week, troops of the Soviet Union, East Germany, Hungary, Poland and Bulgaria that took part in the Aug. 2-21 invasion have been pulling out. But the Russians are leaving a permanent force in Czechoslovakia and it was these that leaders feared would act if demonstrations got out of hand.

By nightfall Soviet tanks and combat units had not noticeably stirred from their camps out - side Prague. The only Russians seen in the streets were an occasional armored car partrol, Izvestia and other Moscow newspaper correspondents and a Soviet television team. They drew hoots and whistles whenever the marchers recognized them.

SDS Stages Second "Picnic"

By ED SLOAN
Staff Reporter

SDS will stage its second anti-ROTC demonstration on Boyden Field today at 11:15 a.m. The purpose of the demonstration is again to protest, as it did last week, against guns, hatred, and militarism which the group sees as the embodiment of ROTC.

Endeavoring to attract and focus attention on the evil of ROTC's presence on campus and its own vitues to arouse, to accomplish and get things done, SDS is sponsoring this morning's burlesque show under the theme of "Anti-ROTC Picnic, Love-In and Red White and Blue Freakout", and "invites all who are bored with fighting an unjust draft and oppose our country's foreign policy to participate."

Supposedly, mocking demonstrations by SDS against ROTC are to be weekly occurances. According to one SDS member, "Guerrilla theatre is one of the most effective weapons SDS has. And what better way is there than to satirize our social problems and demonstrate why the campus should not be the center for training troops."

Wallace Hits Use of Polls in Texas Address

BEAUMONT, Tex. (AP) - Third party candidate George C. Wallace charged Democratic and Republican leaders Monday with using the public opinion polls in an effort to influence the presidential elections.

Wallace made the accusation as he began the final week of his campaign with an outdoor speech in 42-degree weather at Hannibal, Mo., and on a crosscountry flight to Beaumont for another rally and fund-raising dinner.

His appearance at Hannibal brought the most serious rock-throwing incident thus far. A sharp-edged stone almost the size of a man's fist was hurled at the candidate by someone in a noisy crowd of college-age hecklers.

It landed in front of Wallace, barely missing security officers and newsmen standing in front of the rostrum. Two officers and a member of the former Alabama governor's staff were splattered by eggs.

The hecklers were far outnumbered by approximately 3,000 Wallace followers whose cheers periodically drowned out the catcalls.

The third party candidate charged that the other major political parties are using the polls in the hope of influencing the Nov. 5 election came in a prepared statement issued aboard his plane on route to Beaumont.

It was prompted by Sunday's Gallup Poll that showed Wallace's strength dropping sharply from 2 per cent to 15 per cent. Wallace called it a "new comic strip" which belonged, he said, in the funny paper section.

"All we have," he charged, "is a deliberate and desperate attempt on the part of the other two parties to deceive the American people and to interfere with their right to cast their vote in accordance with their true thoughts and convictions."

Wallace said his strength is steadily increasing "by every indication pertinent to political campaigning"...that he is drawing the largest and most enthusiastic crowds...the volume of mail at his campaign headquarters, "already phenomenal" continues to gain.

Guard Meeting Cancelled As Turnout Disappoints

By SHARON SAMUELS

An organizational meeting of the New Guard, to be held last night in the Norfolk Room, was cancelled due to a lack of turnout of members and a supposedly interested public.

This was the first public meeting of the organization, composed of campus conservatives, to be scheduled this fall. The purpose of the meeting had been to discuss a New Guard magazine, a counterdemonstration of the S.D.S. "mock war games", and the possible participation of the Four College area in the organization.

President Arthur Levesque mentioned that the meeting might be rescheduled for a later date.

Humphrey Tops Field In Smith Mock Election

NORTHAMPTON - Given a choice of four presidential candidates, Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey outpolled Republican former Vice President Richard M. Nixon by two to one in a campus poll of Smith College students.

Comedian Dick Gregory, candidate of the Peace and Freedom Party, placed third in the poll, and American Independent Party Candidate George Wallace trailed far behind the other candidates. Some 1569 votes were cast by the students.

The results of the poll, conducted by the college newspaper Thursday (October 24), were: Humphrey 771; Nixon, 338; Gregory, 67; Wallace, 7, and abstentions, 386.

The large number of abstentions was interpreted by the campus newspaper, The Sophian, as evidence of the "wide-spread dissatisfaction on campus with the four listed candidates." A variety of other personalities or parties received votes to make the 386 abstention total.

Pure abstentions, with no preferred candidate given as a write-in, led with 170 votes. Senator Eugene McCarthy won 127 votes, indicating a "die-hard McCarthy segment among the student body," the college newspaper said. Other vote recipients were Rockefeller, 39; the late Senator Robert F. Kennedy, 9; and New York Mayor John V. Lindsay, 15, and Georgia State Senator Julian Bond, 1.

Two other votegetters were television comedian Pat Paulson and Snoopy, with one vote each.

Nixon on the Stump

Nixon Seeks Big Win, Sees "Charges" Coming

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) - Richard M. Nixon forecast Monday that he will surprise the pollsters with his showing in the Nov. 5 presidential election, and said he wants more than victory - he seeks a "clear vote of confidence" and a mandate to govern.

The Republican presidential nominee talked of polls and election day margins in an apparent attempt to offset a tremor of political nervousness in his campaign organization.

"The Democrats are picking up some," Nixon acknowledged in a talk with newsmen aboard his campaign jet. "But so are we. We're moving ahead too."

He said the public opinion polls, which show Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey cutting into his lead, failed to measure the intensity of his workers and supporters, "the zeal of our troops."

On that basis, Nixon said, the final opinion polls will give him a margin short of that which will be produced by the voters one week from Tuesday.

On the steps of the State Capitol in Albany, Nixon said he looks for all kinds of political charges from the Democrats in the days ahead.

"As we enter this Halloween week, this is trick or treat week and we're going to hear a lot of tricks this week," he told a rally there. "There will be all kinds of charges."

He said the reason is that the Democrats are "afraid they're going to lose. And they're right. We're going to give them the licking of their lives. . .

"We cannot trust the next four years to that squabbling bunch that mishandled their convention in Chicago," Nixon said. "Give us the mandate and I'm sure that you will not be sorry . . . give us this mandate for change."

Capitol police estimated the crowd standing in the park in front of the steps at 1,000 persons. Newsmen who have seen other crowds assembled there considered the estimate escalated.

"The will of the American people must be expressed overwhelmingly in November," Nixon declared in Albany. "It must not come in confused or timid or tripartite voices."

Greek System Goals, Direction Explained By IFC Vice President

The Greek system at the University of Massachusetts has received encouragement and criticism from various sources recently. Administrative Vice-President of the Interfraternity Council, David Breed, commented recently on the present status of the Greek system and the role of I.F.C.

"The over-riding opinion of non-Greeks on campus seems to be that fraternities exist only to have parties every weekend. I can understand why this image has emerged," Breed continued, "because all that is ever heard about is the social aspect - having a good time."

Breed explained that the academic side of fraternal living does exist, but receives little publicity. He stated that Greeks as a group contain the highest percentage of Dean's List students of any campus group.

"Also, projects of social action, such as drives for voter registration and volunteer work at Belchertown State Hospital, are undertaken by Greeks," Breed said.

Expressing his personal views on the function of the Greek system at UMass, Breed had this to say: "Idealistically, each house should strive to develop the academic, social, and athletic potential of its membership."

Breed explained I.F.C'S function as a unifying organization co-ordinating the 18 fraternities on campus. He said, "In the past I.F.C. was considered an inconsequential group because each house tended to rely entirely upon itself.

"Within the last year and a half, however, the Greek system has realized that it will have to pull together in order to fulfill its highest goals, especially on the changing university scene."

I.F.C. committees, intended to co-ordinate the various activities of fraternity life, include Judiciary, Finance, Calender, Social Action, Rush, Pan Hellenic, Athletics, Publicity, and Greek Week.

Breed concluded, "I think that if people keep an eye on the Greek system at UMass they will see significant changes - innovations beneficial to both Greeks and the rest of the university."

Education Commitee Airs Proposals

About 40 students attended last night's open meeting of the Committee for Undergraduate Participation in Education.

Among suggestions for new programs to stimulate undergraduate interest was the possibility of a study group for the individual student without an honors average, and a student initiated course in sex-education. Also suggested was more personalized curriculum planning.

Included in the discussion was possibility for greater student voice in choosing teachers and courses; previewing courses before definitely signing up for them was another possibility.

A list of the planning committees of the School of Education was passed around for those present to sign for interviews of the chairman of any committee. These interviews would then be published in the Collegian, as will the times for the planning committee meetings, which are open to any interested student.

In order for students to submit their ideas for undergraduate involvement in educational reforms, there will be a box in the Student Union and the School of Education, and a booth at the proposed all-night program to be sponsored by the Martin Luther King Social Action Committee.

SUCH ARE THE LIVES OF THE CANDIDATES

Hubert Humphrey

With a week left in the main act of Politics '68, the Associated Press has compiled the views of the three major Presidential Candidates, reflecting of their white house strategy, and looking toward November 5. Later this week, the DAILY COLLEGIAN will publish an A.P. "mock debate" between the candidates.

Wallace

The Polls Say No, But He Says Go

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) - Third-party candidate George C. Wallace goes into the closing week of the presidential campaign talking like a winner and belittling the polls which show him losing ground.

George Wallace

Richard Nixon

Wallace says he will be elected; that the polls are "liars... trying to rig the election;" that they have been wrong before and are wrong again.

After the returns have been counted Nov. 5, he says, "we're going to put some of the polling outfits out of business." The former Alabama governor's campaign juices have been bubbling furiously since a crowd of about 17,000 greeted him with a 15-minute standing ovation Thursday night at Madison Square Garden in New York. It was the highlight of an intensive and hectic week of campaigning, mostly in the industrial East and Midwest.

His visibly buoyant spirits were uplifted again by a turnout of more than 10,000 shouting followers Saturday in Cincinnati. They had waited for him almost two hours because he was late in arriving.

A Stretch Run to Nail Things Down

By WALTER R. MEARS
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK AP - Richard M. Nixon is escalating his oratory and retracing his route through the major electoral vote states in the final eight days of the Republican campaign for the White House.

He is running harder than before, covering more ground, making more speeches, purchasing more television time.

There is in this a hint of GOP concern at the shape of the public opinion polls, which show Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey narrowing the Nixon lead. But Nixon's strategists say they expected the big margin to be cut and the current pace is part of a master plan shaped 1 weeks ago.

"This is the blitz," said one top Nixon adviser. "This is the way we planned it."

And the planning has been meticulous. Sunday, for example, preparing for his appearance on the CBS television program "Face the Nation," Nixon studied 35 questions-and suggested answers-prepared by his staff as likely to come up during the interview.

The Republican nominee, who had shunned the television interviews earlier in the campaign, also plans to appear next Sunday on the NBC-TV program "Meet the Press."

It is all part of the escalation-and supplies Nixon with two half-hour chunks of free, nation-wide television time in the final campaign days.

The Nixon campaign also produced a half-hour show of its own Sunday night, featuring the nominee's reminiscences about his youth and his life in politics. Thursday night, there is an hour-long telecast-worth about $15,000-of a Nixon rally at Madison Square Garden.

And on election eve, Nixon will stage a two-hour televised session from Los Angeles, answering questions.

This week, Nixon is scheduled to campaign in the seven biggest electoral vote states: New York, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Ohio, Illinois, Texas and California.

He has been in all of them before; he rates them all as crucial.

One concern of Nixon strategists: Should a handful of those states, in each of which Nixon has claimed the lead, slip into the Humphrey column, the result could be an Electoral College deadlock. That prospect, of course, is raised by the third party campaign of George C. Wallace.

Another feature of the campaign windup: an intensified attack on Humphrey. Nixon has called his rival "a man bankrupt of ideas, a candidate whose symbol should be a dinosaur, a pupil in Lyndon Johnson's obedience school.

Through it all, Nixon appears to be working to insulate himself against the possible political shock waves of a dramatic peace move in Vietnam.

Thus he chose to report on Friday that he had learned of a peace drive aimed at a bombing pause and a possible cease-fire. Humphrey presumably would reap major political benefits should that occur prior to Nov. 5. But Nixon has declared that if President Johnson should order bombing ended, he will support the move.

Humphrey

Things Are Happening At Last....

By HARRY KELLY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON AP - Eighteen and nineteen-hour days. Long motorcades. Longer flights with the steady drumming of the jets. A croaking voice and tired eyes... and a sudden feeling of optimism in Hubert H. Humphrey.

There are roses on the flagship of the Humphrey campaign fleet. Roses are for winners. And Humphrey seems almost convinced he is one. It's not a cocksure feeling. There are ifs - ifs named California, Texas and New York, for instance.

Late at night, after a day of bubbling enthusiasm on the public platforms, he can be realistically frank-when talking to those who have contributed a $1,000 apiece to his campaign:

"I'm not at all sure how this election's going to come out. I wish I could come here and just tell you that I think we've got it wrapped up, that the trend is so good that it's going to be ours. I'm not sure of that. I suppose my advisers will say, well there you blew it again.

"But I think candor is required. The fact of the matter is that we are on the upward market trend. There isn't any doubt about it. We're moving and we're moving fast."

With a week to go, the polls show Humphrey has begun narrowing the lead Nixon has held since the Republican convention. Money is falling more freely into the Humphrey campaign account-and out again in more advertising.

Kenneth O'Donnell, the Kennedy aide and ally, has joined the campaign. Joseph Rauh, the vice chairman of the Americans for Democratic Action who was one of the first supporters of Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy's presidential effort, flew out to California with Humphrey. And he stayed behind to work with McCarthy and Kennedy dissidents who have refused to support Humphrey.

"The McCarthy people are the most bitter in California," said Rauh.

Part of last week's schedule didn't meet Humphrey's approval as making best use of his time. And he told newsmen, "I will be personally taking control of the schedule for this final week." This meant a lot of activity is planned to whip up support in big states like Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey, Illinois and California.

The Humphrey people argue that they can win if they are able to put together victories in two out of three of these states: New York, California and Texas.

The vice president says he has at least a 50-50 chance of winning Texas and New York - along with Maine, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Rhode Island, Delaware, Ohio, Michigan, Missouri, Tennessee, Minnesota, Nevada, New Mexico, Texas, Maryland, Kentucky, Washington, Virginia, North Carolina and West Virginia.

Some advisers, if not Humphrey, have written off Illinois and believe it will be very difficult to win California.

Under the geographical strategy lies the more covert strategy of trying to soften up and smoke out the Republican opponent, Richard M. Nixon.

An aide explains, "We had to shake him out, to remind everybody of the old Nixon...The strategy was to get him out in the open, get him attacking and make him lose his cool. I think that's happening."

Humphrey puts it this way: "I expect to see Mr. Nixon become a little more irascible, a little more erratic. I expect to see him hit out. And I expect to enjoy it."

EDMUND MUSKIE, by far the most popular of the Vice Presidential candidates continues to "pour it on." Muskie made political history this year when, at open air rallies, he invited hecklers to debate with him. The Senator from Maine, in doing this, created a novel relationship with those who sought to stymie him. (A.P. Wirephoto)

Birth Control Lecture at Smith

"Birth Control Laws in Massachusetts" will be the topic of a lecture at Smith College Wednesday.

Mrs. Donald Matson, former acting director of the Planned Parenthood League of Massachusetts, will speak in Wright Hall at 8 p.m. The lecture, which is sponsored by Curriculum Committee, is open to the public.

The new Massachusetts birth control law went into effect on August 8, 1966. On that day virtually every Boston hospital and several major hospitals outside Boston started to include family planning care in its routine services. Many more hospitals are now in the process of setting up such services.

In her capacity as field director of the PPLM, Mrs. Matson helped to establish contraceptive services across the state. She worked with hospital administrators and staff to aid each health facility in developing its own program of family planning care.

Mrs. Matson, who received her master's degree from Western Reserve University, has worked in two psychiatric clinics, a private family agency, a children's protective agency, a county Department of Public Welfare and as an adoption caseworker.

She is the wife of Dr. Donald Matson, chief of neurosurgery at the Children's Medical Center of the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital in Boston.

Roger Wagner Chorale Performs at Bowker

The blended voices of the Roger Wagner Chorale will perform at the University of Massachusetts tonight at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium.

Founder Roger Wagner directs 14 men and 14 women who have been described by the Los Angeles Mirror News as "the best mixed chorus singing in America today."

According to Martin Bernheimer, music editor for the Los Angeles Times, "the organization boasts a blend of choral tone, a sensitivity to textual problems, an infectious spirit, and a degree of technical finesse that puts it in the most select company."

Sponsored by the UMass Concert Association, the Chorale will perform a program of religious and secular music, as well as a number of folk songs, spirituals and other contemporary works.

The group has toured the U.S., Latin America and Europe with success and was received by audiences and critics with unqualified enthusiasm.

Tickets for the Tuesday evening concert are available at the Student Union ticket office. UMass undergraduates will be admitted free of charge.

Why does a perfect size 7 look perfect only 21 days every month?

It has nothing to do with calories. It's a special female weight gain... caused by temporary water-weight build-up. Oh, you know... that uncomfortable full feeling that sneaks up on you the week before your menstrual period. This fluid retention not only plays havoc with your looks but how you feel as well. (It puts pressure on delicate nerves and tissues, which can lead to pre-menstrual cramps and headaches, leaves emotions on edge.)

That's why so many women take PAMPRIN®. It gently relieves water-weight gain to help prevent pre-menstrual puffiness, tension, and pressure-caused cramps.

PAMPRIN makes sure a perfect size 7 never looks less than perfect. Nor feels less than perfect, either.

OCT 29 1968

Is it Effective?

In arguing the legality and/or morality of Capital Punishment, we ignore the vital considerations of the value and measure of effectiveness in the execution of the death penalty.

Capital punishment is legal, for if, indeed, we are to admit the right of an authority to make a law, we cannot deny the enforcement of that law. Ergo, Capital Punishment, a method of law enforcement, simply cannot be labeled a crime, as many would attempt to do. What is sanctioned by the law cannot be at one and the same time opposed to the law. The right to punish is coexistent with the right to make law.

And as law is promulgated for the common good — common good being determined by the demands of the natural laws and the preservation thereof — the death penalty receives its moral sanction. Yes, in admitting this moral right of the state to make a law, we need bow to authority, and must necessarily admit this moral right to punish.

Stripped of legal and moral arguements, then, the question as to the "rightness" or "wrongness" of Capital Punishment must be attacked solely in terms of the value and effectiveness of the law — the value of Capital Punishment as a legally and morally sanctioned killing. Indeed, this value is sketchy.

Death can logically serve the common good of neither society nor the criminal, and the law therefore becomes purposeless. Capital Punishment is exposed, then, as relying on an "eye for an eye" type principle. The law becomes a sophisticated excuse for revenge.

Further, the death penalty has not been proven to be an effective deterrent against murder, as others might argue. To date, evidence to support the contrary is insufficient: ergo, worthless.

For whatever reason, with whatever excuse, by the execution of the death penalty, authority condones the very thing which it forbids. Is this an effective law? Is the common good served? Is there value to this law?

I think not. No crime could be great enough to warrant this premeditated revenge. No resultant good could be great enough to condone its use.

"Ain't He The One?"

Special Report:

The Death Penalty. A Scientific Analysis

(ED. Note: This is the first part of a report on Capitol Punishment by George Kisser and Steve Robl.)

The wisdom of the death penalty has been debated for centuries. But in the vast majority of cases the debators on both sides have been ill-informed, accomplishing little more than the repetition of old slogans.

On November 5, 1968 the voters of Massachusetts will decide the fate of the death penalty in this state. The old slogans will no longer do. The time has come for us to face this crucial issue with as much valid information as we can gather, and with as little allegiance to old untested and unproven slogans as possible.

A fairly substantial number of researchers have tried to determine the consequences of the death penalty as well as those of its alternatives.

The death penalty is all but universally justified on the basis of the belief that this extreme form of punishment results in highly desirable consequences for the masses of generally law-abiding citizens. Capital punishment is such an extreme measure that both parties, advocates and abolitionists alike, should sincerely concern themselves with the question of "whether these highly desirable consequences are actually achieved" through the use of the death penalty OR, perhaps, "whether they have merely been promised by the old slogans." If these highly desirable consequences are actually achieved by the death penalty, then advocates of the death penalty will have already scored heavily in their efforts to keep capital punishment on the law books of Massachusetts. However, if these supposed consequences are not actually achieved, then the basic argument of death penalty advocates, being based upon myth rather than reality, should be rejected by all who respect truth.

It is our belief that no state should be allowed to take the life of a human being on the basis of justifications that will not stand up to scientific investigation. At the very least, they should have a factual rather than a mythological basis.

"Scientific Evidence on Arguments for the Death Penalty"

When we began researching the death penalty, we set out to find scientific evidence of the truth or falsity of the common arguments in support of this measure. An examination of the literature indicates that the most frequent justifications for the death penalty are the following four:

1. The death penalty significantly deters serious crime, especially murder, among the general population.
2. The death penalty is essential to rid society of an individual who has killed and if not executed is very likely to kill again.
3. The death penalty is necessary to protect policemen in their line of duty.
4. The death penalty places less financial burden upon the taxpayers than does imprisonment.

Inside Report:

Nixon's Backfire

BY ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

POUGHKEEPSIE, N.Y. - The caution with which Richard M. Nixon has pursued his meticulously planned campaign has backfired into a deep-seated and probably ineradicable public belief that he is ducking the issues.

That is the only possible interpretation of door-to-door interviews with voters in this Hudson River Valley community, the last of several such surveys we have conducted in cooperation with the Oliver Quayle polling organization.

The result was a curious contrast. Although our sample indicated Nixon running well ahead in an area that went heavily for President Johnson in 1964, these same voters regard Nixon's campaign as one of evasion.

The raw figures from our interviewing here with Quayle provide little cheer for Vice President Humphrey. Out of 51 voters surveyed, 67 percent backed Mr. Johnson four years ago. Their 1968 preferences: 23 for Nixon, 17 for Humphrey, 5 for George Wallace, 6 undecided.

Despite this comfortable Nixon edge, however, a substantial majority of our sample were not happy about his campaign. By a 2- to -1 margin, they agreed that they now think less of Nixon because he is not specific enough on the issues.

Indeed, there are signs this is costing him votes. A Poughkeepsie postal worker who generally votes Republican but may back Wallace this year told us Nixon "keeps you in the dark about his policies." A Baptist minister is forsaking his usual Republican loyalty and switching to Humphrey because "Nixon always says he's going to do things but doesn't say how." A retired toolmaker who splits his ticket and is still undecided complains that Nixon "just doesn't make his policies clear."

On the other hand, Humphrey's aggressive underdog campaign has won grudging admiration. Despite their own criticisms of his appearance, voice, and "wishy-washy" image, more than half of the voters--including many Nixon supporters--told us they think more of Humphrey because of his hard campaign.

A radio announcer here who usually votes Democratic but is undecided this year told us he cannot yet bring himself to back Humphrey because "he isn't disassociating himself from the present administration." Another disaffected Democrat, a high school teacher, put it more bluntly: "Humphrey ought to say once and for all whether he's his own man or Johnson's."

Nor would a bombing halt negotiated by the Johnson administration help Humphrey among these Poughkeepsie voters (who showed no enthusiasm for deescalation). Humphrey's close associations with Negroes is a positive handicap with these middle-class whites. Summing up, Humphrey's greatest asset is Nixon's caution.

Indeed, Nixon is a long way from being the strong man of the ticket here. He runs well behind liberal Republican Sen. Jacob Javits, who had 76 percent of the decided voters interviewed here in his reelection bid against two foes.

More menacing by far for Republicans than Nixon's lack of coattail impact, however, is the passive nature of Nixon's support revealed by our interviews here. We found enough lukewarm Nixon supporters who, combined with the remnant of undecided voters, could mean serious trouble for Nixon Nov. 5 if the backfire from his campaign of caution grows worse.

Campus Comment

ROTC and Reality

To the Editor:

Those liberals that are against the presence of ROTC on campus may be misguided. Realistically accepting the fact that we must have a standing army in these times we then may ask, what kind of an army and what kind of an officer corps do we want? ROTC insures that we have some officers that are intelligent, college-trained men who have been exposed to, and may in fact be majors in, the humanities. Would those that are against ROTC prefer that all officers instead come up through the ranks or win battlefield commissions?

We want officers who would be MORE likely to question an inhumane order. As much as I disagree with our involvement and strategies in Vietnam, I can't help feeling that it is the college-trained officer who helps distinguish our Air Force, for example, from the Condor Legion.

Biafra and Homecoming

To the Editor:

I have read with interest Mr. Smith's article concerning the drive to elict funds for Biafra, and should state at the beginning of this letter that I am wholly in sympathy with the cause. There are, however, one or two statements which I should like to question. I agree that "students..have been confronted with some important issues," but I am forced to admit that I do not understand how these relate to a college Homecoming.

"Homecoming" is presumably a focus for the solidarity of university members, past and present. Mr. Smith leads us to believe that the Afro-American candidates are to serve as focus for Afro-American solidarity. Mr. Smith states that "there is no rival contest sponsored by the black students to elect a Black Homecoming Queen." He later states that "Black is Beautiful and the beauty of it all is for black people to be. This is one of the more immediate reasons for having an Afro-American Queen."

The black students are a subgroup of the University just as are the Greeks, the individual classes, the Residential Colleges etc. I would welcome their electing a queen. They certainly have every right to their identity, but I also believe that they owe the same allegiances as the other subgroups. I question not their right to elect a Queen, but rather their timing.

I agree that there has been a "distortion of "history" but I choose to believe that it was due more to human frailty than to intention. This may well never be proven and my point lies with Mr. Smith's apparent distortion of mis-interpretation of history, if we may call the events of the past ten years--history. He states that the Biafrans are engaged in "a fight for existence against the ideologies of a racist west." They are certainly engaged in a fight for existence but it is a fight for the existence of the Ibo vis-a-vis, the Hausa-Fulani, the Youraba, and the ethnic minorities. We cannot, at this point, be sure that the minorities of the Eastern Region, the Ibibios, Ijaws, Ekois and others are really behind the move to succession. The political breakdown of Nigeria can be attributed to many causes; regionalism, religious antagonisms, feelings of ethnic superiority, mistrust, and betrayal by the major coalitions on both sides.

To blame the problems of Independent Africa completely on the Colonial Powers is a panacea that is as illogical as it is unwarranted. The acquistion and maintaining of territory is no stranger to the African continent, and it would be difficult indeed, to find any real differences between the political ideologies of Kano, Songhai, Ghana, Buganda, the Swazi Kingdoms, or Buuyoro and that of Imperialist Rome or Colonial Britain. Viewing the whole of history, white, black, or yellow, the drives of aggression and territory seem as basic to the nature of man as that of compassion which sparks the drive to aid the Biafrans.

MDC Review Critiqued

To the Editor:

I would like to express disappointment over the efforts of the DAILY COLLEGIAN to review the evening Homecoming concerts. If the DAILY COLLEGIAN is going to have reviews of some of the finest musical entertainment this campus has seen, do it with qualified reviewers.

Senior Reporter Ron Labrecque might have written his criticism of the Saturday night concert from a public relations circular and student heresay. From my seat Dino Danelli was adept at keeping the strong rock beat that the Rascals have, but did not show any of the real jazz talent found to some measure in the drummer for the Holding Co. and especially in Hugh Masekela's group.

The potshots leveled at the musical ability of the Holding Co. can only be countered by the waves of applause and standing ovations by the more appreciative members of the audience on songs such as "Summertime" and "Ball and Chain." I think it was worth waiting both nights to here this type of talent, and I would like to express my thanks to the Homecoming Committee for making it available to us.

Greeks Reply

To the Editor:

(In reply to S.L.)

We are not stereotypes. We are individuals. Because we belong to an organization, there is no reason to believe that we cease to exist as individual entities. If a student on this campus joins an organization, such as the DAILY COLLEGIAN, INDEX, Forensic Society, or Student Senate, he becomes a functioning member but he does not become solely a newspaperman, a debator, or a Senator. Neither does a student who joins a sorority or fraternity become solely a Greek.

When these organizations seek to recruit new members - by means of huge advertisements, coffee hours, etc., they are not subjected to the criticism of the campus. When we, in our search for new members, make a concerted effort to involve as many people possible, we become the victims of bitter criticism and ridicule. Why? Does our lack of apathy offend you?

The Greek system, by its nature, is a selective system. We are looking for people to live with for our college years - this is the major difference between a sorority/fraternity and a club. We do not all have the same majors, the same political inclinations, or the same likes and dislikes. But we are a united group. What unites us is friendship. When you look for a roommate, you are selective. When we look for sisters or brothers, we are selective.

The "we" in this letter are members of two competing organizations, yet our friendship transcends the barrier of competition. We are not the exceptions.

Saigon Continues To Suppress Students

BY TRAN VAN DINH
College Press Service

Since the condemnation to 5 years at hard labor of Nguyen Truong Con (the 23-year-old editor of Sinh Vien, the Saigon Student Union newspaper) on July 25, and that of Nguyen Dnag Trung (Chairman of the SSU, 10 years at hard labor in absentia) in August, the Saigon regime continues its crackdown on the students of South Vietnam.

On October 3, Nguyen Thanh Cong, Secretary General of the SSU, was given a suspended 3-year prison sentence on a charge of "undermining public security" by a military court after a three-hour trial.

The SSU headquarters at 4 Duy Tan Street in downtown Saigon was raided by the police on September 24. During the raid, police arrested student leaders - among them Nguyen Thanh Cong (also Chairman of the Medical Students Group) and Miss Dao Thi Nguyet Thanh, Secretary General of the SSU's Relief Committee.

The SSU headquarters was closely guarded and surrounded by security forces. This prompted Miss Tran Thi Ngoc Hao, acting SSU Chairman, to send a protest to the newspaper Cong Luan (Public Opinion) in which she said that the government action "interfered with the Union's internal affairs" and was "part of a plot by the dictatorial regime."

Representative Nguyen Trong Nho (a 31-year-old former student leader) sent on Sept. 27 a letter to Premier Tran Van Huong requesting that the government release the SSU headquarters from police siege. He said he would bring the matter before the House of Representatives if his demand was not met.

The suppression and arrest of students continues, however, despite the fact that the Saigon regime had replaced all arrested student leaders with pro-government "student" agents.

Why do the South Vietnamese students consistently oppose the Saigon regime? One answer can be found in a statement by the new Minister of Education, Le Minh Tri (who replaced Michigan State University-trained dentist Nguyen Van Tho). On Oct. 2, 1968, soon after he assumed his function, Minister Tri declared: "For a long time, the universities have been a complete mess. The professors are lazy or even never show up in classes."

He vowed "to lift the lid from the universities' garbage can and find out the true state of affairs." Mr. Le Minh Tri does not need to do that. If he simply looks around he will easily find out that it is the atrocious war, the foreign occupation, which revolts the conscience of the students in Vietnam and elsewhere.

Minister Tri could also see the truth if he read the following story in the Saigon Post of September 19, 1968 and changed the work "communist" to "resistance" or "Alliance of National Forces for Peace and Democracy." The story said. "Two University students admitted they have joined the Communist party because they did not want to see 'foreigners on the soil.'" The two appeared before a press conference given by National Police Director General, Colonel Tran Van Hai. They are Nguyen Van Chin, 24 and Ho Hung Van, 23, arrested by the police on September 10 and 13 respectively. Chin, a native of Quang Ngai province, and a second-year sociology student from the Van Hanh Buddhist University, Saigon, told newsmen "I was sorry not to be able to carry out the task entrusted me by the Communists." "What I'm now preparing to do is to be ready to appear before court." he added.

"Second-year law student Van, who was the secretary-general of the Law Students' Representative Group of the Saigon Student Union, told the questioners he did not want to see any 'foreighers in Vietnam' because 'such a presence prevents freedom of thought in the South.'"

"We do not accept a false freedom like the one now prevailing here, a freedom under pressure," Van added.

"When I was in graduate school, I wanted to make sure I'd get to use what I was learning. That's why I went into marketing at IBM," says John Houlihan.

John earned his MBA in 1966. He now sells IBM computers to mutual funds, banks and other financial institutions.

"It's a management consulting job," he says. "The reason is, computers affect nearly every area of a business. I get involved with a customer's accounting, finance, and marketing. Which means I have to know something about each of these areas. So I'm constantly using the broad scope of knowledge I picked up in graduate school."

Working at the top

Another management consulting aspect of John's job is the level of people he deals with. "Most of the time," he says, "I work with vice-presidents and the data processing manager. But I also have to deal with the president because he's often the only one who can give final approval.

"And when you're working with people on that level, you need the management tools you get in graduate school. If a customer starts talking about a regression analysis, I can stay with him. Or, I might get involved in a linear programming study to determine the optimum stock mix for a portfolio. Believe me, getting an MBA was worth the extra effort."

Career areas for MBA's

Marketing is only one of several areas for MBA's at IBM. Others include finance and engineering. MBA's in finance can work in Financial Planning and Control, Financial Analysis, Accounting, and Information Systems. In engineering, MBA's work mainly in industrial engineering and manufacturing.

Whatever area you choose, we think you'll agree with John: "Getting my MBA was worth the extra effort."

The Catonsville Nine: Strange Justice

By BOBBY BERGER
College Press Service

BALTIMORE (CPS) -- On May 17, 1968, nine clergy and lay Catholic anti-war activists napalmed the 1-A, 1-Y and 2-A draft files of Local Board 33 in Catonsville, Md. They were immediately arrested and indicted for damaging U. S. property valued at more than $100, destroying government records, interfering with the administration of the Selective Service System, and conspiracy to do all the above.

In an unusual trial last week amidst daily antiwar rallies, the nine were convicted on the first three counts, and now face maximum penalties of 18 years in prison and $22,000 fines.

During the summer the nine organized the "Catonsville Nine" Defense Committee to raise money, publicize the action, and invite everyone to their trial. The efforts resulted in a solid week of protest activities in Baltimore involving thousands of people from across the country. Priests SDSers, professors, nuns, students seminarians and housewives began arriving the weekend of Oct. 5.

Meanwhile the Maryland authorities decided to get a "piece of the action" by indicting the "Catonsville Nine" on State sabotage charges for the same May 17 action. Last week, Maryland police arrived at St. Ignatius Church to arrest two of the nine, Thomas Melville and George Mische, who were addressing a rally inside. In the first collective effort of the week, the audience surrounded Melville and Mische and left the church en masse, concealing them from the waiting police and postponing their arrest until Monday morning.

The week was marked by nightly rallies for the defendents, their lawyers and their supporters. On Tuesday, Oct. 8, hundreds marched to the U. S. Customs House in Baltimore and presented a black papier-mache coffin to the head of the Maryland SSS . 30 draft cards were burned at a rally Oct. 9. Each morning last week supporters gathered outside the courthouse to wait for a seat in court or to hold a vigil on the street outside.

Throughout the week, the Baltimore police cooperated with the Nine's supporters in planning demonstrations, and the courthouse marshals were helpful in seating the courtroom to its maximum capacity.

The courtroom was filled daily with long hair, nun's veils, beads, clerical collars, crosses and peace symbols. The defendants received standing ovations from the gallery and offered their seats to spectators in return. There were numerous outbursts of laughter and other breaches of courtroom decorum which the judge was willing to allow the spectators, many of whom had traveled long distances to support the "Nine" in court. When the jury returned the guilty verdict a spectator said, "Members of the jury, you have just convicted Jesus Christ." At this, Judge Roszel C. Thompson finally lost his patience and ordered the courtroom cleared.

The government dropped the conspiracy charge when court opened Monday morning. Then Judge Thompson and prosecutor Arthur Murphy selected the jury from a panel of 36. To demonstrate its lack of faith in the jury system, the defense refused to take part in the selection process. A jury of average-age 56 was chosen.

The government had little to prove. All the defendants admitted burning the files. Furthermore, the whole incident was recorded on film by a TV reporter acting on a tip from an "anonymous source in the peace movement." Technically, however, all the evidence had to be presented, so the prosecution called the TV reporter, and FBI man and two clerks from the Catonsville draft board. The defense watched quietly challenging hardly any government evidence.

The defense consisted entirely of the defendants' own testimony as evidence of their good motives and lack of criminal intent. Each gave a complete autobiography, emphasizing his disenchantment with U. S. foreign and domestic policy.

Although the prosecutors objected many times to the wide-ranging nature of the defendants' testimony, the judge was determined to allow the Nine their say and overruled them. Cross-examination consisted of one question to each defendant: "Did you knowingly interfere with the administration of the Selective Service System on May 17?" The answer was always the same: "Yes."

The government summation Thursday stressed three points: the damage to the files was in excess of $100; the normal workings of the board were hindered; and, regardless of the motivation, the defendants had no right to burn the files.

Chief defense attorney William Kunstler made an appeal to the jury to decide the case "not on the basis of the facts, but on the principles of the issues involved." For the third time during the trial, he compared it with the trials of Socrates and Jesus. Reviewing the testimony, he recalled the defendants' moving criticism of U. S. foreign policy: "They did it to hinder a system which was evil, immoral and destroying lives." His efforts were aimed at convincing just one juror to ignore the judge's charge and vote for acquittal on principle. Answering that effort, Judge Thompson's first words to the jury were, "It is your duty to accept without question my interpretation of law. The law does not recognize a higher law as justification for crime." He very clearly eliminated the testimony of the defendants: "History may judge them right, but that is not our concern."

SBA Dean to Chair Convention Today

Dr. Wendell R. Smith, Dean of the School of Business Administration at the University of Massachusetts, will serve as chairman of the Third National Marketing Conference, Today and Tomorrow in Washington, D.C.

The conference has been called by Secretary of Commerce C. R. Smith to discuss the work of the National Marketing Advisory Committee's various task forces over the past year and to develop recommendations for future marketing programs of the Department of Commerce and the Advisory Committee. The Advisory Committee consists of 60 marketing experts from all parts of the nation.

The task forces have been concerned with consumer services in slum areas, consumer issues, the changing nature of competition, and support for doctoral dissertations in business.

Dean Smith is also Chairman of the National Marketing Advisory Committee and its Executive Committee.

MLK Plans Entertainment For Night of Inquiry

Members of the Martin Luther King Jr. Social Action Council are currently working on plans for musical entertainment for November's Night of Inquiry. Gilbert Salk, interim Executive Secretary of the Council, reported that as of last Friday, the Petroleum Jelly Jug Band and folk singer, and former University student, Pete Ward had definitely agreed to perform. Salk also said that the Hello Friends Folk Society was helping the Council in arranging entertainment for the program.

Program Council Seeks Members

On Tuesday the Student Union Program Council will hold a meeting for all members and interested students in the Council Chambers of the Student Union.

The Program Council is composed of 8 committees which sponsor many of the events which take place in the Union. The committees are: Art, Dance, Music, Movie, Personnel, Publicity, Recreational Activities, Special Events. There are openings on several of the committees.

The Art committee is responsible for the many different showings which take place in the Union during the course of the year, such as the photos in the corridor behind the lobby as well as using local talent, the committee deals on a national basis.

The Dance Committee sponsors many of the dances which take place in the Union, such as the Registration dances.

The Movie Committee handles all the arrangements for the Sunday and Thursday night movies which are shown in the ballroom. The committee also handles the actual showing of the movies.

The Music Committee puts on concerts during the year, make arrangements for lectures, and orders the magazines for the Union's reading room.

The Recreational Activities Committee will be sponsoring such events as skating parties on the pond this winter, the Chess Club, and a Bridge tournament.

The Special Events Committee is responsible for many of the events in the Union, such as the Bridal Fair.

The Publicity Committee is responsible for the publicity which each of the Council's events receives.

The Personnel Committee acts as a clearing house for applicants to the Council, reviewing applications, and assigning people to the various committees of the Council.

Self Destruction of Universities Charged by Columbia Professor

Jacques Barzun, a leading scholar and critic of higher education, charged that American universities had destroyed themselves by turning into "a public utility."

Instead of devoting themselves to teaching and scholarship, he said, faculty members "are on the run" to do the bidding of government, industry, private donors, the foundations and others who press for "service." Dr. Barzun made his remarks at a news conference that introduced his new book, "The American University - How It Runs, Where It Is Going."

"I have nothing against the university studying social problems or commenting on what is going on out of its fund of knowledge," he added. "But the university is getting to resemble the Red Cross more than a university, with direct help to whomever is suffering now."

He said "the students have felt removed from the center of the university's concern."

While opposing the demands to give students new powers in the management of the universities, he said he sympathized with them as the victims of "increasingly poor teaching or nonteaching or idiotically professional (specialized) teaching where they wanted or expected a liberal education."

This, he added, is what "the students can and should raise the roof about."

The issue of the university's active involvement in critical issues of society were crucial in the controversies that led to last spring's student rebellion at Columbia, where Dr. Barzun, as dean of faculties and provost for 12 years, had been a key administration member until that institution's reorganization a little over a year ago. He now holds the title of university professor, a rank of special distinction, but with no administrative powers.

The students had demanded that Columbia take an active hand in solving the problems of Harlem. The Ford Foundation gave the institution a $10-million grant to concentrate on urban problems, particularly those of the Negro minorities and poverty.

In an apparent reference to the current slogan of the Urban Coalition, Dr. Barzun angrily rejected such university functions.

"Though I see signs everywhere asking people to 'give a damn,' I am convinced that nobody among the vocal and idealistic gives a damn about education," he said.

"Having turned worldly, 'gone public,' the university is everybody's target," Dr. Barzun said.

Of the charges that the universities have failed to change or innovate to meet current crises, he replied that, on the contrary, "since 1945 the universities have been doing nothing but innovate - take on things they had no ability or means of performing, and that's why they are in their present mess -- financially and spiritually."

To ask for change without specifying what kind of change, he went on, "is close to insanity."

Dr. Barzun's attack on the universities as activist institutions reopened a debate that has been carried on through much of American higher education's history. Over a hundred years ago, the purist European tradition of universities was challenged by the creation of the land-grant colleges as agencies to support the agricultural and industrial revolution.

In recent months, Dr. Clark Kerr, former president of the University of California, has called on the urban universities to take on similar responsibilities in solving the problems of the cities.

But in the earlier student uprising at Berkeley in 1964 a substantial part of the complaint by undergraduates paralleled Dr. Barzun's charges. They charged that Dr. Kerr's "multiversity" had become "a knowledge factory" at the service of government and industry.

In another approach to the controversial question of the universities' purpose, Dr. James A. Perkins, president of Cornell, called for a tripartite balance between teaching, research and public service.

A Sense of Violent Camaraderie

Rugby or English football came to UMass early in spring '68 on a club basis. That spring, the team captain and organizer, Jeff Freedman, made a schedule of four games. Because of the newness of the game to the UMass squad, all four games were lost.

This fall, The Rugby club formed again to prepare for their fall schedule. 40 players came out for the team which was divided into A and B squads. Currently, the A squad has a 1-4 record while the B team if 2-2.

Although Rugby is new at UMass, it is not new to the rest of the world. Rugby was born in England as a large brawl between two neighboring villages.

The object of the game was for both villages to fight over the ball until one village successfully moved the ball from a centrally located point between the two towns to their town square.

Since its violent beginning, Rugby has refined to its present day status. The game is played on a field 110 yards long and 70 wide. At each end of the field, 10 yard end zones and goal posts are located.

Unlike modern Rugby's ancestor, the modified brawl, which lasted for hours, Rugby is divided into two fourty minute halves with a five minute halftime break. The entire game is played with 15 players with no substitution or time outs allowed and no protective padding.

Scoring in Rugby is somewhat different than from football. Three points are awarded for a try (similar to a touchdown), three points for a field goal which is a dropkick through the upright, three points for a penalty kick, a placekick through the uprights and a two point conversion attempt after a try.

The fifteen players are divided into seven backs and eight forwards. The backs are similar to the running backs while the forwards are comparable to the line in football.

One of the major formations in Rugby is called a scrum. The scrum is a triangular shaped pack formed by the forwards which faces the opposing scrum in a scrum-down or ruck. Scrumdowns form in the middle of the field following certain penalties or over a tackled runner.

The scrums push over the ball, trying to heel the ball out behind them to the scrum-half, a back who throws the ball out to the backfield. The backfield attempts to move the ball downfield. The backfield attempts to move the ball downfield by running lateral or backward passing and kicking in hopes of scoring a try or a field goal.

The other major formation is a line-out which is used to return an out of bounds ball back into play. The forwards form two opposing lines at the point where the ball went over the sideline and the backs line up across the field in a diagonal wing behind their forwards.

The wing (one of the backs) of the team which did not put the ball out of bounds throws the ball between the two lines, each line jumping to gain possession of the ball.

Besides these basic elements of the game, other intangible elements of Rugby, speed, endurance and spirit make Rugby the exciting sport.

The ruggers of UMass play for the enjoyment of the game with no scholarship incentive to fight for. They are proud of the game they play.

Injuries Continue to Haunt Redmen Eleven

She Has a Point

MEXICO CITY (AP) - The best quote of the 1968 Summer Olympics can be attributed to Mrs. Maxine Miller, 57, U.S. fencer, told of the compulsory sex test: "If I fail, what am I going to tell my eight grandchildren--call be grandpa?"

Robby, Nangle Sidelined Kickoff Coverage Hurts

by Peter Pascarelli
Assistant Sports Editor

If anyone else gets hurt on the UMass football team, the cheerleaders will have a new cheer, "Is there a doctor in the house." It's gotten so bad now, that the Redman marching band has more depth showing off four different conductors in the pregame show. And they talk about two platoon football.

This week injuries again played a big part in a UMass loss. It's pretty naive to say they were the only reason and anyone from the coaches to the much harried trainer would agree. But the fact remains that if Randy Robinson did not injure his ankle in the second quarter things might have been different.

This is not to put the finger on any of his replacements. When you lose, everyone loses. But before Robinson left, Connecticut was trailing 14-6, and while he was gone the Huskies went on to win, 27-20. UConn amassed an awesome 33-6 net yards in rushing, much of it over Robinson's old linebacker spot.

If you have watched an UMass football this year, you know that no one runs over Randy Robinson too much. UMass coach Vic Fusia said of the injury, "We lost quite a bit when we lost Randy."

Robinson is lost indefinitely with his injury. Also hurt against UConn was Jim Nangle, who will be out for a week with a concussion. Pat Scavone and Dennis Gray both were shaken up but are all right.

Pete Petrillo had his share in defeating the Redmen. The UConn quarterback scored three touchdowns and one two point conversion, while rushing for 125 yards.

He only completed eight of 17 passes but completed them at the right time. Fusia, who has coached some pretty fair signal callers, said of Petrillo, "He is an effective passer because he can run so well. I thought he called a brilliant game."

Petrillo was aided by two backfield associates, Vin Clements and Jim DeWitt, who ran for 115 and 104 yards respectively. As UConn coach John Toner said, "When you have three backs like that, no defense can key on any one person."

The fact that Petrillo scored his three markers on the same play, a rollout to the left, was a source of irritation for Fusia. "We knew what they would do," said Fusia, "And we had the players in position. But defenses can get you just so far and then it is up to the individual, to do the job. We have not been doing the job."

The UMass coach is still upset, to put it mildly, at the inconsistency of the squad. "We haven't any semblance of consistent play since the beginning of the year," said Fusia. "The cause for this may be the many changes we have been forced to make because of our injuries."

Fusia also is disappointed in his kick coverage. He termed the yard kickoff return at the beginning of the second half by UConn's Mike Zito, "one of the key plays in the game."

"That play took a lot out of us," said the coach. He also termed his kick coverage as, "very average."

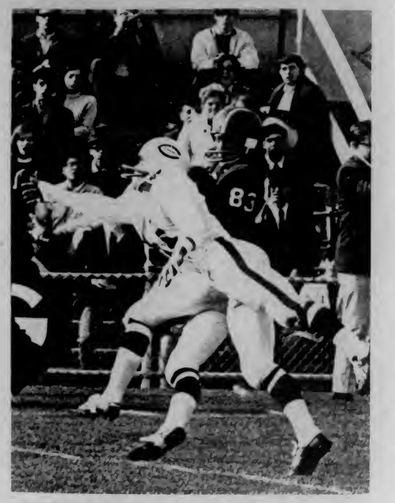
If there were any redeeming features about this fifth straight loss, it may have been the excellent outside running of Scavone and John Decembrele plus the return to form of Nick Warnock.

Fusia commenting on Scavone's and Decembrele's running said, "It was a case of good individual efforts on their parts, because our blocking has left much to be desired."

Scavone averaged nine yards a carry Saturday while Decembrele averaged nearly 10. Both picked up vital first downs to keep drives going.

UMass quarterback Tim Adams looked sharp in the passing department. Fusia said of Adams, "Tim is throwing real well. He completed over 50% (14 for 27) and had three passes dropped." Steve Parhell also was a good yard gainer as the junior caught two passes, one for a touchdown.

Warnock meanwhile, grabbed five aerials, one for a touchdown, in his best performance of the year.



Fusia also praised Bruce Cochrane, Bob Sheehan, Bill Frye and Mike McCardle for fine performances.

UMass still faces four tough ballgames. The Redmen are still conceivably in position for a piece of the conference title, what with Rhode Island's loss to Maine. But with injuries and that old problem of inconsistency, a conference title seems a distant hope.

But Fusia won't give up that hope. "We will play as many of our players to get the right combination together and play consistently well. We'll work for it."

The trouble is no one is staying in one piece long enough to be consistent. As one assistant coach was heard to say Saturday as he looked at the new six foot Indian statue, "Maybe we can use him in the backfield." Or maybe the coaches could pray to the Great Pumpkin.

REDMEN RANTINGS - UMass unveiled a new formation with three wide men to one side. . . When UMass scored in the second period to go ahead, it was the first time in 10 periods that the Redmen had led. . . . Craig Lovell made like Homer Jones after his touchdown as the big halfback slammed down the ball while crossing the goaline. . . . The referee who was the same gentleman that was in Rhode Island again came up a good trick. A UMass drive was squelched when the referee threw a good block against Adams as he ran the right sideline. . . The injury jinx has spread over to the basketball team as highly regarded freshman hoop prospect Julius Irving broke his thumb during a practice session last week. . . As already mentioned Maine upset Rhode Island 14 - 9.

Tufts Downs Booters, 2-0

BY WALT STACHURA

An inefficient offense continued to plague the UMass soccer team as they were shutout for the second game in a row, 2-0, by Tufts last Saturday at Medford. The loss was the fourth in a row for the Redmen after two opening victories.

Two second period goals proved to be the downfall for the UMass booters. After a close and even first quarter, Ed Hockmeyer opened the scoring for Tufts with a goal at the 11 minute mark.

Two minutes later, Redmen halfback Paul Bregoli was detected for pushing in the penalty area and the Jumbos were awarded a penalty shot. Don Gardner took the shot and beat UMass goalie Steve Kramer cleanly.

Both teams had several scoring chances in the second half but were unable to dent the twines. Steve Kramer made several fine saves to keep the margin down to two goals.

The big difference between the teams appeared to be the accuracy of the Jumbo booters. While both squads took 15 shots at net, the Jumbos managed to make Kramer stop 14 shots while the Tufts goalie had an easy day with only 4 saves.

UMass soccer coach Peter Broala said that Tufts outhustled the Redmen and were beating his players constantly to the ball giving Tufts control of the ball for a good part of the game.

One bright spot for the Redmen continued to be Duane Brown. According to Broaca, "Brown is the lone spark in an otherwise disapointing front line."

The defense came in for a large share of Broaca's compliments in the Tufts game. He said, "Bill Sanborn was outstanding and Kramer turned in a creditable job."

Other players that drew compliments were halfback Rich Matuszaczak and inside Mike Korpita. Korpita played well up front in the second half and may see much more action in future games.

The Redmen will swing right back into action today against Worcester Tech at varsity field starting at 2:30.

Broaca describes the Engineers as a scrappy and well-coached team. They have compiled a 6-1-1 record beating Hartford, Holy Cross, MIT and Assumption. Their lone loss was to Tufts, 2-1, and they played a scoreless tie against Coast Guard last Saturday.

Worcester Tech has done a good job with many underclassmen and inexperienced players. They have only three returning starters from last year's team which beat UMass, 3-2.

The returning starters are goalie Kuntholm, who is co-captain along with fullback Paul Hynes. The third returning starter is another fullback, Ray Pauik.

SDS Protests; ROTC Just Drills

By JAN CURLEY
Assistant Managing Editor

An SDS (Students for Democratic Society) sponsored group held an "anti-ROTC Picnic; love-in and red, white and blue freakout" on the intramural field yesterday morning as part of their plan to protest ROTC. ROTC ignored them and continued drill instruction as scheduled.

The group carried signs bearing the words; "peace", Does the Army kill? Of course not" and "Deep down we all want to play war. Kill, gooks, march." When the drills began, about 35 of the group ran down the hill onto the field. One of them taped a sign to a light pole and a small boy carried another sign which said, "Peace".

The group sat down about midfield while the ROTC companies formed ranks. When the ROTC units started to march, the SDS group began to march around the field carrying an American flag backwards. When they marched past the group of about 100 onlookers, they raised clenched fists and cheered.

The demonstrators goose-stepped behind two of the ROTC battalions. Three of the SDS members mounted the stand used by the band director during practices and waved an American flag and raised a sign.

The drummer became the object of the demonstrators as several of them formed a circle around him and waved a sign in his face. Drill instructors ordered the drummer to move to another position on the field. A girl sat down near the drummer until the end of the protest.

Six protestors formed a rear guard to one of the ROTC companied and called out extra numbers as the battalion marched around the field.

A man passed out pamphlets seeking the end of the draft. The pamphlets also stated that "conscription is totalitarian" and it is "immoral."

The protesters left the field at noon as the drill broke up. Throughout the demonstrations, the SDS group did not go near the end of the field where the Air Force ROTC was having their drills.

Latest Political Roundup

(AP) -- Richard M. Nixon predicted he'd win the presidency by three million to five million votes next Tuesday; Hubert H. Humphrey derided him for not debating, and George C. Wallace suggested the rich pay their "rightful share" of income taxes, in Tuesday's campaign oratory.

Nixon was in Syracuse, N.Y., at a party rally that drew 12,000 to the War Memorial Auditorium. He talked directly for the first time in his campaign, to a group of student protestors, nearly 1,000 strong, answering their prepared questions.

Humphrey, welcoming Tuesday's statement of support from Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy, whom he beat for the Democratic presidential nomination, saw "a tremendous upward movement of my candidacy."

Campaigning in Philadelphia and Bethlehem, Pa., the vice president denounced Nixon's failure to meet him in debate, saying anyone unable to face the opposition at home would be "unable to face the enemy and opposition abroad."

Third party candidate Wallace issued a position paper saying the federal income tax laws must be rewritten to lighten the burden of the small wage earner and make the rich pay "their rightful share."

The three vice presidential candidates were in the South-Republican Gov. Spiro T. Agnew in Charleston, S.C., Democratic Sen. Edmund S. Muskie in Texas, and Wallace's running mate, Curtis E. LeMay, in Shreveport, La.

Agnew got no applause during his speech to about 2,000 aircraft parts workers, but drew some clapping at the end.

Muskie, speaking in Lubbock and Amarillo, Tex., said of Nixon's candidacy, "Why now? He wasn't good enought in 1960 for the country."

Five peace demonstrators were arrested at a Shreveport airport rally for retired Air Force Gen LeMay.

McCarthy Reluctantly Endorses HHH, Clouds Own Future

WASHINGTON (AP) -- Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy, D-Minn., endorsed Hubert H. Humphrey for the presidency Tuesday but left his own political future clouded in a smokescreen of vague answers.

McCarthy said in announcing he would vote for the man who defeated him for the Democratic nomination, that he would not seek re-election to the Senate in 1960 as a "candidate of my party" nor would he seek the 1972 Democratic presidential nomination.

In a formal statement, the Minnesota senator fired fresh criticism at party leaders' handling of the Chicago convention. He said he would not ask young people to stay in the party in another election "unless there has been change" in its organization.

Told by reporters that his formal statement left his future political intentions unclear, McCarthy replied with the air of a man who wanted it that way: "That's the way it is."

Did he intend to leave the Democratic party and possibly run for the Senate on another ticket?

"I didn't say that," McCarthy said.

Was he saying he wouldn't run for the Senate or the presidency again?

"No, I'm not saying that."

McCarthy's endorsement of Humphrey was marked with the reluctance he has displayed in refusing his support to Humphrey, a long time political associate, since the stormy August party convention.

He said he is backing Humphrey because of the latter's record and what the nominee has said about domestic problems in this campaign. He said Humphrey is his choice over Richard M. Nixon, the Republican presidential nominee.

"Hubert Humphrey has shown a better understanding of our domestic needs and a stronger will to act than has been shown by Richard Nixon," McCarthy said.

He added that "with Hubert Humphrey as president, the possibility of scaling down the arms race and reducing military tensions in the world would be much greater than it would be with Richard Nixon...."

Disregarding the reservations, Humphrey accepted this watered down endorsement with outward enthusiasm.

McCarthy declined comment on whether he thinks Humphrey can defeat Nixon. But the Minnesota senator said he thinks Humphrey's position has improved lately.

One immediate plus for Humphrey was McCarthy's announcement that he will speak for the presidential nominee at a party rally in the Los Angeles area Wednesday night. Previously the Minnesota senator has campaigned for antiwar policy candidates for the Senate and House, without mentioning Humphrey's name.

Wallace Rally Harbors Hostility - SDS Passes Out Anti-Wallace Paper

By ROSE MILLER
Staff Reporter

Mr. Harold Beck, a former UMass professor of Mechanical Engineering and former member of the John Birch Society, spoke at a rally for George Wallace in SBA 120 last night. In front of a hostile audience he described Wallace "as the only candidate who stands up for Americans first and would end the Vietnam War quickly."

The undercurrent of noise by some of the 75 people attending was frequent and often turned the address titled, Why Wallace?, into a dialogue. At times the audience reaction to the address reached disruptive proportions as Mr. Beck gave his major reasons for supporting Wallace.

While fielding the sarcastic comments and questions, Mr. Beck continued his lecture by connecting the increase of crime in the United States and the backdown of religion with the attempts of the Communists to bring about a revolution in the United States. He also contended that the educational school system has caused a lack of respect for law and order in American society.

On the issue of ending the Vietnam War, Mr. Beck said, "Wallace is the only candidate that would win the war, since Wallace has said that if negotiations fail, he would turn to the generals for a solution."

He explained Wallace's position, "as wanting to stop the war, but not just quitting." For he maintains that if we just quit, the Communist will take over the government and we will have sacrificed the lives of our fighting men as we did in Korea. "The

Anti Soviet Demonstrators Errupt In Czechoslovkia Despite Warning

BRATISLAVA, Czechoslovakia (AP) - Anti-Soviet demonstrations broke out again Tuesday night in defiance of a government warning. Young Czechoslovaks roamed the city's streets shouting, "Russians Go Home." and "Brezhnev boo boo boo."

Police and militiamen pushed back the young people who came to the Slovak national theater to cheer the nation's liberal leaders. The government chiefs are visiting this Slovak capital on the second day of Czechoslovakia's celebration of its 50th anniversary as a republic.

The demonstration followed a statement in Prague by Jan Mayer, deputy minister of the interior, that Czechoslovak police were determined to carry out their "duty of maintaining public order," after tens of thousand called in Prague Monday for a Soviet troop withdrawal.

Earlier, tens of thousands of Slovaks wildly applauded the arrival of President Ludvik Svoboda and Communist party chief Alexander Dubcek. As their eight-car special train pulled in, the crowd broke through police lines, scattered a band and an honor guard and mobbed the railway station.

Mayer's warning underscored a law, passed after the invasion, that restricts the right of assembly in the interest of Soviet demands for a return to a less liberal kind of communism here.

Svoboda, Dubcek, National Assembly President Josef Smrkovsky and Premier Oldrich Cernik arrived from Prague, where Monday's golden jubilee of the republic became a tumult in 12 hours of demonstrations by youths shouting anti-Soviet slogans.

Svoboda is to sign Wednesday the new charters that create semi-autonomous Czech and Slovak states, joined in federation.

It was at Bratislava, on the Danube River 175 miles southeast of Prague, that Dubcek and his reformist followers signed a formal agreement with their Soviet bloc critics in a preinvasion showdown Aug. 3.

The Czechoslovaks asserted at the time their eight-month-old experiment with making communism function democratically emerged intact from that meeting and the principle of noninterference by other nations in their internal affairs was reaffirmed. Smrkovsky declared: "At last normal days can begin."

But it didn't work out that way.

Canada Crossing Planned To Fund Vietnam Red Cross

The Amherst Area Quaker Action Committee is planning a third crossing into Canada on November 9 to bring cash gifts to the Canadian Friends Service Committee, who will purchase the medical supplies for all victims of the Vietnam War at cost.

The supplies will be forwarded to the Red Cross of North Vietnam, South Vietnam, and the National Liberation front. The group was warned last year before a crossing that the Treasury Department had ruled such gifts a violation of the Trading with the Enemy Act. The Committee will assume all legal and technical responsibility.

The crossing into Canada will be at the bridge at Derby Line, Vt., on Route 5, at 3:00 p.m., after a silent vigil.

The group will be met by Canadian friends and a representative of the Canadian Friends Service Committee who will receive the funds.

Those who wish to join them will meet at Woolman Hill, Deerfield, at 8:30 a.m. Saturday, November 9.

Yippie Jerry Rubin Is Charged With Inciting Mob Action

CHICAGO (AP) - Yippie leader Jerry Rubin reportedly was named in a true bill Tuesday charging him with solicitation to commit mob action for inciting crowds in downtown Grant Park Aug. 28 during the Democratic National Convention.

Three other men also were reportedly named by the Cook County Grand Jury on charges ranging from aggravated battery to solicitation to commit mob action.

The others are Benjamin Ortiz, 20, of Camden, N.J.; David Lee Edmundson, 18 of Birmingham, Ala., and Douglas Cox, 18, of Des Moines , Iowa. Rubin lives in New York City.

Robert Pierson, a state's attorney's policemen, reportedly told the grand jury that Rubin shouted to crowds over a megaphone"kill the pigs." Pierson, disguised as a Yipple, acted as Rubin's bodyguard during the week of the Democratic National Convention.

In another action stemming from the convention, the leader of a motorcycle gang known as the "Headhunters," was arrested in connection with an alleged plot to dynamite a baseball diamond where police massed in Lincoln Park.

RFK Memorial Will Continue Ideals, Work

WASHINGTON (AP) - Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., announced Tuesday the creation of a Robert F. Kennedy foundation to work in areas of poverty, crime and education as "a living memorial" to his assassinated brother.

The $1-million foundation, to be called the Robert F. Kennedy Memorial, will be "an action-oriented program that we think will carry on his concerns, his actions, his efforts to work on so many of the problems in this country that have no solutions," Kennedy said.

Robert Kennedy's widow, Ethel, said in a statement that she feels the memorial will "carry forward the ideals and carry on the work so important in the life of my husband."

"He wanted to encourage the young people and to help the disadvantaged and discriminated against both here and abroad, and he wanted to promote peace in the world," she said. "These will be the goals of the memorial."

"Rather than itself attempting to solve any given problem," Kennedy said of the memorial, "it will seek to bring together on a case-by-case basis the resources, people and organization necessary for a continuing attack on it."

Memorial funds, which will be raised through donations, will be used on projects in the areas of poverty, education, housing, crime and violence in this country and poverty and hunger abroad, Kennedy said.

Robert S. McNamara will act as chairman of the executive committee of the memorial. Thomas J. Watson, chairman of the board of IBM, is finance chairman and Frederick G. Dutton, former assistant secretary of state under President John F. Kennedy, is the memorial's director.

Battleship N.J. Delivers Heaviest Blow in Month

SAIGON (AP) - The battleship New Jersey for the second time within a week has turned its 16-inch guns on the demilitarized zone and with other warships and planes delivered one of the heaviest blows in a month, the U.S. Command said Tuesday.

The action began Monday with saturation-type raids by 3 of the eight-engine B52s, the other powerhouse in the U.S. arsenal, on the zone dividing the Vietnams, and the region just to the north.

When U.S. Marine fighter-bombers followed up with attacks on the North Vietnamese half of the zone, they came under intense ground fire.

The New Jersey was called in and directed its 2,700-pound shells at the eastern sector of the zone until they silenced nearly all enemy fire, the U.S. Command said. Reconaissance flights showed the shells destroyed at least one anti-aircraft site.

The New Jersey went into action for the first time in support of ground action last Friday, when she destroyed bunkers in the demilitarized zone. Since taking station in the Gulf of Tonkin Sept. 3, the New Jersey has been used chiefly to shell targets in North Vietnam's panhandle.

Monday was a busy day over the panhandle for Air Force, Navy and Marine jet fighter-bombers. They flew 139 missions. It was their busiest day since Oct. 3, when they logged 143 missions.

"The attacking crews continued to concentrate on road and river traffic, interdicting the southward flow of supplies and material," a U.S. communique reported.

As the lull on the battlefields continued Tuesday U.S. Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker met again with President Nguyen Van Thieu, and then failed to show up for a dinner party to which he had been invited by American correspondents.

A U.S. mission spokesman said that more pressing business had kept Bunker away from the dinner party.

Grad. Senate Meets Discusses Parking

Committee reports and appointments dominated the third meeting of the Graduate Student Senate Monday night.

Sen. Allan Hartwell, chairman of the parking committee, gave an extensive report on the fact finding and negotiating activities of his committee over the past two weeks.

He reported that both his committee and the administration knew of a number of sites for parking lots which would increase the number of spaces available for graduate students and others, and that both sides are aware of the fact that improvements in other lots could result in a substantial increase in the number of spaces on campus. However, the failure of the state legislature to appropriate amounts requested for parking lot improvement and construction has stymied efforts to capitalize upon these opportunities.

Chairman Hartwell reported further that his committee was participating in the development of a preregistration procedure for parking places. The procedure would be designed to reduce or eliminate the long lines which have characterized auto registration on campus in recent years, he said. Part of the preregistration procedure would include the formulation of a list designating relative priorities of several classes of faculty, staff and students for parking spaces.

Hartwell's motion that unearmarked funds which were collected from graduate students under the new fee system was defeated. His resolution that the Graduate Student Senate request the administration to allow residents of Prince House, the graduate student dormitory, to park their autos weekends in parking area 1 was passed by a voice vote.

James Collins, last year's President of the undergraduate Student Senate and this year a graduate student in government here, was appointed Parliamentarian to the Graduate Student Senate. Senator James Thompson of the government department was appointed to the second nonvoting seat in the Faculty Senate reserved for members of the GSS. This seat, awarded at the last Faculty Senate meeting, carries the right of recognition. President Thomas Minogue holds the other nonvoting Graduate Student Senate seat.

Irene Ajiri was delegated by the Graduate Student Senate as the graduate student representative on the Student Union Governing Board, replacing Ethan Roberts, GSS treasurer. Roberts resigned from S.U.G. Board due to pressure of other duties.

Michael Rosen, secretary of the GSS and chairman of the social committee, reported that his committee was completing plans for its first social event of the year. Called 'Fall Affair', it is to be cosponsorrd by the International Students Club. It will be held Friday evening Nov. 1 in Memorial Hall.

WALLACE RALLY

United States policy of dragging the war, " he said, "is part of the 'no win' policy advocated by the civilian bosses of South Vietnam."

"Crime is caused by a state of mind," Mr. Beck contended pursuing the topic of the decay of the American society and the resulting foothold the Communist have made in overtaking the government.

This 'state of mind' in regard to getting away with disobeying authority, he attributed to John Dewey's educational theories of re-teaching students. As to the ignoring of religious practices, he asserted that "John D. Rockerfeller Sr. had financed the work of Dr. Henry F. Ward to teach divinty students to preach atheism."

In the middle of the lecture the Students for a Democratic Society from four college areas passed out a paper pointing out Wallace's shortcomings in advancing the well-being of the state of Alabama while he was governor. A few minutes before the conclusion of the question and answer period, the majority of the students attending stood up and left noisely.

Wagner Chorale Well Received

BY GALE SAKARIS
Fine Arts Staff

The Roger Wagner Chorale gave its first appearance on campus on Tuesday, October 29, 1968, in Bowker Auditorium. The Chorale consists of people mostly from the Los Angeles area who are auditioned by Dr. Wagner for the group.

As the audience was waiting for the concert to begin, it could hear the chorale warming up in the hall under the auditorium.

When the program did begin the chorale displayed great facility and a full rich choral sound. Even though the group consists of only twenty eight members, it displayed as much power as a choir twice its size.

Musically, the interpretation of Dr. Wagner and the response which he received from his chorale was impeccable. Their Renaissance style was perfect, light yet solid with very clear lines.

As part of their program the chorale did excerpts from Brahms' German Requiem. This was arranged for piano, four hands, timpani, and bass. The instrumentalists were excellent. Their technique was flawless, and their performance was of the utmost clarity.

Unfortunately, the articulation of the chorale was not always what it should be for such a professional ensemble. It was often difficult to decipher what the chorale was saying when they were singing ensemble despite the fact that individual sections were clear in their pronunciation. Also often consonants were not pronounced together.

The highlight of the program was the Chichester Psalms by Leonard Bernstein. Jeannine Wagner sang the boy soprano solo and did an excellent job of performing with the quality of a boy soprano.

Solos were also well performed by John Dyar, baritone; Maurita Phillips Thornburg, soprano; Lyle Jewell, bass-baritone; Breanda Fairaday, soprano; John Seabury, baritone; and John Mack Ousley, baritone.

The Chorale is a very excellent ensemble. They have an excellent blend and each section generates a good tone, especially the tenors. The tenor section is truly one of the best in existence -

Youth Advise LBJ on Bridging Generation Gap

WASHINGTON (AP) - A group of young White House Fellows gave President Johnson a series of recommendations Tuesday designed to help bridge the generation gap by enabling the voice of youth to be heard in high government councils.

The ideas ranged from appointment of a special assistant to the President for youth affairs to a national television series in which America's youth could bring their questions directly to the chief decision makers.

Johnson launched the program of White House Fellows in 1965 to give promising young men and women one year's experience as assistants to Cabinet officers or in the White House.

Sixty-eight of them have formed an association. Johnson asked them to look into ways of getting the college generation involved in discussions with government leaders. He hailed their report and said it deals with a crucial problem of today: "How can we really involve young people in the institutions that are shaping their destiny".

Johnson also said he would like to see the president-elect bring together a wise variety of student leaders to get their ideas and suggestions during the period of transition of executive power.

MIT Resistance' Gives Soldier Sanctuary

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) - A 19-year-old soldier, who says he is absent without leave from the Army, was given sanctuary Tuesday by a group at Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

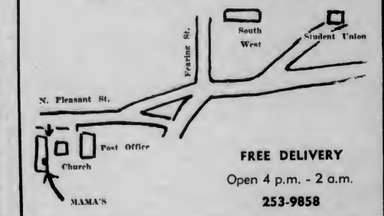
Pvt. Jack M. "Mike" O'Conner, a native of Goldsboro, N.C., was given sanctuary by members of the MIT Resistance in the second floor ballroom of the MIT Student Center.

Robert Shapiro of Teaneck, N.J., an MIT senior, spokesman for the college's Resistance Group, said members of the organization plan to live with O'Conner in the Student Center.

Shapiro said there were more than 600 youths, mostly students but some faculty members, at the center Tuesday afternoon.

An MIT spokesman said the youths were not disruptive and the college planned no immediate action.

O'Conner read a statement at a news conference saying he opposed the war in Vietnam and has been AWOL from Ft. Bragg in North Carolina since last Sept. 14.



"After I am taken back, they will try to force me into denouncing what I am doing here today," he said. "If I do make any statements, please disregard them."

Shapiro said O'Conner asked for sanctuary and had become interested in such action after talking to members of the New England Resistance, an antidraft, antiwar group, earlier this month when a soldier listed as a deserter was given sanctuary at Boston University.

CANDIDATES Discuss Problems, Solutions For Crime, Drugs

Associated Press editors recently conducted in-depth interviews with Vice-President Hubert H. Humphrey, the Democratic candidate; Richard M. Nixon, Republican and George C. Wallace, American Independent party, to elicit their positions on the major issues in the 1968 Presidential election.

Since the chances for a face-to-face debate among the presidential candidates have all but vanished, we have taken the parallel questions asked of each candidate and worked them into a series of articles that offers a close comparison of the kind that only a direct debate could provide otherwise.

Q. Law and order has been described as one of the main issues of this campaign. We would like to clarify this by taking law and order and breaking it down to specific problems. First, how would you combat the growth of organized crime which has steadily increased despite the efforts of the FBI and other law enforcement agencies.

HUMPHREY

Defeating organized crime requires, first of all, intensive cooperation among federal, state and local authorities. Organized crime has many facets to it, including counterfeiting, which is a special jurisdictional responsibility of the federal government. The narcotics problem is related to organized crime. There are other forms of rackets or racketeering that come under the category of organized crime and which fall under federal jurisdiction.

In these areas the federal government has a responsibility to exercise its influence and its powers. It has done so.

The federal government needs to strengthen and has done so, but needs to do more of it-to strengthen its district attorney's offices with with adequate personnel.

Now, because law and order is a national problem, and yet it is under local administration, it is my view that here is a very legitimate area for substantial federal assistance in funds, in personnel, in equipment, technical assistance.

What can the federal government do? Here is what I would do. Here is my program:

Increased federal aid to help states and localities to recruit, train, and pay the salaries of more policemen;

Expand federal, state and university programs for police training;

More assistance for local police to bring them the benefits of the nation's technology in areas such as communications and data processing;

Licensing and registration of firearms, by the Congress if the states fail to act;

Assistance to courts in expanding the number of court personnel and in reducing the backlog of cases;

Federal aid to correctional institutions to expand the numbers and training personnel to help rehabilitate offenders;

NIXON

"You start first with strengthening the organized crime division of the Department of Justice. I would strengthen it in terms of personnel and in terms of instructions to the top, that it is essential to wage an effective drive against organized crime.

"I would use the wiretapping power which has been given to the Justice Department by the Congress and which the attorney general has refused to use against organized crime because of his objections to that provision.

"My feeling about wiretapping is that it is a device I would prefer not to have to use in any free society, but we have to recognize that the police forces must, where electronic devices are concerned, at least be equal with the crime forces.

"I would enlist what I think is the major weapon not only in the case of crime but in the case of many of the activities that plague our society. And that is the tremendous power that exists in the volunteer agencies around this nation. For example, the National Junior Chamber of Commerce is taking as its project for the next year the project of respect for law in their programs of education in the schools and for their public meetings.

"If we can get the 4 million people who are members of volunteer organizations...involved in a national crusade of education for respect for law, I think that will get at the other end of the problem."

WALLACE

"I think the Justice Department ought to be more vigilant and I think the President ought to speak out on the matter of organized crime. I think he ought to lend the moral support of the presidency to the local law enforcement officials in the combating of organized crime.

"I don't think we need any additional laws. We need a commonsense interpretation of existing laws. We need some common sense application of rules of jurisprudence involved in confessions, involving obtaining evidence so that each time you arrest and convict someone for a crime they won't be turned loose because of the Supreme Court rule that the confession was taken, for instance, without a lawyer present.

"The different decisions of the court have handcuffed the police and law enforcement officials throughout the country in their fight against organized crime and also crime in the streets. It is almost impossible to convict anybody of any crime now, from the highest to the lowest.

"We see people in high places with their permissiveness on the matter of crime in the streets, the matter of looting and arson. No one has any respect for the law any more and I think this encourages and helps to bring about the commission of petty crime...."

Q. How would you deal with the widespread growth in recent years of petty crime mainly committed by youth which has infested every area in the country? And tied to this is the question of the growth of drug addiction, since much of the crime is commited to obtain funds for narcotics.

HUMPHREY

The fact is that there has been very little increase in adult crime in the last three or four years. Little if any. Another fact is that 80 per cent of crime is committed by persons who have committed a crime before and have been in penal institutions, or have been subject to penalty.

Therefore, we are learning a great deal about the quality of our correctional institutions-that they are not doing their jobs. Ninety-five cents out of every dollar spend on a correctional institution today is spent primarily for brick and mortar-that is, facilities-and for food and clothing and the maintenance of the facility rather than programs of education, training, rehabilitation and placement.

The great share of all crime today is committed by young people under 18, and a goodly share of the serious crime today is committed by young people 15 years of age and younger.

I think this tells us something about our social structure. It tells us, also, something about what is happening to some basic institutions in America.

For example, parents no longer have jobs for their young people in their little locally owned store. A worker, a factory worker, cannot take his son or daughter with him to the job. Young people are left a great deal more to themselves.

Then you come back once again to the central problem I have been mayor of a major city. There isn't a single city in the United States that is adequately policed. And when I use the term "adequately" I mean in terms of police quality, quantity, training and equipment.

The average police officer receives two-thirds of a living wage. He really is underpaid, and yet he is required to take on one of the most important jobs in our community, namely the protection of life and property. The same is true for firemen.

The recruitment standards for police officers in many communities are low.

If you want better police, however, you are going to have to pay for them

Therefore, my program is based upon strengthening the local and state law enforcement agencies. How? Federal assistance can be of great help. Most local governments today have an inadequate tax base.

One of Mr. Nixon's suggestions has been that we need a federal police training academy. Well, we have that in the Federal Bureau of Investigation today. When I was mayor of Minneapolis, the man I appointed as chief of police was trained by the FBI Academy. It has been greatly expanded in resources and personnel. I think it needs more. But what we need more than that is to have the funds and the personnel at a state and regional level so that we can integrate our police forces-state, county and local-and include within them training for the National Guard, which may be called upon for extreme situations such as riots, and where we can also coordinate our use of federal officers, so that we know the lines of command, so that we have some idea of the sharing of responsibilities and even our means of communication.

Now, we also need to improve our court procedures. In the average court today we have a delay on cases of a year or two years. This lends itself to all kinds of laxity, both in terms of court activity and police activity.

NIXON

"Organized crime is at the heart of this, because organized crime is responsible for perhaps two-thirds of all the narcotics traffic. And also, I think that the recent study in New York indicated that

English-Council to Discuss Black Writers in Classroom

The annual Fall Conference of the Western Massachusetts English Council will be held in the Student Union at the University of Massachusetts on Saturday, November 2. Teachers of English from Western Massachsetts will have an opportunity to share experiences with each other and with several exciting and informative speakers on the theme "Black Writers in the English Classroom".

Coffee hour, registration, and book displays at 9 a.m. will be followed at 10 by a panel discussion involving Miss Doris Abramson, Department of Speech and Drama, University of Massachusetts; Mr. Jeffrey Campbell, teacher of English at Putney School, Vermont and Mr. Bernard Bell, English Department, University of Massachusetts, both instructors for the upward Bound project at the University this summer.

Mr. Charles Moran and Mr. Charles Adams, English Department, Univeristy of Massachusetts, both of whom served as instructors in the Smith Summer Tutorial Program for Disadvantaged Students, will also participate.

At 11 the panel members will conduct group discussions with teachers present, while teachers will be able to view book displays at 12.

The 12:30 luncheon will precede an address by Professor Sidney Kaplan, English Department, University of Massachusetts; author of THE PORTRAYAL OF THE NEGRO IN AMERICAN PAINTING: and contributor to JOURNAL OF NEGRO HISTORY, NEW ENGLAND QUARTERLY, AMERICAN LIBERATION and NATION.

Williams College Administration Puts the Squeeze on Fraternities

Death came to Williams College fraternities as a result of an administration squeeze. At first only six were eliminated but a few days ago, the administration announced that even the social unit type fraternities would be ended.

As fraternities go, so goes the change of style of the campus. The word until about six years ago was to keep it cool, neat, and 'with it'. The campus hero was one who had a crew-cut, hit the books hard and the line harder. Now a dorsal view of some typical Williams students lends little assistance in determining which student has real reason to fight the draft.

Fraternities are out, but girls are coming in. Each year there is more effort to liberalize visiting hours and to get women enrolled in classes. Nearly everyone of the more than 1200 students can have a car.

So, from one end of fraternity row to the other, the six remaining social units are quietly letting the last vestiges of the Fitzgerald era slip away as the student body actively embraces the causes of coeducational campus life, protests and reform, hair, and more hair, and less and less draft.

By July 1970, fraternity life at Williams will be as obsolete as a civil defense observation tower.

But watch out for the sororities.

Candidates Debate

half the crime in New York is committed by people who were under the influence of narcotics in one way or another.

"The program I have advocated, with regard to greatly increasing the number of customs officials on our borders to stop the inflow of narcotics into the U.S., also increasing our diplomatic efforts with other countries from which those narcotics come, to see that we can cut them down, as well as a general program dealing with narcotics - I think will strike at one of the major sources of revenue for organized crime.

"At the heart of the narcotics problem is the pusher, the individual who sells them, the individual who profits from taking teen agers, in effect, and making them addicts.

"I think, again, first at the federal level where interstate traffic is involved, the federal government should not only in terms of penalties but in terms of its activities to apprehend such individuals, should step them up very greatly. And then I would have the attorney general, as I have indicated, launch a new federal, state and local program, so that we can enlist local law enforcement officials in apprehending and punishing those who are involved in the traffic.

"You have to enforce the law. More convictions will help in terms of the pushers. More education will help in terms of the users. You cannot have this permissive attitude that you see on television, for example, programs where people say, 'Well, pot isn't too bad. It is probably no worse than alcohol, and maybe not as bad.' I think we ought to try to get the cooperation of the television networks. I am not speaking of censorship. I am trying to get some voluntary activity on the part of people who should have a greater public conscience in that."

WALLACE

"I think the Justice Department and the states ought to really bear down on this matter of marijuana and LSD.

"I don't know that you need any further federal legislation. I think the states ought to handle it. However, transporting marijuana, LSD, across the state line is or should be a federal offense.

Times Editoral Concerning Agnew Is Questioned

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) - The campaign manager for Republican vice presidential candidate Spiro Agnew said Tuesday, "The New York Times has again clearly demonstrated that it is guilty of gutter policies. . . in reprinting its false and libelous editorial of Gov. Agnew."

George White, Agnew's campaign manager and attorney, issued the statement in reply to a second Times editorial in its Tuesday edition. This editorial generally supported an editorial the newspaper had published Saturday, criticizing Agnew for what it termed conflict of interest while a public official.

White said the Times "had stated it would reinvestigate the matter and print a retraction if the facts proved it wrong. Instead, on Tuesday morning it reprinted the libel."

Agnew has denied all the charges in the original editorial.

White said later that he would be in New York City Wednesday morning to talk with officials of The Times and demand a retraction.

Students For Ecumenical Action To Sponsor Seminar on Urbanization

Students for Ecumenical Action will sponsor the second in its series of Metropolitan Action Seminars Friday and Saturday, November 8 and 9 in Springfield. The Metropolitan Action Seminar (MAS) is an educational experiment in which students spend a short but intensive period of time in a city for the purpose of acquiring an understanding of the problems of urbanization and the imaginal tools and interpersonal skills for enacting the possibilities of urbanization.

The first MAS, held in New Haven, Connecticut, last spring was very successful and prompted the upcoming experiment in Springfield.

The students who have put the program together feel that it is imperative that the University begin to interact with its environment for the sake of creating a more human community. As a result of today's urbanized world, new life styles and patterns of human relationships are emerging.

It is the concern of MAS that students be made more aware of both this changing environment and the issues it raises concerning the future of civilization. No longer is it adequate simply to study about the city, the racial crisis, and the feeling of political despair in the classroom, but more importantly to experience the city as a living organism.

During the two days in Springfield, there will be meetings with community leaders, a problem-oriented tour of the city, and investigations into several problem areas of the city. On Friday night, people from the city will lay out a comprehensive image of the process of urbanization.

Saturday afternoon, the seminar will split into five groups to investigate various problems for which members have a particular concern, such as education, poverty, housing, race relations, and so on. Everyone will gather together again Saturday evening for the purpose of responding to what they might see as the possibilities for building a more human community.

Students interested in the program are invited to call the United Christian Foundation office

Rockefeller Believes In Sustaining "Youth Revolts"

NEW YORK (CPS) -- John D. Rockefeller III believes that "instead of worrying about how to suppress the youth revolution we of the older generation should be worrying about how to sustain it."

At a dinner here he called student activists "in many ways the elite of our young people."

A philanthropist and brother of New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller he received the Society for the Family of Man's annual award.

He listed three ways the older generation can deal with the "youth revolution": backlash and suppression, apathy or muted hostility, and responsiveness and trust.

"The key to sustaining the energy and idealism of youth is more direct and effective action

Progress vs. Deadwood

In the October 17th edition of the EXIT there appeared a cover story by Jack Zeller entitled, "Why I Hate Negroes". In this article Mr. Zeller tells us in his own hyperemotional way how he was "socialized" to hate Negroes as a result of his hard times in the big city. He uses his admittedly bad experiences with Negroes in the city as an excuse for his hatred of them, and for the most part, his rational is typical - generalization.

Mr. Zeller's article in no way shocked me, nor did it tell me anything new about people and prejudice. Though his article was overly emotional in context which showed that Mr. Zeller hadn't as yet become hardened to the ways of the city as most people do, it is, nonetheless, a perfect description of how the average white person thinks in regards to Negroes. And for this reason alone, Mr. Zeller's article was quite good and very revealing.

MOST WHITE PEOPLE IN THESE UNITED STATES INCLUDING OUR INSTITUTIONS OF HIGHER LEARNING HOLD SOME SORT OF CONTEMPT AND HATRED FOR NEGROES IF FOR NO OTHER REASON THAN THAT NEGROES ARE TRADITIONALLY OBJECTS FOR WHITES TO VENT THEIR HATE.

A perfect example of this right here on our own campus is the fraternaties, which for the most part have excluded Negroes from their membership. These institutions, except for the KKK and the country clubs, are probably one of the only openly racist organizations left in America. It is certainly the only one left that has any connection at all with our colleges and universities. And yet they are allowed to exist right along side of our institutes of higher learning undisturbed and vertually condoned by these institutions.

Williams College has taken the lead in the New England area in doing away with the fraternaltes at its campus. Responsible people at Williams have at last realized that these organizations have no place at todays colleges and universities, and that their presence at the university is a great detriment to the school. One must remember that the primary goal of a fraternity is to separate and segregate its member ship from the rest of the campus. They are for the most part snobish and separate, and practice racism. Certainly, it is easy to see that these institutions are not in holding with the goals of a university, and should be separated from our universities. It is past time that we realized that as a university, we have the responsibility to lead the country progressively even if this means breaking with age old traditions that are detrimental to this purpose. Responsible faculty, administrators and students should seriously consider this question and act accordingly. Dead wood will not float away on it own; it must be cast off. And the longer we keep this dead wood aboard, the longer will be our journey through progress to a better world - A world which our universities will pioneer.

The Death Penalty A Scientific Analysis

L. DOES THE DEATH PENALTY SIGNIFICANTLY DETER MURDER AMONG THE GENERAL POPULATION?

Because this is the single most frequent argument of advocates of the death penalty, and because we value highly the safety of law-abiding citizens, this question deserves especially serious consideration. Researchers have attempted to answer this question through the examination of two different situations:

a. A comparison of murder rates between death-penalty and non-death-penalty states.
b. A comparison of murder rates before and after the abolution of the death penalty.

1.a. A COMPARISON OF MURDER RATES BETWEEN DEATH-PENALTY AND NON-DEATH-PENALTY STATES.

If the death penalty more effectively deters people from murder than does imprisonment, then no states having the death penalty consistently have lower murder rates than do states that have removed this allegedly most effective of all deterrents to murder? If the death penalty really makes a state safer, then does this insurance of safety show up in lower murder rates in states that have this insurance?

Research show that states having the death penalty have, not lower murder rates as we might expect, but, higher murder rates than do states having no death penalty. And, although all of the Southern states have capital punishment, they have, as a region, the highest murder rate in the nation.

However, it could be plausibly argued that whether a state has a high or low murder rate is dependent, not only upon the presence or absence of the death penalty but also upon certain other social and economic factors. Thus, one might argue that even though the South has the highest murder rate in the nation that this is so because of certain adverse social and economic factors unique to that region which do not plague other regions of the country to the same extent. In other words, the argument would be that death penalty states do not always have lower murder rates than do abolition states, but only when the social and economic conditions of the two types of states are essentially the same.

"Mind You, I Don't Believe This Sign Which Someone Or Other Put Into My Hands"

Inside Report:

John Mitchell's Strategy

BY ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

EN ROUTE WITH NIXON --As Richard M. Nixon's motor caravan lumbered through northeastern Pennsylvania last Thursday, a little back stage drama was played out that illuminated the conservatice and cautious strategy that has guided the Nixon campaign.

Jack Jordan, Republican state chariman of Pennsylvania, had arranged for some prominent labor leaders (ready to defect from Vice President Humphrey) to meet Nixon at Hazleton, last stop on his Pennsylvania tour. The union chieftains, nursing grievances against the Democrats and perhaps eyeing the winner's bandwagon, were ready to openly embrace Nixon.

That public embrace, however, never quite came off. What prevented it, strangely, was Nixon's own national campaign headquarters on Manhattan's Park Avenue. John Mitchell, Nixon's law partner and immensely powerful campaign chairman, strenuously objected to so close an association with organized labor this late in the campaign.

Telephonic negotiations between the Pennsylvania Republicans and Mitchell droned on all day as the Nixon caravan progressed from Allentown to Hazleton, finally ending in a compromise. The labor leaders were not introduced to the rally at the Hazleton High School gym. Nor were they seated on the stage. But Mitchell did consent to Nixon's shaking hands privately and being photographed with a few of them.

Besides reasserting that Mitchell is the first truly authoritative campaign manager ever tolerated by Nixon, the incident typifies the caution of his campaign. Nixon's own inbred caution, increased by years of political battling and defeats, has been reinforced by Mitchell and another key figure at the Park Avenue headquarters -- Peter Flanigan, a longtime Nixon lieutenant.

Thus, in an internal dispute beginning last spring, Mitchell and Flanigan convinced Nixon he should spurn advice from lesser advisers and liberal party leaders who wanted him to stretch the normal borders of the Republican party. These liberals saw a golden opportunity to win the allegiance of labor leaders, intellectuals, youth, Negroes -- dissenting elements of the crumbling Democratic coalition.

The opposite strategy, pushed by Mitchell and Flanigan, was to battle George Wallace for the law-and - order vote both in Border states and Northern working-class areas. Although both strategies were in evidence as Nixon flew to Chicago to open his campaign Sept. 4, the Wallaceite appeal was predominant last week.

For instance, Nixon in early September talked about "law and order with justice," the last two words urged on him not only by Sen. Edward Brooke of Massachusetts, but also by a canny conservative adviser, Rep. Melvin Laird of Wisconsin. By last week as Nixon campaigned through such key states as Ohio, Michigan, and Pennsylvania, the workds "with justice" had disappeared.

Indeed, Nixon has eliminated all mention of Negro problems from his speeches. Although Nixon promised Brooke in September that he would campaign in black ghettoes, his only brief contact with Negroes was a visit to a Philadelphia self - help project weeks ago.

Nowhere is this strategy clearer than in Nixon's approach to New York. Mitchell privately refers to New York's 43 electoral votes as merely "insurance," not necessary for victory -- a tacit assumption of a Nixon harvest in the Border states.

Mitchell's strictures against fraternizing with dissident Democratic liberals are not entirely ideological but fit his keynote of caution. Thus, it was Mitchell who successfully urged that Nixon stay off television's Sunday interview shows to avoid possible bloopers. It was only after Laird's intense urging that Nixon finally agreed to go on "Face the Nation" over CBS yesterday (Sunday).

Although Nixon seems to be cutting Wallace's strenth in the Border states and South, Mitchell's strategy has taken its toll. Democratic liberals looking for a new home after the uproarious Chicago convention are now, unwooed by Nixon, drifting back to Humphrey (which may give Humphrey New York's 43 electors). The boycott of TV interview shows has helped give Nixon a public image, by no means entirely deserved, of dodging the issues.

Even so, Nixon is not likely to lose on Nov. 5. But that is not a true test of the Mitchell strategy. What really matters is that in a time of internal crisis Nixon may become President without the broad base of support that could have been his had he followed advice more expansive and more daring than John Mitchell's.

The Student Movement: Generational Turbulence

BY BILL FREELAND
College Press Service

The generation gap has hit the student movement.

From the riots of Berkeley in July, to the confrontation at Chicago in August, to campus protests as they have unfolded this fall -- the old definitions of "correct political struggle" are under attack, and new forms are beginning to emerge.

The character of the challenge is slowly taking shape: the content of the issues raised is more inconsequential to the action taken; the deference to an established leadership is all but forgotten; and any sense of the total political effect of an act is very nearly irrelevant.

A mood is spreading in the wake of these shifts. The new-style activists gladly leave to the older "political types" the questions of dieology. Rhetoric, so revered in the past, serves young militants of today as little more than a pretext for greater belligerence.

The students involved this year want action. And they are ready to move whether they have a clearly defined "analysis of racism and imperialism" in their back pockets or not. The act of defiance alone is creating its own rationale. The "Movement -- capital M" is becoming less and less the medium. It is perhaps the most important clash of sensibilities within the youth Left since Negroes declared for black power and white radicals began redefining the doctrine of nonviolence.

The crucial case in point was the Democratic National Convention. Somehow nothing has been the same since Chicago. That confrontation was for many the climactic moment in a whole series of events stretching from the 1963 death of Jack Kennedy, past the dissolution of the Great Society, into an increasingly savage war, concluding with one or two exquisitely placed assassinations and the automated nominations of Nixon and Humphrey for President.

Distilled within this short, traumatic half-decade are sources of hostility and frustration powerful enough to infect a whole generation. It is no longer necessary to join a protest movement to confront these realities. The patent absurdities, the unending violence have become as predictable as the six o'clock news.

Shattered, in all of this, has been the sense of an orderly progression of political consciousness. The anti-racism/imperialism movement (which had replaced the anti-war movement, which had replaced the civil rights movement), appears itself threatened by pure chaos.

While each movement served for its time, one senses through them all that they were provincial in scope. Oddly, they touched only a small part of what still troubles the great mass of Americans. Other, more fundamental questions remained -- more deeply felt needs to which no voice in our national life has yet spoken.

The American environment, for too many people, simply does not permit a satisfactory way of living. But if these conflicts must remain unresolved, for many young people at least, they will not go unexpressed.

Thus, in 1968, for thousands of kids from high schools and colleges all over the country, the Democratic Party became the object, the convention became the time and the Conrad Hilton became the place. There for one, brief, incredible moment, everything was out in the open, and America glimpsed -- for perhaps the first time -- just how deeply the divisions really run.

Somewhere, not very long ago, a turning point of sorts was passed. One senses within the student movement a kind of break with the past. One sees the word "student" becoming too restrictive; the indictment against American society, once the property of a desperate, suspicious, bearded minority, has been joined in by a new host both on and off the campus which defies simple classification.

Already they are making their presence felt, but in ways that don't always fit traditional models for political action.

Last week, for example, New York University students mobilized militant backing over an issue many older radicals condemn as passe--reinstatement of a fired professor. But if the issue was outdated, the tactics certainly were not. Students took over two campus buildings, bombed two dorms and disrupted the university's telephone system as an expression of their support. Campus politicos moved in to broaden the issues, but almost before they could call a rally for that purpose, most of the protesters had returned quietly to their regular student roles.

Similarly at Boston University recently, students often numbering 1,000 joined an AWOL Army private in a symbolic gesture of sanctuary in a university chapel and holding off federal officers for five days and nights. But when radical leaders tried to link that action with the issue of campus ROTC, the interest lasted only until the deserting soldier was placed under arrest. One of the sanctuary organizers confessed with disappointment, "We raised their commitment to action, but not their political consciousness."

Perhaps the real source of his disappointment was that the protest failed to develop the kind of awareness he was used to recognizing. For while students this fall clearly have a greater sense of the political dimension of their lives, that awareness has not automatically committed them to the struggles of the past.

These new activists, many of whom date their changed perspective as recently as, for example, TIME'S cover story on Columbia, seem to be looking for more personal, more immediate forms of involvement without a regard for correctness of strategy and ideology.

These new revolutionary recruits, of course, may just be politically naive -- as many older radicals contend. On the other hand, it could be they no longer need the remote Great Issues, so important to the movement until now, to motivate them to action. That they feel the need to act can be justification enough.

That certainly was the rationale during this summer's riots in Berkeley. Despite the constant flow of rhetoric from the "leadership," it was the continuing possibility of confrontation with the police that brought people into the streets each night. "The streets belong to the people," was the cry.

Campus Comment

A Letter Way?

To the Editor:

Having watched SDS make another attempt at ridiculing Army and Air Force ROTC units during drill (I missed the first episode of the tragi-comedy), I began to wonder whether these "peaceloving, love-loving individuals" were anything but shallow publicity seekers. Their dancing around, marching in file, and other pre-adolescent antics, which included overzealous harassment of a cadet beating cadence, accomplished nothing for their cause, and, perhaps, served only as some release from repressed libidinal strivings. All this was done in front of an ever-present camera.

Their horseplay was a detriment, if anything, to arousing any sympathy for their anti-ROTC position. It was probably a help to ROTC. A most striking exception to all of this, however, was the presence on the field of a child amid the SDS members who walked quietly around the field holding a simple sign which called for PEACE. This to me, and I think that I can generalize most others, is more influential than some misguided, "concerned" people jumping up and down like a cage full of monkeys who haven't received their daily ration of bananas.

The crucial question is the abolishment of ROTC from this campus. I suggest that SDS, if really concerned with establishing peace, love, and understanding, resort to more constructive methods of protest and save their libidinal impulses for a more private playground.

There must be a better way! Think about it!

Exist vs. Live

To the Editor:

Three hundred and fifty people are buying the "Northeast Passage" out of fourteen hundred people who exist in the Northeast. Exist is the word - not live. Why?

Do the heads of residences support the paper? NO, except for one who works her head off. Only the dorm president and a few students actively work in any way on the paper. So I guess the low number of buyers is of no surprise. The students who do not buy have not expressed why. Then the senators from the area do not give a good fight in Senate for the paper being financed by student taxes on the same basis as other areas on campus are given money for their programs.

Perhaps the heads of residences, presidents, senators, and students do not give a damn about where they live. Building a community does not mean a thing to them: all they care about is not having anyone bother them. They are not willing to support a paper which may create a living style where human beings are no longer isolated and feel as if they live in the worst area on campus as far as spirit and life are concerned: a paper which is an attempt to say to the people of the area and the campus that there is no reason why the New Northeast can not be realized.

So should the paper fold? After five weeks should an attempt go by the boards, or should people who care about their fellow man be allowed with financial aid to keep working on students so they will give a damn not just about the paper but also about where they live for four years? If students do not care about the area which affects how they live, then why should anyone expect them to be concerned about academics? Why should people in other areas who fight the same battle support someone else's attempts? WHY?

A Look At The President's New Car

By JAMES C. BEUIGER
from The Wall Street Journal

CHICAGO - It looks like a car. It sounds like a car. It goes like a car.

But, really, it's a tank.

The vehicle in question is a new Lincoln limousine built for President Johnson and his successor. It is unlike any car on the road. First of all, it costs $500,000, which is about $497,000 more than most cars go for. And second, it has some optional extras not available from your nearby dealer.

It has, for instance, a fighter plane canopy and more than two tons of armor. This shielding is designed to stop a 30-caliber rifle bullet, a barrage of Molotov cocktails, or both. Once inside the six-ton car, claims a Ford Motor Co. spokesman, the President will be "perfectly safe from a smelliscale military attack." The window glass and the pastic bubble top canopy, all bullet-proof, are thicker than the glass and plastic used in Air Force fighter planes.

The limousine runs on four heavy duty Firestone truck tires. Inside each tire is a large steel disk with a hard-rubber thread, which would allow the limousine to be driven up to 50 miles at top speeds with all four tires flat.

The Government won't say anything about the car -- in fact, it doesn't want anybody else to say anything, either. Most persons connected with the construction won't say a thing, and when the Secret Service heard the Wall Street Journal was planning a story on the car, agents called editors in Chicago and New York and asked that the paper not print specific details about the armor and equipment.

If the Government were to pay for the vehicle at $1,000 down and $100 a month, it could have the principal paid off entirely in 416 years, just in time for the Democratic convention in the year 2384. However, Federal bargainers talked themselves into better terms: They convinced Ford to pick up the Tab and rent the half-million-dollar machine to the Government for a nominal $100 a month. In return, Ford will get the publicity of having the President roll about the nation in a car which is basically a Ford product.

Inside, the car is like a communications control room. A back-seat radio-telephone will link the President to an emergency defense hookup. There is also a public address system that the President could use to speak to crowds around the vehicle and -- because of Mr. Johnson's penchant for watching all three TV networks at the same time -- the car has three television sets.

If the new limousine proves satisfactory, the Secret Service probably will order at least one more like it. On a national tour, the President often leaps from city to city by air -- too fast for one car to keep up with him. Two or more cars could be leapfrogged by plane to afford him protection in every city.

But isn't $1 million a lot of money just for a couple of Presidential cars? It all depends on how you look at it. John Wahnberger doesn't think the car is overpriced at all. In fact, he says, "I think it is quite a good buy." Mr. Wahnberger is in the armor-plating business.

According to U.S. Army, a brand new M43 Al tank would have been $370,000 cheaper.

We keep warning you to be careful how you use Hai Karate® After Shave and Cologne. We even put instructions on self-defense in every package. But your best silk ties and shirts can still get torn to pieces. That's why you'll want to wear our nearly indestructible Hai Karate Lounging Jacket when you wear Hai Karate Regular or Oriental Lime. Just tell us your size (s,m,l) and send one empty Hai Karate carton, with $4 (check or money order), for each Hai Karate Lounging Jacket to: Hai Karate, P.O. Box 41A, Mount Vernon, N.Y. 10056. That way, if someone gives you some Hai Karate, you can be a little less careful how you use it.

Allow 6 weeks for delivery. Offer expires April 1, 1969. If your favorite store is temporarily out of Hai Karate, keep asking.

Storms on Sun Cause Short Wave Interference Possible Aurora Effect

BOULDER, Colo. (AP)-Storms on the face of the sun caused virtually worldwide interference with short-wave radio communications Tuesday and promised a Northern Lights-like glow over the northern half of the United States Tuesday night, scientists reported.

Short-wave interruption was reported as far east as the Canary Islands and as far west as the West Coast of the United States, according to forecaster Don Lund at the Space Disturbance Forecast Center, operated here by the Environmental Science Services Administration.

The interference could continue as long as a week, he said. "It's hard to tell," he explained.

Lund said the aurora effect, in such cases, usually appears on the northern horizon between 8 p.m. and midnight, local time, although the faint reddish glow can appear later.

"It may appear as just a faint glow," he said, "or it may have a curtain-like structure, with ripples, rays or bands reaching into the sky."

Residents of the northern half of the United States, perhaps as far south as Colorado, should be able to see the aurora, he said.

Causing the activity is a cluster of solar flares-areas of intensified magnetic activity within specific regions of the sun's magnetic field.

The "radio noise" given off by the flares disturbed the earth's magnetic field and caused the short-wave interference. It normally does not affect television broadcasts, on much higher frequencies, or other radio broadcasts, on much lower frequencies.

PFC ROBERT BARTLETT

Cadet Of The Week

PFC Robert Bartlett has been named the ROTC Cadet of the Week at the University of Massachusetts for the period Oct. 29-Nov. 5.

Chosen for military proficiency and appearance Cadet Bartlett is from 2nd Battalion, Company D, 2nd Platoon. He is also on the ROTC Drill team.

The University sophomore is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Roger I. Bartlett of Plain St., Upton, Mass.

Upon successful completion of his studies at the University and four years in the ROTC program Cadet Bartlett will receive a commission as 2nd lieutenant in the U.S. Army.

Wallace Submits Report of Campaign Funds

WASHINGTON (AP) - Contributions of $6.2 million have been reported in support of George C. Wallace's third party presidential campaign.

About $4.7 million of the total was in amounts of less than $100. There were well over 1000 contributions of $1,000 or more.

These figures are shown in a report-covering the period Feb. 7 through Oct. 21 - filed voluntarily Tuesday with the House clerk by the Wallace Campaign, P.O. Box 1968, Montgomery, Ala.

Contributions of $100 or more totaled $869,176, the report said, while $602,907 came from such things as the sale of supplies and reimbursements.

During this period, the report said, $5,788,407 was spent on the third party candidate's behalf. Much of this expenditure, a covering letter said, was in ballot position campaigns in various states.

SWAP Announced

This year's SWAP (Student Workshop on Activities Problems) Conference, to be held in the Oak and Spruce Lodge in South Lee, Massachusetts, on November 1-3 will focus on three areas of discussion.

The first will be the relevance of the university curriculum. The second will be the physical education requirements, the pass fail system, and the possibility of changing from our present four-point grading system to a twelve-point system.

The third area will be the "Student Voice." What is it? Who is listening to it?

SWAP offers an opportunity for students, faculty, and administration to meet and discuss campus problems in an informal atmosphere.

Reciprocate, Retaliate -- It's Your Fate

Protest! There is no other way. Lift your signs, and let them say CHIVALRY IS DEAD. A UMie guy's idea of a date is lock her in, ply her with booze, and slap it on; and his manners inevitably leave much to be desired.

Sound familiar: ...Your date is already inside the movie while you're still waiting for him to open the car door...Or he opens one glass door and goes through, shoving you through the other one...Or, he's halfway up the aisle in a crowded exodus from the theatre and you're still trying to retrieve your coat from where he dropped it under the seat...Or, his meal comes first, and you're left toying with your salad remains while he devours his main course...You pick up the phone Saturday night at eight and he growls--I'm downstairs.

Even common courtesy is dead--a beautiful boy is coming your way. You smile, as you gaze, mesmerized. He smiles as he knocks you over coming out the doorway while you're coming in.

A car with three boys in it stops to let you pass, then thinks better of it and scrubs out through the mud puddle in front of you.

Or, you're going to the Union, dead from your Friday classes, managing a heavy suitcase; your summer clothes on hangars; and your winter coat because it's raining, and you don't want to get it wet; and you're balancing a volume of Major British writers; your chemistry textbook; your ZOO 200 bug collection; and all the boys walk by and smile as they pass you, "having a hard time, are you? PLUG, girl."

Wait! Is this the normal course of things? Is this the way man should treat woman? No. But how to remedy the situation? I propose a reciprocal arrangement. That is, an eye for an eye, a deed for a deed, a dump for a dump.

Students' Guide to Dining Out

LOG CABIN

For Connecticut Valley at its loveliest and food at its finest take Rt. 91 to the Easthampton exit to Edna William's Log Cabin. Located at the entrance to Mt. Tom State Reservation, this is one of Holyoke's leading restaurants. Your preference, sea food or steaks are served in an atmosphere of Early American with a touch of the Irish.

Your introductio n to the Log Cabin begins on the terrace with a view of the Berkshire Mts. and the surrounding towns. Cocktails are served from an authentic covered wagon surrounded by gardens of fall flowers.

When the chill of the winter season brings the diner inside, the warmth of a fireplace and the cozy atmosphere of the Log Cabin cocktail lounge stirs the appetite and leads you into one of the two main dining areas. Flowers are everywhere with sprigs of laurel and ivy, accented by the flame of candles and gaslights.

Luncheons are served from 11:30 to 3:30, while dinners are served from 5 to 10. After-ten, open sandwiches and platters are also served until 12 for the late crowd. Although reservations are not usually necessary for luncheons, the popularity of the Log Cabin requires reservations for dinners and weekend dining. Four course dinners are also served on Sundays instead of the weekday luncheons.

Your choice of assorted relishes and crackers entice you as you order your dinner. Included in the selection of appetizers are chopped chicken livers, fruit cup, or tomato juice. Shrimp cocktail, herring, and oysters are also available at an extra charge to seafood lovers. Your choice of soups salads, and assorted hot breads are also included in the price of the dinner.

You don't have to know the chef in order to have the entree cooked to your preference. Roast Prime ribs of beef as well as charcoal broiled steak will satisfy the most exacting gourmet. The sea-faring diner can choose from a wide range of dishes including the popular baked, fresh, jumbo shrimp, Boston scrod, as well as lobster and trout served fresh from the Log Cabin's own pools.

If your appetite hasn't been satisfied by the fresh vegetables and potatoes, which accompany your entree, the large selection of desserts and cordials will be most enjoyable. The Cabin's specialty of Southern Pecan pie topped with fresh cream or ice cream goes well with fresh ground coffee and tea. If Gailic coffee is your preference, your waitress will give you a bit of the Irish tradition served in imported glasses with real Irish shamrocks in the stems.

Just as there can be no complaints about the food, the service is equally commendable. With an air of Irish congeniality Mr. Frank MacAvin, the Log Cabin's manager, personally escorts you to your seat.

Comparable to that of any good restaurant the price range is not geared to the weekly allowance of the average student. For a special date or a weekend with your parents the Log Cabin's cuisine and atmosphere is well worth the price.

Before leaving the New England setting, don't forget to walk behind the restaurant where three Irish Wolfhounds with the gentlest of dispositions will greet you and add to your memories of "the restaurant with a little more than food."

Due to the fact that Marjie Flanders will be working in New York City as a part of the Retailing Block, Helen Kensick, '70 will edit Squaw Talk for the remainder of the semester.

It's Your Fate

This is a possible list in order of increasing importance:

HE	SHE
1) Opening doors	1) being ready on time
2) helping you with coat	2) wear the nylons without runs
3) carrying suitcase, books, etc.	3) you won't take him to see Dr. Gage's birth films
4) waiting until you're both served until he eats	4) you won't order the Lobster Newburg without the price on the menu.

Remember--the word is Reciprocity. Retaliate! Chivalry may be dead, but if you don't do something about reviving it, the life expectancy of the females who have to struggle with car doors, coats suitcases and lack of nourishment is liable to drastically drop.

The Drums Cry Out

Elephants Stampede the Campus If You Can't Beat 'em Join 'em

Elephants take over campus! That is, elephant pants. It's the new wide-wide look in pants this season. The new style is catching on fast around campus. The "in" Southwest, the "on" quad, and even the "up" Orchard have their share of stampeders.

In case you've been secretly wondering how you could've missed such an outstanding phenomena, just look for the pants that taper from the waist to mid-thigh and widen into a bell shape at the bottom. In contrast to the continental look (tight-fitting), they are a welcome change. Elephant pants are basically casual, however, when properly accented they can be worn as evening attire. (Perfect for rigorous evening activity.)

For the woman who is slightly overweight, they help to conceal the five pounds she gained during last week's Homecoming.

From a girl watcher's point of view, the following comments were made: "They're just too different. I'd never take a girl who wore them to a public place."-Bruce Weinstein, a man who prefers private parties.

"I don't think they look good on."-David Shapiro. Do they look better off, David??

One boy, completely ignorant of the fad of elephant pants made the most of the situation by saying, "If elephants wear pants, they should wear tops too because if the bottom is covered it makes the uncovered top look more suggestive."

Conclusion: Ask your boyfriend's opinion of elephant pants before you wear them.

Freshman Questionaire Attacked As Possible Invasion of Privacy

WASHINGTON (CPS)--A questionnaire being distributed this fall to one and one-half million college freshmen by the American Council on Educaiton has been attacked as an invasion of privacy and a possible violation of due process by the National Student Association and the American Civil Liberties Union.

The questionnaire, a detailed four-page set of inquiries on home life, interests, activities and habits, is an attempt to correlate a student's predilection toward protest activities with his high school record, his study habits, his grades, and various other elements.

The NSA and ACLU spokesmen who studied the questionnaire protested to the ACE at its annual convention that the form did not provide adequate safeguards for the students completing it against "improper disclosures of information and use of the questionnaire by unauthorized persons."

Specifically, according to NSA President Bob Powell, there is no guarantee that the information given via the questionnaire will not be seen by officials at the student's university and used against him. According to the ACLU, requiring a school president to sign statements that the data will not be abused "is not a satisfactory safeguard."

Another of the forms omissions, according to Powell, is of a statement telling the students to whom the form is sent (a random sampling of some kind) that they are not required to fill out the form, nor to answer all the questions on it.

NSA also objects to use of the student's social security number as a code number, since through that number he is easily identifiable to government agents or other persons who might obtain access to the information.

Both NSA and the ACLU called on ACE officials to devise a means, in the compiling of data from the questionnaires, to separate identification from the data provided by the student, or not to require personal identification at all.

Although ACE officials dismissed the case against their questionnaire as overly paranoid and are distributing the questionnaires as planned, NSA in a letter to ACE members said it was basing its concern on years of past experience with information about students.

Exhibit at Smith Depicts Jewish Settlement in U.S.

NORTHAMPTON - In cartoons, photographs and letters, the history of the Jewish mass settlement in America is being told in an exhibit at Smith College.

A motley, top-hatted and skullcap - wearing hoards of very Jewish looking immigrants is being led on an ocean parted by "Liberty" to America's shores in one anto-immigration cartoon. It is titled "The Modern Moses."

A photograph of the "Isle of Tears," the name given by the immigrants to Ellis Island, is also in the exhibit. The exhibit will continue through November 21.

The Jewish immigrations during World Wars I and II and up to 1965 are described; Congress liberalized the immigration laws in 1965.

The exhibit, in Helen Hills Hills Chapel, is made up of materials from the Yiddish Institute for Scientific Research.

Jewish immigration to America began in 1654 with the arrival of the first group of 23 Jews in New Amsterdam. During the German Revolution of 1848 a wave of more than 100,000 Jews came to America.

Various Jewish organizations came to the ald of these destitute immigrants. Humdreds of thousands of Jews arrived in the United States.

There are presently many jobs available on campus for students under the College Work Study Program. Eligibility for the College Work Study Program is based upon established financial need criteria. Any student interested in working on a part time basis should contact Mr. Siegrist in the Placement and Financial Aid Office, Room 237, Whitmore Building.

The university's Morgan, Bay State Ivy, was also shown by Mrs. John Lederle and Linda Taber '71. Ivy placed in 'In-Hand' and 'Western Pleasure' classes.

Smith Concert Will Honor Deceased Music Professor

NORTHAMPTON - A concert to honor composer, Werner Josten, and celebrate the opening of a library named for him on the Smith College campus will be held this Sunday.

The event will honor the late Werner Josten, who died in 1963. A Smith faculty member for 26 years, he was a composer, teacher and conductor of international recognition.

A selection of works the late Mr. Josten either wrote, composed or taught at Smith will be on the program of the concert, to be held at 8:15 p.m. in Sage Hall. The public is invited to attend.

The concert will open with four German songs composed by Mr. Josten. Miss Adrienne Auerswald, soprano, will sing "Die verschwiegene Nachtigall," "Die heiligen drei Konige," "Sommernacht," and "Fruhlingsnetz."

The second section of the program will honor Mr. Josten's most outstanding feat as a conductor, his production of five Baroque operas at the college.

The final number on the program, Mozart's "Quartet in A for Flute and Strings K. 298," will be played by four members of the Smith faculty: William Wittig, flute; Philipp Naegele, violin; John Sessions, violoncello; and Ernst Wallfisch, viola. This work will commemorate Mr. Josten's 26-year career as professor of music at Smith College.

Volunteers Plan Halloween Party

Wednesday is Halloween, at least it is for the Northampton State Hospital Volunteers and the patients who will enjoy square dancing, and jug band music included in a Halloween party.

The Northampton Volunteers are continuing their efforts to increase the size of the group.

Tonight they will hold a brief meeting, beginning at 6:00 p.m. in Worcester Room of the Student Union, before departing. The purpose of this meeting will be to answer any questions from new volunteers and to set up some specific programs for the wards.

In addition to the regular ward activities, they hope to organize small groups of patients into activities such as cooking, sewing, a diet clinic, a glee club, and a drama club.

No one concerned with the possibilities of theatre can afford to miss what may now be the most coherent concentrated and radically effective company in the world. —Newsweek

Residence Hall All-Stars Pitted Against Fraternity All-Stars

The fifth annual Residence Hall versus Fraternity All Star touch football game will be played tonight on the Intramural Field at 7:30 p.m. The All-Star game climaxes the fall intramural play and two days of practice.

Regular Intramural play ended last week when the Hills South HiLos defeated Kappa Sigma, 18-12, for the campus intramural football championship in double overtime play.

According to the IM department, approximately 81 teams with a total membership of over 5174 undergraduate, graduate and faculty players participated in play this year.

The Hills South HiLos, representing the West League and quarterbacked by Joe Pedro and led by end Rick Fredricks, who set an all-time season record by scoring 135 points, won the residence hall championship as well as the campus championship.

Last year's dorm champs the Grayson Aces led the East League in offense and defense and were quarterbacked by Roy Jones. The Thatcher Redwoods won the North League Championship with a 7-0 record. The team allowed only 32 points to be scored against them during regular play. Larry Bunn and Alan Brown tied for the league scoring championship with 36 points each.

The Chadbourne Maroons copped the Southe Le e title with a 7-0 record. They ed the league in total offense and defense by a wide margin and John Murphy was the leading receiver with 42 and the leading scorer with 75 points. Quarterback Rick Aylward completed 114 for 180 passes.

In the North Tower League, the Kennedy Leopards and the Kennedy Panthers, each with 5-2 records, played off for the title. The Leopards walloped the Panthers 18-0, with the offense sparked by Jim O'Brien and John Kul who led the league in scoring with 50 points. Randy Kamerbeek, the leading rusher in the league, paced the defense.

The Adams Smashers, riding on the arm of their quarterback Steve Lowe, chalked up a 7-0 record on the way to the Central Tower League championship. The Smashers dominated the league and individual statistics as Bill Reinhardt captured the receiving and scoring titles.

In the South Tower League, a playoff was held between the Terrors and the James House Colt 45's. Dave Horgan passed for 94 out of 131 completions with Jim Blair and Carl Leuters on the receiving end. Blair led both the scorers with 54 and the receivers with 52. Tom Bajos threw the opposing quarterbacks for 12 losses to lead the Terrors defense.

In the Independent Division composed of the American, National and Grad Fac teams, the Least Squares from the Boyden grad student faculty had a 5-1 record. The team was led by Wayne Donner and receivers Jim Webber and Dave Weinberg.

The Roadrunners of the National League won seven and lost 0 and scored 172 points while giving up only 24. Gary Belliveau completed 94 of 139 passes to spark the defense and Dennis Cataleta led the National League scorers with 44 points.

Wayne Higney, of the American League champions, the Lobos, passed for 74 of 102 completions for his team. George Duffield and Dick Lynch were among the league's top pass rushers to pace the defense.

PMD rolled to the Athenian championship for the second consecutive year paced by All-Star quarterback Ray Rigney. Rigney completed 86 of 132 passes including 27 touchdown passes. Dave Murphy caught 20 passes and scored 57 points to lead the league in scoring.

In the Trojan league, QTV rode the scrambling of Jeff Sanborn to the championship with a 7-0 slate. Sanborn completed 112 of 163 passes and included 16 aerials for touchdowns. Ron Galuccio and Tony Abbruzeze were on the receiving end of most of the passes and Galuccio scored 52 points to lead the league. As a team, QTV led the league in offense with 148 points and defense with 60.

Kappa Sigma, after losing their opening game to Phi Sigma Delta, 14-12, rolled to eight straight wins including a 12-8 playoff victory over PSD for the championship. After Kappa Sig quarterback Ernie Dimisco suffered a knee injury at midseason, Nick DiSanato took over and led the team to the championship. Top receivers for Kappa Sig were Paul Sculley, Jim Sulesky and Bob Hansem. The team led the league in defense, giving up 62 points.

The Hi Los on their way to the dorm championship knocked off the Grayson Aces by a score of 24-21, before taking on the Adams Smashers. They defeated the Smashers 26-19, paced by Joe Pedro who threw three touchdown passes and scored a TD himself.

In the Independent Division playoffs, the Lobos were beaten by the Squares in the first round. The Roadrunners defeated the Squares, 27-6, as Cataleta caught two touchdown passes.

Kappa Sigma took on Trojan League champions QTV and edged them 14-13. Sculley and Steve Chew scored the touchdowns for Kappa Sig. For the fraternity division championship, Kappa Sigma defeated PMD, 15-14, which had not lost a game in two years. DeSabito threw for one TD to Steve Chew and scored one himself. Sculley and Chew scored the extra points.

Kappa Sigma defeated the Independent champions, the Roadrunners, PMD defeated QTV, 22-18 for second place and the Roadrunners 12-6 rolled over the Smashers for the third place in the campus standings.

The Hills South Hi Los will be pitted against the IM campus champions from the University of New Hampshire. The game will be played either Friday, Nov. 15 or Sat., Nov. 16, the same weekend the Redman varsity plays the UNH varsity.

Intramurals are directed by Ted Schmitt and his assistant Peter Graham.

Cochran and Frye Named Varsity M Club Winners

Connecticut Outblocked Redmen

By PETER PASCARELLI
Assistant Sports Editor

Varsity 'M' awards were given to Bruce Cochrane on offense and Bill Frye on defense for their outstanding performances in last Saturday's game with UConn to highlight the weekly Varsity 'M' Club luncheon at the Newman Center.

Cochrane, a senior fullback, who was filling in for the injured Ed Sarno, got the highest grades in the coaches' rating system for turning in a consistent blocking job, while picking up valuable yardage as both a runner and a pass catcher.

Frye, also a senior, did a fine pass-defending and hard-hitting tackling job from his corner-back position.

UMass Head Coach Vic Fusia, speaking at the luncheon said of the two recipients, "They have both been playing excellent ball all year."

Fusia went on about the team as a whole saying, "I have never seen a group of young men like this team and staff work so hard. Nothing seems to come together. It isn't just the injuries, either, but a good many other things."

The UMass coach discussed the Connecticut offense which caused so much trouble, and in particular, the quarterback rollout by Pete Petrillo. Fusia said, "We knew they would run that play. We run it a lot ourselves."

"We had the perfect defenses to cope with the play. We had the people in position," went on the coach, "But we were outblocked. After the defense position of the players, it is all up to them."

Fusia added, "We are losing games we won in the past because of mental errors and mistakes."

It was revealed during Fusia's talk that UMass' leading ground gainer Craig Lovell may be unavailable this weekend for the Vermont game due to a freak accident.

Lovell, on the first play of the UConn game, hit the ground squarely on his chin. The full extent of the injury was not immediately known.

However, at halftime, Lovell's father, who is a physician, was called to the UMass dressing room and sewed 18 stitches in his son's chin.

For Vermont this weekend, the Redmen will probably be without Lovell, Jerry Grasso, Tim Driscoll, Mike Marchev, and Sarno in the backfield, plus Randy Robinson and Jim Nangle.

Fusia also said of the kick coverage, which has been lacking, "There is not a lack of desire or trying in our coverage. But right now I don't know whether I should kick or receive."

He also related that the field judge was ready to expell defensive end Tom York from the game Saturday because of a small skirmish in the third period.

However, Fusia said, "I cried a little to the referee. I appealed to his sympathies. I told him I had no one else to put in Tom's place."

UMass freshman coach Dave Kelley, gave a scouting report of Vermont and made it clear that the Catamounts are a much improved team.

"They are a team coming out of the darkness", said Kelley, "and the last two weeks during their wins against New Hampshire and Norwich they have begun to mature."

Bill Frye, winner of the Varsity "M" award for defense.

Bruce Cochrane, Varsity "M" outstanding offensive player.

Kelley said that Vermont will rely much of the time on their running attack but have a quarterback, Fran Peterson, who "has reasonable accuracy and keeps you honest."

The UMass coach also said to watch for a pint-sized scatback sophomore Dennis Robinson, who Kelley termed, "a Billy Estey type, who is hard to tackle and can break one for a long way."

Kelley said that Vermont's backfield personnel is overall good and also has pretty effective line.

The defense will have two sophomore tackles, who Kelley said "are coming into their own".

Injuries have hurt Vermont to some extent, said Kelley, but he also added, "not to the degree that UMass has been hurt."

Kelley also said that Vermont will run the quarterback option as did UConn and added, "Although they are prone to fumble on it, they can hurt you with it and must be stopped."

The former UMass star concluded, "Neither team should be a favorite in this game. It will be a hard hitting, agressive contest, and the team who can take advantage of the opportunities should win. It will be a heck of a game."

Booters Blank Worcester Polytech

Steve Blanchette's second period goal and overall offensive superiority paced the UMass soccer team to a 1-0 squeaker victory over Worcester Polytechnical Institute (WPI) at cold and damp varsity field yesterday. For the Redmen, the win broke a four game losing skein.

Blanchette's goal, his first of the year, came on a lucky break when one of the WPI defensemen kicked and missed a Wilkie Ward crossing pass with Blanchette angling the ball off the defenseman's leg into the corner of the net.

Blanchette's goal broke a long scoring drought which had lasted almost three complete games, the last UMass tally coming against Trinity in the second period.

Actually, the score should have been much greater. The Redmen held a wide territorial advantage throughout the game but were unable to finish off their plays around the Engineers net.

In the first quarter, Ward had the best Redmen shot but it just went wide. Blanchette had made a nice pass to Ward in front.

The booters received a mild scare early in the second quarter when high scoring forward Duane Brown limped off the field but he quickly returned to action.

The second half was completely dominated by UMass. The booters applied constant pressure against the WPI net but were unable to score.

Ward missed what appeared to be a sure goal when his shot from the corner of the goal went over the top of an empty net.

Duane Brown had an ideal scoring opportunity a few minutes later after a UMass fast break but his hard liner cleared the crossbar by a foot.

The Redmen did not let up on the pressure in the fourth quarter. They had one goal disqualified when the referees ruled that the ball had bounced in off a UMass player's arm into the net after a wild scramble.

Larry DeFelice's long shot was just knocked over the crossbar by a leaping WPI goalie and finally settled right on top of the net.

UMass soccer coach Peter Brocca was pleased with the results of the game and complimented the squad for a fine total team effort.

He commented that everyone hustled and never let up. He added that the team never became let down after losing four straight games but kept on trying and were rewarded with a win.

Several players were selected for special merit. The fullback line of Ed Schmitter, Bill Sanborn and Ralph Etna, in his first game as a starter, played particularly well and broke up many of the Engineers plays before they were started.

Brocca called Blanchette's performance "one of the better games that he has played" and said that Rick Matuzsczak and Duane Brown played their usual fine games.

The superiority enjoyed by the Redmen showed up in the final statistics. UMass had 26 shots at goal while WPI had 9. In saves, UMass goalie Steve Kramer halted seven shots in recording his third shutout of the season while Worcester Tech goalie Mike Arslon made 19. UMass had a wide edge in corner kicks, 8-0.

Several changes were made in the defensive lineup as well. Co-captain Bob Dubiel moved up to halfback from his customary fullback position and Ralph Etna filled Dubiel's vacated slot.

The next game for the Redmen will be a Yankee Conference contest against Vermont at Burlington on Saturday morning.

Rowers Make Strong Showing on Charles

The varsity and junior varsity crew clubs turned in impressive performances at the Head of the Charles Regatta, which attracted over 650 oarsmen from 60 clubs and schools, held in Boston over the weekend. The varsity placed fifth in their competition, 40 seconds behind the winner, Northeastern. The jayvee's finished 13 out of 30 and were in contention for the Mayor's Cup in the Junior Eight race.

The varsity was the only small college entered in the eight oared final. Tom Mone, last year's frosh number three man, stroked the varsity boat at 29-31 to a 16:51. Northeastern stroked at 34 and finished first with a time of 16:10, followed by Syracuse, 16:28; Dartmouth, 16:40; and Columbia, 16:50.

The varsity held off a late Dartmouth threat to pull away from them during the finish sprint. "They followed the race plan we had worked out to a tee," said Coach Faherty. "Perhaps we should have rowed a couple of strokes higher during the body of the race. This would have made a big difference, but they were following my orders." He singled out Mone and Jerry Ahern for the fine job they did in their first varsity competition.

The UMass jayvees finished one minute behind the winning time of Boston University. All of the schools which UMass competes against during the regular season entered both varsity and junior varsity boats in the junior competition. The Redman jayvees came in before the Rhode Island varsity.

Sophomore stroke Marc Caron, fighting a bad cold, stroked the beat at 30 during the body of the race. He upped the stroke to 34 for the final sprint into the wind.

Boatings for the jayvees were: bow, Malone; 2, Natusch; 3, Frost; 4, Sola; 5, Richard; 6, Meffley; 7, Garbose; 8, Caron and coxswain, Jedrey.

After a week's layoff, the club will begin its winter workouts four times a week in the preparation for the start of spring competition April 4. The frosh are also working out with Coach Kart Betchick and still looking for rowers.

'Index' Faces Possible Legal Action Over Contract Bids

By JAN CURLEY
Asst. Managing Editor

The INDEX, yearbook of UMass is faced with possible legal action by American Yearbook, a subsidiary of Jostens, Inc., for awarding its approximately $75,000 printing contract to Delmar Printing Company.

American's objection to the selection of Delmar is based on whether or not the lowest bidder should receive the contract award.

Bids for the 1969 contract were sent out last June and returned later in the month by seven companies. At that time Lowell H. Fitch, editor-in-chief of INDEX said he decided to hold off awarding the contract until he "could learn more about the companies and their operations."

After touring plants of three of the most promising companies, Fitch decided to send out supplemental requests for information on points not originally covered in the bid specifications. These requests were sent to Taylor Publishing Co., American and Delmar.

American contested the procedure on the basis that these supplemetal requests were not sent to the other four companies which had submitted bids. It was decided then to award the contract to Delmar, based on work quality and the representative.

Accordingly it was decided to send out second bids to all seven companies. These bids included the supplemental requests made on the first bids. These sealed bids were opened Oct. 24, at 5 p.m. Present at the time were Fitch, Dean William F. Field, Coordinator of Student Activities Gerald Scanlon, Manager of RSO accounts Bud Demers, Senate President Paul Silverman and Senate Vice President Fredric Hartwell.

Later in the evening, Fitch, Scanlon, Demers and John Shyavitz, special assistant to Fitch and Al Marcus, photo editor of the INDEX met to go over the bids and compare money and the pros and cons of the service of each company. It was decided to award the contract to Delmar, the third lowest bidder.

"Although American was the lowest bidder, I exercised the option stated in the cover letter," said Fitch. The cover letter, enclosed with each bid states, "The right is reserved to reject any or all bids, to omit any items called for or to accept the proposal deemed best for the Recognized Student Organization concerned."

"American has now decided to question the legality of the option," said Fitch. He went on to say that American was trying to invalidate the present contract with Delmar.

Fitch and the INDEX staff would like to continue their relationship with Delmar and its representative, Edwin Hackleman. Hackleman formerly worked for American Yearbook which printed both the 1968 and 1967 editions of the Index.

"The Student Senate, the R.S.O. office and our advisor, Dr. Dario Politella, are squarely behind us in this matter," said Fitch.

"We've been on tenterhooks for the past few weeks," said Fitch, "but the support the Index has received from the students and our advisor and the people in R.S.O. leads me to believe very strongly that the yearbook is 'go' and will be the best one yet - it's the one hundredth volume and is being produced by an exceptional staff with an exceptional company and representative."

Confident 'Students for Nixon' Believe Nixon Will Carry State

Bill Perkins, a UMass student, is leading campus Nixon - enthusiasts in their home stretch drive to provide local Nixon organizations with the energy and manpower that they believe will carry the hotly-contested state for Richard Nixon.

Senator John M. Quinlan, Chairman of the United Citizens for Nixon - Agnew in Massachusetts, appointed Perkins campus coordinator of the "Students for Nixon" movement earlier in the campaign.

Perkins has already led several Nixon drives on campus, and on Oct. 18 attended a special meeting with Mr. Nixon at the Somerset Hotel in Boston. He has also met with Senator Quinlan at various times to discuss election tactics and to exchange ideas with other coordinators.

The UMass organization is one of 73 Nixon - Agnew groups working on campuses throughout Massachusetts.

On the state level, the "Students for Nixon" movement is headed by David Prerau of M.I.T., and Mike Botelho of Southeastern Massachusetts Technological Institute.

"Even students who can't vote in this election, State Chairman Prerau contends, " have to be offered a chance to participate in the selection of the man who will lead their country in the coming years, and the aid they can offer is invaluable.

Chairman, David Prerau, is a candidate for a Ph. D. in Computer Science from M.I.T., but currently spends eighteen hours a day at the Nixon Headquarters in Boston. Prerau campaigned for Nixon in the New Hampshire Primary and later worked closely with the New England "Nixon for President" office. During the national student election, Choice '68, he organized and engineered Nixon's Massachusetts drive.

Executive Director, Mike Botelho, a history major at Southeastern Massachusetts Technological Institute, in New Bedford, has also had experience in local and national politics. He has been coordinator of "Taunton Youth for Volpe," and youth organizor for Senate Majority Leader John Parker. He was a former co-chairman of Massachusetts Youth for Nixon during the Primary.

Send ROTC Issue Back To Academic Affairs Student Senate Votes

BY RICHARD LANE
Senior Reporter

The Student Senate last night voted to refer the matter of academic credit for upper level ROTC courses (S-147) to the Academic Affairs Committee for investigation.

A motion put forth by Sen. Staff Sheehan calls for Academic Affairs to: (1) Investigate the structure of ROTC on other land grant universities (Sen. Sheehan pointed out that the University of Rhode Island is presently restructuring its ROTC program). (2) Investigate the present structurn of ROTC in all phases at this university. (3) Present its report no later than April 1969.

Senate bill 148 on academic credit for lower level ROTC courses was not included in the motion or discussion.

Sheehan's motion was designed to obtain study time to clean up misconceptions and lack of information on the ROTC issue that has occurred in previous Senate debate.

Other Senate action took the form of passing investigative motions and delaying issues.

S-13 on the proposed recommendation to disarm University police was quickly referred to an investigating committee (for two weeks) due to lack of sufficient information for debate. Committee Chairman Paul Anderson has stated that presently a number of unresolved questions remain on the issue.

The matter of funds for the NORTHEAST PASSAGE, a student newspaper of the Northeast residential area, was also delayed for one week. Supporters of the newspaper stated more time is needed to prepare their argument before the Senate.

S-25 called for $150 to be appropriated to the NORTHEAST PASSAGE to continue immediate publication of subsequent issues. A PASSAGE spokesman last night told the governing body that enough funds remain for only one more edition of the paper.

Debate on the bill centered around the issue of "tax sharing" according to Senators Rick Hartwell and Phil Rosen. Hartwell desired to amend the bill which would call for the PASSAGE issue to come up the first week in December rather than next week pending the outcome of bill S-23. Both Hartwell and Rosen stated their beliefs that the PASSAGE motion would not come up until December anyway.

The later bill involves the whole matter of investigating tax sharing between area governments and the Student Senate and was passed. Hartwell stated that, "It (PASSAGE) isn't deserving of and won't get any funds until S-23 is passed on."

Hartwell ended the night's proceedings by proposing a motion which would seek to investigate the possibility of the Senate obtaining its own legal counsel.

New York Times Refuses to Retract Editorials Critical of Spiro Agnew

NEW YORK (AP) - The NEW YORK TIMES was asked again Wednesday to retract editorials critical of Gov. Spiro T. Agnew, Republican vice - presidential nominee, but the paper refused, a TIMES official said.

Harding F. Bancroft, the TIMES' executive vice president, said George W. White Jr., Agnew's campaign manager and lawyer, stated he felt Agnew had been libelled and the TIMES had taken a "dishonest action."

Bancroft said he told White he disagreed. Bancroft said White did not threaten to file a libel suit.

White had no immediate comment.

The TIMES published one editorial Saturday, a second Tuesday and a third Wednesday criticizing Agnew in connection with a real estate purchase and with directorship of a bank while holding office in Maryland. The TIMES said Agnew's activities presented conflicts of interest and made him unfit to be vice president.

In its Wednesday editorial, the paper said, "The Times unequivocally rejects the charge of libel." It said Agnew's denial of conflict-of-interest charges "underscores his inability to perceive the ethical judgments demanded of persons in high positions of public trust."

Agnew commented in St. Petersburg, Fla.: "I had a great deal of respect for the NEW YORK TIMES and when they came out and enforsed me for governor in 1966 I thought they had some sense. I think the TIMES is way off base and I wish they had the courage to come out and admit it."

Politics '68

Humphrey

NEW YORK (AP) - With time growing short Hubert H. Humphrey campaigned Wednesday on the sidewalks of New York appealing to thousands at a street corner rally to prod friends, relatives and neighbors to the ballot box.

"I need every vote we can get," the Democratic presidential candidate declared in making a traditional election year appearance in Manhattan's garment district before a crowd that filled about three blocks.

Humphrey recalled that Harry S. Truman and John F. Kennedy --two other presidential candidates waging uphill campaigns- had appeared "at this same spot" to seek help and then had gone on to victory.

"Now," said Humphrey," I ask for your help as I never asked for it before."

It was Humphrey's fifth campaign visit to New York City and he returns once more Saturday.

Humphrey's top political aide, William Connell, said that Humphrey has an excellent chance of winning without the election being forced into the House of Representatives.

He predicted that Humphrey- "if the momentum continues"- had a good chance of carrying seven of the biggest states, excluding California, which he termed "wildly unpredictable," and Illinois.

However, Connell expressed belief that the election would be won or lost in such border states as Arkansas, North and South Carolina, and Virginia.

Humphrey branded as "Bunk" a news report saying that courthouse records showed he had accepted from a wealthy patron of the Democratic party in Minneapolis six lakeside lots on which he built his home in Waverly, Minn.

Nixon

ROCHESTER, MINN. (AP) - Richard M. Nixon journeyed to Hubert H. Humphrey's Minnesota Wednesday and called the Democratic presidential nominee "a man who has trotted meekly along behind his master" - Lyndon B. Johnson-and cannot now be expected to lead.

The Republican nominee for the White House took a calculated campaign detour to put in an appearance in Humphrey's home state, and declared that his rival's "failure to exercise his intellectual courage has been his most serious failure."

Nixon flew from Syracuse, N.Y., to Rochester for an airport rally which drew a crowd , police estimated at some 7,500. They were waving Humphrey placards, chants of the vice president's name from some in the predominantly Republican turnout.

"The issue has been made by the other party; they made it when they nominated the man they did," the GOP campaigner said.

"For four years we've had a doctor in the White House and he's been giving the country the wrong prescription...What the American people want is a new doctor-we're not going to hire a pharmacist."

At the outset Nixon said, "There's nothing that would mean more to us than to carry Hubert Humphrey's home state--and we're going to do it."

Nixon said "unquestioning obedience to the whims of the President" has characterized Washington during Johnson's years in the White House and Humphrey's as vice-president.

Wallace

WHEELING, W. VA.(AP)-Third party candidate George C. Wallace told a campaign crowd at Wheeling Wednesday that the United States will "be relegated to a second class power" unless law and order are restored in the nation.

Wallace swung southward into the Appalachian foothills of West Virginia after a tumultous reception at Detroit Tuesday night which began with frenzied jeers and wound up in a fist-swinging, chair-throwing, free-for-all touched off by the appearance of noisy hecklers.

The former Alabama governor encountered some hecklers at Wheeling, as he does now at almost every appearance, but many of them stood in silent protest while holding aloft black cardboard signs and black-gloved fists in a salute to black power.

He told the crowd that if anyone wants to check his labor record, all they have to do is to check labor leaders in Alabama who, he said, are supporting him almost unanimously. Some of them were with him on the platform, traveling from city to city as part of his campaign staff.

As he has been doing in recent days, the third-party candidate devoted much of his speech to intensified attacks on newsmen and, as usual, taunting reprimands for the hecklers.

At one point in the downtown Market Plaza rally in Wheeling, he paused, turned to a college-age protestor and remarked:

"So you're for the Communists, are you" Then he added:

"I'll give you a passport to Hanoi the day after I become president, but I'm going to make them shave you before you go."

Concern Over Election Processes Slight

BY ROSE MILLER

The resounding answer to the question, "Do students show enough concern over election processes?" asked in interviews with four "average campus students" and two campus "activists," was a qualitative but definite NO.

The question was asked by the DAILY COLLEGIAN in relation to their overall thoughts about the National conventions and the selection of candidates in next week's election.

The candidates they favor in the election vary as greatly as their thoughts on how election processes can be revised so as to provide for perhaps a more popular and democratic way of nominating Presidential candidates.

The two history majors, one a sophomore, the other a senior, felt the convention-type nomination procedure could be improved by the people directly involved in the conventions. The other senior in the interviewing sample thought the convention system should be replaced by a national primary, while the last member of the group said the conventions, in her opinion, came off better this year than she had expected. She also added that she was in England during the conventions, and the British were shocked at the "circus atmosphere" reflected by the convention goings-on. She attributed their reactions to a lack of understanding of the American political scene.

The two political activists, a SDS member and a Yippie manning tables in Student Union agreed on one point, the election process and the candidates of 1968 are a "farce". The Yippie claimed his group has gathered some students in behalf of their candidate, the pig. The UMass chapter of SDS is calling for a campus student strike the day before the election. The SDS member at the table expressed the view that the students on this campus do not show enough concern about the election, because the tuition of the College is low, and therefore, the students from working class backgrounds are prevalent among the student body. He contended this type of student is concerned only with getting a good paying job.

For the record, the senior favoring a national primary voted for Eugene McCarthy on an absentee ballot, the other senior favors Hubert Humphrey, the sophomore history major favors George Wallace, and the British traveler is for Humphrey.

Three Day Seminar To Be Held Nov. 6-8 Obesity Birth Control, and Public Health

The University of Massachusetts chapter of Phi Beta Kappa will host a visit by nutrition and public health expert Professor Jean Mayer of Harvard University as part of the visiting scholar program Nov. 6 through 8.

The highlight of his visit will be a public lecture on "Nutrition and Civilization" scheduled for Thursday, Nov. 7 at 8 p.m. in Mahar Auditorium. Members of the Four College community are invited to attend the lecture, which will include a question and answer period.

JEAN MAYER

Phi Beta Kappa Visiting Scholar

Professor of nutrition and lecturer on the history of public health at Harvard, he is also consultant in nutrition at the Children's Hospital in Boston. He received his B.Litt., B.Sc. and M.Sc. from the University of Paris and his Ph.D. from Yale University. He earned his D.Sc. from the Sorbonne in France in 1950.

His special interest is relationship between nutrition and civilization, particularly heart disease and related problems in rich countries and the problems of malnutrition in underdeveloped countries. He has been associated with the Food and Agriculture Organization and World Health Organization of the United Nations since 1948, as a member of the International Committees on Calorie Requirements and on Protein Requirements. He has also participated in advisory missions to Ghana, the Ivory Coast and West Africa. Since 1961, he has been a member of the FAO-WHO Joint Expert Committee on Nutrition.

His schedule during his three-day visit will begin with a zoology colloquium on obesity Wednesday, Nov. 6, at 4:30 p.m. in Morrill Auditorium. On Thursday, Nov. 7, at 10:10 a.m. he will lecture on appetite and obesity before three combined classes in nutrition in Skinner Hall Auditorium. He will visit a public health class later that day at 2:30 p.m. to discuss nutrition, birth control and population in Room 344 of the Public Health Building. His topic for a graduate class in physiology will be exercise, calorie intake and obesity Friday, Nov. 8, at 10:10 a.m. in Room 17 of Boyden Gymnasium.

The Phi Beta Kappa Visiting Scholar Program was begun in 1956 to give undergraduates the opportunity to meet and talk with outstanding scholars who are also noted teachers. Under this program sponsored by the United Chapters, a scholar participates in the academic life of a college community for two or three days.

INTENT OF SENATE BILLS S147 and S148 RECOMMEND DENIAL OF CREDIT NOT TO RID CAMPUS OF ROTC

BY RICHARD STORY
Education Editor

The action of the Senate in passing S147 and S148 - recommending the denial of academic credit to the ROTC program on campus - was one intended to reflect a purely academic appraisal of the courses and their content. The Vice-President and the Chairman of the Academic Affairs Committee emphasized at the outset, and reiterate here, the fact that the moral and ethical questions of the military establishment and/or current American involvement in Vietnam were not the issues under debate. It is of course clear that feelings on these issues tinged debate on the measures.

The two bills under discussion were debated at some length (in their original form) in the Academic Affairs Committee through the Spring of 1968 - the text of this debate has not been preserved; but the Committee's recommendations speak to the tone of this debate, since the Committe voted to report in favor of the measures. The essence of the Committee's feeling was that the content of the classroom portions of the ROTC program was not of such a character, and was not conducted in such a manner as to warrant the receipt of academic (graduation) credit for its pursuit. The content of the classroom material was not sufficiently academic, appraised under intuitive criteria, nor was its presentation sufficiently open and objective to permit the courses to stand in any sort of equivalence to any other University courses - equivalence being that which is made implicit by the awarding of the same academic credit as that awarded for the most explicitly human istic portions of the liberal arts curriculum. Even in comparison with the most rigidly pre-professional engineering or business courses, ROTC courses were found academically wanting. In the engineering sciences it is at least possible to justify non-debatable formulas by reference to standards which are accessible to reason. In the humanities, it is possible to justify position, as of historical interpretation, by reasoned appeal to the explicit premises of the argument. This is not possible, as best may be determined, for present courses in military science.

Further, it is also not the case that the intent of S147 and S148 was to drive the ROTC program completely off the University campus. The provisions of the measures recommended only the denial of academic credit to the presently-existing program. The report to the members of the Military Affairs Sub-committee of the Academic Matters Committee, written by Prof. E. E. Lindsey (and dated July 26, 1968), presents cogent arguments for the continued presence of an ROTC program on the campus of a college or university. It is not our intention here to summarize this report, nor was it the Senate's intention to speak directly to the question of the ROTC program's continuance on this campus. The arguments of the Lindsey report, as to the legal necessity, under the provisions of the Morrill Act (in its form and as re-affirmed), and as to the psycho-social desirability of maintaining a college or university atomosphere for ROTC training appear sound, in the main, and are not under consideration here. What the Lindsey report did not deal with, to any significant extent, but which the Senate did deal directly with, is the strictly academic nature of the ROTC program. It is this which was judged unworthy of the dignification of academic credit.

The Lindsey report's statement on the academic aspects of ROTC is interesting and germane to the present discussion, and bears restatement here in full. The report states: The Committee is charged with insuring compatibility with normal University standards. Some of the Committee feel that there is no such thing as normal University standards, that this is a relative thing and the only way to determine whether military courses do in fact meet University standards , is to examine the practices of various departments and various courses, looking at examinations, work loads, education verus training aspects of the subject matter in order to establish a "yardstick" by which the military courses may be measured. Most of the Committee feel that such a procedure would not be welcome on the campus and would be actively resented as an unwarranted intrusion and could be interpreted as an attempt to get a "foot-in-the-door" where the Committee and others of the faculty might dictate what is done in various courses. For this reason the Committee has not seen fit to make any comment on the compatibility questio n or on the credit question for ROTC courses.

With this last sentence of the quoted paragraph above we are back to the point at which the academic Affairs Committe e and the Senate began their appraisal of the academic aspects of ROTC courses. There were before our own investigation no available criteria, nor are there any now, for this academic evaluation of ROTC courses.

We conclude that ROTC courses are unworthy of academic credit of the sort awarded traditional legitimate educational programs.

The texts of S147 and S148 as passed by the Student Senate on 25 September 1968, on roll call votes of 21 aye, 12 nay, 0 abstentions.

Beacon Hill To Be Restored

BOSTON (AP) - Beacon Hill, Boston's oldest and most picturesque section, is being restored to look that way, with traditional red brick sidewalks and turn-of-the-century gas lamps. To complete the horse and carriage atmosphere, parking will be banned on both sides of Charles Street and the city will institute a special program of street cleaning.

Mayor Kevin White, himself a resident of Beacon Hill, said Wednesday that residents and merchants will be asked "To make some sacrifices in the interest of neighborhood improvement."

He urged Charles Street merchants to remodel the facades of their buildings to conform with the area's architecture.

White indicated that merchants who undertook restoration would be given special consideration by the city's Assessing Department.

Part II - MDC-AP Mock Debate

HHH, Nixon, Wallace Debate Vietnam, Student Demonstrations

Q. How would you end the war in Vietnam-On what terms-What should have been done earlier.

HUMPHREY

A: Well, first of all, I am the vice president of the United States, and as vice president one of my first requirements, it seems to me, has been to support the President and his policies. You cannot have two voices. It is one thing to be a senator and congressman. It is another to be a vice president. The vice president of the United States has very peculiar and some very unique responsibilities. One of his responsibilities is to try to be a cooperative and helpful associate of the President. When decisions have been made by the President, I have supported those decisions. When decisions were in the process of being made, I have given my opinions when they were asked for. The opinions have not always been the same as the decisions. But the President gets many opinions. Once the decisions were made, as a member of the team, I supported those decisions.

Now I am the candidate of the Democratic party, and I am seeking to guide the thinking of this country towards what will be going on after Jan. 20, 1969, "and" I am going on after Jan. 20, 1969, and I am going to stake out my own positions for the future.

I said that I would consider cesation of the bombing an acceptable risk for peace. I said that before taking this action, I would look very closely at evidence, direct or indirect, by deed or word of Communist willingness to restore the demilitarized zone between the North and the South, and I would reserve the right, if North Vietnam showed bad faith, to resume the bombing. I think it is clear where my emphasis lies. It is on the cessation of the bombing. And I think it is also clear that Hanoi could with little difficulty take the action concerning the demilitarized zone, because it is not their country. It isn't asking them to give up something that is theirs. It is an international zone that is supposed to be protected.

What I have done is to say what the platform says - that there are some risks that you must take for peace. I think the best way to protect our troops in the South is to see that the war is shortened, and to de-escalate the struggle if it can be done. Then I also, by the way, outlined in my program the reduction of American forces. I believe that this can be done - I have studied it very, very carefully. I believe that with the improvement of the army of South Vietnam in its combat effectiveness, with its weapons, modern weapons, with good training and combat experience, with over 800,000 men now in that army of South Vietnam, it will be possible for the next President of the United States, and that will be myself, to meet with the leaders of South Vietnam to work out a schedule of American troop reduction-in other words, a de-Americanization of this struggle as the ARVN is more capable of its own self defence.

NIXON

"First, I would never have used more military force and, particularly, I would never have used bombing in a gradual way. I would not have used it at all until I used it diplomatically.

Nixon

"I would have gone to the North Vietnamese and I would have clearly indicated that we did not want to bomb the north, but that we could not tolerate the infiltration from the North of forces that were killing our troops, and unless this were discontinued, that then we would have to use the bombing device in order to stop it. And then I would have used it had they not stopped it. I would have used it in a much more decisive way.

"The application of force gradually is a mistake. We have wasted our military advantage by applying it gradually.

"Second, the perhaps most fundamental error the administration has made in Vietnam is due to its failure to understand the character of the war. This is a guerrilla war, which means that it is a war for people rather than territory. Therefore, your primary emphasis must be on developing programs which enlist the people of South Vietnam, economically, politically, and militarily in their own defense.

"Recently there has been some movement, but until very recently we have not trained the South Vietnamese. We have not had an adequate program in the countryside to develop the political and other institutions so that the South Vietnamese, once we left, would be strong enough to contain these guerrilla activities."

WALLACE

"Remove the North Vietnamese armed forces, have the Viet Cong lay down their arms and have free elections in Southeast Asia. I would consider coalition government being forced upon the South Vietnamese, with the Communists represented, would not be an honorable settlement. I would say it would mean the end of South Vietnam. It would become Communist.

"Now if the people of South Vietnam vote Communist, that's another thing. I don't think they will, but that's what would constitute an honorable settlement as far as I am concerned.

"If I were president and peace talks hadn't concluded, and we don't have an honorable settlement by the time of the new administration, then I think we ought to set some time limit in the matter of negotiations. And then if they don't solve and settle the matter honorably, then we ought to win a military victory with conventional weapons and get out of Vietnam.

"We shouldn't have gone there by ourselves in the first place. I hear one of the other candidates say what I've said for a long time-it is just as much to Western Europe and non-Communist Asia's interests to be there as it is for us to be there."

Wallace

Q: What would you do about student demonstrations-some of which have been overt opposition to the war in Vietnam?

HUMPHREY

...Dissent is never a very pleasant experience for those towards whom the dissent is directed. Nevertheless, it is something that we have to protect and preserve.

But disorder is another thing. When a demonstration gets to a point where it affects the physical well-being of others, or where it becomes destructive of property or injurious of person, then it is unlawful. And at that point the police or law enforcement officials must take action.

Humphrey

Now, that is why you need trained police officers.

"When you start to throw chairs, break up the furniture, injure people, break up a peaceful assembly, then you have violated the law. And you are subject to penalties."

NIXON

"I think that the university and college officials should take an uncompromising line and it is this; that in a society like ours, which provides a method for peacefully changing those things we do not like, there is no cause that justifies breaking the law or engaging in violence.

Now, with regard to how you deal with it. On the college campuses and university campuses, the very definition of college means that the rule of reason shall prevail over the rule of force.

Any individual, whether he is a student or a member of the college faculty, who does not accept that proposition and who breaks the law and engages in violence doesn't belong in a college and university and should be expelled immediately. That would be my advice. That would be the national tone that I would set, and I would hope that some of the leaders of our colleges and universities would get the spine and the backbone to do exactly that.

I think that because the great majority of students in the colleges and universities come there to study. They don't come there to protest illegally. This will not discourage the right kind of dissent, and by the right kind of dissent, I mean it can be very vigorous. Audiences can boo. They can carry signs. They can do anything they want in that respect, as long as it is peaceful, but when they break the law, when they engage in conduct which in effect denies to others their right to listen or their right to hear, or when they go much further as some of the student groups have and occupy buildings and insist on their demands with illegal means, then out. They should be out of the universities and colleges.

WALLACE

"You have a right to demonstrate against the war, but when you march on a city street, you ought not to march for three straight weeks and tie up trade and commerce and imperil the safety of people as a result of continuous demonstration.

"...to make a speech saying I want the Communists to win and they print that speech in the Communist capitals, that's not legitimate dissent. That's an overt act of treason because it aids and abets the enemies of our country and if you apply a little common sense you can tell a legitimate dissenter from one who's not a legitimate dissenter.

"The Justice Department ought to seek indictments against those who make speeches calling for Communist victory and those on the college campuses, the few who do raise money and blood and clothes for the Communists.

The SUG Board

On November 7 the student body will have an opportunity to elect representatives to the Student Union Governing (SUG) Board, a body which has managed to remain in obscurity since its inception. For those who are unfamiliar with this organization, its function is to establish policies relating to the use of the Student Union Building and, soon, the new Campus Center.

Past years have seen few candidates running for Board positions, and usually there were nearly as few voters as there were candidates; Elections were usually decided by a few dozen voters. Through this method the SUG Board has managed to become a self-perpetuating elite.

It would appear then, that now is a good time to ask some pertinent questions about our Student Union, i.e., is the Building truly owned by the student body; does the SUG Board actually control the building; and is the SUG Board directly responsible to the students who elected it?

In reality, the building belongs to the state and not to the students; no one really seems to know who is in control of the building; and the Board reports directly to President Lederle.

If you are at all interested in these facts and in the operation of your Student Union Building, perhaps you should take the trouble to find out who's running and vote next Thursday.

'Twilight Shadows' Sparkled

One of the highlights of Sunday's Boston Pops concert which managed to sneak by most people unnoticed was the closing number --"Twilight Shadows", our alma mater. Few people realized that it was transcribed for the Pops by David Vincent '71, a UMass music major. When Harry Ellis Dickson asked the audience to sing along, however, the reaction was rather interesting -- no one knew the words.

"When it (the alma mater) started," commented the Pops personnel manager after the concert, "I thought that I might have put B.C.'s alma mater in by mistake, because no one sang."

Though the student body's knowledge of UMass tradition is nothing to be applauded, David Vincent's transcription of our alma mater definitely is.

"Look Out For That Guy. He'd Be A Big Spender"

The Inside Line

What Is A SUG Board??

By Chris McGahan

I was thinking the other day (a statement that may cause some to reject the rest of this column as utterly devoid of credibility) about famous anachronisms. It was prompted by an article I was reading about that beloved American institution, the Electoral College. Following my stream of quasi-consciousness, my thoughts then wandered to the cuspidors still found in the Senate chambers in Washington, then to Massachusetts' own Governor's Council. The terminus of this particular day's excursion into semi-insanity was right here in the heart of the pioneer valley, in the town of Amherst, University of Massachusetts. The SUG Board!

Immediately, of course, everyone who just read that last phrase, although intrigued and enchanted by the mellifluous sound of those two delightful syllables, stopped and asked himself: "What is a SUG Board? Is it like a checker board? Maybe it's a new kind of bed board. Or an improved, all-electric Ouija board. Or...."

No, mankind is just not destined for such blessings. It is actually the Student Union Governing Board. "...(T)his organization shall ... see that a social, cultural, and educational program of activities and services are provided for the University of Massachusetts students and campus community." (Article II, Constitution, Student Union Governing Board, Spring 1968) This is certainly a worthy set of goals for any organization to espouse, but one wonders if it isn't perhaps a rather large order -- for 20 people to provide such a varied fare for 20,000.

The Board is composed of both elected and appointed members, 19 voting students, faculty and alumni, and 3 non-voting administrators. Eleven of these are elected from the classes, three serving as officers of the board and vacating their constituencies. Stockbridge students and graduate students are each represented by one elected member. Two others are elected from the Program Council, a sub-group of the SUG Board (although the Program Council itself is appointive). One representative is appointed by the President of the Student Senate. The President of the University appoints two faculty to serve for overlapping two-year terms, and Evan Johnston recommends the names of several alumni to serve, with the Board itself selecting the final appointee. With the exception of the faculty representatives, all terms are for one year. Customarily, the Chairman of the Program Council serves as one of its two representatives.

One could at this point legitimately ask: Is the SUG Board representative? And, depending on one's point of view, one could legitimately reply yes, no, or maybe. Thirteen of the Board's members are directly elected from their constituencies -- the class, Stockbridge and graduate representatives. Two others are elected from a secondary constituency -- the Program Council representatives. One other, the Senate appointee, is usually also an elected member of the Senate, although this year's appointee, John Cowie, is a former Senator.

The non-elected members are the faculty and alumni representatives. In addition, there is still provision in the Constitution for one member appointed by Adelphia and Mortar Board, the senior honor (?) societies. This year only Mortar Board has sent a representative, and rumor has it that these two supernumeraries, already in a state of limbo, are about due for a constitutional purging. But, in balance, 76% of the Board's voting membership is elected in one form or another.

On the other hand, do two representatives from each class allow for sufficient diversity of opinion as is found in a constituency of 3,000 persons? The same question could be asked in spades of the Senate appointee, who represents the entire spectrum of student opinion as expressed through the Senate. One could say it works out to six of one and half a dozen of the other.

But one need only cite the minimal election turn-outs, time after time, the general student unawareness of the very existence of the SUG Board to contend that there is at least a skew toward the "no" side of the representation continuum, if not a distinct lack of varied representation. SUG Board Chairman Sue Brady '69 says: "This is the same old charge that comes up every year. We're as representative as a group that size can be. The students work hard to be representative and to find out the feelings of their constituents on the issues."

Taking an opposing point of view, Senate Vice President Rick Hartwell says: "Small groups such as the SUG Board, elected at large, are never representative. They can't begin to be truly representative." But, as we said, this is probably an irresolveable question.

Another, more basic question involves the presence of the faculty and alumni representatives on the board as voting members. Now certainly one values the advice that comes from experience. Older people have more experience, merely by the accident of earlier birthdates. But why does experience alone justify even this slight faculty control over student monies? Student funds should be student-controlled -- entirely. One further wonders who, too, ownership of the Union and Lincoln (Campus) Center Buildings, whose bonds are amortized from Student Union tax monies, will eventually pass to the University and not remain with the students, who paid for them.

Under Chairman Brady's leadership the SUG Board has begun to take some needed steps to reform itself. It has passed constitutional ammendments raising class representation from seven to eleven. It is considering, as noted earlier, eliminating the Mortar Board and Adelphia seats on the Board. It is examining its own structure with an eye to future demands on a SUG Board that will soon be governing a new Campus Center as well as the present Union building.

These efforts are admirable. It is refreshing to see a governmental body that is willing to undertake such an examination of its own conscience for a change. The question remains: Will they go far enough?

The first alternative, one they seem to be seriously considering, is simply an expansion of the Board's inembership. We hope that at the same time they will take steps to eliminate the non-student voting members of the Board. However, since their constitution is approved only by the President of the University and the Trustees, and not by the Student Senate, prospects for this improvement are rather doubtful unless concerted pressure is exerted by an aware, aroused student body. Miss Brady herself thinks "...we need it enlarged again, but not so much that it becomes un-wieldy." This would certainly be a step in the right direction.

A second alternative would be policy review -- as distinct from policy dictation -- by the Student Senate, with or without an enlarged Board. At present, the SUG Board reports only to the President of the University or his representative on matters of Union policy. Presumably, their decisions are subject to Presidential veto.

Of course the Board of Trustees has the ultimate say in any University policy decision, which has proven to be a mixed but unavoidable blessing. The powers that be would doubtless be reluctant to voluntarily relinquish, at one step, faculty representation and presidential review. If, however, this was seen to be a desirable reform effort, it would be a relatively easy matter for the Senate to pass legislation recommending to the President of the University that the Student Senate be designated his representative for purposed of policy review.

The third alternative would be for the Senate to exert pressure on the administration and trustees to abrogate the SUG Board Constitution entirely. The next step would be for the Student Senate to create a standing committee to perform the same tasks and fulfill the same duties as the SUG Board. Whatever goal the SUG Board works toward, whether it is one I have suggested or not, it is to be hoped that they seek the power to set the Student Union Tax, a power now exclusively that of the Trustees, although the Board does approve the Union budget.

From the SUG Board's point of view, the most attractive -- and thus the most likely -- method of reform is the first, i.e., expansion of the electoral representation of the Board. From the point of view of the Senate, a reasonable and desirable reform is the second alternative noted above, policy review by the Senate rather than by the President.

It is not un-true that there exists a certain amount of antagonism between the proponents of Senate-type SUG Board reform and SUG Board-type SUG Board reform. Miss Brady allowed that the feeling of the Board was unanimously opposed to any Senate interference in their task.

But as sure as there will be a bombing halt before November 5, SUG Board reform is on its way. The shape it will take lies with which group, SUG Board or Senate, can exert more leverage with the administration and Trustees.

My money is on the Senate.

Special Report--Part 3

The Death Penalty A Scientific Analysis

BY GEORGE KISER AND STEVE ROBL

A better comparison than the one mentioned last time would be between states essentially alike socially and economically, but differing on the presence or absence of the death penalty. Such a comparison has been made by one of the world's leading criminologists, University of Pennsylvania Professor Thorsten Sellin. The study was conducted in 1959 for the American Law Institute's Model Penal Code Project. Professor Sellin selected several sets of three adjoining states, the three being similar on social and economic factors, and each set containing both death penalty and abolition states. The research found that within the sets of similar states, homicide rates were practically the same for death-penalty and non-death-penalty states.

If the death penalty were a significantly greater deterrent to murder than is imprisonment, then the capital punishment states should have had lower homicide rates. The Sellin study shows they do not, and, thus, indicates that the leading argument of the death penalty advocates is based on an assumption contrary to facts.

1.b A Comparison of Murder Rates Before And After Abolition Of The Death Penalty.

One of the most dire and general predictions of capital punishment advocates is that if the death penalty should be removed, murder rates would skyrocket. If the death penalty is indeed a significantly greater deterrent to murder, then when a state removes capital punishment, murder rates obviously should increase significantly.

What does the scientific evidence show? One of the most comprehensive studies ever made of the death penalty was conducted by the British Royal Commission on Capital Punishment. The Commission gathered information for many months in many different countries.

The conclusion of the Royal Commission was "that there is no clear evidence in any of the figures we have examined that the abolition of capital punishment has led to an increase in the homicide rate, or that its reintroduction has led to a fall."

Some states have abolished the death penalty and then restored it after a few years, assuming that abolition had resulted in rapidly increasing murder rates. However, research shows that the homicide rates in these states during the time of abolition were almost exactly the same as those of neighboring states which made no change in their laws regarding the death penalty.

Studies of European nations which have abolished the death penalty have found no noticable effect of abolition on murder rates.

It is interesting to note the tendency for governors of abolition states to believe that abolition has NOT led to a reign of lawlessness.

Merits of SWAP

To The Editor:

In regard to the article in Friday's Collegian, "Demerits of SWAP", I think Mr. McGahan has been entirely unfair in his depicting of SWAP as little more than the annual drunken orgy sponsored by the university.

SWAP provides an opportunity for members of the student body, the faculty and the administration to meet on an equal basis and discuss issues of mutual con - cern. Both Mr. McGahan and I are well aware of the fact that members of the administration are almost always willing to discuss such matters with students. Maybe Mr. McGahan has always been aware of this fact, but it took SWAP to make me aware of it. SWAP breaks down the barriers between the three groups, as participants discuss issues on a person-to-person basis and not as a student to a faculty member or administrator.

One of Mr. McGahan's major complaints seems to be SWAP's off-campus location. I feel this is one of the essential factors in breaking down these barriers, in changing the "us-them" attitude to one of a unified group working together for the good of the university community as a whole.

Much good has come out of SWAP in the past to which Mr. McGahan has failed to give due recognition. Both the abolition of upperclass women's curfews and the change of the open house policy received their initial impetus at SWAP conferences. But if all SWAP ever did was to eliminate these barriers between the students, faculty, and administration I feel that that in itself would justify its existence.

SWAP can only be what we as individual participants care to make it.

More on Homecoming

To the Editor:

I am still not sure that I believe what happened in the Cage Friday night. It was an event beyond anything I know how to describe.

I am equally unsure of the reality of Ron LaBrecque's review printed in the Daily Collegian on Monday. Naturally, Janis Joplin is such a phenomenon that her virtuosity grabs more attention than does that of the rest of the group. But they were right there with Janis every minute--and they carried her every bit as much as she carried them.

The reviewer obviously had never really listened to Big Brother and the Holding Company until they appeared at the Cage. Or perhaps he never listened even then. The only songs he can remember are "Piece of My Heart" and "Down on Me", both released as singles. Like, he was impressed by those songs, man, because he heard them on the radio. But there wasn't much in between, except "a very long one in the middle." (I don't know which song "in the middle" he's referring to; I thought that they were all too short.) Where WAS your reviewer when they exploded into "Combination of the Two?" How can anyone think about that concert and not remember "Summertime" and "Ball and Chain"?

Was their sound too loud? COULD their sound be too loud? Yes, it was "overpoweringly grating." That's what Big Brother is all about. Last Friday night that great, great broad AND those four gentlemen tied me in a knot, jumped on my head, and kicked me where it hurt the most. My memory records that experience as exciting and satisfying to the furthest possible extreme; as far as I am concerned, none of those people will ever return to obscurity.

Tim Maguire

Thanks From 1776

To the Editors:

In behalf of Mr. Korpita, I would like to thank the editors and reporting editor--Jan Curely, for the equal space coverage by the "Daily Collegian" in the Officials elections of campus union Local 1776.

In discussions concerning the news media and policy coverage, one 20 year veteran of UMass employment stated, "The only free press left in this area...is the 'Collegian'!"

Mr. Korpita would also like to thank all those members that voted for this progressive slate.

Thanks again to the "Free Press."

Rewrite Education

We're looking for a girl interested in doing re-write work for just a few hours each week. We regularly receive posters and flyers announcing scholarship and graduate programs that are worthy of announcement in the paper. The trouble is that these don't come in a prose form suitable for publication. Their fragmented style has to be fleshed out, and put into suitable news copy format. If you'd be willing and able to do this, please contact the COLLEGIAN office and leave your name with the secretary.

Bookstore Problem

To the Editor:

The University Bookstore is a disgrace. Instead of helping broaden education, its inefficient and ineffective management makes it impossible for students and faculty to find books.

First, books are shelved according to publishers instead of, more reasonably, by authors or subjects. Although this may make it easy for book salesmen to check their stock, few students know who published what and must waste time scanning the stacks. (None of the staff seem to know where individual titles are.)

Second, more often than not, the book desired is not there. Instead, there is a 3X5 card containing the title, author and price, all in rather bad scrawl. How much can you learn from the title, author and price? Or from this specimen of graphology?

Third, the variety of books is terribly limited, and those wanted or needed are inevitably understocked.

Students' complaints about the lack of faculty-student communication led in various departments to the establishment of committees comprising both students and professors to re-evaluate and reshape course content and curricula. Can't similar protests and committees lead to a more usable bookstore?

Law and Disorder' Magazine Scores Chicago Convention

DONNA WALDRON
Staff Reporter

A special one issue magazine on "Law and Disorder" was released by Time-Life publications in Chicago and other major cities on October 16.

The cover features a helmeted, night - stick - holding policeman standing at-ready across Chicago's Columbus Boulevard. Also appearing on the cover is a quote from Attorney General Ramsey Clark, who asked "Who will protect the public when the police violate the law?"

The magazine is expected to raise a storm of controversy between the "law and order" and the civil-libertarian factions of American society.

The list of contributors is impressive. Some of them are: Arthur Miller, Senator Wayne Morse, Hugh Hefner and Huntly & Brinkley. All writers, photographers and illustrators donated their work.

Of the photographers Gary Cole, picture editor of Law and Disorder said: "They gave their pictures freely, pictures for which they paid a high price in bruises, broken bones, and smashed equipment on the streets of the city. Look for the story of Chicago's Convention Week in these pictures. Policemen without badges, newsmen beaten mercilessly, innocent people brutalized, rights denied.

Proceeds from the publication, which sells for $1.00 will go to the Illinois Division of the American Civil Liberties Union. However, Donald Myrus, senior editor of Playboy Press, exercised complete control over the contents.

In explaining the ACLU's support of the publication of "Law and Disorder", Jay Miller, Executive Director of the Illinois Division of the American Civil Liberties Union, said: "Law and Disorder tells the story of the Chicago Convention as it was seen by those who were there, and by those who felt or saw the aspirations and fear and who are disturbed about what the Chicago experience means to the continuation of American democracy."

In the part entitled "Citizens and Their Police," Senator Wayne Morse states that "Members of the Chicago police force, in the heat of passion, assigned themselves the roles of law enforcer, jury, judge, and punisher."

In a section of articles titled simply "Media', Lewis Koch, a TV news writer, says, "The police were made to look foolish and intemperate and they knew it. If one hates the man who makes him play the fool, how much more does he despise those who spread the tale of his foolishness?"

David Brinkley notes, "On the last day of the Democratic Convention, the Party could be fairly classified as a disaster area."

Charles Van Doren in reviewing newspaper and magazine coverage says, "The press acquitted itself honorably that week in August. . .their only hope is to continue to tell it as they see it; for in the world that many fear is coming, a free press would be the first casualty."

Murray Kempton, the NEW YORK POST columnist, concludes "Law and Disorder" with these sentences: Mayor Daley has taught us all a great lesson about this country. Having learned from him, we will never be the same. Anyhow, I hope not."

Student-Faculty Demonstration at UConn Drives Dow Chemical Recruiter from Campus

STORRS, CONN. (AP) - A Dow Chemical Co. recruiter left the University of Connecticut campus Wednesday at noontime after being beseiged in an interview room by about 15 student and faculty demonstrators.

As he left, he said, "I don't know if Dow is coming back."

Recruiter Bruce Swing was able to complete only one job interview before the demonstrators burst into the large basement room of the engineering building and refused to leave.

A year ago, about 100 demonstrators blocked Dow interviewers in protest of the company's production of napalm for bombs used in Vietnam.

The student senate and faculty later endorsed a statement that such protest gatherings infringed on the rights of students interested in interviewing for jobs.

A student at Wednesday's demonstration who asked to remain unidentified described the protestors as a "calm, happy group," adding that some were "angered" over an administration policy statement prohibiting such campus demonstrations that was circulated the previous night.

He said Swing gained entrance to the building by saying he was a faculty member. The demonstrators entered after the first student left the interview.

Swing was unable to continue with his meetings with students because he was constantly questioned about the war and about napalm by demonstrators.

Meanwhile, Provost Edward Gant tried to move the group from the room. Several times he repeated the warning circulated in the administration's statement: that "willful obstruction of any university activity including placement activities, is subject ultimately to the most severe of institutional penalties."

Such penalties could mean expulsion or criminal prosecution, but Gant declined to elaborate on the statement. Some demonstrators argued that others had joined their group to control the demonstration and not obstruct the interview.

It appeared that names of demonstrators were not recorded. Campus police were not called.

Swing left the interview room after about two and a half hours, saying he was going to eat. Some of the demonstrators, however, followed and heckled him. Finally he turned from the university dining commons, went to his car and departed.

University of Connecticut's president announced Wednesday he would start disciplinary action against persons who disrupted job interviews on campus earlier in the day.

Baird's 200 Mile Walk Delayed By Rainstorms

PITTSFIELD, Mass. (AP)- Fair weather friends and a drenching rainstrom have delayed a walk from Albany, N.Y., to Boston planned by William R. Baird to dramatize his drive to change Massachusetts birth control laws.

The 200-mile walk never started Tuesday, Baird said, because he "ran into a rainstrom and ran out of friends who were going to join me for at least part of the journey on foot." Baird 36, drove to Pittsfield and planned to begin his march today from New Lebanon, N.Y., 13 miles from here.

Baird is free on bail after his conviction in Boston of violating the state "chastity laws." The conviction resulted from a demonstration at Boston University last April where he displayed birth control devices and a contraceptive to an unmarried student.

He said he wanted to arrive in Boston in mid-November, when his appeal was scheduled to come up for hearing. However, Baird said the hearing has been moved up to next Monday.

Massachusetts law permits sale of contraceptives to married women who have a doctor's prescriptions.

WFCR Will Air In-Depth Studies On Campus Scenes

WFCR, the 5-college radio station broadcasting from the Hampshire house, in mid-December will air several in-depth programs that deal with such aspects of the University as Project Ten, the growth of the University on the surrounding community, the Student Academic Honesty Committee and University Food Services.

The programs are to be presented by students enrolled in the practicum program given by the Speech Department. Practicum, Speech 231, is offered to students who have successfully completed Speech 121, Introduction to Broadcasting, and Speech 222, Introduction to Radio Broadcasting Production. One credit a semester is given for the program and not more than three semesters may be taken. The course is offered on an arrangement only basis under the instruction of Professor Vincent Brann.

The purpose of practicum is to afford students practical experience in the actual production of a radio program. There are no weekly assignments or lectures. The only required work is a project, which is broadcast at the end of the semester. The students may work alone or in pairs on the projects. This semester, nine male students and one female graduate student are enrolled.

Professor Brann stated that this semester all the students have decided to broadcast in-depth programs similar to a "CBS Reports" television program. He emphasized his role as more of an adviser than instructor. Students are not compelled by any strict schedule to receive counseling from Professor Brann. Although he must OK each project, the actual production is up to the students.

Annual Science Conference Held For Secondary Students Today

Approximately 700 secondary school students and teachers will visit the University of Massachusetts to participate in the third annual Science in Action Conference today.

The conference, coordinated by the 4-H Office of the UMass Cooperative Extension Service, will demonstrate to teachers and students the use of basic scientific knowledge and equipment in solving problems in our society.

Participants come from 125 secondary schools in Massachusetts. Each school has been asked to send a science teacher and five selected students to attend the program.

Dr. Arless A. Spielman, Dean of the College of Agriculture, will present a welcoming speech to the delegates in the opening session of the conference. He will be followed by Dr. Frederick J. Francis of the food science and technology department who will speak on "Science in Agriculture."

Examples of the 31 workshops to be offered by UMass College of Agriculture faculty are: "Pesticides in Enviroments" by Dr. Haim Gunner of the department of environmental sciences; "Animal Genetics" by Dr. J. Robert Smyth, Jr. of the department of veterinary and animal sciences; "The Biochemistry of Plant Growth" by Dr. Herbert V. Marsh, Jr. of the department of plant and soil sciences; and "Psychedelic Effects Solve Problems in Wood Research" by Mr. R.B. Hoadley professor of wood science and technology. Students and teachers participating in the program will have the opportunity to attend two of these pre-selected workshops.

Speculation Mounts Over Possible Bomb Halt

WASHINGTON (AP) - A fresh spurt of mysterious diplomatic activity triggered speculation Wednesday that President Johnson was on the brink of deciding whether to halt the bombing of North Vietnam.

While the White House and State Department maintained a tight "no comment" on the substance of Johnson's secret meeting Tuesday with Gen. Creighton W. Abrams, the U.S. commander in Vietnam, reports from elsewhere contributed to the suspense.

In Bangkok Foreign Minister Thanat Kohman told newsmen upon returning from a U. S. visit that the United States and North Vietnam had entered "final stages" of bargaining about a bombing halt and the start of full scale peace talks. The main point still to be settled is reciprocity by Hanoi for an end of the U.S. air attacks, he said.

In Paris, U.S. negotiator W. Averell Harriman and North Vietnam's Xuan Thuy held their weekly meeting without visible progress. However, Cyrus R. Vance, No. 2 man in the U.S. delegation did not show up for the session. Informed sources said Vance had worked most of the night at his Paris office and that there had been several secret U.S.-North Vietnamese contacts recently.

An official of an allied country said in Paris that "everything is settled" on the bombing halt question, but gave no further explanation.

In Saigon, where U.S. Ambassador Ellsworth G. Bunker was continuing an unusual series of meeting with President Nguyen Van Thieu, there were unconfirmed account that the two were preparing a joint statement in which South Vietnam would at least accept a cessation of the bombing.

Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey, campaigning for the presidency, said in Philadelphia a "new level of diplomatic activity" on Vietnam is under way and "the next move is up to Hanoi." He said he did not know whether there might be a new peace move before next Tuesday's election "and I'm not really in a position to tell you if I knew."

Johnson has offered to stop the bombing provided this leads promptly to serious peace negotiations, and that North Vietnam would not take advantage of the U.S. military restraint.

The Hanoi regime, through its official daily newspaper Nhan Dan, issued a fresh denunciation of what it termed the stubborn attitude of the United States and renewed its demand for a stop to the U.S. bombing without reciprocal conditions on North Vietnam's part.

SWAP To Discuss Academic Problems

This year's SWAP Conference will take place on November 1-3 at the Oak and Spruce Lodge in South Lee, Massachusetts. The three topics which will be discussed are the relevance of the cirriculum, the "Student Voice," and three specific policies of the university.

There three specific policies are the pass-fail system, the physical education requirement, and the four point grading system. SWAP will discuss how the pass-fail system can be expanded to be more meaningful to the student body. The possibility of changing from our present four point grading system to a twelve point system will also be discussed. This change would mean a grading system with pluses and minuses. For example, instead of our present "B" grade, there would be a "B-", "B", and a "Bplus". Present dissatisfaction with the physical education requirement, and how it can be modified will be the third policy discussed.

A reminder to those who plan to attend the SWAP Conference-Busses will leave from the front of the Student Union at 4:00 P.M. on Friday, November 1.

W Mass. English Council Holds Conference Nov. 2

"Black Writers in the English Classroom" will be the theme of the annual fall conference of the Western Massachusetts English Council in the Student Union at the University of Massachusetts Saturday, Nov. 2.

A panel to begin at 10 a.m. will include Miss Doris Abramson of the department of speech at UMass; Mr Jeffrey Campbell, Unitarian minister and teacher at the Putney School; and Bernard Bell, Charles Moran and Charles Adams, all of the English department at the University. Mr. Bell and Mr. Campbell were instructors for the Upward Bound project at the University this past summer, and Mr. Adams and Mr. Moran served as instructors in the Smith Summer Tutorial Program for Disadvantaged Students. At 11 a.m. the panel members will conduct group discussions with teachers present.

Prof. Sidney Kaplan of the UMass English department will speak at the 12:30 luncheon.

Applications For Auto Registration Being Acccepted

The Registry of Motor Vehicles is now accepting 1969 registration applications at the Boston and branch offices throughout the state. They may also be sent by mail to the Boston office with a separate check or money order for each application. Cash should not be sent through the mail.

The continued use of the current reflectorized plate will be validated by a registration sticker for 1969. The sticker will be distributed together with the registration certificate.

Registrar McLaughlin said that drivers should store the validating sticker in a safe place with the registration certificate until it is time for them to be used. "The 1969 sticker on the top center of the windshield and registration certificate are proof that the vehicle has been registered for 1969." McLaughlin said.

Ovid's Metamorphoses arrives at Mt. Holyoke

A facsimile reprint of Ovid's "Metamorphoses," in a 1480 translation by William Caxton, the first British printer, has arrived at Mount Holyoke College to further highlight the opening of the recently renovated Williston Memorial Library.

The facsimile edition is a reprint of a 15th century manuscript which is thought to be lettered in Caxton's own hand.

Juillard String Quartet Presents Concerts At U-Mass This Season

The internationally-acclaimed Juilliard String Quartet will again present a series of concerts this season at the University of Massachusetts, open to the public without charge and sponsored by the UMass music department.

The first will be Monday, Nov. 4, at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. The program: Haydn's Quartet in G Major, Opus 76, No. 1; Bartok's Third Quartet (1927); and Beethoven's Quartet in C Sharp Minor, Opus 131.

Internationally known for its musical perfection, the group has been quartet-in-residence of the Juilliard School of Music for 22 years. In 1962, it was appointed quartet-in-residence of the Library of Congress.

First violinist Robert Mann attended the Juilliard School where he studied violin and composition under Edouard Dethier. After his debut in 1941, he toured as soloist and first violinist with the Albuquerque Festival String Quartet.

Second violinist Earl Carlyss also attended the Juilliard School under a six-year scholarship. His professional debut was made with the Pasadena Symphony. He has toured Scandinavia twice and also appeared at the Casals Festival in Puerto Rico. He made his recital debut in New York in 1962.

Violist Raphael Hillyer studied at Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia and attended Dartmouth College where he majored in mathematics. After receiving his M.A. degree from Harvard, he played with the Boston and NBC Symphonies and toured with the Stradivarius and NBC String Quartets.

Redmen To Do Battle With Equally Thin Vermont

Catamount Lacks Depth
UMass is Injury Riddled

By MIKE CARRAN
Sports Editor

Two years ago when the Redmen travelled to Burlington, Vermont, the Catamounts were undefeated. In a well-played game, U-Mass stopped Vermont 27-21, and went on to win the Yankee Conference championship.

Saturday at Centennial Field, it'll be two squads with losing records fighting for nothing save a victory. The Redmen are 1-5 while the Catamounts sport a somewhat flashier 2-4 mark.

Vermont wants badly, though, to beat the defending champions and continue a two-game winning streak. Coach Bob Clifford, if he loses Saturday, will be facing his second straight losing season.

The Catamount attack has been completely overhaulled since workhorse Bob Mitchell departed. Sophomore Denny Robinson and junior Dick McDonough are the leading rushers so far this year. Fullback Harry Doria has been used mainly as a blocker while quarterback Fran Peterson is only a so-so passer.

Up front Vermont has seniors Bill Lawrence and Dave Martin at the end positions. Lawrence caught five passes in the season opener, but has since been hampered by injuries. Martin is a fine blocker who gets an occassional aerial when the quarterback calls an automatic.

The rest of the offensive line is made up of Captain Dave Lucaroni and Ron Gargano at tackles, guards Larry Kelly and Paul McKane, and center Paul Ardell. Coach Clifford has cited the inexperience of this unit as one of the key factors in Vermont's slow start.

Defensively, the Catamounts aren't much better off. Bill Crudo, Gerry Elliot, Ron Tice, and Pat O'Reilly are the front four. The middle guard will probably be Ralph Alexander. None of these men played their present positions before this campaign.

Vermont's top defensive player has been linebacker John Wojciechowski, but he was injured in last week's game against Norwich. Clifford still hasn't decided on a replacement here.

The other linebackers are highly-regarded sophomore Tom McLaughlin and Tom Dexter, a senior who played little until this season.

In the defensive backfield the Catamounts have one veteran, Frank Maganec and two second string quarterbacks, Paul Simpson and Jack Stroker. Simpson started the season as the first-string quarterback but has since been surpassed by Peterson. Stroker, a real jack-of-all-trades centers the ball on PATs and FGs which is rather unusual for a quarterback-safety.

Vermont's field goal kicker is Dick Farnham while Paul Brown and Peterson share the punting.

Mike Barowski and Gene Monahan are two of the better kickoff return specialists in the conference. Speedster Robinson can also be expected to see action here.

The Catamounts have practically no depth. In fact, before the season started Clifford was toying with the idea of reverting to one-platoon football.

And so for the first time this year the Redmen will be facing a team which is thinner than they are, if that's possible in these days of "two-platoon" football.

CONGRADULATIONS AND CONSOLATION - UMass Coach Vic Fusia and UVM mentor Bob Clifford have mixed emotions following last year's 21 - 0 win by the Redmen at Alumni Stadium.

Yale, Harvard Top N.E. Poll

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Yale held first place, Harvard moved up to second, and Connecticut and Brown jumped into the Top Ten in this week's Associated Press New England college football poll.

The Elis got 17 of the 18 first place votes and piled up 179 points, just one under the maximum, after defeating Cornell 25-13 for their fifth straight victory.

Harvard, also now 5-, climbed from second to third place with 158 points after stopping Dartmouth 22-7.

Boston College got the one dissenting first place vote despite a 29- loss to Penn State, the nation's No. 4 power.

The Top Ten, with records and total points based on 1 for first, 9 for second, etc.:

1.	Yale, 5-	179
2.	Harvard, 5-	158

Hockey Team Begins Preparation For Opener

BY KEN SCHWARTZ
Sports Day Editor

With football still in mid-season the UMass Varsity Hockey team has been hard at work in the ice cold confines of the Williston Academy Rink in Easthampton.

After a three day respit the team will resume practice in Orr Rink on the campus of Amherst College. Eight returning lettermen plus additional help from last year's freshmen team, three transfer students, and John Hartnett should give second year Coach Jack Canniff the personnel to improve on last years 5-15 record.

In the goal Canniff will use either Sophomore Larry Walsh or Worcester Jr. College transfer, Glenn Fulton.

Although Coach Canniff chose to be non-committal at this early stage of the season, the 1968-69 edition of Redmen Hockey should be much improved over last years' team. The club has much more depth in the forward positions and should be tighter defensively.

Redmen fans will be able to get there first look at both the Varsity and the strong Freshmen team when the two meet in competition under game conditions on Friday night, November 22 at Orr Rink.

Coniglaro Not On Sox Roster

Sox Release Robinson, Farm Nixon

Boston (AP) - The Boston Red Sox released outfielder Floyd Robinson and assigned catcher Russ Nixon to their Louisville farm team Wednesday as they announced a 4-man winter major league roster which also left all the name of sidelined slugger Tony Coniglaro.

Coniglaro, who has not played since suffering an eye injury when hit by a pitch Aug. 18, 1967, was on the emergency disabled list for the entire 1968 season under a special ruling by the commissioner's office.

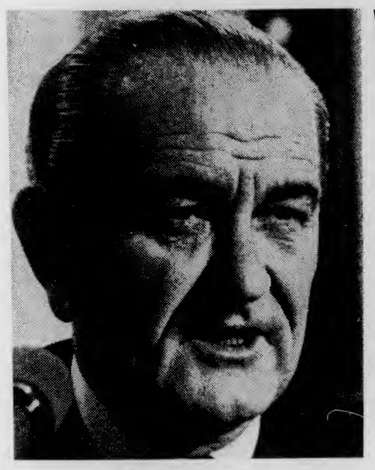
The onetime American League home run leader failed in a comeback attempt in spring training but has talked of trying again either in his old outfield position or as a pitcher.

It was not immediately clear whether his absence from the list would mean he was available to any team for $25,000 in the December draft, as is normally the case with players left off the 4-man winter roster.

Robinson, a 32-year-old nine-year major league veteran acquired late in the season from Oakland, was used sparingly as a pinch hitter and spot player.

Nixon, 33 and an 11-year veteran, spent several seasons with the Red Sox earlier and was reacquired by them late this summer from Minnesota. He also saw only spot and pinch-hitting duty.

Ten players were promoted from the farm system to make up the official major league roster, while several other rookies who spent most of this season in the minors continue on the 4-man protected list.



Those in the latter group, all expected to make strong bids for spots on the team in 1968, include pitchers Ken Brett, Billy Farmer, Mike Jackson and Fred Wenz; catcher Gerry Moses; infielders Luis Alvarado and Syd O'Brien; and outfielder Joe Lahoud.

Among the newcomers, many of whom are expected to need more seasoning, pitcher John Thibdeau is rated as having the best chance of making it with the parent club. The 23-year-old left-hander fashioned a 12-7 record with 19 strikeouts in the same number of innings at Louisville last season.

JOHNSON ORDERS HALT TO BOMBING OF NORTH

President Johnson

VC, Saigon to Take Part in Talks As Hopes for Settlement Rise

WASHINGTON AP - President Johnson announced Thursday night that a complete halt to all bombardment of North Vietnam will begin at 8 a.m. EST Friday, Washington time.

The President, addressing the nation, in national T.V., said he had decided to take this step with the concurence of his top military advisers and the governments of all the allied powers fighting in Vietnam, "in the belief that this action can lead to progress toward a peaceful settlement of the Vietnamese war."

Hanoi was notified of the decision.

And negotiations on the basis of it will begin in Paris on Nov. 6, with the government of South Vietnam represented at the conference table. The latter was a key bone of contention.

The National Liberation front also will be entitled to sit in on the new-terms maneuvering for peace in the long, costly war on the other side of the world. The NLF is the political arm of the Viet Cong.

"What we now expect-what we have a right to expect-are prompt, productive, serious and intensive negotiations in an atmosphere that is conducive to progress," Johnson said.

Some progress already has come in the action he has taken, Johnson said, and in indications that Hanoi is willing now to talk in more substantive terms.

The presidential announcement was delivered from the movie theater and broadcasting studio in the East Wing of the White House. It followed a brief meeting Johnson held an hour and a half earlier with his top security, defense and diplomatic advisers in the Cabinet Room.

And along the way, the chief executive took time to notify the three presidential nominees, Democrat Hubert H. Humphrey, Republican Richard M. Nixon and Independent American George C. Wallace of the decision he had reached.

This was about 6 p.m. EST. Twenty minutes later he got congressional leaders of both parties on the telephone to tell them.

And he plans to see whoever turns up winner of next Tuesday's election and brief him fully on all the diplomatic steps that led to the decision. That will be immediately after the election. It could be at the Johnson ranch in Texas.

"WE CAN HOPE"

The progress marked up so far, culminating in the decision for a bombing and shelling halt, has been a long, complicated, sometimes disappointing process.

The first real breakthrough came last Sunday. At that time word came through that the North Vietnamese were ready to move in accordance with conditions Johnson had started out with.

But again the President reviewed the entire picture. Before taking a final step, he wanted to reassure himself that U.S. and allied military forces would not be put at a harmful disadvantage and risk.

President Nguyen Van Thieu of South Vietnam reportedly agreed to go along only Thursday.

And then, Thursday night, after checking with key advisers, Johnson went on the air to tell his fellow countrymen:

"I speak to you this evening about very important developments in our search for peace in Vietnam."

He recalled that it was March 31, when he disclosed that he was rejecting any attempt to win another presidential term, that was the starting point for trying to get talks started on a settlement of the Vietnam war. He announced then he was halting bombing of most of the Northern area including 9 percent of North Vietnamese population.

This led to the opening of discussions in Paris in May between representatives of Hanoi and Washington.

He said the Paris discussions appeared deadlocked for weeks with no movement at all, and then moved into a more hopeful phase.

Finally, Sunday evening and throughout Monday, confirmation began to come through of what Johnson called "the essential un-

Happy, But Unsure

President Johnson's bombing halt is "better late than never" contempory historian Henry Steele Commager told the MDC in an exclusive interview. He continued to explain that it is difficult to determine the exact effect that the bombing halt will have on the election, the peace negotiations, or on Hanoi's reaction. His "we will have to wait and see" conclusion was echoed by others contacted by the MDC.

Sheldon Goldman, a UMass government professor, sees the bombing halt as a promising step to peace. However, it is by no means a sign that the war is over or that its end is near at hand.

He stated that it was a toss-up

Political Analysis
Humphrey Seen to Gain; GOP Sees Backlash

By JACK BELL
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) --Hubert H. Humphrey got his biggest contribution of the presidential campaign Thursday night with President Johnson's decision to halt all bombardment of North Vietnam.

But the haze left hanging over Hanoi's reciprocal intentions clouded the impact of the President's action on Tuesday balloting.

Republican and Democratic strategists agreed privately that Humphrey, as the Democratic presidential nominee, would benefit psychologically by even a belated presidential decision to take an action that has become a symbol of the cataclysmic dissention within the Democratic party.

Highly placed Democrats said Johnson's decision to test Hanoi's reciprocal intentions could only act to cut the ground from under Democratic antiwar protesters who have been inclined not to vote at all Tuesday.

On the other hand, Republican strategists suggested that the President's action, only five days before the election, would be considered by the voters as a cynical attempted coup to swing the election.

Some of them said that, for all outward purposes, Johnson had accepted Hanoi's terms for an unconditional halt in the bombing before any real peace talks could start.

But above all of this political bickering stood the towering demand of the voters-as registered by responses to both major candidates when they have talked of peace in the campaign-to get the Vietnam war over with.

Johnson stressed in his nationally broadcast talk that "progress has come" in the search for peace. He called the developments a major step toward "A firm and honorable peace" in Southeast Asia.

This is what politicians say is the inate demand of the voters.

The feeling was that if the fighting in Vietnam somehow was stopped and Johnson did not promise that it would be the draft-card burning student protesters would subside into other less-explosive youthful exploits.

Significantly, Humphrey said in Newark, N.J., that Johnson's decision would help the cause of peace. He did not mention that he himself had put reciprocal conditions around a bombing halt that were only implied in Johnson's statement.

Boston Globe Supports Humphrey in Editorial

BOSTON (AP) - The BOSTON GLOBE Thursday announced its support for the Democratic Humphrey-Muskie ticket.

In an editorial in its Friday morning edition, the newspaper praised Vice President Hubert Humphrey's choice of Sen. Edmund S. Muskie of Maine as his vice presidential running mate and called Muskie a "standout. . . who could serve the country well in any office."

The Globe said it has not endorsed a presidential candidate since 1892.

The newspaper said that both presidential candidates present a problem but "in these volatile times the Vice Presidency could be all important. For this reason. . . the choice of the Globe is Humphrey and Muskie."

The Globe said Republican Richard M. Nixon's choice of Gov. Spiro Agnew of Maryland as his running mate was "made for all the wrong reasons." The editorial criticized Agnew for a "hair-raising performance" in which it said he switched posisions before his nomination and "has since demonstrated a lack of sensitivity and responsibility."

The Globe said it will continue to be an independent newspaper supporting individual candidates only when it feels a vital principle is at stake.

Faculty Reaction.. Not A Maneuver

whether or not it would improve Humphrey's "somewhat dim prospects" in the election. It may work against him, Goldman stated, if people view this as an election eve manoeuver. "I personally do not believe it is an election eve manoeuver," he added.

William Havard, head of the UMass government department, said he was delighted with the announcement if it signalled a beginning of negotiations to definitely end the war.

Concerning the elections, he doesn't know if the announcement will have any effect at this late date. He added that some people will probably see this as an attempt to aid Humphrey in winning the election.

"I am not cynical enough to think it is as cheap a move as that," he stated. He believes it is a part of a continuing effort to bring peace to Vietnam.

Dr. Howard Quint, head of the history department, feels that both sides "mean business", but that it will be a long time before an end to the war finally comes.

"I am a strong opponent of the war," he stated, adding that he regrets this effort towards ending the war was not made a year ago. He believes it would have been just as effective then.

"I don't believe it is a calculated move to help Humphrey," he said in referring to the election. Otherwise he doesn't know if it will have any effect on the election.

President Lederle, when contacted, declined to comment.

Isadore Silver, business law professor, stated that the announcement "sounds good," but that he remains skeptical about its effect on peace negotiations. However, he feels that some effort to bring about peace is better than none at all.

"A very reserved, very cynical, very skeptical optimism," was his description of his reaction to the announcement.

Proximity to Election Casts Doubt on Predictions

Humphrey

Nixon

His Republican opponent, Richard M. Nixon, had no option but to accept the decision. He has said he would accept the decision of the President to halt the bombing if that would result in the loss of fewer American lives. He hardly seemed in any position to challenge Johnson's action directly.

Former Gov. George C. Wallace of Alabama, the third party contender, seemed to have been left out on a limb by the President's action.

Wallace has been demanding that Hanoi publish its reciprocal intentions before any bombing halt. Johnson had no concrete intentions of that sort to disclose, Wallace's running mate, retired Gen. Curtis LeMay, recently has been advocating more intensive bombing of North Vietnam.

In the last two weeks Nixon has been trying to mitigate the political impact of a bombing halt.

He has reported that he had heard that Johnson might make some "cynical" political move of this sort, saying promptly that he didn't believe it.

In campaigning, the two major candidates have come so close to neutralizing the Vietnam issue that its final impact on Tuesday's balloting is problematical.

Both support American involvement in Vietnam, while arguing about who was responsible for it. Both want what they call an "honorable peace." They do not differ much in their opposition to having a new coalition government-including the Communist-in Saigon.

Their approval of a bombing halt varies only in semantics.

In this situation, Humphrey stants to gain by the fact that the hope of peace may bring out to the polls voters who intended to stay home.

If it is a false hope, no one will be sure until probably long after he has voted Tuesday.

Political Bickering Seen Next As Viet Peace Hopes Mature

PARIS (AP) - "This removes a tremendous obstacle to peace- but now the political struggle for our country begins," a Hanoi delegation official said privately early Friday on learning of President Johnson's bomb-halt announcement.

The Communist North Vietnamese delegation to the longwinded Paris talks toward peace in Vietnam seemed elated at the news but withheld formal comment pending study of the Washington announcement.

The comment about expectations of a political struggle ahead came spontaneously as a nonofficial observation.

Ambassador Xuan Thuy, leader of the Hanoi delegation, was awakened with the news at his headquarters at Choisy-le-Roi. The informant who reported this did not disclose the reaction of the North Vietnamese post-diplomat.

The North Vietnamese delegation is likely to hold anews conference later Friday, the source said.

The expectation in Paris is that it will announce readiness immediately to enter negotiations with the United States relating to the ending of hostilities involving the two countries.

One discordant note was sounded by the informant. He said the President - one-sidedly had exempted unarmed reconnaissance by American planes - presumably over North Vietnam - from the ending of penetrations over Communist territory.

"We want this stopped too," the Hanoi source said.

Ambassador W. Averell Harriman's delegation declined to make any immediate comment to the ground that the presidential statement called for no elaboration.

Harriman and his deputy, Cyrus Vance, along with their aides, were at their posts at the American Embassy listening to the Johnson broadcast.

An American delegation news conference was being set up for later in the day.

South Vietnam's observer mission on the sidelines of the peace parley offered no comment.

One reason was that its chief, ex-foreign minister Pham Dang Lam, left Thursday for Sigon, where he is to consult with President Nguyen Vn Thieu. But it was known that at least until the moment of his departure the Thieu government had not advised him of its reluctant endorsement of the American peace package.

derstanding that we had been seeking with the North Vietnamese on the critical issues between us for some time."

He said he spent most of Tuesday going over every single detail with his field commander, Gen. Abrams and a small group of Cabinet and other officials. Johnson apparently got a unanimous vote of confidence for his plan.

In his talk to the nation, announcing the step, Johnson said his decision followed through closely on his previous statements about a bombing halt.

He mentioned, in this respect, that the administration took the stand Aug. 19 that it intended to move no further without good reasons for believing the other side intended to join seriously in "de-escalating the war and moving seriously toward peace."

He recalled he had said on Sept. 1 that the bombing would not stop "until we are confident that it will not lead to an increase in American casualties."

"The Joint Chiefs of Staff, all military men, have assured me," he said, "And Gen. Abrams firmly asserted to me on Tuesday in an early 2:30 a.m. meeting-that in their military judgment this action should be taken now, and this action would not result in any increase in American casualties."

Johnson said though that now it has been made clear to the other side that talks can't continue if they take military advantage of them nor can they be productive in an atmosphere where cities are being shelled and Demilitarized Zone is being abused.

I think I should caution you, my fellow Americans, that arrangements of this kind are never foolproof. ," the President said.

"But in the light of the progress that has been made in recent weeks, and after carefully considering and weighing the unanimous military and diplomatic advice and judgment rendered to the commander-in-chief, I have finally decided to take this step now and to really determine the good faith of those who have assured us that progress will result when bombing ceases and to try to ascertain if an early peace is possible."

Humphrey Hits Domestic Needs In Last T.V. Broadcast

WASHINGTON (AP) — The deprived areas of America "won't take it any more," Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey said Thursday night.

"We are either going to help people . . . get out of the shadows and into the sunlight or the whole structure can be distorted and wrecked," he said.

Sen. Edmund S. Muskie of Maine, Humphrey's running mate on the Democratic ticket, said the question facing the nation is:

"Shall we go into the future building up tensions or shall we do what we can to break those tensions."

They commented in a joint television appearance recorded here last Saturday for nationwide broadcast Thursday night.

The dialogue was low-keyed. None of the other candidates was referred to by name and there were no hard-hitting political attacks.

The telecast marked the opening of a final series of Democratic broadcasts to be climaxed with a two-hour joint appearance on the eve of the election.

A Democratic National Committee said a late surge of campaign contributions enabled the party to expand its television activities beyond the original schedule.

Humphrey and Muskie talked at length of a need for trust and compassion in dealing with problems at home and overseas.

"I think people are looking to us to find ways and means of reasserting American's moral leadership," the vice president commented.

He also drew a parallel between what he said is a search for emancipation in other parts of the world and at home.

"Our needy here want to be emancipated from their poverty, their fear, their bitterness, their hopelessness, their despair," Humphrey said.

Deprived areas of America have been "the leftouts, the left-behinds," he said. "They won't take it anymore."

The candidates touched only lightly on the war issue. "People want it over," Humphrey said.

The Democratic candidates agreed that "just piling up arms, one side against the other, is no way to build security." "It builds insecurity," Muskie commented.

Humphrey said the next administration was going to have to be alert to our own security needs and yet we have to be willing to venture, to try to find ways and means of slowing down this arms race."

It's Halloween, And It's Beautiful

While President Johnson announced a bombing halt, and while the three presidential candidates were busy in the stretch run of their campaigns, the great pumpkin arrived.

Halloween, UMass style, last night, saw countless parties, several girls "trick of treating", and several men "trick of drinking." Linus was happy, snoopy was unavailable for comment, Lucy was dispondent (Linus was happy), AND Halloween happened, predictably, in this year of the unpredictable.

A CONTEST was held over the last two weeks for the best window painting on the Union's picture window. Most all paintings, done by dorms, sororities, fraternities, and RSO groups, featured Peanuts character. The winner of the contest has yet to be announced.

Jazz Group Plays For Grad Students, Faculty, Today

The Elysian Time Machine with guest guitarist Howard Conn will be the main performers for tonight's Fall Affair at Memorial Hall.

The Time Machine, which was formed in Berkeley, Cal., in 1966, will be playing between 8 p.m. and midnight in Memorial Hall auditorium. The group gave a well received program at the U-Mass Jazz workshop earlier this fall.

According to group leader Rainer Bertrams the Time Machine is basically a jazz group, but it has incorporated a wide variety of musical influences, ranging from classical to oriental to the latest rock into its "organic" style. Bertrams contends that the Time Machine can handle music appropriate both old and new dancing styles as well as concert music. Its program, he said, will depend upon the response of the audience.

While the Elysian Time Machine holds forth upstairs, local folk artists Karen Silverman and Bruce Crawford will be playing in the lounge.

The Fall Affair will be on from 7:30 p.m. until 12:30 a.m. A full bar will be available to persons over 21. The one dollar admission ticket will cover admission only. Admission is restricted to graduate students, members of the International Club, faculty and their guests.

Tickets will be available until 5 p.m. at the lobby of the Student Union and will be sold at the main door of Memorial Hall beginning at 7:30 p.m. Fall Affair is sponsored by the Graduate Student Senate and the International Club.

Tonight Rainer will play the piano and the vibraphone and special guest Howard Conn, formerly guitarist for organist Jimmy Smith, will play the guitar. Top New England college saxophonist Bruce Krasin and drummer Lenny Eszbicki will also be with the Time Machine.

BIGGEST AND BEST GRINDERS IN TOWN

Part III - MDC-AP Mock Debate

Candidates Discuss Racial Disorders, Law and Order, Pueblo

Q: How would you deal with racial disorders such as rioting and looting?

HUMPHREY

A: There are lessons we have learned. When a riot occurs, there must be rapid introduction of sufficient manpower into the area for quick and prompt action, including, if necessary, augmentation of the police force by adequate numbers of military-National Guard or regular Army. The emphasis must be on additional men rather than guns.

Use minimum force, but make arrests rapidly and in sufficient number to stem the tide of violence. In other words, arrests rather than shooting. If necessary, use tear gas or other non-lethal gas to contain violence.

There must be a central headquarters to provide authoritative sources of information for the people. Rumors are dangerous and must be corrected as soon as possible. People must be given accurate and truthful information. This requires the careful cooperation of radio, television and press.

It is absolutely essential that TV, in particular, and radio and press secondarily, accept their responsibility in these riot situations to report the facts but not to inflame the situation further. Accordingly, I have proposed the establishment of Councils of Civil Peace in our states and cities, to find new ways to prevent riots and similar violence, to air grievances peacefully, and to help alleviate conditions that contribute to rioting, and to coordinate all state and local law enforcement agencies and personnel when and if riots occur.

As President, I will direct that units of the National Gurd in each state be given additional training in riot control, teamwork and planning, and that small, highly-trained units be kept on continual alert, as long as necessary, for use by any community for short-term service. These units will be directly controlled by the individual state governments or, where appropriate, by the community itself. No community should suffer riots, violence or bloodshed because of lack of manpower or inadequately-trained law enforcement officers.

NIXON

A: Rioting in the first instance must be dealt with, as every commission that has studied it has indicated, by swift action at the beginning, and that is an early warning system in all the communities in the event that a riot begins, a massive display of adequate local forces, that means, of course, supplementing the local forces, on request, with the federal forces.

Second, with regard to the type of forces, a greatly increased educational program for those who deal with riots; handling a riot requires more than the usual police training because where, say, something like looting is involved, or something that is not a major crime endangering the life of somebody else, it may be more effective to deal with that in a less drastic way than you do when, say, something like arson is involved, and arson, of course, is premeditated murder, or, at least, potential murder.

So in the case of rioting, we are talking about, first, the use of adequate force, and using it very, very effectively at the beginning; second, a better training for the police forces who have to deal with riots, and that is why I would set up a national academy for the training of law enforcement officials, in which we would develop not only the best techniques, make them really experts to deal with organized crime and things like that, and the general crime that we are concerned about, but with this highly specialized field of riots. .

But, beyond that, we need a program that will go directly to the heart of the riot, in the sense of enlisting within the ghetto communities where riots occur, the responsible, law-abiding people to pull away from the potential riot leaders, the spear carriers.

WALLACE

"I think the police ought to be allowed to enforce the law. I think they have to be allowed to use whatever methods are necessary to prevent the breakdown of law and order. And then it if does break down, they ought to be allowed to use whatever measures are necessary to stop it.

"We've used every other method of trying to stop disorder. We passed every piece of legislation advocated by the militants and otherwise. It seems that every bill that is passed and every law that you've enacted, we then have additional disorders in the streets. I think we've tried every other method but that of letting the police enforce the law.

"I think my election as president is going to be a moral boost to the policemen and law enforcement officials. And it is going to put some backbone in the backs of mayors and governors.. and in the backs of members of Congress...because they really feel like we felt in our hearts about stopping all this nonsense, but they didn't think it was politically expedient.

"The police have been trained how to stop looting and rioting and arson. Just let them use the tactics that they've been taught to use in the past but are not allowed to use now because the politicians in charge of the police in many instances are afraid it's going to affect them politically."

Q: Since all three candidates have said they are for law and order, how would you describe your position and solutions as differing from those of your opponents?

HUMPHREY

A: Well, I do a little less sloganizing and do a little more specifying. I haven't seen any specifics from Mr. Wallace at all. We feel that we have really gone into this as a responsible person. Mr. Nixon has given four suggestions, four specifics. One of them is a federal academy, which we have; two is a cabinet committee, which we have; three is an office for coordinating crime information, which we have. The fourth is town meetings of people who are concerned about crime. Well, I want to say that I worry a little bit about that last one. That smacks a little bit of vigilantes. But I am sure he may not have meant that.

But let me put it this way: Four recommendations on a problem of this immensity do not show much of a program, particularly when three of them are already in force. If all we needed were those four recommendations, we should have had the problem whipped a long time ago.

There is firearms control, which Mr. Nixon has not commented on at all. I have said that there must be control over the interstate shipment of firearms, which the Congress has now agreed to. But I also feel that there ought to be licensing and registration of firearms, preferably by the states. But if the states do not do it, then the Congress should be asked to do it...

NIXON

A: Well, I won't discuss Mr. Wallace. He isn't going to be elected. But I will discuss Mr. Humphrey. My major difference with Mr. Humphrey is this, that he is a prisoner of the policies of the past, and he necessarily has to defend the attorney general's record, and, also in another very important area, the record of the decisions of our courts, some of which I have criticized, and in some of which I believe the minority was right rather than the majority.

I will bring a completely new team in, and absolutely vital to the success of any drive on crime is a new attorney general and a new Justice Department staff, from top to bottom, with a new attitude. . . .

WALLACE

"A year ago, when I was talking about law and order, these candidates were not talking about law and order. And a few years ago, when I was talking about civil disobedience was going to culminate in anarchy, Mr. Nixon and Mr. Humphrey were endorsing this movement, saying it was a great movement. Now, since it engulfed the whole country in a siege of anarchy they both saw 'law and order.'

"Of course, I knew they would start saying it when they sent their representatives around to listen to me speak and hear the reception from the crowds we've had all over the country.

"Now there's not a dime's worth of difference in what they say and what I'm saying about law and order. But this movement of ours brought it about, and I think they ought to have started saying it a long time ago."

Q. As President, what would you have done when North Korea seized the Pueblo. What would you do now to free the crewment.

HUMPHREY

Note: Time ran out in the interview with the vice president before this question could be presented. However, he commented on the problem in a speech May 18 in Washington. He said then:

"The best way to get it is to go into negotiations that relate for example to the Vietnamese war. This is tied in with it. It may very well be that the release of the ship and its crew will be part and parcel of the total negotiated settlement.

"We know the Pueblo crew is safe. We know this through diplomatic sources in North Korea. We have reason to believe North Korea is dismantling certain equipment and they haven't finished."

NIXON

"What should have been done to avoid seizure was the instant the ship was threatened, the U.S. should have made it very clear that we would not tolerate seizure. And we should have made it clear by moving air and sea power into the area to protect the ship. Or, if we could not protect it, we should have moved the ship out of the area.

"I think in this case the U.S. temporized with the problem, and by temporizing with it, these men are now incarcerated.

"what you can do now is completely limited. That is the sad part about it...You can't go in now and seize the ship as some people have suggested. If you seize the ship, you lose the men.

"What we have to do now is use what diplomatic stroke we have, and it is very small with North Korea, and of course we are talking with the Soviet Union about this, as I understand it. We are trying to get them to use their influence. We hope maybe that it will succeed.

WALLACE

"There is no need for me to say what I would have done, because I was not in possession of the intelligence that the State and Defense departments had about the Pueblo. I'm sorry the matter happened and I think we should never forget the Pueblo and we should continue our efforts to get the crew back safely.

"I can understand that with the delicate mission of this ship you couldn't have a flotilla around it, but I think that we ought to see that it doesn't happen again. Since we've gone this far and it's been so long, the only recourse at the moment is diplomacy.

"I don't have any specific ideas other than that I would ask the State Department with its trained diplomats and those in the career service to continue their efforts to get the crew back and we should never forget that, either."

Q. What would you consider the most important issue of the campaign.

HUMPHREY

A: Well, I have to put them together, I think it is the reduction of tensions abroad, and the reduction of tensions here at home. Or, to put it another way, to bring this war in Vietnam to an end, and to put a halt to the arms race-and here at home, to try to find ways and means of bringing into the mainstream of American life people who have been, for whatever reasons, somewhat excluded,..to try to minimize and do away with the racial tension and bitterness which is evident in some areas of our

Election Day Protests by Students

BY MARGARET SCHERF
Associated Press Writer

Militant war protesters and radical students are planning election day demonstrations in several American cities, but some of the leaders say they do not intent to disrupt voting.

The plans include:

- A strike Monday and Tuesday by high school and college students across the country "to protest university military and racist policies."

-A day-long demonstration of thousands of students on election day, ending with a protest gathering at the national headquarters of Richard M. Nixon is New York.

-A demonstration by draft resistors at Hubert H. Humphrey's lakeshore home in Waverly, Minn., to burn draft cards.

-An "antielection peoples' festival" at Chicago's Lincoln Park, the staging ground for the bitter battles between protesters and police at the Democratic National Convention.

-Similar demonstrations in such cities as Washington, Boston, Baltimore, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Seattle, Hartford, Conn., and in Colorado.

Key movers behind the plans are the radical Students for a Democratic Society, which led the protests that crippled the Columbia University campus last spring, and the National Mobilization Committee to End the War in Vietnam, which helped organize the August demonstrations in Chicago.

"We are not seeking any kind of disruption," said Rennis Davis, national coordinator of the mobilization committee. "We only want to demonstrate our repudiation of the alternatives in this election."

"We will encourage write-in voting and votes for any peace candidates," Davis says.

"A lot of people are reluctant to join us because they're afraid of having their heads bashed in," said a Chicago protester.

The SDS manifesto states: "It is not our purpose to stop people from voting, but to provide a real means of political expression."

But Michael Klonsky of New York, SDS national secretary, said: "It depends on the people. We are going to have Chicago-style street demonstrations-and that means power confrontations."

And Jerry Rubin, leader of the Youth International Party-the Yippies-said in Chicago recently that the demonstrations "will be so bad that the government will have to bring out the National Guard all over the country."

Guides to Aid Graduates Select Schools

Undergraduate students who are thinking about advanced study will find they are faced with a large choice of excellent graduate schools. In addition, they will find it difficult to select the correct program of study from the many available to them.

In order to bring a more orderly flow of information about graduate schools to students, the 1968-69 edition of PETERSON'S GUIDES TO GRADUATE STUDY, containing information on 13,000 graduate programs, is now available for use in the offices of Placement and Financial Aid Services, 234 Whitmore. In addition, individual copies of specific books have been mailed to chairmen of the particular departments covered by the Guides.

The Guides are arranged in ten volumes, covering graduate programs in the Arts and Sciences, Biological Sciences, Business, Education, Engineering, Communication, Library and Information Sciences, Nursing and Public Health, Physical Sciences, and Public Administration and International Affairs. Each volume is subdivided into particular areas of study. The programs of study listed include those leading to both master's and doctoral degrees.

The Guides seek to list every graduate program in the United State s in the more than fifty fields of study presented. The descriptions contained in the guides should tell the student most of what he wants to know about a school's program and faculty, its requirements and its costs. In addition, each of the ten volumes contains data on other reference sources, including the various official accrediting agencies and professional organizations.

Candidates Debate

national life. In other words, to unify our people as best we can. It is the biggest task that any man is ever going to have.

We are ready now in the world scene for a quantum jump and a qualitative jump in the arms race. If we cannot stop that, we are going to have billions of dollars of resources that are going to be dedicated to arms that I think won't give you any more security...

So the matter of world peace is paramount, and anything that relates to it.

The second one is how do you keep this country of ours operating, because there isn't going to be any peace in this world if this country falters and fails-all the things that we want here at home are going to be neglected-and many of them are going to be dissipated-if we fail in our economic life, if we have recession or depression, and if we fail in trying to bring our people together.

I worry, I really worry, least we set up patterns here of bitterness and rivalry and racial prejudice in America that could hold us back for a long time. We can't live like an armed camp, in a police state. We have got to find ways and means of reducing these tensions at home and reducing them abroad. I think that is the controlling issue of our time.

Election Day Taxi Service

The University of Massachusetts Inter-Fraternity Council will provide a nonpartisan taxi service to encourage Amherst residents to vote on Election Day, Tuesday, Nov. 5.

A fleet of cars with drivers will be available from 8a.m to 8p.m. on Tuesday so that Amherst voters can obtain a free, round-trip ride from their homes to the polls.

Reservations for this service can be made by calling the Arcon booth in the Student Union at 545-2707 on Monday, Nov. 4, between the hours of 1:30 and 3:30 p.m., or at any time on Tuesday, Election Day.

The cars will be manned by volunteers from the UMass fraternities.

Humphrey getting tough, Denounces Nixon

BY JOSEPH E. MOHBAT
Associated Press Writer

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) - Hubert H. Humphrey said Thursday that Richard M. Nixon "has taken the American people for granted."

The vice president called his Republican opponent "the man who specializes in the doctrine of unemployment." He charged that while Nixon has "refused to debate the issue of war and peace in Vietnam and Southeast Asia, he has not been above using the faces of our fighting men in his Madison Avenue commercials."

"The Democratic party and the people," Humphrey cried as he struggled for New Jersey's critical 17 electoral votes, "are going to have a great compact, a great alliance on Election Day with a victory that will rock this nation-a victory that will be a miracle."

Several thousand persons lined the streets of nearby Harrison as the Democratic presidential candidate took to an open car for a trip to a large electronics plant and a street-corner rally.

An estimated 3,000 workers filled the street outside the plant to hear Humphrey again denounce Nixon and his advisors "for seriously suggesting it would be good to have a little more unemployment."

"They think it would cool off the economy," he said. "I agree cutting away American jobs as Mr. Nixon proposes, will cool off the economy-and put it in the deep freeze of recession."

Humphrey once again roasted Nixon for refusing to debate the issues with him.

"The man who is unwilling to face his opponent in an election," he said, "is most likely incapable of facing our adversaries in international relations.

"Mr. Nixon is taking you for granted. He has refused to fill the empty chairs on every platform. For over two months I've been asking him to face up to the issues.

"I suggest to Mr. Nixon that the voters will refuse to let him now fill that empty chair that will be in the White House at high noon on Jan. 2."

The Heart Is A Lonely Hunter

BY SUSAN SCHMEHL
Fine Arts Staff

"The Heart is a Lonely Hunter", is a story of loneliness within a small rented box and its deaf-mute inhabitant, Mr. J. Singer. He leaves town and his job to be close to his mentally retarded and deaf-mute friend Spiro, committed to a state hospital. This "friend" however is actually no more than a greedy, food-grubbing child, only concerned with satisfying his immediate desires. A lollipop or a cookie is all of life to him.

Mr. J. Singer, a man unlike the others with only four senses, seems more sensitized and aware of what love and being wanted really is. The other characters are for the most part self-centered and unconcerned. In his search for love, he tries desperately to be loved and needed by others yet is only remembered.

Mr. Singer befriends a young high school girl caught in the midst of adolescent "growing pains" and family financial burdens. He helps an ex-Army shiftless drunk to temporarily find some purpose in life-a job. He even breaks the grounds of prejudice and unites the family of a Negro doctor who lived only helping his "own kind". Ironically, near the close of his life, the doctor finds his only real friend and confidant is a white man, Mr. Singer.

Despite his close relationships with all these people, he essentially remains alone, still MR. Singer. He could listen to these people but none of them even considered "listening" to the "dummy." Tragically, he confuses gratitude with love. When this is finally realized, his life is shattered. His life is perhaps represented by his one-man game of chess, never played with another always alone.

Alan Arkin played the deaf-mute Mr. Singer with credibility and pathos. All of his scenes with Spiro, his deaf-mute companion, were touching and amusing in a bittersweet sense, a laugh without sound.

Too Little... Too Late

It was a long time in coming--too long.

President Johnson's decision last night to stop the bombing of North Vietnam wa s months, if not years overdue. Perhaps if it had been done two, or three years ago some 20,000 young American boys might still be alive. Perhaps if the bombing had never been started four years ago we might have been able to remember Vietnam as just another crisis instead of as a war which has drained and divided the nation.

Will be bombing halt be enough to get the stalled Paris talks moving? The President was very careful not to use the word permanent when he discussed the cessation of bombing. Afterwards presidential advisors made it quite clear that the bombing will be resumed if "it is considered to be in the best interest of American servicemen in South Vietnam." Of course, all hope and pray that this will not be necessary.

However, while the talking enters a new stage in Paris, the fighting will continue in the South and the chances are that hundreds, if not thousands of young Americans will continue to die fighting a senseless war. President Johnson could have gone one step further last night to lessen that probability. He could have announced that as a gesture of good will, the United States was going to unilaterally withdraw from Vietnam 5,000 troops. This gesture would prove to the world that the United States sincerely has no plans to remain permanently in Vietnam and would put the pressure on the North to drastically reduce its side of the war.

We hope that the next major announcement President Johnson makes (to boost his ego) will be to bring the boys home.

Death Penalty

Why are criminals murdered? Aren't they human? Execution does not reach the source of crime. Anyone is a potential criminal and even a potential murderer. Criminals have experienced a severe emotional strain which they could not overcome, and so they have reacted negatively. Punishment is only another negative approach and can only increase crime. By rehabilitation many productive citizens would be brought into our society. Rehabilitation could help criminals overcome problems and find their place in our society. These people are crippled by their problems. How many hospitals murder their physically crippled patients or even patients with contagious lethal diseases? Why, then, is the criminal not allowed to live?

Another fault in society's logic is their idea that the murder of an individual by a society is more "morally correct" than the murder of an individual by an individual But when a society takes the life of a human being, every person in that society is individually responsible for that death. Each person quietly allows it giving his consent. This is worse than seeing a murder on a street and doing nothing. There the person would be directly endangering his own life and perhaps his family's. But now we aren't in danger and still we watch people being executed and do nothing.

There can be only one reason for this killing. It must be vengeance, for it cannot be called justice. Vengeance is never a substitute for justice, and taking a human life is always wrong. It's a sacrilege a man's life IS worth something. On this point you cannot be neutral: you either care, or you don't.

On November fifth the voters of Massachusetts will decide whether or not the death penalty will be abolished. Before you vote, think. Think how final death is. There is no room for human error. Ask yourself, "Where do I get the right to take another man's life? Think hard. Now vote.

DIANA LANDRY

The Non-Voter

The majority of the people who will not vote for either of the major candidates can perhaps afford the luxury of a four year lapse in social progress. They are not poor, black or starving. These "liberal" humanists are not concerned with humans, but with abstract ideals. Ideals are purposeless when they abandon reality.

No abstract ideal will kill the rats that attack little children in Harlem. No abstract ideal will ease the pain of a starving girl in Appalachia. No abstract ideal will give a black man the education or opportunities available to white "liberals."

In our academic environment, we are sheltered from the realities of urban and rural poverty. Equality is no longer a popular cause. So what if law and order replace justice. The real "forgotten American" has two color television sets.

So if you're poor, black or starving hold onto your stomachs and stay in your place for four more years, the white middle class non-voter cares about mankind.

"And Furthermore —- Say, Are You Sure You're Listening To Me?"

Inside Report:

The Return of Murray Chortiner

BY ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON--W o r k i n g quietly and competently backstage at Richard M. Nixon's campaign headquarters in New York in a figure from the darker regions of Nixon's past: Murray Chotiner, mastermind of the early Nixon campaigns and his first political mentor.

After some six years in political oblivion, Los Angeles lawyer Chotiner suddenly popped up Sept. 19 at a Nixon fund-raising dinner in Manhattan. Since then, Chotiner has written old friends in California appealing for contributions to the Nixon campaign.

His private role in the current Nixon campaign has been far more important than that. While the innovative but provocative Chotiner has not been permitted to tamper with high-level strategy in the 1968 campaign, he has for some weeks been playing a key role in the operation's nuts-and-bolts. The bright young men in the Nixon camp who had thought of Chotiner only as a mud-slinging ogre have been deeply impressed by his technical competence as political pro.

Chotiner was, in fact, Nixon's first political pro. Seeking public office for the first time in his Congressional race of 1946, the green, impoverished Nixon sought out Chotiner for help. Chotiner's help contributed greatly to Nixon's early Red baiting tactics.

Chotiner's influence with Nixon reached its peak in the 1952 campaign when he evolved the strategy used by Nixon in the "Checkers Speech." Gradually, however, Chotiner became more an embarrassment than a help to his protege because of indiscreet self-revelations of political tactics and, more important, unsavory legal clients.

After Chotiner was called before the Senate investigators in 1956 on conflict-of-interest charges that he had intervened with the Eisenhower administration in behalf of clients, he was dropped from that year's campaign by Nixon. Nor did Chotiner reappear in 1960, when he ran himself for Congress in the primary against a Republican incumbent (he lost badly).

The Chotiner-Nixon s p l i t seemed complete, but he was summoned to work on Nixon's campaign for Governor in 1962 (resulting later in court suits against Chotiner for doctoring campaign literature). Except for a 1966 plot to have him killed in a non-political controversy, Chotiner was invisible until his reappearance last month in New York.

Although Sen. Edmund Muskie is agitating to debate Gov. Spiro Agnew, he is considerably less anxious to mix it with lesser Republicans. In fact, he flatly refused to appear with Rep. Donald Rumsfeld of Illinois, a member of the Republican "truth squad," on Chicago Sun-Times columnist Irv Kupcinet's talk show in Chicago.

Rumsfeld had left the truth squad and rushed to Chicago for a taping of the "Kup Show" Oct. 3, only to be informed at the studio that Muskie refused to appear with a Republican Congressman seeking reelection (though Rumsfeld's suburban Chicago district is indomitably Republican). Rumsfeld bowed out, and the show was taped without him.

Curiously, Muskie earlier that day had consented to appear with a Republican Congressman seeking reelection--Rep. Clark M a c-Gregor, Midwest chairman of the Nixon campaign, and Muskie tangled furiously over Vice President Humphrey's Vietnam position, which may partially explain his unwillingness to lock horns with Rumsfeld.

Democratic partisans who have been licking their chops over the prospect of televised commercials showing Richard Nixon's disastrous "last" press conference of 1962 are going to be disappointed, it won't be shown.

A film of the six-year-old press conference was privately exhibited to top Humphrey strategists recently, and they agreed, sadly, that memory can play tricks. Having just lost the governorship of California and presumably ended his political career, Nixon looked distraught and at the point of collapse. But his manner and words were neither so intemperate nor so poorly chosen as Democratic leaders had remembered.

With Humphrey money for television commercials in such short supply, was the 1962 press conference really worth the subject of a commercial? Joe Napolitan, Democratic National Chairman Lawrence F. O'Brien's bright young aide in charge of media, recommended that it was not, and his advice was unanimously accepted.

Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas is about to sign a rich contract to write his memoirs, signaling his retirement from the bench. That means the next President may soon have four High Court vacancies to fill.

Special Report--Part 4

The Death Penalty A Scientific Analysis

By GEORGE KISER and STEVE ROBL

Analysis of murder victims in Oregon shows that a high percentage are close friends, close relatives, or lovers of the murderers. When the relationship between murderer and the slain is of such a close, intimate nature, it is difficult for rationality to prevail when adversity or a crisis in that relationship erupts. The alleged unfaithfulness of a wife, the supposed betrayal by a close friend -- these are situations likely to preclude rationality even by the most rational individual. These are times during which we tend to lash out viciously, and much more viciously than we would toward a stranger, precisely because the other person stands in such a close, intimate relationship to us.

A fairly significant number of murderers are under the influence of alcohol when they kill. Out of the 82 convicted murderers in the Oregon State Penitentiary, 10 killed strangers while under the influence of alcohol. A mind clouded by alcohol surely would be unlikely to be deterred by the prospect of the death penalty, even if the individual had an in-depth knowledge of the capital punishment code.

A substantial percentage of murders occur as a by-product of the commission of another crime. Of the 82 murderers in the Oregon State Penitentiary, 20 had killed under such circumstances. When one is committing a crime and is about to be detected, his single-minded goal is likely to be escape. Under exciting and emotional conditions such as these, consideration of the law is unlikely to occur even for those who know it well.

All of the above explanations of non-deterrence are coined in terms of one's lack of knowledge of the law and/or adverse mental conditions making objective consideration of the law highly unlikely. But what about the relatively small number of cases in which the would-be murderer does know the law and is not operating under a highly emotional or crisis-ridden situation? Evidence indicates that in most cases persons who plan carefully premeditated crimes plan at the same time to make detection impossible. To the extent that one believes he will never be caught the punishment will be irrelevant in altering his plans. Whether it be death or imprisonment, he believes he will not be forced to pay it, so it might as well be one as the other. He will not be deterred in any event. We are not deterred by punishment which we believe will never be administered.

But what would happen if the same individual believed a substantial chance of his detection existed? Would he then be likely to be deterred by the death penalty? The evidence is in the negative, because even if detected in the commission of a crime for which the death penalty could legally be administered, his chances of excaping the death penalty are perhaps 98 out of 100. It might very well be that the chances of his death are so small that he would simply play the odds. A good many people of at least average judgment frequently risk the bringing about of their own deaths. Donald MacNamara, Dean of the New York Institute of Criminology, expressed this well during his testimony before the New Jersey Commission Appointed to Study Capital Punishment:

"We have had several reports from the United States Public Health Service, Cancer Society and others, that smoking cigarettes might very possibly result in your dying of cancer. But it hasn't deterred even as rational gentlemen as you from continuing with this particular habit."

"Last weekend 500 persons or more who started out on Friday for a good time in the country were in the morgue on Monday. This will not deter millions of other rational motorists from going out on the Labor Day weekend or the Christmas weekend or any other weekend and contributing to the motor vehicle fatality statistics...You have the examples of even rational persons with calm chance to study the possibilities exposing themselves to this ultimate destruction."

In summary, the evidence is overwhelming that the death penalty does not deter murder more effectively than does imprisonment, for these reasons:

a. Few would-be murderers know the law well.

b. Even if the would-be murderer knew the law, he frequently lacks adequate mental capacity and stability for objective and rational consideration of the law.

c. The murderer frequently kills in an emotional, crisis-type situation which precludes rational consideration of the law even if he were familiar with it.

d. Even if he knows the law and murders under calm circumstances, the murderer is likely to count on escaping all punishment.

e. Even if the murderer knows the law, murders under calm circumstances, and believes he will be caught, the risk of his execution is so very small that any deterrent value of the death penalty law would likely be lost.

Therefore, scientific evidence almost consistently invalidates the basic assumption of death-penalty advocates. In short, the basic asset claimed for the death penalty is myth" rather than fact.

SDS in Boulder

Battle With The University

By CAROL BOZCMAN

BOULDER, Colo. (CPS) - Amid the reddish-gold falling leaves, Students for a Democratic Society foretold the fall of the university and the society sustaining it when they met in Boulder recently for one of their four annual National Council (NC) meetings.

As they have been doing across the country, the 450 SDS members did more than talk ideology and strategy. They acted and reacted to the University of Colorado in ways the school is likely to feel for a long time. A battle over press coverage of the SDS meetings may yet spawn a call by arch-conservative Regent Joseph Coors (of the Coors beer family) for the resignation of the University's president.

It was the New Left in microcosm. The confrontation portrayed SDS better than the two major resolutions approved during the three-day NC. There was SDS, there were the students, the Regents, the administration, the police and the press who somehow all got sucked into the controversy over whether tape recorders and cameras should be barred from SDS meetings. Although the university didn't come close to falling and no outside police were called in, there was a polarization of administration, students and virtually all the press against the Regents.

The controversy stemmed from the Regents' decision to allow SDS use of university facilites if their meetings were "public and open to the press." The vote on whether to allow on campus what one Regent termed " this anarchistic, nihilistic organization responsible for Columbia disruptions" was part of the "red" carpet treatment reserved for SDS throughout the country. Normally (for the Chambers of Commerce or the National Association of Bankers), lower - echelon administrators decided on use of university meeting rooms.

Another question arose on Friday, the first day of the NC - were cameras and tape recorders (barred from Regents' meetings) included in the vague university-SDS contract for open meetings?

As in Chicago, the coalitions were a bit strange. The press agreed with SDS that press relations were outside the appropriate concern of the university Regents. The administration originally sided with the SDS request that meetings be open only to the written press, not the disruptive lights of television cameras.

The antagonists were the Regents, two of whom let it be known they wanted electronic media admitted to the NC. A local radio station reported that Regent Coors said he would ask for the "immediate resignation" of University President Joseph Smiley if the intent of the call for open meeting was not enforced.

Smiley then reversed the earlier stand of his administration and decided to admit film and recorders.

SDS thought--and acted--otherwise.

A reporter from a Denver radio station, enraged by the decision of his colleagues who announced they would work out press relations with SDS rather than the university, armed himself with a tape recorder and entered the ballroom where SDS was meeting.

SDS members swarmed around the newsman, who couldn't get further than a foot inside the doorway. He nervously questioned them: "Are you a member of SDS?" "What do you think of their violent tactics?" "Why aren't you saying anything?" "Why do you keep nodding your head?" "What's so funny?"

Finally the persistent newsman did get a vocal response from SDS members. One of them opened up with a bar from "Silent Night" and 50 persons gathered around the tape recorder to render their version of the Christmas Carol. The biggest smiles were those of the campus police.

One more confrontation occurred early Saturday morning when a security area was roped off for the press. Another campus policeman allowed SDS members to enter the press area, and a brief scuffle between SDS and the press, flanked by police, ensued. The press was pushed out of the meeting room. There were no injuries, although an ice-cream cone was smashed against a television camera.

Shaken by the near-violence, the administration reversed itself again and decided to bar film and recorders "except by prior arrangement with SDS." It was the administration which convinced four of the six Regents to avoid unnecessary violence rather than attempt to oust the meeting with the help of police force.

SDS rejoiced that the university had "capitulated."

The issue of the press dramatized the character of SDS better than the drawn-out debates on resolutions. SDS showed itself capable of victory in a limited struggle where the action of the established power is blatantly arbitrary.

The confrontation tended to push strategic and ideological questions into the background, although SDS did ask itself about the press, labor, elections, high schools, GIs,

"Minor Party" Candidates Give Choice in Several States

BY WILLARD H. MOOLY
A.P. WRITER

WASHINGTON (AP) - Voters who don't like Humphrey, Nixon or Wallace will be able in some states to take their pick of presidential candidates running on platforms ranging from demands for peace now to fair treatment of visitors from outer space.

Twenty-five states will have presidential candidates on their ballots from at least one of the nine minor parties which have entered slates opposing the three major contenders.

Votes for these candidates will be tabulated in most of the states after ballots are counted for the three tickets that have qualified in all states - Hubert H. Humphrey and Edmund Muskie for the Democrats' Richard M. Nixon and Spiro T. Agnew for the Republicans and George C. Wallace and Curtis E. LeMay for the American Independents.

Here's a rundown on the minor parties and their standard bearers:

The Socialist Workers party, represented by Fred Halstead of New York for president and Paul Beutelle of Newark, N.J., for vice president, has the longest list of state entries among the minors - 19.

A part of the Trotzkyite movement that broke off from Moscow Communism in 1928, it is basically a peace-in-Vietnam effort this year, with Negro control of black communities as a second issue.

Halstead, 40, works for two prominent peace groups.

Boutelle, 36, is a Negro and was a follower of Malcom X, the slain Black Muslim leader.

Next in the number of entries comes the Socialist Labor party, which claims to represent the original Socialist movement in the nation. It is on the ballot in 13 states.

The candidates are Henning A. Blomen, 57, of Cambridge, Mass., a machine assembler, for president, and Geroge Sam Taylor, 53, of Philadelphia, an electronics technician, for vice president.

The Peace and Freedom party, another organization committed to withdrawal from Vietnam and local power in black communities, is on nine ballots, but its candidates vary from state to state.

Eldridge Cleaver, information minister for the California-based Black Panthers is the formally chosen presidential candidate but entertainer Dick Gregory is the candidate of record in three states -New Jersey, New York and Pennsylvania.

Cleaver is below the constitutional age minimum for president but the Constitution sets no age for candidates.

Gregory is in five state races altogether. The other two are Colorado and Virginia where he is the nominee of the New party.

That recently formed organization generally has adopted Vietnam, poverty and racial policies from the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, Sen Eugene J. McCarthy and Sen. George McGovern, all bidders for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Besides backing Gregory in two states, it is offering McCarthy in Arizona and Cleaver in Michigan.

The Prohibition party, a perennial bidder, is offering Earle Harold Munn Sr., Hillsdale, Mich., and Rolland E. Fisher, Topeka, Kan., in nine states.

Communist party candidates made the ballot in two states. The candidates are Charlene Mitchell, a Negro woman from Harlem, for president, and Michael Zagarell of New York, the party's 24-year-old national youth leader.

The Constitution party has put up Richards K. Trexell of Houston, Tex., and Merle Thayer, Davenport, Iowa, in North Dakota.

Kirby J. Hensley, a Modesto, Calif., minister, is bidding for the White House in Iowa under the banner of the Universal party.

Relivence of Student Opinion Highlights SWAP Conference

The role of the student voice in making University decisions will highlight the 1968 SWAP conference this weekend, in South Lee. The Conference, in which UMass students, faculty, and administrators discuss pre-selected topics deemed relevent to the university community, will also consider the relevence of the school's curriculum and the relationship between UMass and outside society.

The student voice issue, the overwhelming favorite topic of the delegates, will include what roles student groups play, whether the faculty and administration seriously consider student opinion, and whether that voice should be accepted.

Delegates, selected from all major campus clubs, publications, and governments will leave from the Student Union in chartered busses today, at 4.00.

The N.Y. teachers strike continues, as over a million students roam the streets of that city, with nothing to do. Mayor John V. Lindsay has said that the Teachers Union is unfair, the Teachers Union says that Lindsay is unfair. The debate goes on, and schools stay closed.

Aid to the Aged Program Pioneered By UMass Center

The University of Massachusetts Labor Relations and Research Center has begun a program to help retiring workers deal with health, financial, housing, leisure time and other problems, it was announced today by Dr. Leo F. Redfern, Dean of Administration.

Backed by $41,255 from the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare, the labor center will conduct a two-year pilot project in pre-retirement training for a group of trade union members and spouses in the Greater Springfield area.

"The target group will specifically include those persons between the ages of 62 and 64 who are members of local unions affiliated with the Pioneer Valley Labor Council of Springfield and the Central Labor Unions in Westfield, Holyoke and Northampton. They are all affiliated with the AFL-CIO and represent some 40,000 union members," said Prof. Harvey L. Friedman, principal investigator for the project.

Planned are three training programs running concurrently on different days of the month, two in Springfield and the third in another section of the area. Each program would involve eight once-a-month two-hour sessions for 30 union members and their spouses.

The program will include briefings on Medicare, Social Security, union retirement income, consumer problems and general finances; instruction on available community services; and information on housing, health care, nutrition and use of leisure time.

"In as much as programs of this type often prove to be a forerunner of others, aimed more generally at the aged, an intensive evaluation of the results of this project is planned," Friedman said. This phase of the project will be done by a staff headed by Dr. Everett S. Lee, head of the UMass department of sociology and anthropology.

The UMass project is the first multi-union approach to preretirement training. Previous programs of this type have either been by public organizations, large companies or single unions.

Said Friedman: "The aged need to know many things in many areas connected with retirement--they need to know more about what is available to them in the area of health, they need to know how to utilize their free time in fruitful ways and they need to be especially aware of the peculiar consumer problems with which they are concerned. Dealing with matters of this nature requires careful preparation and planning; whether retirement years are to be fruitful often depends on how plans are made and carried through."

Student Recital Series Continues with Bach

By ROBERT F. WILLIS
Fine Arts Staff

The student recital Wesnesday night, given in facilities of which a school this size should be ashamed, featured a display of woodwind and brasswind musicians.

Bach's "Sonata for Flute" was played by Louise Vetterling in her first campus performance. Although Miss Vetterling's tone was thin, her technique was equal to the requirements of the piece. Unfortunately, some of the flute passages were overbalanced by the accompanying piano part, played by Linda Gibbs.

Gerald Mirliani, playing "Sonata for Trumpet" by Kennan, had a clear, bright tone in this work which called for a large sound in almost all passages. The muted sections in the second movement, however, seemed bothersome for Mr. Mirliani. The contrapuntal third movement highlighted the ensemble of the performer and his piano accompanist, Patricia Blanton.

Gerald Chenoweth, a frequent performer in the series, displayed agility and control of the full range of the clarinet in his performance of Stravinsky's "Three Pieces for Clarinet Alone." The light, playful second movement was especially enjoyable.

"Sonatine" by Casterede was played by trumpeter Douglas Purcell. In this piece which displayed the high range of the trumpet, Mr. Purcell showed a command of all dynamics. He had a full, supported sound which was most appreciated in the muted second movement.

A woodwind trio, Judith Schneider, oboe; Gerald Chenoweth, clarinet; and Jeanne Lyman, bassoon played Ibert's "Cinq Pieces en Trio" as the evening's final number. The blend of the varied instrumental colors cast within solo-istic lines highlighted the performance by the group.

Julliard String Quartet Presents Concert Here

The internationally-acclaimed Juilliard String Quartet will again present a series of concerts this season at the University of Massachusetts, open to the public without charge and sponsored by the UMass music department.

The first will be Monday, Nov. 4, at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. The program: Haydn's Quartet in G Major, Opus 76, No. 1; Bartok's Third Quartet (1927); and Beethoven's Quartet in C Sharp Minor, Opus 131.

Internationally known for its musical perfection, the group has been quartet-in-residence of the Juilliard School of Music for 22 years. In 1962, it was appointed quartet-in-residence of the Library of Congress.

Concert tours have taken the Juilliard all over the world, and in 1961 it became the first American string quartet to visit the Soviet Union. Since then, it has taken several tours on both sides of the Iron Curtain, the Far East, and North and South America.

First violinist Robert Mann attended the Juilliard School where he studied violin and composition under Edouard Dethier. After his debut in 1941, he toured as soloist and first violinist with the Albuquerque Festival String Quartet.

Second violinist Earl Carlyss also attended the Juilliard School under a six-year scholarship. His professional debut was made with the Pasadena Symphony. He has toured Scandinavia twice and also appeared at the Casals Festival in Puerto Rico. He made his recital debut in New York in 1962.

Violist Raphael Hillyer studied at Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia and attended Dartmouth College where he majored in mathematics. After receiving his M.A. degree from Harvard, he played with the Boston and NBC Symphonies and toured with the Stradivarius and NBC String Quartets.

Cellist Claus Adam, born in Indonesia of Austrian parents, went to schools in Europe and then came to the U.S. where he studied under Emanuel Feuermann. He has served as cellist with the National Orchestral Association and the Minneapolis Symphony.

Horticultural Society Organizes Club

The University of Massachusetts Horticultural Society has organized for the 1968 - 1969 academic year. The club, which is a collegiate branch of the National Society of Horticultural Science, has in the past contributed to an increasing interest of the various phases of horticulture on the UMass campus. In years gone by the club was affiliated with the Annual Horticulture Show on campus, participated widely in the Agricultural Weekend festivities, and was host to an annual open house at the Durfee Conservatory on campus.

In these times, when a shrinking percentage of the population is producing an increasing percentage of the agricultural goods, it is often easy to overlook friends in agriculture. However, it is not hard to imagine how bad off the population as a whole would be without the people who have agricultural interests.

One of the major objectives of the University Horticultural Society is to promote cordial relations among students, educators and professional horticulturalists. Membership is open to all undergraduate and graduate students inrolled in the University. Presently the main interest in the club comes from students enrolled in the Department of Plant and Soil Sciences, but enrollment is by no means limited to students in this major.

MLK Sponcers Teach In Probe Aspects of Life

Friday night, November 15, Mhar Auditorium will be the scene of a teach-in sponsored by the Martin Luther King, Jr., Social Action Council. The program, entitled NIGHT OF INQUIRY----STUDENT POWER, is scheduled to run from 7:00 p.m. to 7:00 a.m., and will probe in depth all aspects of student life, government, and self-determination.

Gilbert Salk, Executive Secretary of the King Council, warns that speakers will not be able to ramble off on groundless tangents, as each speech will be followed by a question period in which any possible hollow argument may be exposed. In this way, it is hoped, those speakers standing on thin ice will be prevented from getting away with extravagant, unsubstantiated statements.

Representatives to the teach-in are being invited from faculty, administration, and the entire spectrum of campus power groups. Since plans were initiated in the middle of last week, the following have agreed to attend: Mark Noffsinger, Associate Dean of Students; Gerald Scanlon, R.S.O. Supervisor; Isidore Silver, Faculty Senate Ombudsman Committee Chairman; Jack Dean, Editor of the Collegian; Pul Silverman, President of the Student Senate; and Gil Salk of the King Council. A number of other organizations, such as SDS, Concern, CCENS, Class Officers, etc., are expected to take part in what should prove to be a stimulating evening.

As audience participation is absolutely essential to the success of the 12-hour program, entertainment will be provided to enliven interest and keep things moving. Plans, of course, are still in the formative stage, but already the Petroleum Jelly Jug Band has promised to perform and the many-handed Pete Ward agreed to demonstrate a non-political talent of his, folk-singing.

Any groups or individuals willing to donate their services may contact the King Council office in Hampshire House at 5-0648.

Program on Marijuana To Be Held This Month

An interdisciplinary program on the present state of knowledge concerning marijuana will be held in the auditorium of the Administration Building at Saint Joseph College on Saturday, November 16.

Among topics to be discussed are: "The Chemistry of Marijuana", "Psychological Aspects of the Use and Abuse of Marijuana", "Medical and Psychiatric Aspects of Marijuana", and "The Sociological Aspects of the use and abuse of Marijuana". Dr. William Mosher, Dr. Kenneth Kenniston, Dr. William Frosch, and Dr. Helen Nowlis will be panelists.

The program has been arranged by the Connecticut Valley Section of the American Chemical Society, Saint Joseph College and the Committee to Study Marijuana Laws of the State of Connecticut. Other co-sponsoring organizations and agencies include the Alcohol and Drug Dependence Division of the State Department of Mental Health.

Early McCarthy Backer

Lowenstein's Campaign Attracts College Students to N.Y.

BY TOM MILLER
College Press Service

(CPS)--The country's number one on-campus recruiter is the U.S. armed forces. A close second is Allard Lowenstein, a 39-year-old Long Island attorney doubling as the Democratic and Liberal parties' candidate for Congress from Nassau County.

Lowenstein's hundreds of campus speeches, in addition to his lecture positions at colleges in North Carolina, California, and New York, have made him a well-known figure at most campuses. He gained national prominence during the last year as the organizing force behind the Dump-Johnson and Back-McCarthy drives.

His past record gives him good credentials by any standards. He worked with the anti-Franco underground in Spain for years, brought the conditions of tribal life in Southwest Africa to international attention in 1959, and in the early sixties helped set up the political machinery for the Mississippi Freedom Democratic Party. He, more than any other individual, was responsible for drawing northern college students to the deep south for summer work with the Council of Federated Organizations in Alabama and Mississippi. He is one of the few whites on the Board of Directors of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC).

With an effective activist background, a seat in Congress would seem an unlikely spot for Lowenstein, but last spring a group called "Dissenting Democrats of Nassau County" nominated him to run for Congress. Beating the regular Democratic Party candidate in the June primary, he now faces a conservative Republican in the general election. But developing social and political movements is not the same as playing a straight electoral politics game, and Lowenstein appears to be somewhere between radical electoral politics and causes.

The two, of course, are not mutually exclusive, but a candidate confronted with getting elected in a Republican area has to give some and take little.

Lowenstein's campaign is going like many of his other enterprises. From the beginning students have been the mainstays of his staff at every level. This last weekend 300 came from as far west as Indiana to help canvass, collate and drum up support, bringing the total so far to just under 1000. The biggest weekend is coming up. He is running what is known by now as a standard McCarthy campaign.

Many local regular Democrats are suspect of him because of the semantical game Lowenstein plays with Humphrey. He says he will vote for Humphrey but will not actively support him until certain conditions are met. This loss of Democratic support may be offset by backing from Republicans who can't stomach his opponent's rightist stand on issues. Lowenstein does have newspaper support, though, Both Long Island dailies and the TIMES and the POST in New York have endorsed him

A long list of show business and political personalities have also helped --financially and through endorsements. But over seventy percent of all the funds used so far have come from outside the candidate's district, mainly from New York City and the west coast. The state party had not helped at all.

His chances in a moderate Republican area are only fair. However, with a characteristic flourishing closing weekend, he could squeak out a victory.

Trying to obtain public apessity adopted more moderate rhetoric in place of his usual impulsive style. With an arch-conservative opponent, Mason Hampton, he seems to be doing a half-Lyndon in trying to take the middle-of-the-road vote. He says as much in speading to voters.

After berating Hampton, he says, "You will find that I represent the mainstream of both Democratic and Republican thinking in the district and in the country."

He knows quite well that he does not represent any such mainstream, but is considerably ahead of the voters, as he has shown on numerous occasions. The question raised by some is how far and how much he will continue to claim middle-of-the-road ideas to maintain a position in electoral politics.

His following is large throughout the country. He forms coalitions for a variety of causes at the drop of a press conference.

His loyalty to the Democratic party at its lowest ebb in late August has brought reactions from all sides. Marcus Raskin and his New Party are setting up a political structure much more attuned to what Lowenstein stands for than the Democratic Party. NEWSDAY on Long Island, on the other hand, said in its endorsement: "Despite Lowenstein's ties to the so-called 'New Politics', he believes in working within the framework of the Democratic party and the two-party system." Because of his leftish stand on issues and his ability to mobilize people to work on a project, he represents one of the best or last hopes of the Democratic party, depending on one's point of view.

One of the few printed attacks on Lowenstein came from the left when RAMPARTS cut him down for being too compromising of his beliefs in "What Makes Al Lowenstein Run?" (September 7, 1968.) A long-time aide from North Carolina admitted that Lowenstein is giving in a little, "but he's selling out less than I've ever seen anyone sell-out in any Congressional race."

In the candidate's own words in an interview earlier this fall with new york magazine: "You get into a race and you become enslaved in the whole process of trying to get publicity, trying to get power, justifying everything by the next step. It begins to eat away at what you believe in."

What he believes in is quite clear. How much of that he's willing to sacrifice will have a divergent effect on his student and voter support.

Wallace Calls Humphrey "Out of The Race"

NORFOLK, Va. AP - Third party candidate George C. Wallace said Thursday night, "I hope and pray" that President Johnson's announcement of a bombing halt in North Vietnam will bring an early and "honorable" peace in Southeast Asia.

Wallace said he was notified of the decision in a telephone call from the White House shortly after arriving in Norfolk for a presidential campaign speech.

He said President Johnson talked to him and the other two candidates, Democrat Hubert H. Humphrey and Republican Richard M. Nixon, at the same time in what Wallace called a "conference call."

The former Alabama governor declined to say what effect the bombing halt might have on the presidential election or his chances.

Wallace said he "couldn't care less"; that his only concern was for an early and honorable settlement of the war so "we can bring the American servicemen home."

In his Norfolk speech, Wallace told a crowd of about 13,000 Humphrey is "out of the race" for the presidency.

Wallace swung back into the South after a hectic appearance at Hagerstown, Md., which almost wound up in violence.

At Norfolk, where he appeared before a chilled crowd in a college football stadium-Foreman Field-Wallace encountered more hecklers, who interrupted him from time to time.

He told them, after one outburst, "We're going to put most of you to work" after next Tuesday's election-"You live off of what everybody else produces, but you'd better get you a job."

He was greeted at a suburban shopping center in Hagerstown by a shouting, enthusiastic crowd of some 4,000 to 5,000, but had trouble delivering his speech because of the continuous boos and chants from a small crowd of college-age hecklers.

Undefeated Little Redmen Set To Ambush B.C. Eaglets

BY STEVE SHAMBAN
Sports Day Editor

The UMass frosh football team will be out to extend its winning streak to four games as it takes on powerful Boston College today at the Heights. The game will be played in BC's Alumni Stadium.

The Eaglets, who sport a 1-1 record, have beaten Harvard 21-7 and lost to Holy Cross, last Sunday 28-21. They are an explosive team which can put points on the board quickly.

BC has the best personnel of any team we'll face this year," said coach Dave Kelley who expects a close, high scoring game. "They are the first team this year to match us personnel wise and they may even have an edge."

Kelley expects to put some of his quicker linebackers at defensive end to contain the Tarkenton like scrambles of BC star Ed Rideout who runs and throws extremely well. Rideout, an all American at Medford High School last year, will likely see action at tailback to make room for Ray Rippman at quarterback. Rippman, in the classic mold of the pro quarterback, is a drop back passer who throws well. Last week, he threw two touchdown passes and accumulated the bulk of BC's 212 yards through the air. One of these passes was a 13 yard strike to the versatile Rideout who got in the act by throwing for one himself.

These are not the only players on the squad as the Eaglets boast several other good prospects. Bill Thomas, 6'3, 205 pounds, is a fine runner as is fullback Joe Hamilton. Paul Travers is a mountain of strength at center while middle guard John O'Hagan is rated the man to stop on defense.

BC uses the same basic type of offense as UMass but can be expected to throw the ball 25 to 30 times. On defense, they'll use either a 52 monster or a 62 deployment. They will blitz often, and off past experience, will blitz well. They have an adequate pass defense, which will be difficult to throw deep against and a good defensive line which has been their strength so far this year.

For the Little Redmen, the injury list is smaller this week. Dick Cummings' bad ankles should limit him to spot duty but wingback Art Harris and fullback Bob Sawyer should be able to contribute more than they did last week at URI. Guards Richard Etna and Gene Smith are both back at full force. The defense is healthy.

"We'll need five touchdowns to win," said Kelley, "and a strong effort from our defense to contain that explosive offense of theirs." He believes the keys to a win will rest with center Ron Marino and his four guards who will shuttle in and out of the game in an effort to halt the Boston College defensive line.

Booters Face UVM

By WALT STACHURA
Senior Reporter

Hoping to hit the .500 mark, the UMass soccer team travels to Burlington, Vt. tomorrow to take on the University of Vermont in an important Yankee Conference clash.

The Redmen face this game with an increase in morale after their 1-0 win over WPI Tuesday which stopped their four game losing streak.

Vermont will not be an easy touch for UMass. The Catamounts are defending Yankee Conference champions and need this win to have a chance to tie for the top with Rhode Island. Vermont has a 3-1 mark with UMass their fir opponent and need a victory for a chance at tying the Rams.

The Catamounts were hard hit by graduation and had only eight lettermen return from last year's squad. Their big losses were three-time All Yankee Conference star Jeff Taft, All Yankee Conference forward and Vermont's leading all time scorer Pete Baldwin, and goalie John Hilton, who registered eight shutouts in two seasons.

The Catamounts starting lineup features seven juniors, three seniors and one sophomore. One player that the UMass defense will have to key on is high scoring wing Bobby Greene.

Other players that have been outstanding for Vermont this season are fullback Lester Velez, a Norwalk, Conn. native and goalie Ed Hubbert.

UMass has a little extra incentive going into the game besides dumping Vermont out of the Yankee Conference race. Last year, the Catamounts handed the Redmen their lone conference loss, 3-0.

Strangely, the Redmen's three victories have all come on Steve Kramer shutouts. However, it is unlikely that the UMass defense will be able to blank the powerful Catamounts.

The next game for the Redmen will be against New England powerhouse Springfield.

Injured Redmen Set For Crucial Catamount Tilt

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Sports
FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 1, 1968

The heavily bandaged Redmen, who hope to keep their slim title chances alive, will take on the Catamounts of Vermont tomorrow at Burlington.

UMass still could grab a share of the Beanpot but has to hope for a UNH victory over Rhode Island tomorrow and a later Rhode Island win over UConn. They have to beat Vermont and UNH themselves to pave the way for a four way tie between the Redmen, UConn, URI and UNH.

Vermont at 2-4, has its own title hopes and will be fighting to keep alive its mini-winning streak of two games.

Two key injuries have hampered the already thin Catamounts. Bill Lawrence, who caught five passes in the opener, is not anywhere near top form and this has hurt their attack. Linebacker John Wojciechowski, UVM's top defender was injured last week and definitely will not play. Who will start in his place is a good question.

Denny Robinson and Dick McDonough with 420 yards between them are the leading running threats. Quarterback Fran Peterson has passed for only 211 yards this year but is, nevertheless, to be feared on the option and should not be overlooked.

To put it simply, the Redmen are hurting. Jerry Grasso, Ed Sarno, Tim Driscoll, Craig Lovell, Mike Marchev, Randy Robinson and Jim Nangle are out. So, the backfield has been decimated and one of the best linebackers is out as is a top tackle.

Bruce Cochrane will go at fullback while John Decembrele and Pat Flaherty will take over at tailback for Lovell. Steve Parnell will probably see extensive duty at wingback as Pat Scavone, who started there last week, will be limited due to leg cramps.

John Farrelly and Larry Fortunoff will split as linebacker. Except for this switch, the defense will remain the same.

To win, UMass will have to improve its kickoff coverage as Vermont features two of the best kickoff returnees in the conference in Mike Boraski and Gene Monahan.

This could be the game in which the unity and cohesiveness, so far lacking, may come to the fore. Vermont has little depth to supplement its frontliners, so the Redmen have a good chance to set things straight at their positions.

The road to the Yankee Conference title is now a long one but with some hard work on the part of the Redmen and a little luck they could salvage a piece of it. In view of Vic Fusia's admirable record at UMass over the last eight years, who is to say that it can't be done?

Harriers Vie For Conference Crown

On Saturday, the UMass cross-country team will compete in the annual Yankee Conference cross-country championship at Burlington, Vermont. The squad will be out to regain the crown won by UConn last year. This year's race will be 4.5 miles long, held on a golf course.

This year the battle for the number one honors will be between UMass and UConn. UConn has been given the favorite role because of their 20-35 win over the Redmen earlier this year.

Cross-country coach Ken O'Brien sees the meet as "Three-two way battles ... Vermont and Maine for 5th and 6th, New Hampshire and Rhode Island for 3rd and 4th, and UMass and UConn for first and second." Coach

LEO DUART

O'Brien continued, "There is no common comparison that can be made between UConn and UMass. We have run against the same schools with about the same results. Also, we have not run on the same courses."

The coach pointed out the closeness of scores that undefeated UConn (8-0) and UMass (6-2) ran up against the same opponents. UConn took Holy Cross in the season opener 19-46 while UMass won their last meet against the Cross, 23-32. The Huskies downed URI 15-40, UMass beat the Rams 16-39.

The coach added, "The only comparison between the two teams is the duel meet they won 20-35 but I don't consider that a true comparison. Since then we have made a steady climb beating URI, BC, Springfield, and Holy Cross. When we ran against UConn we were at our low point but we are at our peak now. Still, because of their win over us UConn has to be rated favorites.' The UConn team which won the title last year is in tact and has an added plus in transfer student, Gene Spurling.

The Redmen will be without the services of defending Yan-Con champion, Paul Hoss. Hoss, who was injured earlier in the season is definitely out for the rest of the cross-country season. Two seniors will be running their last x-country conference title meet, Saturday. Charlie Lang, who placed third in the title race last year, has improved 52 seconds on his home course time since the home opener and is running in top form like last year. Marc Gelinas, the other senior who was 3rd in the conference as a sophomore has also taken 52 seconds off his best time on the course this year.

Sophomores Ron Wayne and Leo Duart, who have been UMass one and two men since Hoss' injury, are being counted on heavily to help defeat UConn. Wayne owns the best time ever recorded on the UMass course by a Redman runner.

Sophomore Tom Derderian, junior Dave Evans, and sophomore Larry Paulson are the remaining three Redmen in the race. The three runners have battled for the 5-7 spots on the team all year. UMass' strong depth would make the difference in the meet. The UConn runners have five good men but no depth and if any of their top men has a bad day they are in trouble.

Coach O'Brien said that his team has decreased the split of its top five runners to 60-70 seconds. He attributes this unity to the fact of the added pressure on the runners because of Paul Hoss' injury. The coach concluded by saying that possible men who can make the top ten besides the UMass and UConn squads are Turner of Maine, last year's second man, Dunklee and Varnier of NH, Pampel URI, and Cook of the home team, Vermont.

The Redmen harriers have been aiming for the conference crown since it eluded them last year. To take the title the harriers will have to beat UConn. The simple solution to become champion is summed up by Leo Duart when he said, "We are just going to whip Connecticut." J.D.F. D. E.

Swap Discusses Value Of Required Courses And Educational Development

BY MARK SILVERMAN
Friday Issue Editor

SOUTH LEE - The educational development of the University provided the central theme for the Student Workshop on Activities Problems (SWAP) Conference, at the Oak and Spruce Lodge in South Lee, this weekend.

Students, representing RSO groups, campus governments, fraternities, sororities, and dormitories, members of the faculty, and administration discussed topics ranging from the relevance of the University curriculum to an understanding of the student voice. Recommendations were made by discussion groups for each topic, and will be acted upon in the future.

The most widely discussed of the topics was the revelances of curriculum, and in particular, the possibility of eliminating required courses. This committee, divided into four parts because of the large number of interested delegates, issued the following recommendations, which will be given to the Student Senate Academic Affairs Committee.

The first of these is that requirements be replaced by issue orientated courses, such as a course in Black History. Second, that students be given the option to take interdisciplinary courses in order to fulfill requirements. Third, that it be made possible to graduate without a specific accademic major. Fourth, that reduction in the number of required or recommended courses within and without major fields be enacted, and fifth, that a test group of students be admitted to the University, have none of the traditional accademic restrictions, and base their courses on only their own interests, as discussed with their advisors.

The second of the major discussion groups dealt with the advantages of a 12 point grading system, as opposed to this school's present 4 point system. This committee first explored the purpose of grades in the educational process. It was determined that a cume is necessary, and that a finer grading distinction is preferable to the present system.

In a delegate poll conducted by the committee, a 12 point system was a 2-1 favorite over the present system, and there was the general feeling that more emphasis would be put on getting good grades with such a system.

Pass-Fail course discussion was considered by the third discussion group, and a basic dissatisfaction with the present plan was found. A poll taken of conference members showed that most felt a higher number of pass-fail courses should be allowed students in all courses. Required courses

Nixon, Humphrey And Wallace Campaign On Television

From Associated Press - Richard M. Nixon offered yesterday to travel to Saigon or Paris before inauguration day to move the Vietnam peace talks off dead center if he is elected president tomorrow and if President Johnson asks him to make the trip.

"I stand with the President in his efforts to get the Paris talks off dead center," the Republican presidential candidate said on NBC's "Meet the Press."

"I want to make it very clear that if I am elected President, I will be willing to cooperate with the President in any way that he and the secretary of the state would deem helpful," Nixon said.

"If he would, for example, consider it helpful for me to go to Paris or go to Saigon in order to get negotiations off dead center I would be glad to go." He said he didn't suggest the trip "as a grandstand stunt," and added "I don't know that it would be helpful."

But he suggested that "President Johnson and president-elect Nixon could knock out the idea that Hanoi is going to gain from the negotiating table what they cannot gain from the battlefield."

Nixon said, "I think we ought to go ahead with the Paris talks," now hit by the Saigon government's reluctance to send a delegation to the bargaining table.

Johnson, he said, would not have ordered a bombardment halt of North Vietnam "if he expected the backlash from Saigon."

He said "the impression I had" from telephone conversation with the President was that South Vietnam "was willing to sit at the conference table. I think President Johnson thoroughly expected the Saigon government would attend."

Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey said yesterday the South Vietnamese government may have "some problems with its constituency" over the bombing halt in the North. But he added he thinks Saigon ultimately will participate in the Paris peace talks. He and his running mate Senator Edmund Muskie appeared on ABC's "Issue and Answers".

"I think we must depend on the good sense of the government of South Vietnam to attend and participate," the Democratic presidential candidate said.

"After all, the American people have paid a very heavy price in men and material and many other ways for the defense of South Vietnam, and I think it's fair to expect that government will respond to the sacrifices that we've made, and will respond to what is an honorable effort to bring about a cessation of hostilities," he said.

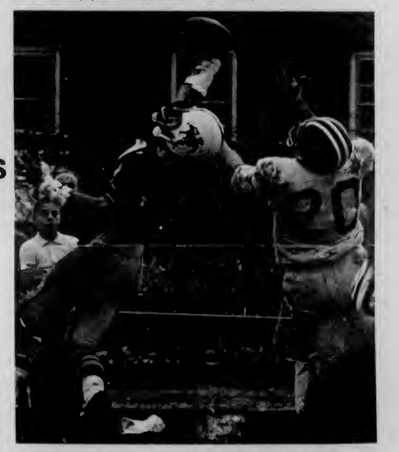
Nixon has challenged Humphrey to join with him in a declaration that the candidate with the largest popular vote should become president if no one wins the required 270 electoral votes.

He has not spelled out the mechanics for doing this but presumably it would be by persuading the members of the electoral college to accept this idea.

Third party candidate George C. Wallace clung steadfastly yesterday to his prediction of victory in the presidential election and said "it will take a miracle" for Vice President Hubert Humphrey to win.

Wallace's running mate, retired Air Force Gen. Curtis E. LeMay, said meanwhile he is pessimistic about the prospects of a negotiated settlement in Vietnam resulting from the bombing halt and that "it looks like another stalling" by the North Vietnamese "to allow them to recover from their losses in the south."

English Department To Hold Elections For Undergraduate Advisory Council



BY RICHARD W. STORY
Education Editor

English majors will begin this evening to meet and elect representatives to a departmental Undergraduate Council now being formed. Meetings will be by residence areas - the campus has been broken into eight constituencies, and within each of these areas, all English majors are invited to an initial assembly of the constituency to discuss the plan of the Council's organization, and to elect representatives to the Council. The eight areas to elect members, and the times and places for their meetings, are as follows:

1. Northeast ("Quad") Area: meet in North Commons, line #1 room, Monday, 4 Nov., 7:30 p.m.
2. Orchard Area: meet in Eugene Field lounge, Monday, 4 Nov., 7:30 p.m.
3. Central Area: meet in South Commons, upstairs in SE corner, Tuesday, 5 Nov., 7:30 p.m.
4. Resident Greeks and commuter students: meeting in Bartlett Auditorium, Monday, 4 Nov., 4:40 p.m.
5. Southwest A: Kennedy, James, Melville, Emerson, Thoreau: meet in Berkshire Clubroom, Monday, 4 Nov., 7:30 p.m.
6. Southwest B: Coolidge, Crampton, MacKimmie: meet in Berkshire Clubroom, Wednesday, 6 Nov., 7:30 p.m.
7. Southwest C: John Adams, John Quincy Adams: meet in Berkshire Clubroom, Thursday, 7 Nov., 7:30 p.m.
8. Southwest D; Washington, Patterson, Moore, Pierpont, Cance: meet in Snack Bar Annex, Tuesday, 5 Nov., 7:30 p.m.

The English Department Undergraduate Council arises from a proposal presented by the Undergraduate Studies Committee, and adopted at a departmental faculty meeting late in October. It is based upon the premise that participation in the work of the Department is to be open to all English majors. In view of the large numbers involved, however - better than 1200 - some principle

Lack Of Attendance Marks Mahar Rally

By DONNA WADSWORTH
Staff Reporter

Former Student Senate president Jim Collins, and John Medieros of UMass CONCERN spoke last night at a presidential debate presented by the brothers of Sigma Alpha Mu.

The program, entitled 1968: IS THERE A CHOICE? was to have been a contest among four speakers, each representing a major political candidate, but the representatives for George Wallace and Richard Nixon were not present.

Collins, who spoke on behalf of Hubert Humphrey, began his address, "I'm not going to tell you to vote for Humphrey. I am merely going to explain the changes in my own thinking since the beginning of the '68 presidential campaigns."

"Internationally, Mr. Nixon is very dangerous," he continued. "He is opposed to social justice here and throughout the world."

"Hubert Humphrey has a practical, realistic approach to foreign policy." He is "very sincere and critical of Johnson's Vietnam policy, and appears now fully committed to stop the war".

Collins reminded the audience of Humphrey's policy of social justice, his programs for welfare and education, and his interest in world peace, citing the candidate's role in test ban treaties between Russia and the United States.

The first speaker concluded by referring to third party candidate Wallace as "trying to get elected by the fear and prejudice in our country. Humphrey recognizes the racial problem - - a white problem, not a black one - - and he will seek justice here, too."

Speaking for write-in candidate Dick Gregory, John Medeiros began by describing his intentions as to compare the good and bad aspects of the four candidates in question.

His opening remarks were "Ho-Ho-Ho' has shown himself to be a servant of Lyndon Baines Johnson, accomplishing nothing."

Medeiros attacked the present administration, saying "They have neglected our cities and education.. For the first time in history they have refused to recognize civil authority over military authority."

Medeiros presented his own candidate as the "only one with the two requisite virtues of courage and understanding, or, rather, love and intelligence." He said Gregory's concerns were "moral pollution", "tax injustices", and "inequalities, in general". He called American politics " a machine that doesn't work".

"Gregory has ideas and a sensitivity to human beings. When you go to the polls, write in Dick Gregory."

The sponsors were disappointed in the poor turn-out at the debate. Only two members of the audience were not SAM brothers, their guests, or DAILY COLLEGIAN staff.

One brother remarked, "I've never seen such apathy. We advertised in the COLLEGIAN for two days, and we went to the history and government departments and asked them to announce this to their classes."

SWAP Discusses Curriculum

in and outside of majors, according to students, faculty, and administrators, should be pass-fail options.

On the basis of this poll, a recommendation was sent to the Senate requesting that the 12 point grading system be combined with the pass-fail options, and put into effect.

The last committee discussion centered on the problem of the student voice, that is, what is the voice of the students, how is it constituted, and how can communications be aided.

It was determined that the Student Senate is the representative 'voice" of the student body, that faculty involvement is needed in all student matters, and that general apathetic attitude is taken by most students for all that is not a required part of university existance.

The group formed three committees to combat campus apathy. One will be concerned with faculty involvement in student activities, one with the campus communications media, and the third with inter-group and inter-activity cooperation.

The discussions of all the committees focused on the problem of advancing the educational character of the University, maintaining a humanistic attitude toward education, and recognizing the role of "student power" in higher education. Attempting to define these points were after-dinner speakers from the faculty and aministration.

In SWAP's key note address, UMass Business Law Professor Isidore Silver spoke of the growing role of student power movements today. Comparing this movement with the labor movements of the early part of this century, he showed that students today have a justified feeling of alienation to the super-structure he called the "corperversity."

Administrators, he explained, appear as "fat cats" to many students, removed from the reality of idealistic educational goals, and giving no "rights to question the terms of their employment."

Silver, however, expressed his view that the SDS "rhetoric of revolution is reminiscent of PTA's passing resolutions against Hitler."

He said labor's ultimate gains on management should be the goal of student power; that is, students should seek a "veto power, but not an elementary decision making power."

Student power, the Professor urged, however, should not be made the major point of the convention. Rather, Silver argued, " student working conditions" should be discussed. Change must be reached through a "middle ground" he stated, "and the working conditions of students, that is academics, should be the issue."

This concept of the need for a basic change in academics itself was restated by the Dean of the School of Education, Dwight Allen.

Allen complained, "We all know too much about education. We all feel uncomfortable about basic (radical) changes. "He went on to explain that American education encourages the student "to lie, to try to get a way with as much as possible," and told of the need "to prohibit general education courses in all departments, and substitute interdisciplinary courses in communication, human relations, aesthetics, and technology.

Allen said that the demands of student power groups are superficial and avoid the basic issues which make education today artificial. Student activists, Allen concluded, should instead question the knowledge transmitted to them from those assuming the title of the educated; it is in this area that the true revelance of education can be realized.

English Dept. Elections

of elected representation is a necessity. Representation will be accomplished in two stages: from the body of English majors a maximum of 40 students - up to 5 from each of the 8 areas - will be elected to the Undergraduate Council; and from this Council members will be elected to particular Departmental committees and activities. The representatives elected will be responsible directly to their electing bodies: committee representatives will be responsible back to the Council, and the whole Council will be responsible back to the electing constituencies.

Students elected will exercise their own discipline, with the Director of Undergraduate Studies standing by to observe, advise and adjudicate. The Council will be unfunded, and very simply organized. Its sponsors see its initial functions centering around discussion and recommendations concerning curriculum, requirements, grading, teaching effectiveness, advising, plagiarism and honors.

The English Department's plan for the Undergraduate Council identifies several particular committees on which it sees student membership, or at which explicit provision is being made for the presentation of the student position. The general Department meeting may have as many as 5 Council representatives speaking but not voting. The Undergraduate Studies Committee will have 2 voting student members. The Personnel Committee will have a team of 5 students advisory to it, furnishing student opinion concerning the teaching effectiveness of individual faculty. The Recruiting Committee will also have an advisory team of 5 attached to it, meeting such prospective candidates as seems useful. In addition, there are further provisions for the Council to deal with the areas of freshman English, sophomore literature , English 201, teaching, journalistic studies and technical writing, and honors.

The procedure of organizing such a Council as the English Department has here envisioned would not have to apply to all departments. English has some problems unique to it because of the number of majors involved.

SDS To Rally On Amherst Common

Dan Shays Assembly of SDS has called for action around the elections exposing them as a hoax. In the four college area, strikes have been called at UMass and Amherst College for election day tomorrow. On that day, marches originating at each school will converge on the Amherst Common for a rally. Pople will vote with their feet.

The march from UMass will form outside of the Student Union Building from 12:30 on. In addition, Teach-In's on the elections are being held tonight at UMass, Amherst College, and Mount Holyoke College. The Teach In at UMass will be held in the Ballroom of the Union beginning at 9 p.m.

The featured speaker will be Vernon Grizzard, who has recently returned from Hanoi with three U. S. pilots who were released by the North Vietnamese and who attended the international student conference this August in Czechoslovakia. Grizzard is an organizer with Students for a Democratic Society in New England.

Wallace Forming Strong Third Party

NEW YORK (AP) - Third parties in American politics have been like homely girls at a high school dance: they mostly fare badly but show up again and again and again.

But George C. Wallace's run for the White House on the American Independent party ticket may write a new and historical chapter in political handbooks.

It may turn out to be the most successful third party effort ever.

Only four times since Abraham Lincoln was sworn as president in 1860 have the third party candidates managed to carry any of the states in the electoral college or win as much as 10 per cent of the popular vote.

Only once since the Civil War and then under the unusual conditions of a Republican split in 1912-has the third party candidate placed second.

That election saw two Republican presidents, incumbent William H. Taft and his predecessor, Theodore Roosevelt, battling each other, Taft on the Republican ticket and Roosevelt as a Progressive-or Bull Moose. The split in the GOP easily gave the election to Democrat Woodrow Wilson and the party's failure to heal the wound by 1916 may have contributed to Wilson's re-election.

Taft finished third in 1912 with only eight electoral votes, while the man who captured the imagination of the nation as the leader of the Rough Riders won 88 electoral votes, the most a third party candidate has ever received.

Together, Roosevelt and Taft captured more than 50 per cent of the popular vote, 7 million compared with Wilson's 6 million.

The second best performance turned in by a third-party candidate since the Civil War was in 1948, a year that saw the birth of two new political parties: the Dixiecrats or State's Rights party and Henry Wallace's Progressive Party.

Henry Wallace's party soon had the left wing label around its neck and polled only about 2 per cent of the votes cast.

In 1924, Wisconsin's crusading Robert M. LaFollette captured 13 electoral votes as a Progressive and in 1892 James B. Eaver, running on the populist ticket, took 22 electoral votes.

Other than those four instances, third parties have not captures an electoral vote for over a century, despite repeated efforts of candidates such as Socialist Norman Thomas, who ran six times, and Socialist Eugene Debs, who was on the ballot five times.

Often the combined vote of all minor parties has fallen beneath 5 per cent. In 1936, for example, candidates from five minor parties-the Union, the Socialist, the Communist, the Prohibition, the Socialist Labor-received only 2.6 per cent of the popular vote. In 1940, four minor party candidates received a scant .5 per cent, and in 1944, three candidates received .7 per cent.

Opera Guild To Put Man On Moon

The Amherst Community Opera Guild may beat NASA inputting a man on the moon. November 8 and 9, at 8:15, AMCOP will present Haydn's little-known comic opera "The Man in the Moon."

"Das Welt auf dem Mond," or "The Man in the Moon," will be performed in English and is one of a dozen or so operas by Haydn. For some reason, Haydn's operas have been largely neglected since his death, but are now beginning to gain their rightful place on the musical stage in Europe and America.

"The Man in the Moon" is a comic work, impossible to believe, even if its lunar aspect were deleted. Ecclitico, a charlatan "scientist," and his friend Ernesto are in love with the daughters of Signor Buonafede, a cantankerous and lecherous old skinflint, who will not allow his daughters to wed. Ecclitico devises a fantastic scheme, utilizing a sham "invention" of his - the Omniscope - and enlisting the aid of Ernest and Cecco, Buonafede's servant, who happens to be enamored of Lisetta, Buonafede's maid and mistress. They drug Buonafede and, when he awakes, convince him - with the aid of props, disguises, scenery, and other chicanery - that he is on the moon. All "return" to earth and everything ends happily, the guys getting their girls with Buonafede's somewhat grudging consent. A farce? Of course, and therein lies its humor.

The case includes Miss Dorothy Ornest and Mr. John D'Armand, voice instructors at UMass. Miss Ornest's impeccable artistry has become well-known in the area through her many recitals and concert appearances. Mr. D'Armand is new to UMass this year , coming to us from the University of Cincinnati.

Performances will be on Friday and Saturday, Nov. 8 and 9, at 8:15 P.M. at the Amherst Regional High School. Tickets are on sale at the Senior Community Center, 17 Kellogg Ave. (behind the Post Office), also from Phyllis Paige, tel. 253-7477, and Foster Farrar Co., tel. 584-8811.

IBM invites you to join an infant industry.

Big as it is, the information processing industry is just beginning to grow.

Recently, Fortune estimated that the value of general purpose computers installed in this country will more than double by 1972. Other publications have other predictions, and probably no source is totally precise. But most agree that information processing is one of America's fastest growing major industries.

Every day, it seems, computers go to work in a new field or new application. IBM computers are working in such diverse fields as business, law, medicine, oceanography, traffic control, air pollution. Just about any area you can name.

To somebody just starting out, this growth means exceptionally good chances for advancement. Last year, for example, we appointed over 4,000 managers—on performance, not seniority. Here are four ways you could grow with IBM:

Engineering and Science

"The interdisciplinary environment keeps you technologically hot."

"Working in data processing today pretty much means you work in a broad spectrum of technologies," says Nick Donofrio.

An Associate Engineer at IBM, Nick is a 1967 graduate in Electrical Engineering. He's using his technical background to design circuits for computer memory systems.

Nick says, "Your specialty at IBM can take you into the front yard of half a dozen different fields. In my job, for example, I work with systems design engineers, chemists, physicists, metallurgists, and programmers. The diversity helps me keep up to date on the latest technologies."

Career areas in engineering and science at IBM include: Research, Design & Development, Manufacturing, Product Test, Space and Defense Projects, and Field Engineering. You'll need at least a B.S. in any technical field.

Marketing

"Working with company presidents is part of the job."

"I'm pretty much the IBM Corporation in the eyes of my customers," says Andy Moran. "I consider that fairly good for an engineer who graduated only two years ago."

Andy earned his B.S.E.E. in 1966. Today, he's a Marketing Representative with IBM, involved in the planning, selling and installation of data processing systems.

Andy's customers include companies with annual sales ranging from 20 million to 120 million dollars. He often works with executive vice-presidents and presidents. Andy says, "At first I was a little nervous about the idea of advising executives at that level. But by the time I finished training, I knew I was equipped to do the job."

Career areas in marketing at IBM include: Data Processing Marketing and Systems Engineering, Office Products Sales, and Information Records Sales. Degree requirement: B.S. or B.A. in any field.

Finance

"You're in an ideal spot to move ahead fast."

"I've always figured my chances for advancement would be better in a growth industry. That's why I picked IBM," says Joe Takacs.

Joe's been working in general accounting since he got his B.B.A. in June, 1968. Growth wasn't the only reason he chose IBM. He says, "I learned that it's general practice at IBM to promote from within and to promote on merit alone. I like that.

"Another growth factor is the job itself," Joe says. "During my first few years, I'll get experience in nearly every area of general accounting—Income & Expense, Balance Sheet, and so on. I'll be learning how the company is structured and how it operates on a broad scale. That's exactly the kind of knowledge I'll need to help me qualify for a manager's job."

Career areas in finance at IBM include: Financial Planning and Control, Financial Analysis, Accounting, Information Systems, and Internal Auditing. You'll need at least a Bachelor's degree.

Programming

"It's a mixture of science and art."

"A computer is practically useless until somebody writes a program for it," says Earl Wilson.

Earl got a B.A. in Modern Languages in June, 1967. He's now an IBM programmer working on a teleprocessing system that will link the computerized management information systems of several IBM divisions.

Earl defines a "program" as a set of instructions that enables a computer to do a specific job. "Programming involves science," says Earl, "because you have to analyze problems logically and objectively. But once you've made your analysis, you have an infinite variety of ways to use a computer's basic abilities. There's all the room in the world for individual expression."

Career areas in programming at IBM include: Systems Programming, Applications Programming, Programming Research, and Internal Programming for IBM's own use. You'll need at least a B.S. or B.A.

Other reasons to consider IBM

1. Small Team Concept. No matter how large a project may be, we break it down into units small enough to be handled by one person or a few people. Result: quick recognition for achievement.

2. Educational Support. IBM employees spend over thirteen million hours a year in company-sponsored educational and training programs. And plans like our Tuition Refund Program could help you get your Master's or Ph.D.

3. 300 Locations. We have almost 50 plant, laboratory, or headquarters locations and over 250 branch offices in key cities throughout the United States.

4. Openings at All Degree Levels. We have many appropriate starting jobs for people at any degree level: Bachelor's, Master's or Ph.D.

Smith Prof's Election Opinions Vary

Northampton - Canadians feel superior, Indians uninspired and Australians concerned about the 1968 presidential campaign.

These were among foreign reactions to the political race experienced and described by Smith College faculty members from these countries in a recent forum on the campus.

Recalling the marked aura of youthfulness surrounding the Kennedy Administration, Canadian Professor Dennis Chitty says that Canadians were really excited by the entrances of Senator Eugene McCarthy and the late Senator Robert F. Kennedy into the campaign. But now, he adds, "the most incredible thing about the election is the way youth is getting clobbered.

"We have a young, attractive bachelor (Pierre Elliot Trudeau) as prime minister. He is galvanizing the political system. So, Canadians looking at events of the campaign have a feeling of smugness. Right now, they think they have the better of the two political systems."

For India's political observers, says Bengal-born Assistant Professor Sanat K. Majumder, candidates Richard M. Nixon and Hubert H. Humphrey are being watched "against the backdrop of three men: U.S. Ambassador to India Chester Bowles, the late President Kennedy and the late Rev. Martin Luther King Jr."

India's people, says Majumder, "see Nixon as a man who likes to close gaps, such as the 'missile gap'."

"Australia is concerned about the U. S. presence in Southeast Asia," says Australian Paul Bourke, a visiting scholar at Smith from the University of Melbourne, on an American Council of Learned Societies International Fellowship in history.

He believes that Australians want that presence and that "it is necessary for the preservation of Australia." Bourke sees "little difference" between Humphrey and Nixon as potential presidents.

All three men express strong reactions to events of the Democratic National Convention in Chicago that nominated Humphrey.

Chitty, at Smith from Canada, a National Science Foundation Senior Foreign Scientist Fellow, in the biological sciences, regards the television coverage as "a great thing ... a face-to-face confrontation for millions with political reality."

The Indian Majumder saw the convention as "good - I would rather see a convention express political reality." He was critical of the calmness of the Republican convention, doubting its political significance. Australia's Chitty termed the Democratic convention "a very depressing picture; and obscene spectacle."

WMUA To Air Election Eve Show

WMUA News, in cooperation with the MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN, will broadcast a special 60 minute pre-election program this evening at 9:30. "On the Eve of the Election: the Old Politics and the New" will be hosted by Daniel Weir of WMUA News and J. Harris Dean, Editor-in-Chief of the MDC.

Their guests for this informal look at the politics of 1968 will be Prof. Donald Junkins of the English Dept., and a former Kennedy campaign worker; Prof. David Booth of the Government Dept.; the Rev. Arthur Walmsley, former director of social action work for the national Episcopal Church; Donald A. Epstein, Managing Editor of the MDC and Gilbert Salk, interim Executive Secretary of the Martin Luther King Jr., Social Action Council.

Canadian To Lecture On Yeats, Shaw

"George Bernard Shaw and W.B. Yeats" will be the topic of a talk by Professor Michael J. Sidnell of Trent University, Peterborough, Ontario, tomorrow evening, at 8 p.m. in Mahar Auditorium. The lecture is open to the public.

Professor Sidnell's essays on Yeats, Shaw, and other writers have appeared in numerous literary collections including "Modern Drama," "The Cambridge Quarterly," "Canadian Forum," and "Papers of the Bibliographical Society of America." His essay "Yeats' First Work for the Stage" was included in the 1965 volume "W.B. Yeats Centenary Essays," edited by D.E.S. Maxwell and S.B. Bushrui. He is also co-editor of a projected UMass Press edition of all surviving manuscripts of W.B. Yeats' verse play "The Shadowy Waters." Included in the volume will be substantial critical commentary.

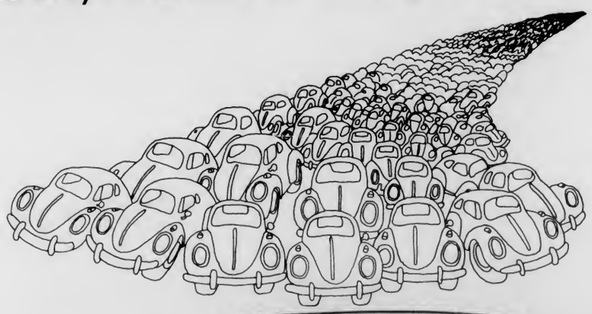
Woman Revolutionary Heads NLF At Paris Peace Talks

PARIS (AP) - A 41-year-old woman revolutionary, Mrs. Nguyen Thi Binh, will head the National Liberation Front's delegation at the expanded Paris peace talks, a member of the NLF central committee said yesterday.

Flying from Vietnam via Moscow, she is due to arrive in Paris at 11 a.m. today with five other members of an advance group of the NLF, the political arm of the Viet Cong.

They are to "take part in the preparatory meeting of the conference for a solution of the Vietnam problem," it was announced by the NLF information office recently opened in Paris.

A spokesman said the group "will be present" at the first meeting of the expanded talks, provisionally set for next Wednesday.



Xuan Thuy, head of the North Vietnamese delegation, said Saturday the United States had agreed the National Liberation Front and the Saigon government should join the talks with independent delegations, each having "the right to speak for themselves."

President Nguyen Van Thieu of South Vietnam said he did not intend to send a delegation because his government could never negotiate with the NLF as a separate entity.

The American and North Vietnamese delegations were expected to meet privately prior to the formal session Wednesday to seek agreement on how the four delegations should be seated.

It was possible the United States would regard the Communist side as a single unit and simply ignore the Communists' claim to constitute two independent delegations.

Humphrey and Muskie

Tomorrow, some 70 million Americans will vote for the next President of the United States.

For some time now the editors of the Daily Collegian have been contemplating whether or not to enforse a candidate. The majority has felt that the paper should not endorse a candidate, thus doing its part to boycott the election. As election day draws near, however, the reality is that one of these men - Humphrey, Nixon, or Wallace - will be the next president and either Muskie, Agnew, or Lemay will be the next vice-president.

The choice of Wallace-Lemay was immediately dismissed. The candidacy of these two men is based on pure racism and hatred. If the third party obtains more than 20 percent of the popular vote in tomorrow's election it will be considered a victory for the cause of reactionary upheaval in the nation and will indicate just how sick our society really is. The choice thus must be made between Nixon-Agnew and Humphrey-Muskie.

The easy way out would be to blame all of our problems on the party in power and say it's time to turn the ins into outs, that it is time to give the Democrats a long needed rest from power.

However, these are not normal times and to resort to the easy way out would be a mandate for further problems.

We live today in an alienated country filled with dissension and dissatisfaction, which means that the next president will have an exceptionally short period of grace. People expect and want changes -- and fast. But who are the dissatisfied, the alienated? It is not the white suburban-dwellers that Richard Nixon has been concentrating on in his campaign. The discontented lie in our cities, our black communities and in our intellectual communities. The next president must be able to work and communicate with these communities if the problems of America are going to be solved.

Since September, Nixon and Agnew have been campaigning in the suburbs. They have ignored the urban centers and the campus where the dissatisfied are. They have directed their campaign toward the element of this country which wants to maintain the status quo.

Meanwhile, Humphrey and Muskie have campaigned on the campuses and in the black communities. Last Saturday in Harlem, for example, Humphrey campaigned and attracted crowds with enthusiasm comparable to a John Kennedy or an Adam Clayton Powell. Muskie, wherever he has gone, has been able to silence vocal dissenters and win them to his side. Both have won the respect of the dissatisfied -- the people whose problems the next president will have to solve.

Another major factor in our decision has been the choice of vice-presidential running mates, the most important decision which a presidential nominee must make.

Comparing Edmund Muskie to that manifest misfit, Spiro Agnew, has to be one of the easiest tasks of the year. One of these men will serve a heartbeat away from the presidency and it is indeed a heartbeat away since one third of the presidents of this century have died during their term in office. Agnew's lone qualification for serving as president is his one, unfinished term as governor of Maryland. Muskie's qualifications include being governor of Maine and twice-elected United States Senator.

While Muskie urges the dissatisfied of this nation to work with the government to better the nation, Agnew urges all those who are dissatisfied to pack their bags and leave. Where would this nation be if all those dissatisfied with the status quo throughout its history just packed up and left?

For these reasons and for many, many others, the editors of the DAILY COLLEGIAN urge the election of Hubert Humphrey and Edmund Muskie in tomorrow's election.

The Editors

Vote No

Regarding the confusion over the death penalty vote, the proposal reads in such a way that a voter wishing to RETAIN the law would vote YES, and one wishing to ABOLISH it would vote NO.

"Recently I have read: 'One education commission argues that there is "persuasive evidence" that as a result of better diet and medical care, today's freshmen are 3 years older physiologically than those of 1900.' If this more rapid aging of our students continues at this same rate, I calculate that the 'generation gap' will be completely eliminated by about 2600 A.D.!!"

"Right — We've Completely Overcome The Old Five O'Clock Shadow"

Inside Report:

NIXON IN NEW YORK

BY ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

New York-At the moment Richard M.Nixon's campaign managers dispatched Gov. Spiro T. Agnew to attend the anniversary banquet of the New York Conservative Party Oct. 14, battle-wise Republican professionals here suspected the ball game was over in this state.

Such sanctioning of a right-wing splinter party dedicated to the political destruction of Gov. Nelson Rockefeller brought Republican leaders here to a pitch of cold fury. Rockefeller, unstinting in his help for Nixon this fall, dispatched a private telegram of bitter protest to Nixon. He overcame his first inclination to publicly reveal the wire's contents only after pleadings by Charles Schoeneck, Republican State Chairman.

But melancholy, not anger, was the dominant emotional response by Rockefeller Republicans. They felt the Agnew-Conservative get-together symbolized a Nixon strategy in New York that has frittered away a narrow lead here and jeopardized 43 electoral votes.

Thus, while the latest New York Daily News statewide poll showing Vice President Humphrey well ahead produced panicky disbelief at Nixon headquarters, it was no surprise to Republican party pros. By mid-October, they were privately speculating that Humphrey, still behind in the polls, would carry the state.

If they prove correct, the New York presidential campaign of 1968 will be one for the history books. it would be a case of effective strategy and brilliant advertising by Humphrey rising above a Democratic party in ruins and an incredibly late start. But it also would show how strategic blundering lost the country's most populous state. The folloy of Agnew's visit to the Conservative banquet is the starting point for understanding this.

John Mitchell, Nixon's national campaign manager, decreed from the first that Nixon's New York campaign must be balanced between drawing support from both liberal Democratic defectors and the Conservative Party. Mitchell personally negotiated the accord under which the Conservatives did not enter a separate slate of Nixon electors (though the same result, it is now clear, could have been achieved in the courts).

Mitchell's accord required Agnew's attendance at the Oct. 14 banquet (though some Nixon staffers strongly objected). The result was considerably less than a net gain for Nixon. While the flirtation with the Conservatives dismayed the left here, it by no means ended the right's dalliance with George Wallace. Indeed, James Buckley, Conservative candidate for the Senate, has asserted: "George Wallace is expressing the same sentiments that I hope to be vocalizing in a less flamboyant way" -- scarcely a plus for Nixon.

Moreover, dispatching Agnew to ANY gathering in New York reflected the myopia of the Nixon strategists. Long before the Conservative banquet, Republican professionals here recognized the corrosive effect on Nixon by his running-mate.

Party pros in Erie County (Buffalo) had discarded "Nixon-Agnew" posters on buses in favor of "Nixon-Javits" advertising -- attempting to capitalize on the popularity of Sen. Jacob Javits's reelection campaign. Republicans ruefully admit that Nixon is being hurt by the New York Times conflict-of-interest charges against Agnew, which are mass-produced and distributed by organized labor.

The results showed up in private polls two weeks ago. Normally Democratic voters -- particularly Jews in Brooklyn and the Bronx -- who had been undecided in earlier surveys had suddenly flopped back to Humphrey.

Although the Agnew-Conservative strategy contributed to this, Humphrey's success here is not wholly a negative matter. He owes much to Eugene Foley, a transplanted Minnesotan who has persevered against unbelievable disorganization in running the state campaign.

Besides the late start and the habitual parochialism of New York Democratic politicians more interested in next year's district leadership than this year's Presidency, Foley had to cope with Humphrey's high command. Robert McCandless, the young Oklahoma lawyer running Humphrey's national organization, actually purged Foley at one point. But after ten days on the outside, Foley used longtime friendship with Humphrey and infighting skill (developed as a federal bureaucrat) to regain power.

Special Report--Part 5

The Death Penalty A Scientific Analysis

By GEORGE KISER and STEVE ROBL

The scientific evidence is so strong that it is difficult to find a monograph or book written by a nationally recognized criminologist since 1850 that defends or advocates the death penalty. The typical view of contemporary criminologists was probably given by Professor Sellin when he was asked if he opposed the death penalty for murder in the first degree:

"Yes, I oppose it for the same reason that I don't like to see ineffective penalties used, and if I believed that the use of the death penalty saved people's lives, I could take another point of view."

IS THE DEATH PENALTY ESSENTIAL TO PROTECT SOCIETY FROM INDIVIDUALS WHO HAVE KILLED AND IF NOT EXECUTED ARE LIKELY TO KILL AGAIN?

Advocates of the death penalty frequently express opposition to imprisonment as an alternative to capital punishment because of their belief that the convicted murderer is very likely to kill again. The scientific data on this point are so clear that it is difficult to imagine how this belief was born.

Research shows that convicted murderers, as a rule, are among the best-behaved of all prisoners. Although murders do sometimes occur in prison, they are almost never committed by convicted murderers.

When released on parole, persons who have served time for murder are generally among those least likely to violate the provisions of parole. It simply is not true that parole boards flood the streets with convicted murderers who cause widespread violence to flare. The record speaks for itself.

For example, in the state of Oregon, 187 individuals convicted of first and second degree murder have been released since 1939; only seven of these parolees violated parole provisions, and not one has murdered again. During the last several decades in Pennsylvania not a single convicted murderer receiving parole has murdered again. The Rev. Lester Kinsolving states in his article, "Christianity and Capital Punishment" that of 374 murderers receiving parole in California only two were later convicted of felonies and not a single one committed first-degree murder again. In New Jersey, not a single one of 117 parolees, most of whom had been convicted of murder, repeated the crime of murder. During the decade 1950-1959, New York State paroled 375 convicted murderers, not a single one of whom repeated the crime.

If is, of course, possible to find cases of convicted murderers on parole who murder again, but this almost never happens. Parole boards, composed of humans, are obviously subject to error. However, all in all, their record on convicted murderers is commendable.

In short, the belief that substantial numbers of murderers are habitual killers is completely unjustified by facts. Should we end capital punishment in Colorado and substitute imprisonment there is no reason to think overeager parole officials would release hordes of convicted murderers to endanger the lives of law-abiding citizens. Those who persist in holding this belief are ignoring the facts.

IS THE DEATH PENALTY NECESSARY TO PROTECT POLICEMEN IN THEIR LINE OF DUTY?

Death penalty advocates commonly believe that if the death penalty were abolished, the lives of policemen would be greatly endangered. If this were correct, then all who both respect law and order and oppose capital punishment would need to seriously re-evaluate their position.

This argument frequently appears to be based on the assumption that criminals are very anxious to kill police officers, and refrain from it only because of the death penalty. One recent writer on the subject has said that abolition of capital punishment is "almost an invitation for murderous thugs to kill more police officers."

Because policemen frequently subscribe to this view, police organizations have often proven influential in keeping the death penalty on the law books. Yet, as Professor Sellin has said, "these organizations ... have made no comparative study that would support their views over the death penalty in protecting the lives of policemen."

If we are to move this problem from the realm of mere speculation to a factual basis, we must find facts regarding the frequency with which policemen are killed in both death penalty and non-death-penalty states.

The only relevant study known to us is the one carried out by Professor Sellin. He selected sets of states, the states within each set being essentially alike socially and economically, and each set containing both death-penalty and non-death-penalty states. The study covered the period from 1920 to 1953. The conclusion was that the rate at which policemen were killed was the same; in other words, the presence of the death penalty did not enhance the safety of policemen.

These findings are not unexpected. Earlier in this paper, we said that the death penalty does not provide additional protection to the general population because the murderer is frequently unfamiliar with the law, often possesses inadequate mental capacity and stability, generally kills under extreme emotional pressure, plans to escape all punishment, or simply decides to play the odds against execution. For essentially the same reasons, the death penalty does not provide additional protection for policemen.

Explanation By S.D.S.

To the editor:

The SDS Chapter at the University has conducted two guerilla theater demonstrations at the weekly ROTC drills. While each member of SDS has his or her own opinion regarding the presence of the ROTC units on campus, at last night's meeting the following list of goals and intentions was passed again, reaffirming our position as a group.

1. By opposing ROTC, we are opposing University involvement in the military-industrial complex. We remain adamant in our objection to any and all activities which we, as members of the University community, consider to be morally wrong. This includes not just ROTC, but weapons research, corporate and military recruiting, and government intelligence recruiting. ROTC drill happens to be the most obvious manifestation of this type of activity at present.

2. By demonstrating against the ROTC drills, we are demonstrating against the disastrous war in Vietnam and against the military power structure which has continually pressed for further escalation of this war of oppression against the Vietnamese people.

3. By the absurdity of our mimicry, we hoped to indicate to the individuals in the ROTC program the absurdity of ROTC. Peace can only be achieved through peaceful means, and the double-think philosophy that 'peace' must be maintained by the presence of enormous standing armies, a proliferation of nuclear armaments and numerous so-called brushfire wars must be counteracted. It is our belief that the majority of students in ROTC are not fascist pigs or warmongers, but are merely contending with the problem of the draft by attempting to enter the military as officers rather than as EM. We wish to impress them with the fact that there may be better, more pleasing, and more personally acceptable ways of dealing with this problem. We wish to emphasize that we are not opposed to the individuals in ROTC but rather to the military system.

SDS apologizes to any ROTC student who was offended by the actions of certain participants in the demonstrations, and if our goals have not been made clear by the tactics of the demonstrations, we hope that this paper will clarify them. The SDS chapter invites any interested ROTC students to join in our meetins and we hope to encourage meaningful dialogues among our members and ROTC students.

Position Paper approved by the membership of the UMass Chapter of Students for a Democratic Society

Fraternity Comment

To the editor:

In the October 30 issue of the MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN, there appeared an editorial entitled "Progress vs Deadwood." In this article charges were made against the fraternity system, stating that "these institutions, except for the KKK and the country clubs, are probably one of the only openly racist organizations left in America." It is a shame that the authors of this editorial can deal only in misleading generalizations. As a result they do not perform their duties as newspaper editors, to inform the public in an accurate and unbiased manner.

In a University which boasts a less than 2% Black population, it is absurd to label the fraternity system as one of the most openly racist organizations in America today. In the academic year 1967-1968, the University totaled 84 Black undergraduates. With the publication of Johnathan Kozol's book DEATH AT AN EARLY AGE, and with the subsequent re-evaluation of its administration policies, the University belatedly expanded its program of accepting Black students for higher education. For this reason, among others, fraternities should not have to bear the brunt of the attack of this editorial. If one looks at other organizations on this campus, he would see that they have the same problem of recruitment.

By citing the Williams College fraternity situation as an example in this article, the authors imply that racism was responsible for the deterioration and ultimate elimination of the fraternity system This is totally unfounded and unconfirmed by the article concerning the Williams College example appearing on the preceding page of the same issue.

Next, the authors of the editorial mistakenly proposed that the primary goals of a fraternity are "to separate and segregate its membership from the rest of the campus." Although we are differentiated from the rest of the University Community because we are fraternity members, it is unjustifiable to jump to the conclusion that we are segregationists and practice racism.

Although we do not claim to speak for the entire fraternity system, we would like to express the goals of our fraternity.

The primary purpose for our existence is to involve individuals in a learning situation on a smaller scale than the University residence halls could possibly offer. This experience encompasses not only social activities by also academic and social responsibility to both the University and Amherst Communities. As a relatively young fraternity on this campus, we are extremely proud of our record in regard to our involvement in campus and community activities.

First, we have exceeded the all-men's cumulative average, consistently ranking among the top organizations on campus. Many of our members are participants in all levels of campus activities, from dormitory counselors and executive committees to the University Student Senate and Student Union Governing Board. Honor societies and fraternities, the INDEX, Afro-American Club, varsity sports, theatrical guilds, department honors programs, Adelphia, Who's Who, SWAP, Homecoming and Winter Carnival Committees have had and do have members of our fraternity in leading positions.

We sponsor Distinguished Visitor Programs, bringing members of the Administration and individuals of contemporary importance to our fraternity house for discussions. Recently we sponsored for the University Community a political debate with representatives of all the major political groups vying for the Presidency. In the Service Project, Bounce for Beats, amassing almost one thousand dollars for the Heart Fund. In addition to working as Belchertown Volunteers, we raised two hundred dollars for the Belchertown State Hospital with door-to-door sales.

Deadwood? We think not!!!

Support For Olver

To the editor:

We would like to set the record straight for those who may have been puzzled by Mr. Whitlock's statement to the University community that he would work for the creation of a liaison position between the legislature and the University. If he were familiar with the University and its operation he would have known that a very capable man has served that liaison function part time for several yers and that we just this year added a second person in the same liaison capacity.

We feel that the whole University community would be best served by a representative who understands the strengths, problems, and needs in regard to University personnel and operation. Therefore, we support John Olver for State Representative.

Don't Drop Out

To the editor:

As the election approaches and Nixon maintains his lead in the polls, Humphrey remains a pawn of the militant (pardon the expression) McCarthyites. McCarthy supporters say that the Democratic party is not worth saving - that it is not responsive to the people. What party has been more responsive to the people than the Democratic one? The Republican party has not had a liberal Presidential nominee in my lifetime. One can say that Johnson's Viet Nam policy is not responsive, yet Nixon has adopted it and it has not hurt him.

The Democratic party responded to your parents' needs during the depression with the PWA and welfare, and today with Medicare and adequate Social Security. It was the Democratic party that raised the minimum wages and gave to millions federal aid to education-the major reason most of you are in college today. It was the Democratic party that pushed social reforms so that America can approach dreams it has always preached.

Twenty years ago Strom Thurmond walked out of the Democratic party because "radical" Humphrey was preaching human rights. Unfortunately, he came back. Five years ago, "liberal" Humphrey debated the Civil Rights Bill with Thurmond on live T.V. Three MONTHS ago, Thurmond walked down the aisle with Nixon.

Now I ask, who needs to be destroyed, the conservative Republicans or the liberal Democrats? If McCarthy supporters really want party reform, they should vote for Humphrey and then approach him and say, "We put you in office, now you owe us something." As undemocratic as it may seem to some, politicians owe little to those who drop-out.

Italy Blasted By Savage Storm

ROME (AP) - A devastating blast of storms spread disaster across northern Italy this weekend and by Sunday night 72 persons were reported dead and scores insured.

Dozens of streams swollen by two days of torrential rans swept over their banks Saturday night, destroying houses, ruining roads and triggering landslides which smothered mountaineers north of Biella in mud.

Police helicopters joined rescue efforts in the Valle Mosso area, north of Niella, where 64 persons were reported to have perished.

Italy's largest lake, Lago Maggiore, surged over its shores and flooded lake side homes.

All communications to the Ossola Valley, at the foothills of the Alps, were cut off as military helicopters began ferrying refugees to Turin and other centers. A pilot reported seeing the valley entirely flooded, with only the roofs of houses or cars in sight.

The combination of hurricane-force winds and torrential rains, cresting streams and landslides gouged a path of death and destruction from the Riviera across the Alps to Venice. Rain and winds also pounded central Italy to the Bay of Naples.

In the historic center of Venice, storm winds whipped the lagoon four feet above normal sea level and sent waters pouring over the tops of canal embankments into streets, squares and buildings.

Water, winds and mud wiped out roads, tore away rail lines, collapsed bridges and snarled communications and traffic as far south as Rome.

Along the Riviera on the other side of Italy, ships and lighthouses were damaged. Shoreline communities were invaded by waves from the sea and floods of mud oozing down from the hills behind the beaches.

An American Army helicopter from the U.S. base at Vicenza crashed on a rescue mission. The two American crewmen were injured, after lifting to safety 20 children trapped by flood waters rising around a stalled bus.

First damage estimates put the losses at million of dollars, but it will take days before a clear picture is possible.

In Calabria, toe of the Italian boot, earth tremors added to the nation's troubles.

Frosh Candidates State Views

By ANNE GIARDINA
Staff Reporter

Candidates for freshman class offices expressed their views on the issues of the election last Thursday night on station WMUA. Staff Sheean, radio announcer, and Joe Tabacco, sophomore class president, were hosts for the group. Invited to speak were those students whose names are on the final ballot. These were decided on the basis of the primary held early Thursday afternoon.

The cadidates still in the race are president, Ernie Lepore and Fred Chanowski; vice-president, Steve Driscoll; secretary, Linda Peruzzi and Linda Peterson; treasurer, Lee Derrick and Pamela Larson; and senator at large, Bob Nims. Also represented on the show was the United Freedom Party. Although their names are not on the final ballot they are conducting a strong write-in campaign.

At the beginning of the discussion Joe Tabacco emphasized that the class officers' function would primarily be a social one. With the $10,000 class budget they are expected to provide recreational outlets for the freshman class, the largest in New England. Their views on campus policy would have a limited effect because, as Tabacco brought out, "they are not in an advantageous position to work with reforms."

All candidates expressed as their reason for running the desire for being actively involved in student government. Each candidate held a position in his high school.

Each candidate was asked standard questions on his position. The presidential contestees agreed that their main objective was to bring the freshman class together. They differ, however, in their manner they would use to unify their class. Lepore would have an executive council with a representative from each dorm to keep the students informed on the activities of the officers. Chanowski would rather see the freshman class socially apart from the rest of the university. He wants more activities for just freshmen without actually separating them from the other students. Lepore and Chanowski would each like to see the freshmen increase their sense of personal responsibility.

Driscoll, the lone candidate for vice-president, sees his main role as cooperation with the other officers. While he is in office, he hopes to increase the school spirit of the freshman class. He thought the class spirit "could stand a great deal of improvement." He admitted he was "surprised at the lack of spirit" at the football games and "the lack of respect for the school" found in the destruction in the dorms.

When Nims, senator at large candidate, was asked how he could represent a class as large as the present one, he repliedthrough his contacts with his fellow classmates and other class officers. If it comes down to making a decision he would vote the majority. If there is no majority it would come down to a personal decision.

There was some disagreement between the two secretarial rivals, Miss Peruzzi and Miss Peterson, as to how communication could be achieved between class officers and students. Miss Peterson would like a questionnaire sent to freshmen to find out how the students feel about the issues most relevant to them. She would also have a monthly newsletter sent out.

Miss Peruzzi thought that there was too much literature around and that the newsletter would end up on the ground. She did not have any specific ideas on how communication could be achieved.

The two opponents for office of treasurer did not have any specific stands as to how they would spend the money allotted to them. Each felt that if there was money left over it should go to a worthwhile cause. Miss Larson would donate it all to a charitabe organization while Derrick would leave a little to the incoming freshmen.

The United Freedom Party was formed last Tuesday in response to "disgust with campus issues." It was felt that the "candidates were not running on issues." Their platform consists of five points: disarming campus police, abolishing subject requirements, abolishing curfew for freshmen women, abolishing ROTC on campus, and establishing co-ed dorms.

Net Stolen From Pond

Recently a 100-foot section of netting was taken from a trap net set in the college pond. The piece of netting was nearly 100 feet long, made of 1/4 -inch brown nylon mesh, and rigged with floats and lead lines. The net cost over $100 and is the federal property of the Massachusetts Cooperative Fishery Unit located in Holdsworth Hall.

The campus police and a federal investigator are investigating the theft.

Clark Terry To Judge Music Festival

Trumpeter Clark Terry, a gentleman who has played and sung his way to popularity both in front of his own band and on the Tonight Show, will serve as a judge for the 1969 Intercollegiate Music Festival.

Terry's wide background in all areas of music and his appeal to television viewers and record buyers have made him one of the nation's top musicians. He was a member of the 1968 Intercollegiate Music Festival judging panel.

The national finals of the Festival are set for May 22-24 at Kiel Opera House in St. Louis, with winners of six regional competitions meeting for national championships.

Regional contests in Alabama, Pennsylvania, California, Illinois, Arkansas and Utah get under way in February. College musicians and vocalists performing popular, folk and jazz music will be competing for regional honors and the trips to St. Louis and the national finals of the TWA and Budweiser sponsored event.

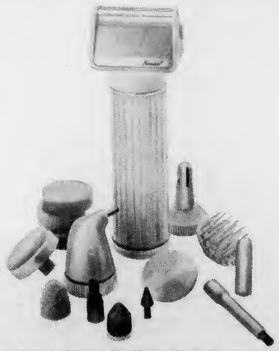
An estimated 1,000 college music groups will be trying to win national titles that currently are held by the University of Illinois, Southern Medthodist University and Kansas State University.

A beauty parlor you can take back to school.

In many ways the Norelco Beauty Sachet is just like a beauty parlor.

It manicures, pedicures, massages, applies facial creams, buffs and files nails, and stimulates your scalp and muscles.

But in another way, it's more than a beauty parlor.



It also shaves your legs and underarms. And it shaves underarms as close or closer than a blade in 2 out of 3 cases as tested in an independent laboratory. (As does the Lady Norelco 15L on the right.)

The Lady Norelco is a shaver that has two shaving edges. One for legs, and one for underarms.

It also has a 110/220 voltage selector for easy travel use.

And it's not at all expensive. Even if it shaves like it is.

Amherst Artist Exhibits Works In Boston Gallery

The work of John Grillo, resident artist in the UMass art department, is the subject of two one-man exhibitions in Boston, one at the Rigelhaupt Gallery running now to Nov. 13 and the other at the Simmons College Beatley Library from Nov. 11 to Dec. 6.

Grillo has studied at the Hartford School of Fine Arts, California School of Fine Arts, and with Hans Hoffman in New York. He came to the University in 1967 after previous appointments at the University of Iowa, University of California at Berkeley and Southern Illinois University. In addition to more than a dozen one-man shows in New York galleries since 1948, he has had two major retrospective exhibitions, one in 1958 at the Olsen Foundation and the other in 1966 at the Bundy Art Museum in Vermont.

Grillo's paintings and sculptures have been purchased by some of the leading museums in the United States and currently his major painting, "After the Sun Storm," in the collection of James A. Michener, is touring the U.S., circulated by the Smithsonian Institution.

JOHN GRILLO

He states the theme and concept of the recent work to be shown in Boston as "space-oriented ideas that emanate from a personal feeling of reality expressed through geometric forms, shapes and colors that relate to an aerial landscape. In the use of intense colors juxtaposed in symbolic design, a mystical visual world is created."

Demonstrators Mar Funeral

ATHENS (AP) - Former Premier George Papandreou was buried yesterday and his funeral flared into the biggest demonstration of protest against the Greek regime since it seized power 18 months ago.

More than 300,000 Greeks lined the mile-long funeral route that those who have either ideas or time to offer are urged by the King Council to attend.

range with cries of "Papandreou," "Down with the Junta," and "We want freedom."

Never since the junta of army officers seized power in a coup d'etar on April 21, 1967, had there been such a massive and open show of defiance.

Crowds crashed through cordons along the way and scuffled with police to follow the hearse. Though all police and army units in and around the national capital were on alert for trouble, they were obviously under orders to restrain themselves and avoid violence.

Papandreou, a political force in Greece for half a century and a major figure in the turmoil that led to the military takeover and the end of representative government in Greece, died Friday from a brain clot. It followed surgery for a perforated ulcer. He was 80.

An unrelating foe of the regime, Papandreou had repeatedly called for the junta to quit. He had spent 11 of the last 18 months of his life under some form of arrest.

King Council Announces Plans For Grape Pickers

The Martin Luther King Jr. Social Action Council is this month starting to organize local support for the striking farm workers in California's grape growing region. Even though Cesar Chavez's United Farm Workers Organizing Committee (UFWOC) has achieved great victories in contract negotiations, there remain, according to King Council member Dan Weir, more labor problems for the UFWOC to solve.

In order to map out possible ways that people in the Amherst area might help in easing the way for solutions to these problems, the King Council is holding a "brain-storming" meeting this evening at 7:30 in the Student Union's Nantucket Room. All

UMass Harriers 2nd Wayne Wins First Spot

BURLINGTON, VT. - By placing five men in the top nine, the University of Connecticut defended their Yankee Conference cross-country championship, Saturday. But not without a stiff challenge from UMass.

In what looked like a duel meet, only one of the first eleven finishers was not wearing a UMass or UConn uniform, the Huskies edged out the Redmen by seven points 26-33. Third place New Hampshire finished with 86 points, fourth place Vermont 98, fifth URI 104 and sixth Maine 157.

Individual honors went to UMass' top rated soph Ron Wayne, who covered the 4.5 mile course in 22:35.8. Wayne started pulling away from the pack after the one mile mark of the race and slowly built up his lead in crushing second place finisher John Vitale of Connecticut who ran 22:53.

Once again the UConn runners managed to run in a group and were tough to break up. Third place went to Gene Spurling of UConn and fourth to Steve Flanagan also of the Huskies.

Fifth place in the meet went to Redmen senior Marc Gelinas

Frosh Soccer Team Wins Finishes Undefeated

BY BOB GANLEY
Staff Reporter

The freshmen soccer team completed its schedule last week with victories over tough teams from Trinity and Springfield. The wins enabled the Redmen to finish the season undefeated with eight victories.

On Wednesday, they travelled to Trinity, whose only loss up to that point had been to Springfield. UMass scored in every period and held off a late surge by their opponents to gain a 4-2 win. The two goals were the most given up by the Redmen in any of their games.

Bruce Malinowski scored the first goal late in the first period on a pass from Augie Calheno. Lindo Alves made it 2-0 midway through the second period with an assist from Evan Kenseth. Alves scored again at the beginning of the third period when he converted a penalty kick, but the Redmen still had a fight ahead of them. In the fourth period Trinity scored twice within a minute and a half to cut the lead to 3-2. John Russo, however, gave UMass an insurance goal on a pass from Alves.

The Frosh closed out the season at home on Friday against Springfield and it turned out to be their toughest game of the year. UMass opened the scoring with the game only two minutes old when Kenseth kicked in a rebound after an initial shot by Malinowski had been blocked. This was the only score of the first half, although Springfield twice had shots hit the crossbar. Springfield tied the score in the third period but Alves put UMass back in the lead later in the period. Bob Curtin closed out the scoring in the fourth period to give the Redmen a 3-1 victory.

Coach Ray Cieplik was very happy after the game, which featured a great deal of rough play.

Little Redmen Edge BC Remain Perfect

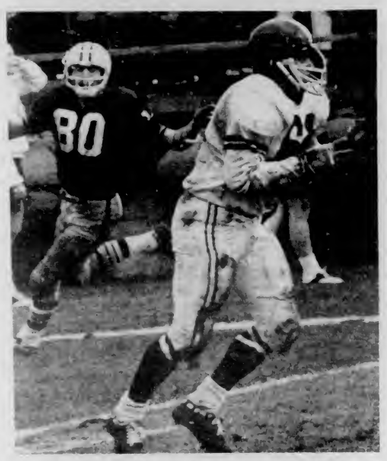
the first half as the game reverted to a defensive struggle, much to the surprise of Kelley who had predicted a freewheeling high scoring affair.

Gagnon's field goal made it 10-0 in the third quarter but BC was not to be denied and came back with nine fourth period points, almost pulling the game out at the end.

Ed Rideout, who was hampered all day at his tailback post by the tight coverage of Little Redman Art Harris, broke the ice for the Eaglets with a two yard touchdown run. Harris, who played both ways, did an excellent job of covering BC's leading threat and this greatly cut down their attack.



The final points came on a safety as Greg Broskie tackled UMass punter Wayne Casey in the end zone. Casey, back on his own one yard line, was heads up on the play. Following a bad snap from center, he decided to allow a safety rather than an imminent blocked kick and a possible score.

A UMass free kick gave BC the ball at their own 25. Aided by a series of questionable calls on the part of the officials, the Eaglets drove to the Massachusetts 15 with 1:20 left to go. Fortunately, the Little Redman defense rose to the occasion and on three successive plays BC lost 31 yards and the issue was no longer in doubt.

For the Little Redmen, Kelley had words of praise and criticism. "The defense played well. They made their mistakes but they hit hard and this is what mattered. Bill DeFlavio and Joe Sabulis were particularly outstanding. DeFlavio was emotionally and physically spent at games end."

"We definitely had the emotional edge but I was disappointed in the offense even though we outgained them 245 yards to 156. The line play was not sharp, but we did pick up their blitz well. We should have had at least one more touchdown."

For the record, UMass hit on five of 15 passes and one interception for 89 yards as compared to BC's six for 18, two interceptions and 71 yards.

UMass Booters In Shutout Vermont Wins Contest, 2-0

By Walt Stachura
Senior Reporter

Two quick goals in the second quarter gave a fired up Vermont soccer team a 2-0 decision over UMass Saturday before a large Parent's Day crowd at Burlington.

After a scoreless and uneventful first quarter, the action picked up when Redman winger Steve Blanchette was ejected from the game after he charged into the Vermont goalie on a play that Steve appeared to slip on the muddy turf in front of the Catamount goalie.

Several minutes later, Peter Meyer tallied the first goal of the game as his penalty shot caught the net just under the crossbar. UMass goalie Steve Kramer re-injured his finger on the goal but returned to action in the second half.

Not quite two minutes after Meyer's goal, John Lavigne took a short pass from Bobby Greene and had the UMass goalie at his mercy from a few feet out and scored easily.

Vermont showed an advantage in the halftime statistics as they outshot the Redmen, 10-6, forced Kramer and Tom Malone to make seven saves while Catamount goalie Ed Hubbert had three.

UMass came out strong at the start of the second half and had several scoring opportunities but were unable to click. Duane Brown made a Bobby Orr type rush over half the field but his crossing pass was just missed by two Redmen standing by an open corner of the Vermont net.

After this near miss, fullback Bill Sanborn was ejected from the game for grabbing a Vermont wing that had gotten behind him and had a clear path to the goal.. Sanborn's action probably stopped a sure Catamount goal.

Vermont got a big break late in the quarter when the referees did not see a hand ball in the Catamount penalty area which would have given UMass a penalty kick. If the Redmen had made the kick, they would have been only a goal behind but they never received the opportunity.

In the fourth quarter, action on the field became rougher and rougher with some of the body contact rivaling the blocking seen in a National Football League game.

Late in the quarter, Vermont halfback Tom Austin was ejected from the game when his sliding tackle almost cut the legs off of a UMass player.

The victory was an important one for Vermont because they moved into a half game lead in the Yankee Conference race. Vermont finished their season with a 4-1 conference card while Rhode Island is 3-1 after their 3-2 upset loss to New Hampshire Saturday.

The loss gave the Redmen a 1-3 conference mark and a 3-5 record overall. It was also the sixth shutout game for UMass, winning three and losing three. Final statistics gave Vermont an edge in shots at goal with a 19-15 margin, and in corner kicks, 9-6. Hubbert had 10 saves in recording his shutout while Kramer and Malone combined for 15 saves.

Scavone Paces Offense Defense In 1st Shutout

By MIKE CURRAN
Sports Editor

BURLINGTON, VT. - UMass finally put it all together, a flawless offense and a hustling defense, as they rolled over Vermont 49-0 before 3500 fans at Centennial Field here Saturday.

Sophomore Pat Scavone was the outstanding star on offense. Scavone working out of the wingback position in his second start, picked up 156 yards rushing in only 14 carries.

Steve Parnell and Tim Adams also had big days as the Redmen put a convincing halt to their five game losing streak. Parnell's long punt returns twice set up three touchdowns while Adams had two touchdown s and two TD passes.

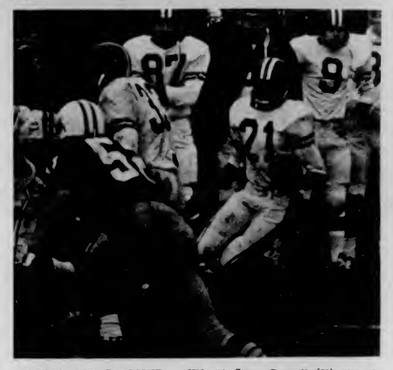
In addition, Marty Scheralis tied a New England college record for consecutive extra points as he converted after each of the UMass seven touchdowns.

The first time the Redmen got their hands on theball, they marched 55 yards in 13 plays for a score. Key plays on the drive were a pair of 15 yard passes by Adams to Jim Long and Scavone and a power sweep by Scavone good for 19 yards and a first and goal at the one. An Adams sneak gave UMass their first touchdown.

A fumble recovery by Dennis Gray gave the Redmen another chance seconds later, but a great block by an official on Long and a fine pass rush by the Catamounts forced a Steve Rogers punt.

At the start of the second period, Rogers faked a punt on third down and ran 14 yards. This run and a penalty against Vermont gave the visitors a first down at the Catamounts 33.

After a four yard gain by John Decembrele and two incompletions Adams hit Nick Warnock at the 15. Then on first down, Warnock took a perfect Adams aerial for six in the end zone.



A 51 punt return by Parnell set up UMass' third score. The junior safety took a 50 yard Art Brown boot and raced down the left sideline behind good blocking before being tackled at the Vermont 26. A second down Adams to Decembrele pass which covered 20 yards gave the visitors a 21-0 edge.

The Catamounts tried vainly to get back in the game on the passing combination of Fran Peterson to Bill Lawrence but Rogers' interception stopped them deep in UMass territory.

After intermission a Vermont fourth and one gamble on their own 48 backfired as John MacLean nailed Gene Monahan for no gain.

On first down Bruce Fulton and Noel Schablik led Scavone around left end and the speedster raced to the Catamount one. Vermont held three times, but Adams notched the TD on a fourth down end run.

The UMass defense, meanwhile was giving the Catamount fans nightmares. Just when the home team started to move a MacLean interception killed their hopes. The former high school fullback, who has starred at the middle guard position this fall, rambled 32 yards with an errant Peterson aerial.

Scavone got his first touchdown of the day at 1:44 of the fourth quarter. His one yard burst culminated a seven play drive which featured an Adams to Pat Flaherty pass good for 16 yards.

Things only got worse for the home crowd as the visitors could do no wrong. Scavone capped off his tremendous performance with a 55 yard scoring run to make it 42-0. It was the same play, a power sweep around left end, which the Vermont defense had so much trouble with all day.

The Catamounts trying anything to get on the board, tried to take a page out of the UMass book, with a fake punt run. This backfired, however, as sophomore Dave Walsh wrapped up Brown a for a three yard loss.

Junior Kenny Hughes, in his first varsity appearance, took over at the Redman quarterback post with a first down at the Vermont 17.

After short gains by Frank Tudryn and Flaherty, Hughes faded back on fourth down and found Nick McGa. y with a perfect toss for UMass' final touchdown.

Scheralis' extra point put his name in the record books and sent the Redmen home with a 49-0 victory.

It was a flawless overall performance by UMass, particularly by the offensive and defensive lines which outplayed their opponents considerably.

Frosh Edge Eagles 10-9

BY STEVE SHAMBAN
Staff Reporter

A 25 yard field goal by Dennis Gagnon at 4:28 of the third quarter proved to be the winning score as the UMass Little Redmen hung on to defeat the Boston College frosh football team 10-9, Friday at the heights. UMass' record is now 4-0 with two games remaining.

UMass jumped off to a quick lead as Dick Cummings burst off tackle for four yards and a score to cap a 60 yard drive midway through the first period. Gagnon's conversion made the score 7-0. Cummings' run was described by frosh coach Dave Kelley as coming on "guts alone" since the 220 pound fullback was running on two sore ankles which have hindered him for the past few games.

Redmen Enjoy The Feeling Of Victory After Five Long Weeks

By PETER PASCARELLI
Assistant Sports Editor

BURLINGTON, VT. - Beating Vermont in football is something UMass has done fairly often and easily the last few years. So Saturday's 49-0 walloping of the Catamounts should not have touched off the emotions it did. However, the Redmen had lost five games in a row and this win must have seemed like the national championship to the beleaguered UMass forces.

Music was blaring and the players were screaming after the win in the visitor's locker room. You had to raise your voice to a shout to be heard. But it was worth the bother to hear this team, which has been continuously set back by injuries and bad luck, savor a much-needed win.

UMass head coach Vic Fusia, who has just barely survived probably the longest five weeks of his life was in spirits no one has seen him for a month. His first reaction was a pleased, "This feels like my first win."

Fusia went on to say, "It's really great to see these young men, who have been down, to come back and win like this. They have stayed right in there after all those defeats."

The UMass mentor did not devise anything especially different for the game. The only variation this week was that everything was working. The Redmen did pass frequently on first down and ran wide most of the time.

Fusia said of these tactics, "We spotted certain things in the Vermont defense that we thought we could exploit. But actually there was nothing new. We've been trying the same things for weeks and just haven't been succeeding."

The Redmen had one new offensive weapon that was much in evidence however; that being wingback Pat Scavone. The speedy sophomore, who had started only one game previously, racked up 156 yards in rushing on only 14 carries and added three pass receptions, while scoring two touchdowns, one on a 55 yard scamper.

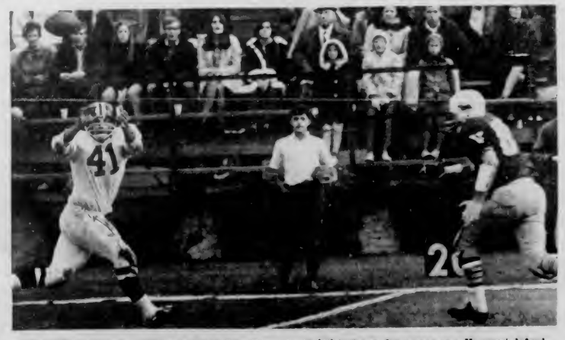
However, Scavone, who will be playing before hometown fans in Worcester next week, gave all the credit to the offensive line. "The blocking w a s unbelievable," he said. "When they clear everyone out of there, all you have to do is just run."

Quarterback Tim Adams who threw for two scores and ran for two more also praised his forward wall saying, "The whole line just blocked great. They made the difference."

Scavone and Adams were talking of Bob Sheehan, Mike Cooney, Dick Donlin, Bruce Fulton and Noel Schablik. Schablik was playing his first game ever at guard in place of the injured Pierre Marchando. He passed his first test well.

Schablik, a senior, said of his new position, "I was a little uncomfortable at first, but as the game went on I felt better."

With the score so lopsided, Fusia was able to give many reserves their first extensive playing time of the year. Possibly the happiest of them all was second line quarterback Ken Hughes, who passed for a score on his first aerial attempt of the year.



The junior said, "I was nervous and of course I was thrilled at throwing for a score, but it felt great just to play."

This sentiment was probably also echoed by Frank Tudryn, Joe Colosi, George Crane, Russ Wood, Charlie Tumminelli, Dick Heavey, Joe Lang, Dave Walsh, Mike Sarowsky and Ed Sapienza, who all were seeing their first action of any length all season.

It was a bright afternoon for the Redmen. Finally putting together a tight, hard-hitting defense and an explosive offense, UMass looked like a different team. An injured Vermont team might have had something to do with it, but UMass could have beaten most any team Saturday.

It's just too bad that last Saturday could not last longer, but as a hastily scrawled "Beat Holy Cross" message so reminded, this week is a new week.

Redman Rantings-Fusia commented on Vermont coach Bob Clifford's injury woes, "I can sympathize with him."..... Steve Rogers did the UMass punting because of a slight leg injury incurred by Nick Warnock...Rogers faked a punt in the second quarter, a move which prompted Fusia to say, "I said last week we would do anything to win"...John MacLean looked like the former fullback he is following his interception...Steve Parnell could have scored twice if it were not for one man on two occasions...Scavone seemed destined not to score as he was nudged out of bounds twice on the one yard line...For the second week in a row, an official nullified a UMass gain with a block...A possible UMass first occurred in the last period as the Redmen used an all Italian defensive backfield of Colosi, Tumminelli and Sapienza...In the "Who's Kidding Who", dept. Vermont quarterback Fran Simpson asked for quiet with 14 seconds left, his team 49 points behind and 1000 people left in the stands... UMass title hopes are still alive with New Hampshire's 27-6 win over Rhode Island...Should UMass defeat UNH and Connecticut lose to Rhode Island, a four way tie will occur...

"Of Course, It's The Last Minute, And It's Really Impossible For Him To Make It, And — And — And ——"

Freshmen Write-ins Unite Under U.F.P.

BY ED SLOAN

As the freshman election for class officers draws near, most students in the class of '72 remain unaware of the date of the election and uninformed about what each of the candidates have to say on issues, if anything at all. The freshman election will take place this Thursday in the Student Union, but still, a large percentage of the freshman class will not vote because of a lack of knowledge about the candidates and their stands on issues. Therefore, many who do vote will be voting on which freshman had the best publicity and advertising methods.

"That's one of the reasons why U.F.P. was formed," says Dennis Cogan, vice-presidential candidate for U.F.P. "We want students to vote for candidates who have ideas and not someone who lives in your dorm and a friend of a friend of a friend has asked you to vote for him. The problem is that no one really knows anything about anyone and so far, the candidates haven't been able to debate each other openly to get their ideas known."

U.F.P. stands for the United Freshman Party which was founded by a group of students who were unable to procure their names on the regular ballot due to a misunderstanding in the deadline date. Therefore, U.F.P.'s candidates are dashing about this week, alerting as many as possible to the existence of U.F.P., the names of U.F.P.'s candidates from president to treasurer, and its party's platform. Their ultimate aim is to make themselves known as a united slate of candidates who have something to say and who will provide freshmen students with an alternative to "shadow candidates" who remain unidentified.

In a pressurized campaign drive "to get their ideas known," U.F.P. has posted leaflets on dormitory walls and bulletin boards with the slate of names of its candidates and a brief outline of the party's platform. To further its efforts and to lessen the degree of impersonalization of electing class officers, U.F.P.'s candidates will meet and hand-shake students outside each of the dining commons in the Southwest, Monday through Wednesday evenings of this week.

What is U.F.P.'s platform? The basic platform calls for -

1) Academic reform
2) Infirmary in the Southwest
3) Abolition of second semester curfew for Freshmen girls
4) Election reform (present system is unfair since all candidates' positions are not expressed)

Who are the U.F.P.'s write-in candidates?

Steve Comack - President
Dennis Cogan - Vice President
Dave Casticone - Senator at large
Steve Effman - Secretary
Scott Smith - Treasurer

HUMPHREY SURGES AHEAD

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Hubert H. Humphrey, surging ahead of Richard M. Nixon Monday in the last public opinion poll of the presidential campaign, made his last personal appearance as a candidate Monday and got one of his best receptions.

Tens of thousands jammed the streets of downtown Los Angeles to greet the Democratic presidential candidate and his running mate, Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, in an old-fashioned ticker-tape parade.

As the motorcade was forming outside Humphrey's hotel, jubilant aides bubbled with advance word of the latest Harris poll, which showed Humphrey ahead of Nixon for the first time since the Democratic National Convention.

The poll gave Humphrey 43 per cent, Nixon 40 and George C. Wallace 13, with 4 per cent undecided.

Humphrey, emphasizing that he was speaking as a candidate and not for the administration, issued a statement chiding the South Vietnamese government for its refusal to take part in the Paris peace talks this week.

"If the Saigon government fails to participate in these discussions in the near future," Humphrey said, "then I, for one, would favor making it clear to that government that we intend to proceed in the negotiations in any case.

"The foreign policy of the United States-and the fate of young Americans in Vietnam-should and will be determined by the president of the United States, and not by any foreign government. That policy, and those young Americans, should not be placed at the mercy of domestic political considerations in another country."

He said this country has kept its word as an ally-and that "we have every right to expect the government of South Vietnam to similarly keep its word."

Humphrey and his entourage were to fly overnight to Minneapolis. The vice president will vote near his home in Waverly; then he plans to rest there for a day or so.

Humphrey, with running mate Sen. Edmund S. Muskie at his side, got best wishes during an election eve telethon Monday night from a former rival, Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy.

The Interfraternity Council will provide transportation for any Amherst resident who wishes to vote in today's Presidential election. Anyone who would like a ride to the Amherst polls, please call the Arcon desk in the Student Union, at 545-2707. The service will continue until the polls close.

Strike South Coast Tornadoes, Twisters

(AP) - Tornadoes, one with winds estimated up to 300 miles per hour, dipped into Mobile, Ala., and Gulfport, Miss., Sunday, injuring at least 21 persons and causing extensive property damage.

No one was reported killed

A twister struck Saraland, Eight-Mile and Bay Minette in the Mobile area slightly after dark. Sixteen persons were treated at local hospitals and of those, two were admitted.

William Tilson, chief meteorologist at the Mobile Weather Bureau estimated the wind velocity of the tornado at about 300 m.p.h.

Protest 'Election Hoax' SDS Conducts Teach-in,

BY RICHARD LANE
Senior Reporter

Students for a Democratic Society last night conducted a teach-in (at the Student Union) with three featured speakers as part of a "rally against the election hoax."

The three speakers were Vernon Grizzard, recently returned from Hanoi with three released U.S. pilots and an organizer with Students for Democratic Society in New England; Tom Bell, a University of Massachusetts graduate student from Springfield and member of the regional staff of SDS; and Bruce Allen of Harvard.

All three speakers made it clear that today's national elections "offer no real choice" at all and that students must unite to "expose the power structure that operates around us, "and prove the election a hoax."

Grizzard spoke first, telling his audience of experiences he encountered while in North Vietnam last summer.

The SDS organizer stated that in his tour of Hanoi, Haiphone and the surrounding countryside the outstanding thing he noticed was that after 3-1/2 years of continual U.S. bombing the North Vietnamese people still had not been broken in their will to fight.

Tom Bell spoke next on the reasons for United States' involvement in Vietnam and the election situation.

"Somebody has interests there," Bell emphasized, but that these interests cannot be identified with the G.I.'s there or the majority of people in America.

Finally Allen addressed the teach-in by telling the youths that "Students alone don't have the power to force the United States out of Vietnam," or any other situation, but must rather "build an alliance."

The Harvard student stated that SDS must affect change and must "want to stand up and fight" against such issues as ROTC and "racism on our own campuses."

Presidential Election Decided Today

WASHINGTON (AP) - The tumultuous 1968 presidential campaign neared its end Monday with the three candidates directing election eve television blitzes at an electorate so divided that Tuesday's voting might elect no president.

The final Harris survey disclosed by the New York Post, gives Humphrey 43 per cent of the vote to 40 per cent for Nixon, a swing of 5 per cent to the Democratic nominee in 24 hours. The next-to-last Harris poll had been the same as the last Gallup Poll-both showing Nixon ahead 42 per cent to Humphrey's 40 percent.

The possibility remains that Wallace would draw enough votes to keep either Nixon or Humphrey from winning outright the 270 Electoral College votes needed to become the nation's 37th president.

As victory predictions flowed from their camps, Nixon and Humphrey were in Los Angeles for two-hour telecasts on competing networks Monday night. Wallace, winding up his campaign deep in Dixie, scheduled half-hour appearances on each of the three national television-radio networks on election eve.

Humphrey's running mate, Sen. Edmund S. Muskie of Maine, joined the Democratic nominee in Los Angeles. The Republican vice presidential nominee, Gov. Spiro T. Agnew of Maryland, campaigned in Charleston, W. Va. and Richmond, Va., while Wallace's partner, retired Gen. Curtis E. LeMay, appeared in Texas, Utah and California.

The presidential contenders will return to their homes to await the election outcome, Humphrey in Waverly, Minn., Nixon in New York and Wallace in Montgomery, Ala.

A turnout of nearly 73 million voters is forecast for Tuesday. This would be about 81 per cent of the nation's registered voters and would top the record of 71 million votes cast in 1964 when President Johnson swept to a landslide victory.

Besides the presidency and vice presidency, all seats in the House of Representatives plus 34 Senate seats are up for election. Voters in 21 states also will elect governors.

Poll-closing hours range from 4 p.m. Tuesday to 2 a.m. EST Wednesday.

While the polls are open, radical students promise demonstrations in big cities across the country.

Some of these same students were responsible for the relentless heckling of candidates during a campaign that revolved around the emotion-charged issues of the war in Vietnam and law and order at home.

An Associated Press survey made before President Johnson halted all bombardment of North Vietnam showed Nixon ahead in 24 states with 216 electoral votes. Humphrey had the lead for 21 electoral votes but was gaining ground in many of the 20 states with 262 electoral votes that were rated as tossups. Wallace was leading in a 39 electorial votes.

The results of two major public opinion polls supported Democratic claims that Humphrey has sliced Nixon's once large lead.

A New York Times survey has listed Nixon as leading in 3 states with 299 electoral votes, Humphrey ahead in eight states and the District of Columbia with 77 electoral votes and Wallace leading in five states with 45 electoral votes. Seven states with 117 electoral votes were rated by the Times as too close to call.

If none of the candidates gets the required 270 electoral votes, the choice of a president could be thrown into the House of Representatives for the first time in 144 years.

But many observers believe that switches among the electors in the days and weeks following an inconclusive election would settle the issue without recourse to the House. The electors cast their votes in their own states Dec. 16.

Nixon has challenged Humphrey to join in asking that the presidency go to the national popular-vote leader if no one gets an Electoral College majority. But Humphrey has said he prefers to let the constitutional system operate with the House deciding the winner.

Nixon has insisted there must be no bargain with Wallace, who rose to power in Alabama as a militant segregationist. But the former Alabama governor has claimed Republicans in some undesignated states have been sounding out his backers about possible Electoral College support for Nixon.

A state-by-state AP survey last week indicated Democrats would control the next House, but by a slimmer margin than their present 245 to 187 edge.

But this would not insure that Humphrey would win any election thrown into the House since each state would have one vote, regardless of its size, and a clear majority of 26 is required to elect. Because close races, control of several state delegations remains a question mark. In addition, 85 House candidates given a good chance of winning have indicated they would support the popular-vote winner, regardless of party.

The Senate would select the vice president if the Electoral College didn't. And Democrats are favored to keep control of the Senate, though perhaps by a narrower margin than their present 63-37 grip.

The 1968 race for the White House, besides being one of the most turbulent campaigns in recent political history, will go down in the books as one of the most expensive.

Democratic aides said about $12 million is being spent in behalf of the Humphrey-Muskie ticket. Estimates of the outlay for Wallace and LeMay range from $10 million to $20 million.

Estimates on over-all general election campaign spending at all levels run as high as $25 million.

To these totals must be added another $30 to $35 million which these candidates and their unsuccessful opponents spent prior to the nominating conventions.

Gen. LeMay Would Resume Bombing

SANTA ANA, Calif (AP) - Vice presidential candidate Curtis LeMay said Monday he would resume bombing of North Vietnam immediately "if I were in control."

"They don't think we have the will to win the war," the running mate of George C. Wallace told newsmen at the Orange County Airport after flying here from San Antonio, Tex., via Provo, Utah.

LeMay, said, "I have been pessimistic all along about the results of the bombing halt in Vietnam. We have had eight or nine halts before and they didn't do any good."

Wallace Appeals To Native South

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) - George Wallace ended his third party campaign for the presidency Monday, appealing to voters in his native South and declaring that on election eve the race is between himself and Richard Nixon.

"I appeal to you from the soul of the South," Wallace told a crowd of about 6,000 persons gathered in warm autumn sunshine in front of Georgia's state Capitol.

He called on Southern voters to reject the candidates of both the Democratic and Republican parties, which he said "have used the South as a doormat for the past 100 years."

But Wallace concentrated most of his fire on Nixon, declaring that Democratic candidate Hubert Humphrey is out of the running.

"If you want to beat Mr. Humphrey, you can beat him with anybody because he's out of the race for president," Wallace said, and asked: "What difference is there in Richard Milhouse Nixon and Hubert Humphrey as far as Georgia is concerned."

Wallace ending a run for the nation's highest office which began when he qualified for the California ballot on Jan. 2, spoke from a platform set up at the base of a statue of Thomas E. Watson, the Georgia Populist who ran for president as a third-party candidate in 1904.

He was introduced by Georgia's Democratic Gov. Lester Maddox, who told the crowd, " A vote for Nixon is a vote for Humphrey, or a vote for Humphrey is a vote for Nixon."

While Maddox was speaking a parade of about 2,000 Nixon supporters marched into the crowd. Parade leaders released a cluster of ballons which carried aloft a sign reading, "Below this balloon lies HHH's only chance."

The Nixon supporters remained directly in front of the platform throughout Wallace's speech, waving Nixon signs, and signs which said, "Wallace votes are HHH's only chance."

Wallace, who was accompanied on his last campaign appearance by his mother, Mrs. Mozelle Smith Wallace, flew from Atlanta to Montgomery, where he will await the results of Tuesday's balloting.

He will vote in his hometown of Clayton, Ala., about 5 miles from the Albama capital city.

R.F. Kennedy Living Memorial To Be 'Catalyst for Change'

McLEAN, Va. (CPS) – Hickory Hill, the late Robert Kennedy's estate in this Washington suburb, looks sad and deserted, its pumpkin patch going untended this fall.

For one day this week Hickory Hill came alive with the old Kennedy clan and reporters. Friends of the family and former staff members of the late senator gathered on the lawn behind the huge house.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy called everybody together to announce the formation of the Robert F. Kennedy Memorial, a foundation designed as a living "action-oriented" tribute and a catalyst for social change.

Specific plans and goals have not yet been agreed upon, but one of the first undertakings may very well be dealt with college students.

The memorial, with an initial $10 million endowment raised through public subscription, will act as an instrument for identifying pressing needs which are not being met by existing institutions and as a catalyst to focus new resources and talents on those problems.

It will not itself operate any continuing programs, but will seek to stimulate action, helping groups obtain financing, ideas, and community support.

The foundation will pay particular attention to tapping the "dynamic idealism" of young people, Sen. Kennedy said.

One of the memorial's seven executive committee members is Sam Brown, youth coordinator of Sen. Eugene McCarthy's campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination. Another is John Lewis of the Student Non-violent Coordinating Committee (SNCC). Robert S. McNamara, president of the World Bank and former Secretary of Defense, is chairman.

IFC To Sponsor Info. Table

The Interfraternity Council has announced that it is sponsoring a Greek Information Table in the Student Union in front of the Bookstore. Representatives from the fraternity system will be present from Monday until Friday to answer questions anyone may have regarding fraternities or any aspect of fraternity life.

Charles Ratner, PMD, Special Events Chairman for IFC, stated, "One of the biggest problems on this campus is the lack of communication between Greeks and non-Greeks. We hope to be able to solve a little of this problem this week through the use of this Information Table".

A model of the forthcoming Fraternity-Sorority Park is available for observation and comment. Literature on fraternity life, history, and goals is also available to any persons interested.

Fine Performance By String Quartet

Last evening's performance by the Juilliard String Quartet left the listener with a great feeling of satisfaction. Rarely does a group of this caliber perform on the UMass campus, but even more rare was the good attendance at the concert. The Juilliard Quartet, in most listener's opinions, now occupies the place held by the Budapest Quartet of 25 years ago.

Last evening was the first of three appearnaces in Bowker Auditorium this year. The performers are the quartet in residence at the Juilliard School of Music and the Library of Congress in Washington, D.C. Members of the group include Robert Mann, violin; Earl Carlyss, violin; Raphael Hillyer, viola; and Claus Adam, cello. During the performance, they were seated around a floor lamp, giving the recital the flavor of the string quartet in the times of Haydn or Beethoven, when such types of music were played in the living room rather than in the concert hall.

The program opened with the "Quartet in G Major, Op. 76, No. 1" by Haydn. This is a four-movement piece, of which the "allegro con spirito" is most exciting. The "adagio sostenuto" was certainly the most beautiful, as the phrasing was smooth yet exact, while the cello's sonorous tones gave the movement depth not realized in the other movements.

Most impressive was the blend constantly present from which the solo instrument would rise for a few measures only to be lost when another would take the lead. The "presto" in the Haydn seemed to present much trouble for the group, however. Embellishments were sloppy, the whole movement seemed to be taken too fast, especially for Mr. Adam (cello), and throughout the concert Robert Mann seemed to be working too hard. He was certainly the most expressive player, and no doubt his constant motion kept many awake during the Haydn and the Beethoven.

Bartok's "Third Quartet" (1927) is more in line of the Quartet's forte. This, too, is a four-movement piece, but played without a pause between movements. The entire piece is written as a movement of a typical classical symphony would be written: two thematic statements (movements I and II), recapitulation of the first movement (movement III), and a coda (movement IV). But similarity to classical music ended here. The strings were bowed, plucked, strummed, played with the wooden stick of the bow, and practically torn off the instruments-not a typical for Bartok. Glissandi and dissonance were prevalent throughout.

The audience enjoyed the work, although it sounded like someone trying to tune an AM radio during a thunder storm, or, as another listener put it: "It sounds like sick little cats." Technically, the quartet played it close to perfect - the most exciting of the three works on the program.

Administrators Seized By Calif. Students

LOS ANGELES (AP) - About 300 white and Negro students seized the administration building at San Fernando Valley State College for about four hours Monday. Several youths with knives held about 3 administrators - including the college president - prisoner.

The demonstrators finally freed the administrators and their secretaries and left the building. One said it was because they heard police were coming.

Paul Blomgren, the president, went directly to another room and met with leaders of the student group. There was no word of their specific demands.

About six uniformed officers entered the building after the students filed out . There was no confrontation.

The demonstration on the 18, 300-student campus grew out of a protest of U. S. presidential candidates, and school policies which students called racist. The school's enrollment includes about 200 Negroes.

The demonstrators with whom Blomgren met included leaders of the campus Black Student Union, Students for Democratic Society and plainclothes police.

When the demonstrators walked out a back door of the building in single file, they shielded their faces from newsmen and refused to make any statements.

The Student Union will be open until 1 A.M. Tuesday for election results via color TV.

New England Will Choose New Legislature, Governors

BOSTON (AP) - New Englanders, in addition to helping elect a president Tuesday, will choose three U.S. senators, 25 congressmen and three governors.

More than 80 per cent of the 5,655,000 registered voters in the six states are expected to cast ballots.

Democratic presidential nominee Hubert H. Humphrey is favored to carry Massachusetts and Rhode Island for 18 of the region's 37 electoral votes. His Republican rival, Richard E. Nixon is expected to take Vermont and New Hampshire for seven electoral votes.

Rated as tossups are Maine, despite being the home of Democratic vice presidential nominee Edmund Muskie, with four electoral votes, and Connecticut with eight.

Voters in all six states also will be electing members to their legislatures. Massachusetts and Maine are the only states in the region without statewide contests.

U. S. senators seeking re-election are George D. Aiken, R-Vt.; Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn.; and Norris Cotton, R-N.H.

Aiken and Vermont's only congressman, Rep. Robert T. Stafford, a Republican, are assured of returning to office. Both won the Republican and Democratic primary nominations and are unopposed Tuesday.

Ribicoff, a former governor and U. S. secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, is solidly favored to defeat his Republican opponent, former Rep. Edwin H. May Jr.

Sen. Cotton is favored in New Hampshire to defeat Democratic Gov. John W. King, who won an unprecidented three consecutive two-year terms in the governor's mansion.

The gubernatorial races are in Rhode Island, Vermont and New Hampshire.

John H. Chafee, a Republican, is a solid favorite to win a fourth consecutive two-year term as Rhode Island's governor. His opponent is Frank R. Licht, a Democrat and former state judge.

Seeking to succeed Vermont's Gov. Philip H. Hoff, a Democrat who decided not to run again, are Deane C. Davis, a Republican and board chairman of the National Life Insurance Co, and Lt. Gov. John J. Daley, a Democrat. Davis is expected to win.

New Hampshire also is expected to elect a Republican governor, Walter R. Peterson, who now is speaker of the House in the state legislature. His opponent is Hillsboro County Atty. Emile R. Bussiere, a Democrat.

In general, the incumbent congressmen are favored to win new two-year terms.

Four of the 12 in Massachusetts, two Republicans and two Democrats, are unopposed. Speaker of the U. S. House, John W. McCormack, 75-year-old Democrat is opposed by Alan C. Freeman, 39, a Negro interior decorator and a Republican.

The Bay State delegation now is seven to five in favor of the Democrats, but three races, in particular, may change that. Democratic incumbent Philip J. Philbin, has two opponents , former Republican Rep. Laurence Curtis, '75, and State Rep. Chandler H. Stevens Jr., an independent.

Rep. Torbert H. Macdonald, a Democrat, is in a contest with Republican William S. Abbott, and Republican Rep. Margaret M. Heckler is going against Bristol County Dist. Atty. Edmund Dinis, a Democrat.

Democrats are expected to maintain majorities in both branches of the Massachusetts Legislature. Republicans now have 14 of the Senate sets and 69 of the seats in the House.

Nixon Reports Supplies Moved

LOS ANGELES (AP) – Richard M. Nixon said Monday night he had a "very disturbing report" that "millions of tons of supplies are being moved over the Ho Chi Minh trail" into South Vietnam.

The Republican presidential candidate told an election eve telethon that the report came from an Air Force general he did not identify. He did not elaborate.

Replying to questions telephoned to a studio in suburban Burbank from all over the nation, he also said that President Johnson took advice from a what Nixon called a "tired" team of diplomats in ordering a halt to bombing of North Vietnam.

Nixon pledged that if the war isn't ended by Jan. 1 "I am going to bring in a new diplomatic team and they will end the war."

Earlier Nixon had predicted he will run three to five million votes ahead of Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey in Tuesday's voting, saying a Democratic victory could mean "diplomatic disaster" in Vietnam.

He said he puts little faith in a poll that showed Humphrey, the Democratic candidate, ahead of him by three percentage points.

Nixon said, "I think President Johnson went into the bombing halt with good intentions, but "the president was relying on an old team. . .well intentioned men, but they are tired."

Nixon at one point strongly defended his vice presidential running mate, Gov. Spiro T. Agnew of Maryland, saying he "has been the subject of some pretty vicious attacks by the opposition." He said Agnew is a courageous man who "doesn't wilt under fire."

He pledged anew to provide enough arms to Israel to protect that nation from aggression, saying war in the Middle East could explode into a nuclear war and for that reason it is to the interest of world peace that Israel defend itself.

Nixon made his victory prediction in a visit to his campaign headquarters on a day when the polls showed Humphrey moving up.

Polls Are Bombed In Puerto Rico

SAN JUAN, P.R. (AP) - Police went on special election alert Monday after fires swept two polling places, a terrorist bomb damaged a Texaco pipeline, a business location was razed by a mysterious fire and 8 guns and hundreds of rounds of ammunition were reported stolen from a sporting goods store.

But a police announcement said there was no evidence the incidents were connected and that voters could go to the polls Tuesday assured of full protection from any possible terrorist attacks.

The island votes for governor and mayor of San Juan as well as other Commonwealth offices.

The bombing of the Texaco pipeline near Catano occurred in the predawn darkness Monday. A 24-year-old reported seen running from the scene before the blast was taken into custody.

Earlier this year, U.S.-owned businesses and property were heavy damaged by terrorist bombs and fires. A group calling itself the Armed Commandoes for Liberation has claimed responsibility for the attacks.

Wallace Cannot Break Possible Election Tie

A 9-year -old law could prevent George Wallace from choosing the next president in the event of a deadlock in the Electoral College, Paul Freund, a Harvard professor and leading authority on constitutional law said Monday.

It has been suggested that the former Alabama governor could break such a deadlock by throwing his electoral votes to either Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey or Richard M. Nixon if neither receives the needed 270 votes for victory.

But Freund says the 1878 law passed as the result of the Hayes-Tilden deadlock in 1878-places in Congress "the final say whether to honor an electoral vote cast for a candidate other than the candidate of his party."

He said any changes in electoral votes would have to be accepted by both houses of Congress. In addition, he said, any voting changes by members of the Electoral College could be challenged in court.

Past defections have gone unchallenged because their votes were not vital for victory, Freund said.

Freund said the law provides a procedure for challenge of the electoral votes before joint session of Congress. In the present case it would be on Jan. 6, 1969. Any vote not regularly made in any state can be challenged by a congressman or senator.

If the challenge is upheld and the switchover votes are not honored, "then it is possible that the electoral vote will revert to what it was on election night," Freund said.

"Because it would still be deadlocked the House of Representatives would then select the president and the Senate would select the vice president."

ATTENTION CENTERED ON STATE ELECTIONS

The liberal Democrat opposing Javits is Paul O'Dwyer, a zealous supporter of Sen. Eugene McCarty. He is given very little chance of upsetting Javits. A large voter turnout would really hurt his chances, since Javit's support is widespread. His liberal stands appeal to many, even some Democrats. Neither a large Nixon vote nor a large Humphrey showing would help anti-administration O'Dwyer.

In the 5th Congressional District of New York State, the area that includes Long Island and South Nassau County, Allard K. Lowenstein is the Democratic nominee for the House of Representatives. Another McCarthy supporter, he is an attorney, and moved to the area expressly to run for Congress. He is given only a fair chance to win because he is a Democrat in traditionally Republican territory.

Other observers say McGovern's differences with the Johnson administration and the rest of the Democratic Establishment are viewed favorably by most voters, since South Dakota is traditionally Republican.

Despite his slump in popularity after Chicago, McGovern--his billboards call him a "Courageous Prairie Statesman"--will likely win this crucial fight contrasting national and provincial issues.

In the Senate, two of the most outspoken critics of President Johnson's Vietnam policies, Wayne Morse and J. W. Fulbright, are also up for re-election.

Fulbright, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, is opposed by Charles J. Bernard, a wealthy but unknown businessman from Earle, Arkansas.

An upset is not ruled out in the Oregon race, but Morse is considered a likely winner over Republican Robert W. Packwood, a state representative.

One bad sign is Morse's showing in his primary. He ran the closest race of his long career, sneaking past a supporter of the Johnson Administration.

Packwood thinks the U.S. should "leave" Vietnam and is concerned that the South Vietnam government is not doing its share.

Education has been a key issue in the gubernatorial race in Vermont where Gov. Philip H. Hoff is being challenged by Republican Deane C. Davis for failing to support state aid to education.

Denied Fair Trial Dr. Spock Contends

BOSTON AP - Dr. Benjamin Spock, the pediatrician convicted June 14 of conspiring to counsel young men to avoid the draft, will contend in his appeal that when he spoke against the draft he was using "constitutionally protected speech."

Allan R. Rosenberg, representing the 65-year-o ld baby doctor, made this point Monday in a statement of issues filed with the U.S. Court of Appeals.

Spock and three other men, including the Rev. William Sloane Coffin Jr., 43, chaplain of Yale University, were convicted by an all-male federal district court jury that deliberated seven hours and 2 minutes. Each was sentenced to two years in jail.

In addition, Judge Francis J. W. Ford, 85, fined Spock, Coffin and Mitchell Goodman, 44, of Temple, Maine, $5.000 each, and Michael Ferber, 23, a Harvard graduate student, $1,000. The sentences were stayed pending appeals, and bail continued at $1,000 for each defendant.

Rosenberg, an associate of Leonard B. Boudin, who represented Spock at the trial, contended in his statement of issues that there was no evidence of conspiracy between Spock and the other defendants.

He also maintained there should have been a ruling in the district court on the legality of the Vietnam war. Additionally, Rosenberg alleged that the trial court was guilty of prejudice in its rulings on evidence and its charge to the jury.

The statement contended Spock was denied his rights to a fair trial under Fifth and Sixth Amendments to the U.S. Constitution.

'68 UMass Graduate Joins Peace Corps

William S. Tilley, a graduate of UMass class of '68, has recently been named a Peace Corps Volunteer after completing 12 weeks of training in Hilo, Hawaii and two weeks of orientation in Malaysia.

Steve, the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Tilley of Chevy Chase, Maryland, is one of 24 Volunteers who will participate in the Malaysian effort to detect and control tuberculosis. The Volunteers will act as public health case workers, organizing disease detection and vaccination drives. A few Volunteers will work as lab technicians and help train Malaysian co-workers in the tuberculosis laboratory in Kota Kinabulu, the capital of the Malaysian state of Sabah.

During their training, emphasis was placed on technical studies and language. The Volunteers also studied the history and culture of Malaysia.

The Volunteers' arrival in October brought the total number of Peace Corps workers to 550 in Malaysia.

Local Strike Support for Grape Workers

BY DONNA WADSWORTH
Staff Reporter

At a recruiting meeting of the Grape Workers Support Committee last night, sponsored by the Martin Luther King, Jr. Social Action Council, chairman Dan Weir said, "The groundwork must be laid now to find out what California grape products under non-union labels are being sold in this area."

The committee is the result of a three-year strike by west coastworkers against vineyard owners in a protest against low wages and unfavorable working conditions. The workers, who had been non-union, organized into a union which the owners refused to recognize.

Gil Salk, Interim Executive Secretary of the King Council, said that the first logical step for the UMass workers was to ask local merchants to stop buying California grape products. Volunteers were assigned to speak with the managers of Louie's Foods and the Stop and Shop store in Amherst.

Salk said that although the strike has received little press coverage in the East, it has become more important during the past year. Salk spoke of "good union management relations in honoring a strike elsewhere."

Reagan Threatens Regent Control Over University Of California

"I intend to propose that the Regents take over this University. It's now or never. Our asses are to the wall."

Those were the words of California Governor Ronald Reagan after he had pushed his way through a crowd of several hundred students to reach a closed session of the University of California Regents, meeting on the University campus at Santa Cruz. He was speaking to another Regent, but was overheard by a reporter.

That afternoon Reagan made good his threat, proposing an eight-point plan that would have stripped the university faculty of virtually all their power and put the Regents in complete charge.

Most of the Regents wanted to avoid the confrontation they knew this would create, and they voted 13-8 that his motion was out of order. Earlier they voted 14-7, again over Reagan's objections, to delay until their Nov. 22 meeting any more action on the course being taught by Black Panther leader Eldridge Cleaver of Berkeley.

After the meeting, Reagan angrily denounced the Regents for "failing their responsibilities to the people of California," and said he might have to call for an investigation of the university "either by the legislature or by a committee of private citizens."

The Regents' failure to take any action on the Cleaver course was expected to provoke an angry student reaction at Berkeley, but when students met Sunday night to decide what to do, only about 200 showed up, and by the end of the meeting there were less than 100 people in the room. Only about 40 said they would participate in a sit-in. After debating several proposals for more than two hours they voted to adjourn.

Students appear to be mollified by the fact that the course is going ahead as planned on campus and that the faculty is even finding ways of giving credit for it as independent study. The Regents' meeting itself saw almost continuous demonstrations worked by university students, mostly from the Santa Cruz campus. There were more than 1,000 students involved in the demonstrations; Santa Cruz has 2,600. The students are making three main demands on the Regents:

--Rescind their September 20 resolution denying credit for any course which has more than one appearance by an outside lecturer and specifically denying credit to the Cleaver course.

--Put the University on record in support of the California grape boycott and order that no action be taken against the 11 Mexican-American students who were arrested earlier in the week for taking over University President Charles Hitch's Berkeley office.

--Establish a College of Malcolm X at Santa Cruz to "teach the black experience."

When Reagan arrived Friday morning he was greeted by a 25-foot sign saying "Mental patience for Reagan".

At 1:45 p.m. the Regents meeting began in a room packed with students. President Hitch dismissed of two of the Santa Cruz students' three demands quickly. He said he planned to meet the Mexican-American students Monday to deal with the grape strike and that the Regents would consider the Malcolm X College proposal as soon as there was a formal proposal drawn up.

That brought the Regents back to the Cleaver course. The Regents' Committee on Educational Policy has already agreed to meet the faculty representatives to discuss the Cleaver issue. President Hitch urged that the Regents defer action until those discussions could be held.

Reagan said he was angry because the course was going ahead on university property with Cleaver giving more than one lecture and because the faculty had voted to take "appropriate steps" to get credit for the course.

President Hitch responded that neither he nor Berkeley Chancellor Roger Heyns would permit credit to be given for the course. He said the Regents' earlier resolution had not prohibited use of university property.

He added that passage of Reagan's resolution "at this time would have a disastrous effect on the university." The Regents then voted 13-8 to declare the motion out of order.

As Reagan and Rafferty tried to leave they were surrounded by about 250 students chanting "shame, shame," surrounded by his body guards.

Original Songs Featured At Recent Folk Festival

Hampden Commons came alive Saturday night with the sounds of the "Hello Friend" Folk Society's third festival this semester. An audience of several hundred enjoyed the candle lit coffee and cider atmosphere, and the quality live entertainment offered at the Commons. Later, Saturday evening, portions of the folk fest were made available to its listening audience by WMUA on the Joe Conley Night Ride program.

Pete Ward, a former UMass student MCed, singing his own material which included 'UMass Talking Blues', a satire of life in Umie land. Dan Martin, a freshman and founder of the "Hello Friend" Folk Society, greeted the audience with his poem "Hello Friend." Many of the performers were UMass students. And, a surprising number sang and played their own original material.

The "Hello Friend" Folk Society is an independent campus organization which makes available to the public quality amateur folk art. "Hello Friend" will conduct workshops for those members of the Society who wish to improve their style and performance capabilities. New members are continually being sought from the four college area. Anyone, who plays, sings, or recites poetry or who would be willing to help on refreshments, lighting, or advertising is urged to call the Southwest Master's Office at 545-1550.

The next folk festival will be held on Friday and Saturday nights, Nov. 15 and 16. Eventually the Society plans to conduct exchanges with other campus folk groups. Preliminary plans are in the making for trips to Smith College and possibly the University of Rhode Island as well as several other out-of-state colleges.

Clash Reported Between Arabs and Jews

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) - Israeli and Egyptian warplanes clashed Sunday over the Suez Canal area, for the second time in two weeks. Each side claimed its pilots scored on the other and then returned safely to base.

A military communique issued in Cairo said "one enemy plane was hit and exploded in the air" when patrolling Egyptian fighters engaged four Israeli planes it described as attempting to violate Egyptian air space over the canal.

A spokesman for Israeli's army in Tel Aviv said Israeli fighters chased off two Egyptian MIG21 jets that flew into Sinai and one was giving off smoke as it fled back across the canal. He reported no Israeli planes were hit in the brief dogfight.

The first such aerial action between Israeli and Egyptian fighters since the Middle East war of June 5-10, 1967, developed Oct. 22. The Egyptians declared then they shot down two Israeli planes. Israeli authorities denied it.

SDT Wins Contest

The winners of the Halloween Picture Painting contest on the front of the Student Union were chosen last Thursday. The Special Events Committee announced that first prize was awarded to Sigma Delta Tau sorority, second prize to the painting done by the Off Campus Commuters, and the third prize to Crabtree Dormitory. The winners were awarded Student Union Food Service gift certificates.

The Mad Rush

The University of Massachusetts has more than doubled its enrollment in the past ten years. In another ten years it will again double its enrollment. Buildings on campus seem to have been conjured up out of swamp gases, and the University catalog cannot keep up with the production of new undergraduate fields of study. Every year seems to add at least a couple of new areas of doctoral study. There seems to be no end to expansion.

The time must soon come when this University will have to call a temporary halt to its massive plans for expansion. The University and its related community must stop and re-evaluate its position, both in the classroom and in the world. It cannot advance into the seventies without first taking a good look at what has happened in the sixties.

What must be done? The students and administration must take a good look at the faculty. It's time to get rid of the dead wood, and time to reward those who are of proven value. The faculty and students must also evaluate the administration in the same way. And, the faculty and administration must evaluate the students. And, of course, each group must evaluate itself and its role, both in the University and in the world.

The University must reestablish its priorities. Which is more important -- another new 5000 student residential area or a concert hall that will seat at least half of the students already here? Or should a library come first, or perhaps salary increases?

In the usual "rat-race" of a university one cannot have the time necessary to achieve what may seem to be the impossible. It is time for a "proclamation of re-evaluation." A week, or perhaps a month in which to reaccess the sixties, and to establish priorities for the seventies. The University needs a time for a purge of past "hang-ups" -- a time without classes, without the day to day grind. And, hopefully, we, the University, will be able to see a future in the mad rush of expansion.

"Now To Choose Among The Men Who Chose These Men"

Inside Report:

The Southern Republican Crises

BY ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

ATLANTA--A preview of election Day in Negro precincts here was given last week when Rep. Fletcher Thompson, Atlanta's 43-year-old freshman Republican Congressman, paid a disastrous visit to the West Side Voters League.

The club is a remnant of the old black Republican establishment which used to deliver Atlanta's Negro vote to the Grand Old Party, but there is not much Republican about it today. Thompson was peppered by hostile questions, zeroing in on his vote to unseat Adam Clayton Powell. Flustered, he blurted out irrelevantly that one Negro teacher transferred to his daughter's school was unqualified.

In sharp contrast was the warm reception given moments later to Thompson's Democratic opponent-Charles Weltner, the 40-year-old liberal seeking the seat he gave up in 1966 rather than run with white supremacist Gov. Lester Maddox. Weltner was clearly among friends on the West Side.

The Thompson-Weltner race provides another sign of how Southern Republicans have squandered their Negro voting legacy. Although nearly 60 percent of Georgia's Negroes supported Richard M. Nixon in 1960, the black Georgia Republican is nearing extinction. Weltner is shooting for 95 percent of the Negro vote (comprising 30 percent of the district's voters). If he gets it and if the Negro turnout is large, Thompson will be defeated.

This ill-timed loss of the Southern Negro's vote at the moment when he has been given the franchise is but half of a Republican crisis in the Deep South. The other half is the failure of the Republicans to win the white rural and blue-collar votes from segregationist Democrats and the Wallace movement.

Thus, four years after the illusory Goldwater sweep in the Deep South, Republican prospects throughout the region are grim. With Negroes firmly attached to the national Democratic party and lower-income whites sticking with Wallace and local Democrats, the Republicans could become a country-club party.

The prognosis in Georgia is particularly unfavorable. George Wallace is almost sure to carry the state today. Sen. Herman Talmadge, the Southern-style Democrat running a front-porch campaign against a poorly financed Republican, will win easily. The state's eight Democratic Congressmen, keeping far away from the Humphrey-Muskie ticket, are firmly entrenched. Moreover, Wallace's post-election plans are especially menacing to the Republicans. If Wallace's Georgia chieftans run a full slate of candidates in the 1970 elections as they envision, the Republicans may be shut out not only from the black vote but from the anti-black vote.

Wallaceites are planning a candidate to run for Governor in 1970 to succeed Maddox (who is barred from succeeding himself). A possibility: Maddox's wife. Such a ploy would all but kill Republican chances for power in the statehouse and perhaps elect former Gov. Carl Sanders, a national Democrat.

But the surest sign of a Republican decline would be a loss by Thompson to Weltner.

Since his election in 1966, Thompson, influenced by his large Negro constituency, has been evolving into a progressive Republican by Southern standards. Endorsed by the liberal Ripon Society, he has unequivocally supported Nixon for President rather than play footsie with Wallace, as have most of his Southern colleagues.

Thompson is working hard for a sliver of the Negro vote--conferring privately last weekend with Negro Republican clergymen at Paschals Motel on the West Side to try to organize a last-minute campaign for black support.

But Weltner, a charismatic figure in the black community, revered for his 1964 vote for the civil rights bill, has vastly more influence with Atlanta's Negroes than some Republican preachers.

Moreover, Thompson himself, must share the blame for the Goldwater lunacy which discarded a century-old birthright. When he announced for the state senate that year, Thompson identified himself firmly as a foe of civil rights--an identification Weltner does not let Negro audiences forget.

If Thompson loses, the remaining hope for Republican growth in Georgia would be a switch by conservative Democratic Congressmen to the Republican party in January--a possibility under secret negotiation. Such a mass conversion of Dixiecrats, while alleviating immediate Republican problems, scarcely points toward making the party a progressive instrument of the New South.

Vote-Paulson

There are four prominent men vying for the office of the Presidency of The United States - Humphrey, Nixon, Wallace, and Paulsen. What? What's that last guy's name? Paulsen? Yes, Pat Paulsen.

Who else has been such an unflinching supporter of ambiguity. Pat Paulsen has created a vast unserious following. This is true. But his ambiguity on issues has the latency to entice a large serious following. If the other candidates can do no better than stir up wide unrest because of their specific stands on the dire issues of this nation, then a man with an acknowledged feeling of uncertainty of the problems could seriously take the forefront of the presidential campaign.

Pat Paulsen is this man. He is one person who does not understand the issues. And he is willing to admit it. Such sincerity by a candidate can only arouse admiration from the people. He can certainly assuage major factions because of his uncertainties. For example, there was Napoleon. His determination to unite Europe into one confederation was unassailable, but the way he was to bring the conquest about was still the Homeric question. The pattern of these two outstanding men is amazingly alike. Both made the way up in their respective fields by long, hard, and above-average work. The parallel is, without doubt, noteworthy.

But, unlike his parallel, he is able to expound one night a week to the nation on the inadequacies of the other candidates. His satirical mood on the campaign trail makes him undoubtedly a unique man not just in the United States, but in world political history. His keen perception of the inadequacies of the other candidates in their drive to pick up votes is a worthy approach in the political arena. This just goes to prove that past political experience is not necessary to become President. The all-important competency and rationale lie within. Pat Paulsen has these qualities.

Having been the only true realist throughout the campaign, he has not promised anything. He knows that he consciously cannot. Indeed Paulson has been the only presidential candidate in history to place realism, and not idealism as his guide to the White House.

Pat Paulson will be the next President of the United States.

Conclusion:

The Death Penalty A Scientific Analysis

By GEORGE KISER and STEVE ROBL

4. IS THE DEATH PENALTY A LESSER FINANCIAL BURDEN ON THE TAXPAYERS THAN IS IMPRISONMENT?

Death penalty advocates commonly advance two financial arguments in support of their position:

a. It costs less to execute than to imprison a convicted murderer.

b. Taxpayers should not be asked to use the more expensive method of dealing with such offenders.

Research suggests a high probability that execution is more expensive than imprisonment. Maintenance of the death penalty is very expensive. For example, it has been estimated that the execution of Caryl Chessman cost the state of California over a half-million dollars. Figures released by the California Department of Corrections indicate that abolition of capital punishment in that state would save the taxpayers $150,244 in administrative costs alone over a six-year period.

Sen. Mark Hatfield of Oregon has stated that one of his basis reasons for opposing the death penalty is its "great cost to the taxpayers."

Some of the basic elements in the high cost of the death penalty are:

a. It is more difficult and time-consuming to draw a jury in a death penalty case. Generally, more potential jurors are examined, frequently over 1,000 to select a jury panel of 12.

b. The cases last longer, in part, because all persons sentenced to death in the United States have an automatic right to appeal the case. "These appeals are complicated, technically involved, and often lasting for years...all at great expense to the state."

c. The administrative costs of maintaining a death row are high.

The financial burdens on the taxpayers resulting from imprisonment are diminished somewhat by the fact that most prisoners earn some of their own maintenance by working in the prison. And in most cases they could do even more to pay their own way if responsible officials would make more work available.

The old assumption that the presence of the death penalty lessons the financial burden of taxpayers is not supported by research. Some evidence exists that imprisonment at the present time is less expensive than execution and could be made still less expensive if officials made it possible for prisoners to work longer hours than is now the practice.

In short, the highly desirable consequences long claimed for the death penalty are contradicted in every case by scientific research. It is our hope that no Massachusett's voter will waste his franchise this fall by basing his vote on mythological assumptions while ignoring the findings of science. Americans have generally accepted the findings of science in field after field. And this has paid off well. It has made us the greatest urban, industrial nation on earth. However, we have been more reluctant to accept scientific findings in the realm of human relationships. If human relationships in the United States are to move forward to the same extent that we have industrially, we will have to substitute facts for our ancient misconceptions. There is no better time to heed this admonition than now, and no better pursuit than the effort to be a logical voter.

Speak Out

The 'President's Cup' Race

PRE-RACE ACTION:

Richard Nixon rolls his car onto the California Freeway for a test run, and it falls apart. Nixon decides to rebuild his old car.

George Wallace wins the Alabama "Governor's Cup" race, driving his car while hiding underneath the back seat.

Nelson Rockefeller says his team must win the race at any cost--he sends out George Romney. Romney is promised support from all sides, but ends up supplying his own car--a 1956 Rambler.

Eugene McCarthy takes a tire from the Johnson pit crew, and announces that he will be in the race himself.

Richard Nixon announces that his car has been completely rebuilt at the cost of $75 million dollars--for a paint job.

George Wallace unveils his car, which is to be pulled by fifty slaves.

Richard Nixon unveils the powerplant for his car--a hot-air engine.

QUALIFYING TRIALS
(New Hampshire Track):

On the first curve, the Johnson car is badly dented as it runs into the McCarthy tire, and the race must be stopped. The flagman puts out the red flag, and is run over by George Wallace.

The Johnson car is out, and is replaced by the Humphrey-mobile. Johnson gives Humphrey his place--37 laps behind the others.

THE FINAL RACE:

The flag is dropped--to half mast--and the race is on. Nixon steers his car straight down the white line, while Wallace steers to the right, and runs over the black asphalt. Curtis LeMay sits on Wallace's car and throws bombs at the audience. Spiro Agnew tells Italian jokes over the P.A. System.

Meanwhile, Hubert Humphrey is back at the starting line, trying to start his car. Edmund Muskie goes out to borrow another car, and is soon ahead of Humphrey.

As Nixon comes to the first curve, he gets out and lets his engineers drive. Wallace gets out and starts telling the audience that he is ahead. Humphrey comes running up and asks for some hot air to put in his car, but Wallace uses only white gas.

Humphrey goes back and finally gets his car started, but is told by his advisers to be careful, and not to drive too fast.

Meanwhile, Muskie is chasing Agnew around the track, while Agnew keeps on with his Polish jokes. Nixon decides that Agnew is causing too much trouble, and tries to hide him with a smokescreen.

Agnew threatens to take away his whitewalls if Nixon doesn't stop.

Humphrey has broken down again, and gets out to push his car. Nixon gets worried about this, and asks for Wallace's laps, in return for California. Wallace doesn't hear him, because LeMay is flying overhead in a B-52, dropping bombs on the track.

In the final laps, Nixon is ahead, Humphrey is still pushing his car, and Wallace, Agnew and LeMay have their cars in reverse.

It looks like a Nixon win, when suddenly....

Lyndon Johnson pulls out of the smoke, crosses the finish line, declares himself the winner, and ends the race for another four years.

Gus Szlosek

Remember - Nixon's The One

"Nixon's the one" the red and white campaign buttons proclaim. And Nixon is the one for whom the Democrats have been trying to create an image. They have called him "tricky Dick" and asserted he did nothing positive or constructive during his eight years as General Eisenhower's vice president. But what has Hubert Humphrey done as Lyndon Johnson's vice president? "Who's Spiro Agnew?" was the incredulous question asked after the Republican convention nominated him, but before last winter some people might have been asking "Who's Hubert Humphrey". Some might even have been surprised to find out that Johnson had a vice president so lackluster and do nothing as the record of Humphrey.

While Nixon was vice president, he arbitrated the steel strike in 1959 that crippled steel production in this country. He engaged in the Kitchen debate with Nikita Kruschev in Moscow and was the highest ranking government official to visit Russia. Most importantly, he took over as President during Ike's three critical illnesses and hospitalizations.

"Tricky Dick", Humphrey says. Last Thursday President Johnson called a bombing halt in North Vietnam. It was a great Halloween treat, but it could turn out to be the biggest trick of the election. The halt may cost more American lives before the Viet Cong stop bombing. If the NFL won't go to the Paris peace talk table, the U.S. will be left with the burden of establishing a government in Viet Nam. And if the North does not stop bombing, the U.S. will have to rescind its bombing halt. But none of this will happen before tomorrow, and thinking that it would be better to keep the same party in office during the negotiations, Humphrey could be elected president. Tricky Lyndon.

Nixon has asserted that before the bombing is halted, it will have to be done with honor and mutual agreement. Nixon has stressed that the military aspects of the war should be de-emphasized in favor of escalating the economic aid to South Vietnam. Nixon has also called for an end to the draft after the war is over, when, if ever, it is. He wants a voluntary army, with the provision that in the event of a national emergency and more troops are needed some other measure could be taken.

As Nixon says, "You have only one vote and you can't take it back. You may waste it in protest or may use it to elect the next president of the United States," Richard Nixon.

HHH-The Only Choice

Hubert H. Humphrey, Vice President and presidential candidate 1968, is without a doubt the best man of the three major presidential candidates to take over the offfice of the presidency during these crucial times.

Mr. Humphrey has proven himself time and time again to be a just, an open, and an honorable man with the best interests of the American people in mind. The Peace Corps and Social Security are two of Humphrey's major achievements which prove him to be a man thoroughly involved in the welfare of not only his fellow Americans, but in the welfare of all peoples. In fact, Humphrey has been behind almost every piece of social legislation as a junior and a senior senator, as the Senate majority whip, as the leader in the senate, and as the Vice President of the United States for over ten years.

In the interest of international affairs and world peace, Mr. Humphrey has been firmly behind the nuclear nonpolitheration treaty and the nuclear test ban treaty, two pieces of legislation designed to check the spread and development of nuclear weapons. Mr. Humphrey has also worked closely with the president in an effort to find an honorable and a peaceful solution to the war in Viet Nam.

In his efforts to carry his campaign to all of the people Humphrey has gone into the slu[illegible] ghettos of our urban centers where the other candidates dare not venture. Humphrey has at all times during his campaign been completely open and honest about himself and his programs and in doing so has laid out his programs before the American people saying definitely, "This is what I will do..." or "This is what I will not do..." And Humphrey has been more than willing to debate his stands and policies with the other candidates; something which certain of the others have been most emphatically against for reasons as yet unknown.

Admittedly, Humphrey is not the perfect example of what most of us would like to see in the White House this January, but compared to the other two major candidates, he is without a doubt the most honest, open, and experienced candidate for the office. Mr. Humphrey's record as a senator and as a Vice President are completely untarnished and full of progressive action which prove Humphrey to be a man of positive progressive action. And if for no other reason alone, this record should be a clear indication of who the best man is. If this is not enough then look at his running mate, Senator Muskie, and place him beside Agnew and LeMay and then ask yourself which is the best of the lot or, if you will, which is the lesser of the evils.

Humphrey-Muskie Meet the Challenge

To the editor:

Many confused Americans believe that there is no choice in 1968. They think that we must endure a government of stagnation for four years and hope for change later. Humphrey and Muskie believe that America cannot wait.

We cannot wait four years while the war in Vietnam continues. One Presidential candidate offers nothing more than a surprise package to the Vietnam dilemma. The other is saying that a solution in Vietnam can be attained by continued bloodshed. Humphrey and Muskie are the only candidates calling for a cessation of bombing in an earnest search for peace.

We cannot wait four years while our cities are in turmoil. Humphrey and Muskie believe that this issue must be met now by a national committment to the rebuilding of the cities.

America cannot wait four years and ignore its moral and world responsibility to halt the spread of nuclear weapons. Humphrey and Muskie are committed to the immediate passage of the nuclear nonproliferation treaty.

America cannot wait four years while civil rights and social equality are ignored or left to the judgement of individual states. Humphrey and Muskie are dedicated to civil rights and social equality, as a national problem to be confronted by the entire nation acting as one.

America cannot turn its back on progress. As citizens, we are faced with a crisis which must be dealt with in 1968.

Can you meet this challenge?

Steven Bloom

A Note of Thanks

To the editor:

On behalf of Roman Catholic and Lutheran students Msgr. David Power and I would like to express our thanks to the University community for their support of efforts to raise funds for the relief of suffering in the Nigeria-Biafra conflict.

The money collected at the homecoming football game went directly to internationally recognized relief agencies where it will be put to immediate use. We were impressed by the number who were aware of the needs o their fellowmen and contribute so generously.

Kentucky Holds Hearings On Seditious Activities

Bib overalls, out-of-state license plates, and singing of "We Shall Overcome" were introduced as evidence of un-American activities during an investigation of Appalachian Volunteers recently.

The Kentucky Un-American Activities Committee (KUAC) held hearings on alleged seditious activities in Eastern Kentucky, a culmination of a conflict that erupted last year when five anti-poverty workers were indicted on charges of plotting to overthrow the county government.

The state law on which the charges were based was later ruled unconstitutional by a federal court.

The dispute includes Pikeville College, a small liberal arts school headed by Dr. Thomas Johns. He fired local residents by hiring professors opposed to the Vietnam war and by holding open forums on strip mining.

Dr. Johns' critics protest that the college is becoming too liberal, but the president has continued his new policies. "What I'm going to do is run the best educational institution I can, which means I'm going to demand that the issues facing our society be discussed, investigated and analyzed. I'm not going to sell my soul for prejudice, hate or bigotry," he said.

One of the anti-poverty workers indicted for sedition, Alan McSurely (he wore bib overalls), charged recently in a radio broadcast that Pike County was run by a "courthouse gang" working for a few coal-mine operators. He also said it was not illegal or wrong to work for peaceful change in government.

That statement prompted the local prosecutor to say, with all seriousness, "I want to warn McSurely that if he calls on Russian tanks to help him conquer Pike County, I intend to appeal to Major (Richard) Daley of Chicago and (former Ala.) Gov. George Wallace for help in defending Pike County."

The KUAC committee packed up and left without naming any Communists or taking any action other than recommending less political involvement by AV's. And latest reports indicate that no tanks have been spotted yet in Eastern Kentucky.

Record Number Of Negroes Run For Political Offices

WASHINGTON AP - When Negro leaders pushing for a record Negro vote on Tuesday call this election crucial, they mean much more than just who becomes the next president.

A record number of Negro candidates -about 3 - are running for a variety of offices around the nation, more than at any time since the Reconstruction era put many Negroes in office in the South 100 years ago.

It's already certain that Tuesday's voting will add three new Negro faces to the House of Representatives, for a total of nine.

The overwhelming bulk, however, are running for state offices mostly legislatures-and local posts, and Negro leaders hope for a record turnout to bolster their chances.

A large Negro turnout in Virginia and Alabama, they believe, might add another two Negro congressmen.

No one claims that victories by a substantial number would have much immediate impact on the problems Negroes face in the nation as a whole. But the psychological and practical impact could be substantial in many localities where Negroes may get the first representatives of their race in local government in their or their parents' lifetimes.

The election of substantial numbers of Negroes to local offices could, leaders feel, be a morale boost that would set the stage for even more candidates-and victories-two and four years from now, regardless of what happens at the presidential level.

Most Negro leaders have either ignored or advised against voting for the three Negro candidates for president.

Some Negro newspapers have run editorials urging their readers to ignore them.

But in what shapes up to be the biggest national gain, there will be at least 1 and possibly 12 Negroes in Congress, counting Sen. Edward Brooke, R-Mass., who is not up for re-election. That will be the largest number since 20 served at various times from 1869 to 1911.

The three new dark faces will come from Cleveland, St. Louis and Brooklyn, N. Y., where Negro Republicans are pitted against Negro Democrats.

In St. Louis Democratic ward leader William Clay, 36-year-old civil rights activist and union official, opposes attorney Curtis C. Crawford, a 47-year-old Democrat turned Republican.

Louis Stokes, brother of Cleveland's Negro Mayor Carl Stokes, is running against Republican Charles P. Lucas.

In Brooklyn, there is a close race between James Farmer, former chairman of the Congress of Racial Equality, and tough-talking Shirley Chisolm, a state legislator.

Farmer, running on both the Republican and Liberal tickets, is well known both for his leadership of freedom rides and civil rights marches in the South, and for his work in the slums of Brooklyn over the past two years.

But the newly created district in which he is running is more than 80 per cent Democratic, and Mrs. Chisolm has built a strong local base

Dick Gregory To Challenge 'No Write-in' Maine Vote

Dick Gregory, a Negro comedian turned civil rights activist and independent presidential candidate, said Sunday he will challenge Maine's entire vote if the state does not allow write-in voting Tuesday.

Gregory, in Maine for speaking engagements here and in Bangor, said he will try to "invalidate the entire vote" in the state if write-ins for him are not counted.

Atty. Gen. James S. Erwin recently made a ruling that write-in votes would be void.

Stanley J. Hanson, Jr., deputy secretary of state, declined to comment on Gregory's statement, saying he "would want to study it."

However, Hanson added, "If anyone disagrees or wants to challenge it, they can go ahead and do so."

WFCR To Broadcast Vienna Festival

The Fine Arts Council of the University of Massachusetts announces that it will sponsor a thirty broadcast series from the Vienna Festival over WFCR, the five - college, educational radio station. The series will begin tomorrow evening, November 6th at 8:30 p.m. with a major concert by the Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra under Otto Klemperer. The program will include Bach's Brandenburg Concerto in F; Mozart Symphony No. 41 in C, "Jupiter" and Mozart's Serenade in C, K.388.

This series will continue on a weekly basis on Wednesday evenings at 8:30 and will bring to listeners on campus and through the area outstanding programs from the 1968 Vienna Festival. Programs will be divided between full orchestral programs by the Vienna Philharmonic under leading conductors and solosts as well as a visit by the Israel Philharmonic Orchestra under guest conductor, Zubin Mehta, the much-talked about young Indian conductor of the Los Angeles Philharmonic. In addition there will be instrumental recitals, chamber music and lieder evenings.

The Fine Arts Council is supported by the undergraduates of the University of Massachusetts and is involved in a variety of programs dealing with the fine arts on the campus. The Council, itself, is made up of ten members representing both students and faculty. Members for the 1968/69 academic year are: Margaret Franson, Frederic Hartwell, Prof. Melton Miller; Prof. Paul F. Norton; Cindi Olken; Prof. Herbert Paston; Stanley Rosenberg; Prof. Seymour Rudin; Prof. Ronald Steele and Raymond Taylor. Mr. Taylor is Chairman.

Applications Available For New Sug Committee

Applications are now available for positions on a new subcommittee of the Student Union Governing Board. The purpose of the Campus Center Subcommittee, according to SUG Vice-President John Hutchison, is to examine the logistics of the move from the present Student Union to the new Campus Center, to investigate space allocation and the naming of the rooms, to solicit contributions for new furnishings, and to consider new policy problems arising with the opening of the new center.

Within the next few weeks the subcommittee members will tour the Campus Center with the manager, Terry Grinnan, to become familiar with the layout and plans for the building.

Membership on the subcommittee is open to any interested student and applications are available now in the RSO office. Freshmen and sophomores are encouraged to join the committee, since they will be among the first users of the new center.

Sophomores Promise SENDOFF Will Be 'Wild Wintery Week'

"How does this sound to you; an eight-day week featuring the Butterfield Blues, Martha Reeves and the Vandellas, the Unifics plus Sam and Dave?"

Ted (Frosh) Martin of the Sophomore Concert Committee asked the question in an interview, this week.

It's all part of the "Wild Wintery Week" theme which braces the Redmen for a full season of basketball action, boosts the Campus Chest, and boasts of being the major Sophomore sponsored event of the year.

"SENDOFF, Martin explained, "used to merely mark the start of the basketball season with the hope of bringing the same type of enthusiasm that football inspires on campus. But the Class of '71 has expanded this into the biggest Sophomore weekend on the Eastern seaboard."

The first half of the week of December 1-8 is set aside for the Campus Chest. With dorm to dorm collections, buttons, and Christmas specialty booths for men and women in the Union, the Sophomores hope to raise about $3000 for the charity.

Martin added that on Thursday night of the week there is a basketball game that should arouse plenty of SENDOFF enthusiasm. The anticipated spirit is for showing the team that their long hours of practice throughout the fall is well appreciated.

After the Butterfield Blues, Martha Reeves and the Vandellas and the Unifics appearance Friday night, Sam and Dave will be pounding out a beat to a large accompaniment on Saturday. Time Magazine has described their sound as "pneumatic".

On Sunday, a different sound will be produced by the Amherst Glee Club and the Vasser Choir, combined with a 25 piece orchestra under Bruce McInns. The program is Handel's "Christmas Messiah".

Besides the entertainment, the Sophomores have special innovations to make the events more inviting.

Martin says that two doors will be used for entrances. These will be roped off to prevent a crush similar to the one in the lines at Homecoming. Policemen will also be on hand to handle the steady flow of crowds through the turnstyles.

"Special emphasis will be placed on timing. The concerts will start on the time listed on the tickets. Also the time between groups is to be cut to a minimum."

Martin added, "For the protection of the ticket holders and the Sophomore Class, special tickets are going to be made up to prevent forging."

Biography Of Art Patron By Mt.Holyoke Professor

SOUTH HADLEY - Aline B. Saarinen in THE PROUD POSSESSORS: THE LIVES, TIMES AND TASTES OF SOME ADVENTUROUS AMERICAN ART COLLECTORS says: "By the time he died in 1924, at the age of fifty-five, John Quinn had become the twentieth century's most important patron of living literature and art."

Now, in a book entitled THE MAN FROM NEW YORK: JOHN QUINN AND HIS FRIENDS, Professor B.L. Reid, chairman of the English department at Mount Holyoke College, has revealed the life of this little-known American lawyer and patron. The 708-page book, to be released on November 7, is published by Oxford University Press, New York City, and will be distributed abroad by Oxford University Press, London.

By uncovering Quinn's large and rich correspondence, Professor Reid portrays how the Irish-American of professional eminence and unspecified fortune became the "friend," "patron" or "collector" of an astonishing variety of artists and writers of the early years of this century.

According to Professor Reid, "My interest in John Quinn was first aroused by the way in which his name, or his picture, kept cropping up in situations of some cultural significance, his function there only vaguely accounted for. Somewhere within the work of almost every major creative impulse in the art and literature of the early century, standing neither quite at the center nor quite at the edge, Quinn punctually appeared."

Professor Reid, who joined the Mount Holyoke faculty in 1957, was on leave from the College in 1963-64 with a Fulbright grant to do research abroad on Quinn and completed his work on him in 1966-67 with a grant from the American Council of Learned Societies.

Prior to coming to the College, Professor Reid was an instructor and assistant professor at Sweet Briar College and an instructor at Smith College. He has also been a visiting professor at Amherst College.

He received his B.A. from the University of Louisville, his M.A. from Columbia University and his Ph.D. from the University of Virginia. A member of Phi Beta Kppa, he is the author of numerous articles and of books on Gertrude Stein and William Butler Yeats.

do your contact lenses lead a clean life?

Contact lenses can be heaven . . . or hell. They may be a wonder of modern science but just the slightest bit of dirt under the lens can make them unbearable. In order to keep your contact lenses as comfortable and convenient as they were designed to be, you have to take care of them.

Until now you needed two or more separate solutions to properly prepare and maintain your contacts. You would think that caring for contacts should be as convenient as wearing them. It can be with Lensine.

Lensine is the one lens solution for complete contact lens care. Just a drop or two, before you insert your lens, coats and lubricates it allowing the lens to float more freely in the eye's fluids. That's because Lensine is an "isotonic" solution, which means that it blends with the natural fluids of the eye.

Cleaning your contacts with Lensine retards the buildup of foreign deposits on the lenses. And soaking your contacts in Lensine between wearing periods assures you of proper lens hygiene. You get a free soaking case on the bottom of every bottle of Lensine.

It has been demonstrated that improper storage between wearings may result in the growth of bacteria on the lenses. This is a sure cause of eye irritation and in some cases can endanger your vision. Bacteria cannot grow in Lensine which is sterile, self-sanitizing, and antiseptic.

Let your contacts be the convenience they were meant to be. Get some Lensine, from the Murine Company, Inc.

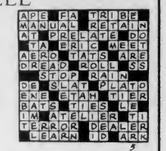
Artificial Ponds Poor For Recreational Uses

Landowners who build small artificial ponds for recreational purposes are probably making a mistake, a recent study by the UMass Water Resources Research Center indicates.

The study, headed by Dr. James A. McCann of the Massachusetts Cooperative Fishery Unit at UMass surveyed the physical, chemical and biological characteristics of 167 artificial ponds under five acres in Hampshire County.

Findings indicate that small artificial ponds designed primarily to water stock and as fire fighting reservoirs adapt badly to such recreation uses as swimming and fishing. Reasons cited were poor construction and poor management leading to low water, poor water quality, undesirable fish and plant life and deterioration through sedimentation and eutrophication (over-enrichment resulting in excessive plant growth).

The study found water acidic and low in fish productivity. Conditions were deemed marginal for the survival of both cold and warm water fish. "Few ponds at present are managed for fish and little interest appears to exist in improving fish crops for pleasure or profit," Dr. McCann noted.



The study turned up these facts: Approximately 80 per cent of the ponds are used primarily for livestock watering and fire protection. Ice skating and swimming are the major recreational uses, with over 70 per cent of participants under 16 years of age. About 80 per cent of the ponds are spring-fed.

"The pond owner can expect to realize no appreciable recreational value without investment of funds for proper construction and special effort in management," the study concluded.

The two-year project was supported by a grant of $12,400 from the federal Office of Water Resources Research.

Saturday Classes May Be Eliminated

Are you in dire need of a few hours of sleep; or sick with the left-overs of Friday night's party? Have your plans been thwarted time and again by the nuisance of a Saturday morning class or exam?

For most undergraduates, there is a glimmer of hope for the future. The administration has finally taken steps to do away with Saturday classes. According to Mr. Venman, Asst. to the Provost, the Dean's Council has discussed the resolution, but he doubts it will be resolved and put into effect before next September.

The main obstacles Venman stated were operational. He further explained that at present the most pressing obstruction to the resolution of this issue is the 3-hour labs. "We are presently operating at an adequate level of 73% (level for best contact between student and teacher). If we raise the level of usage to 80%, we would be beyond the maximum level of expected use." Presently the labs are scheduled only in the morning and afternoon. If Saturday classes were disposed of we would have to have labs in the evening. According to Venman, the alternative of a longer class day would still not solve the problems of scheduling the labs.

Venman also felt that philosophically if Saturday classes were still needed on a reduced scale who and who is going to decide who is going to attend and who is not? Also, there "is still the idea of utilizing the plant to the fullest extent. We are here for an education."

Several suggestions have been made to solve the problem. One reasonable plan mentioned by Venman is that on Tuesday - Thursday the classes be 75 minute periods and on Monday-Wednesday-Friday the periods would remain at 50 minutes per class. Also special rooms would be designated for the use of the 75 minute class period. Venman stated that the administration would be glad to accept suggestions.

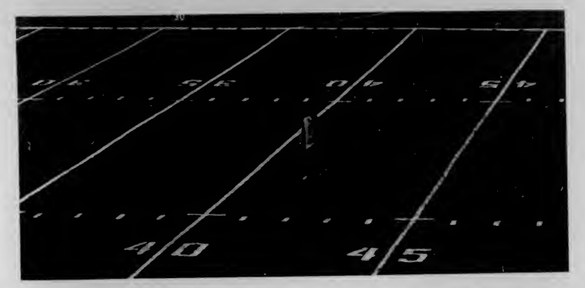
Venman continued that " the abolition of classes is a universal desire of those on campus. The problem is how to do it." He expressed the view though that Saturday classes is only a minor issue in the whole question of university curricula. He further felt that one could not attack the problem as a whole - it would be to radical. The only way to move ahead is to work from little issues.

Venman raised the problem of eventual erosion into Friday classes if Saturday classes were abolished. He felt that given an inch, the students would take a mile - once rid of Saturdays they would want to do away with Fridays also. Despite this pessimistic outlook, the cry for progress has been heard and the future shall see its fullfillment.

Collapse of Democracy

BOSTON (AP) – Historian Henry Steele Commager says the United States, which started out as "the most democratic of political systems," has now become "one of the least democratic- far behind countries like Britain or France, Holland or Denmark in assuring a government that will reflect the popular will."

The Amherst College professor calls America of today "a great nation unable to stop a war that the majority finds misguided immoral: a people unable to solve its most pressing domestic problems. . . because minorities will not have the majority to have its way; an electorate confronted with a choice between three candidates who are rivals chiefly in the degree of distaste they arouse. "



"It is sobering, but not surprising," he writes, "That of the 60 some nations that have come into existence since 1945, not one has adopted the American form of government.

Squad Always Hustling Beanpot Hopes Remain

UMASS-VERMONT FOLLOW UP
BY PETER PASCARELLI
Assistant Sports Editor

UMass had a five game losing streak which was a surprise. Vermont had beaten New Hampshire which was a surprise because everyone knows how good New Hampshire is. UMass then beat Vermont 49-0, which was another surprise.

But the biggest surprise of Saturday and the biggest surprise of the season was that no UMass player was seriously injured in the Vermont game. The way people have been getting busted up this season a holiday should be declared in honor of a casualty-free game.

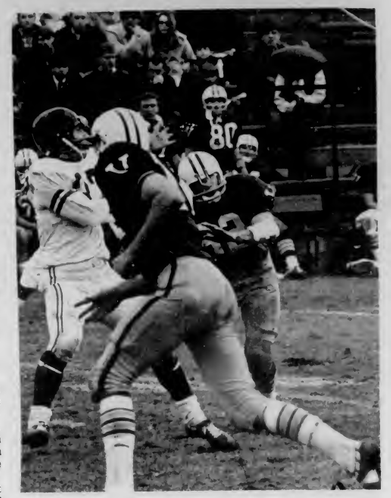
Redman coach Vic Fusia was understandably pleased following the resounding win and also naturally grateful for a reprieve in the injury department. "This was the only game of the season," said Fusia, "in which we were free from injury."

The only Redman who was hurt was defensive specialist Andy Guarino. Guarino suffered a slight hip injury, which is not considered too serious.

Fusia praised his squad and staff for their recuperative powers in coming back from five straight losses. The UMass mentor said, "Everyone has stayed right in there and kept working. This squad has had every handicap a team could have and has stuck in there."

The coach saw his offense roll up 49 points against Vermont and Fusia had praise for his offense's execution. However, he added, "Vermont was in the position of having to catch up and put themselves in bad field position. They gave us two touchdowns."

Fusia also said, "Vermont, you have to remember, has been in the same situation we have been in regard to injuries plus the fact that they had less to start with."



Fusia was especially pleased by his kick returning game that almost shook Steve Parnell loose for long scores on several occasions. "We set up our blocking walls better than we have before," said Fusia, "and besides if we give Parnell any kind of room he can put us in good field position."

There were a few negative aspects of the performance however. Fusia was somewhat displeased in the pass protection and also was disturbed with the offense's difficulty in scoring from close in.

"Our goal line attack failed on three occasions because of broken assignments up front," said the coach.

UMass definitely got a boost Saturday and at a time they needed it. As Fusia said, "The squad and coaches have worked hard under considerable hardship and I'm sure this win will give us a tremendous lift. We now might react more quickly instead of thinking before we react."

However, as hard as it might be, the Redmen have to forget about last week and prepare for Holy Cross, a team that lost last week 47-0.

Owner Sullivan Clouds Pats Future In Boston

BOSTON AP - "If I love the city of Boston," said Patriots' owner Billy Sullivan, "someone else shouldn't pay for my affection."

But they are.

And that's one of the major reasons the next several months are likely to be critical for professional football in Boston, a city that offers the Patriots the lowest seating capacity of any team in either league 37,000 and currently has no firm plans for a new stadium.

What that means is that others are paying for Sullivan's affection, by the amount of money they take out as a visitors' share of the gate receipts in comparison to what the Patriots take when they visit the bigger drawing cities in the American Football League.

At this moment everyone is a bigger draw. Only 18,000 fans were at Fenway Sunday to see the punchless Patriots-the lowest attendance of the year for any of the 26 teams in professional football. In three games at Fenway, the Patriots, with a 3-5 record, have drawn just 71,888.

"I think you have to know that I feel that with ideal seating and parking I wouldn't trade this franchise for any in pro football," Sullivan said. "But I frankly think this is the year we have to move ahead on the stadium or we're in trouble.

"There are two things forcing me to say that: First, the resolution passed at our spring meeting in Atlanta and second, a moral feeling. If I go to dinner with you 100 times, I don't want you picking up the tab 100 times. That's been what's happening."

If going to dinner and having someone else pay the check is one thing bothering Sullivan, the resolution passed in May certainly isn't going to help his digestion.

The resolution, passed unanimously by NFL and AFL owners-and that includes Sullivan-reads:

"In implementing the agreement between the leagues, which now provides that any new franchise must play in a stadium with a capacity "in the vicinity of 50,000," the leagues have now unanimously agreed to require by 1970 that all member clubs meet the same condition..."

Commissioner Pete Rozelle has said how the owners choose to implement that resolution is strictly up to them.

Aggie Shooters Score First Win

Meeting Western New England College at the University rifle range on Saturday, the Stockbridge School Rifle Team posted a winning 1135 score on the International targets in downing the Golden Bears by a margin of 180 points.

Behind by 32 points after the first relay, the local shooters moved ahead on the marksmanship of Doug Proctor and Jeff Ferguson in the second relay, and the match was put on ice by Rob Whitaker, high gun for the match, in the final relay.

Now standing at 1-1, after an opening loss to a strong UMass Varsity Team, the Stockbridge shooters next take on the Coast Guard Academy Freshmen at New London on November 16.

ST. LOUIS AP - Veteran sportscaster Harry Caray was taken off the critical list Monday morning after being struck by a car while crossing a rainslick street early Sunday near the Chase Park Plaza Hotel.

A spokesman at Barnes Hospital said Caray was now listed in fair condition.

Cary, who has been the voice of the St. Louis Baseball Cardinals for 24 years, suffered fractures of both legs and dislocated shoulder and facial lacerations in the accident.

EITHER NIXON OR THE HOUSE

The next president of the United States will not be known until the final votes from California are counted later this morning. As dawn approached on the east coast with 76 percent of the national vote counted both Democratic candidate Hubert H. Humphrey and Republican candidate Richard M. Nixon had 42 percent of the popular vote with third party candidate George C. Wallace obtaining 16 percent of the vote.

Along with California, the results from Illinois, Ohio, Missouri, and Texas will determine whether the presidential election could be decided before a Dec. 16 electoral college vote or a later decision by the House of Representatives.

Nixon's hopes for an electoral majority of 270 votes hinged on holding California and winning at least two other of the still yet undecided states. It appears that Humphrey's only chance of winning an electoral majority would be for him to win all of the above states which seemed unlikely; however, should the Vice-President capture California's 40 electoral votes the election might be thrown into the House of Representatives even though he loses Illinois and Ohio.

Wallace, although making a poorer showing than expected in states outside of the Deep South, won at least 45 electoral votes from Alabama, Mississippi, Georgia, Louisiana, and Arkansas.

Humphrey's surprising strength in the East carried the important states of Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York, and Pennsylvania with their 94 electoral votes. In addition the Vice president carried Michigan and Missouri.

Nixon ran strong in the rest of the Midwest, in the rim south states, and in the smaller far western states.

For Nixon, the tension of election night could only recall another night, eight years ago, when the choice was between him and the late John F. Kennedy. He lost that one, by the narrowest of margins.

In a statement at 4 a.m. Humphrey predicted that he would carry the necessary states to win an electoral majority, however it appeared that either Nixon would win the necessary 270 electoral votes or the election would be decided in the House.

With 76 percent of the popular vote counted Nixon had 24,051, 495; Humphrey, 23,958,746; Wallace, 8,157,194.

In electoral terms, Humphrey had captured 11 states with 151 votes; Nixon had won 23 states with 162.

Nixon led in states which held 95 more electoral votes; Humphrey in states with 85, according to the Associated Press.

Democrats kept their grip on Congress, although Republicans scored Senate gains. In the House, which could become the crucial arena, Democratic control appeared unshaken.

Possible Deal In Electorial College Could Still Give Victory To Nixon

WASHINGTON (AP) - If the people failed to cast a decisive presidential vote Tuesday, the normally routine post-election balloting of the Electoral College next month could be anything but routine.

And it could send selection of the new president into the House of Representatives for the first time in 144 years.

There are 538 members in the Electoral College. Each state has a number of electors equal to its representation in the Senate and the House of Representatives. The District of Columbia has three.

To be legally elected president, a candidate must get a simple majority-270 votes-in the Electoral College.

Electors generally cast their votes for the man who received the largest popular vote in their states.

When voters cast ballots for a presidential candidate, they actually vote for a slate of electors announced as supporting one candidate. The entire slate backing the statewide popular vote winner becomes that state's electors, whether the plurality is a landslide or a single vote.

Although electors normally cast their ballots for their state's winner, most don't have to.

Because most electors are party functionaries, they generally stick with the man in whose name they were elected. But they can decide between election day and the day the college votes to cast their ballots for someone else-even, if they wish, for someone who wasn't running.

Therefore, if no candidate has an electoral majority, switching of loyalties by some electors in the next six weeks could create a majority for one-man-and not necessarily for the man with the largest popular vote.

Independent George C. Wallace has indicated publicly he would be willing to make some sort of deal with either Nixon or Hubert H. Humphrey for his electoral votes, an offer both the other candidates have rejected.

The electors will meet Dec. 16 in their respective state capitals to cast separate ballots for president and vice president. Their votes will be forwarded to Washington where they will be opened and counted before a joint session of Congress Jan. 6. There is no provision for a second Electoral College vote.

If enough electors cross party lines, someone may get the needed majority and he would be inaugurated Jan. 20 as president.

If no one has 270 electoral votes, the job of choosing a president falls to the newly elected House of Representatives which must begin balloting immediately to choose from among the top three candidates.

If no vice presidential candidate has received 270 electoral college votes, the new Senate will choose a vice president from between the top two contenders.

In the House, each state delegation has one vote, cast on the basis of majority rule within the delegation. Any evenly split delegation may forfeit its vote.

A candidate needs a simple majority-26 delegation votes-to win.

In the Senate, each member has one vote and to be elected vice president, a man needs a simple majority-51.

The House continues balloting until one presidential candidate gets 26 votes or until noon Jan. 20, whichever comes first.

If by noon Jan. 20 the House has failed to reach a decision, the man chosen vice president by the Senate is sworn in as acting president until such time as a president is qualified.

Only twice in history has the selection of a President been put in the hands of the House. In 1801, the House chose Thomas Jefferson over John Adams.

In 1825 Andrew Jackson won the most popular and electoral votes in the nation with four men running for the presidency.

John Quincy Adams was second, William Crawford, third in electoral votes. The House picked Adams when Henry Clay, who ran fourth, threw him his support in return for the office of secretary of state.

Freshmen Primary Winners Voice Strong Objection To UFP Charges

BY MARK SILVERMAN
Friday Issue Editor

The winners of the Freshman primary election voiced their strong objection yesterday to the charge leveled against them by the United Freshman Party (UFP) candidates, that they are "shadow candidates."

"The UFP candidates", Fred Chanowski, a Presidential candidate who survived last week's primary, told the MDC, "they claim that they did not know the deadline for filing nomination papers, so that they could not be on the primary ballot, and that this is why they are conducting a write-in campaign. However, all deadlines were listed in the election rules which they evidentally neglected to read."

"They call us 'shadow candidates'," he continued, "but we (the survivers of the primary) have been actively seeking out freshmen all over the campus. However, they (UFP candidates) have concentrated only on students in Southwest.

A major complaint of the official candidates was directed toward the election promises of the UFP candidates.

Steve Driscoll, Vice Presidential candidate, said "The UFP candidates have concentrated on making promises on unspecified aspects of academic reform, the abolition of freshmen girl curfews, the vague subject of election reforms and the building of an infirmery in SW.

"None of these topics are under the jurisdiction of class governments. They involve matters which must be brought before the Board of Trustees, matters which require the spending of huge amounts of tax money, funds over which class governments have no say.

He stated, "The basic function of class governments is to organize, promote and serve the social interest of the class. What the UFP candidates are talking about rightly comes under the jurisdiction of the Student Senate, and certainly not under that of the class governments."

This basic misunderstanding of the role of class governments on the part of UFP candidates, according to Presidential candidate Ernie Lepore, would seem to put the UFP candidates into the category of "shadow candidates." He said, "they campaign only on Southwest and thus reach only about half of the freshmen. They confuse the electorate with senseless promises which are impossible for class officers to fulfill, and criticize us for not speaking out on issues."

Lepore then stated that the Primary candidates had appeared on a "forum" type show on WMUA last Friday, which the UFP candidates stayed away from.

Freshman elections are Thursday, in the student Union Lobby, from 9 a.m. to 5:30.

McCormack Easily Wins

BOSTON (AP) - Speaker of the House John W. McCormack of Massachusetts, who first was elected to Congress 40 years ago, easily won his 21st term in Tuesday's voting.

Returns from only a few precincts showed McCormack a winner by a wide margin over his Republican opponent, Alan Freeman, a political unknown.

Morse Keeps House Seat

LOWELL (AP) - Rep. F. Bradford Morse, R-Mass., retained his seat in the U.S. House in Tuesday's voting.

He gained his fifth term by defeating Robert C. Maguire, mayor of Lowell. Maguire's strength was in his home city, but Morse ran far ahead in the outlying cities and towns of the district.

Humphrey Wins Mass.

Boston (AP) - Massachusetts gave its 14 electoral votes to Hubert H. Humphrey in Tuesday's election by a landslide.

Humphrey carried the major cities and many towns across the state which rarely ever voted for Democratic presidential candidates until 1964.

The Republican nominee, Richare M. Nixon, carried the rock-ribbed Republican towns but many of them were small communities with few voters.

The latest count, with 34 per cent of the state precincts counted gave Humphrey 431,571 to Nixon's 169,817.

George C. Wallace, former governor of Alabama polled 28,197 votes in his third party campaign.

Maine Vote

PORTLAND, Maine (AP) - Maine went Democratic in a presidential election for only the third time this century Tuesday, giving Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey solid support as running mate Edmund S. Muskie proved his home state power at the polls.

The Humphrey-Muskie ticket was declared elected shortly before midnight with only 25 per cent of the state's 631 precincts reported.

It was the second straight time Maine gave its four electoral votes to the Democratic candidate. The state supported Lyndon Johnson in 1964. The only other time voters strayed from the Republican ranks was in 1912 when Woodrow Wilson won as a result of a split between the GOP regulars and the Bull Moosers.

Humphrey jumped in front early and gradually built his lead with the help of a 4,918 to 1,759 advantage in Waterville, Muskie's hometown.

Muskie also helped Democratic Reps. Peter N. Kyros and William D. Hathaway surge into leads in bids to return to Congress.

Gubernatorial Race

GOP Wins in Vermont Chafee Defeated in R.I.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Republicans captured governorships in Indiana and Vermont in Tuesday's elections and were leading in efforts to oust Democrats in Iowa and New Hampshire.

Democrat Frank Licht ousted GOP Gov. John H. Chafee in Rhode Island and Democratic candidates had the edge in incomplete returns in efforts to take Montana and New Mexico from the GOP column.

Secretary of State Edgar D. Whitcomb, a Republican, beat Democratic Lt. Gov. Robert L. Rock for the governorship of Indiana to succeed Democratic Gov. Roger D. Branigin, who was barred by state law from running again.

Gov. Philip H. Hoff, a Democrat, chose not to run again.

Democrats retained two governorships, in Texas where Lt. Gov. D. Preston Smith beat GOP challenger Paul Eggers, and in Missouri, where Gov. Warren E. Hearns beat Lawrence K. Roos to become the first Democratic two-term governor.

In other races, partial return showed Republicans holding their own to retain governorships in five states - Arizona, Arkansas, South Dakota, Utah and Wisconsin.

Democrats had the lead in Delaware, Illinois, Kansas, North Carolina and West Virginia.

Other New England States

New Hampshire

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) - Richard M. Nixon, an old favorite among New Hampshire voters, led a Republican sweep yesterday as the Granite State returned to the GOP ranks in the presidential election.

Nixon, who won New Hampshire's four electoral votes in 1960 in losing the election to John F. Kennedy, repeated his strong showing, taking the lead on votes from early-bird mountain precincts and gradually moving ahead.

The state, which helped Nixon launch his bid for the Republican nominatio n in a primary last March, gave the former vice president solid endorsement in his fight with Democratic Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey.

With 45 per cent of the precincts reported, Nixon received 41,447 votes, or 57 per cent. Humphrey had 28,526, or 39 per cent, while George Wallace had 2,851, or four per cent.

Helped by Nixon's popularity, Republican Norris Cotton easily won re-election to the U.S. Senate. A veteran of 14 years in the Senate, Cotton defeated Gov. John W. King by a 2-1 margin. King is stepping out after three terms as governor.

Republican Walter R. Peterson also rode the GOP wave in the gubernatorial race with Democrat Emile R. Bussiere.

Vermont

MONTPELIER, Vt. (AP) - Vermont gave Republican presidential candidate Richard M. Nixon its three electoral votes by a comfortable margin Tuesday, as the GOP swept statewide offices.

The state elected a Republican for governor for the first time in six years - Deane C. Davis, who defeated Democratic Lt. Gov. John J. Daley, former mayor of Rutland.

With 77 per cent of the vote counted, Nixon piled up 56,983 votes, to 44,812 for the Democratic presidential nominee, Hubert H. Humphrey. George C. Wallace, the American Independent party candidate, had 3,465.

Connecticut

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) - In a come-from-behind victory, Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey won Connecticut's 8 electoral votes in Tuesday's elections.

Third party candidate George C. Wallace hurt the Democratic nominee in the cities, but not enough to deliver the state to Republican Richard M. Nixon.

Democratic Sen. Abraham A. Ribicoff was an easy winner over his Republican opponent, former Congressman Edwin H. May Jr.

Rhode Island

PROVIDENCE, R. I. (AP) - Rhode Island voters gave Democrat Hubert H. Humphrey overwhelming support in the presidential race yesterday and elected a Democratic governor for the first time in six years.

The state's two incumbent Democratic congressmen-Fernand St. Germain and Robert O. Tiernan - easily won reelection.

With 94 per cent of the votes counted, Humphrey piled up 223,201, compared to 106,823 for Republican Richard M. Nixon. Third Party candidate George C. Wallace had 13,937.

The Democratic tide helped Democratic State Sen. J. Joseph Garrahy defeat the Republican incumbent, Joseph H. O'Donnell, for the lieutenant governor's post.

Democratic Secretary of State August P. LaFrance easily retained his seat.

One major Republican office holder - Atty. Gen. Herbert F. DeSimone - was in a tight battle for reelection against State Rep. Anthony J. Brosco, a Democrat.
